The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been appointed to the various offices of the Board of Directors of the Bank of the City of New York, for the year ending on the 31st day of December, 1856.

In all the matters relating to the business of the Bank, the Directors shall have the same powers and authority as the Board of Directors of the Bank of the City of New York, in and to which they are respectively appointed.

BY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
JAMES W. WALKER, President.
JAMES W. WALKER, Secretary.

TIS needless to speak of the Usefulness of Geography, since every body that Read's, even a Gazette, finds himself perpetually at a Loss without some Knowledge in this Science. And therefore there needs no Apology for publishing a Work on that Subject; at this time especially, when the Actions abroad that are so much the Subject of Conversation, make every Man desire a Knowledge of the Countreys where those great Affairs are Transacted.

And we may Venture to say, a Body of Geography is very much wanting. For notwithstanding the many Books upon this Subject, there is none that can be call'd Compleat: Some being so short that they make no Impression on the Memory, others so inaccurate that they are not to be Depended upon, and others, tho' more Correct, either not Copious enough, or Immethodical. Dr. Heylin's at the time it was written, was undoubtedly the best in our Language. But Geography has receiv'd so many and Great Improvements since his Time, that we hope it will not be call'd Presumption, to Offer at a new Work on the same Subject; wherein, from the many Corrections and Discoveries made of late years by the Skill and Industry of Modern Astronomers and Travellers, the Defects of that may be supply'd. And herein we must observe that

The former Works of this Nature have been very Defective in the Matter of Topography; and yet that is the most necessary Part of Geography. For as great Actions have always happen'd at or near some City or Town, We naturally desire to know something more of it, than meerly it's Name and Situation. Again, by knowing the Condition of the Cities we are able to make a better Judgment of the Wealth, Industry, and Populousness of the Nation. And, in short, 'tis the better Part of what every Body desires to know in Geography. Wherefore in this Work we have been more ample, and set down as particular an Account of every considerable Town as could be procured out of Credible Authors; and as is consistent with the intended Brevity of our Work, which must not be swell'd too Large lest it lose it's Acceptance with the generality of Readers, either thro' the Expence of Money or Time.

That this Topographical Part will be acceptable, we have reason to hope from the Consideration of the kind Reception the Geographical Dictionaries have met with: for if those could Please that just give an account of one Town, and then by reason of the Alphabetical Order, must the next step Leap perhaps to the other side the Globe, much more methinks should this be agreeable, wherein all the chief Towns in a Province are seen at one View, and yet by means of the Alphabetical Index any single Place you want is as readily found out.

'Tis in this Part at least, to say nothing of it's Accuracy, that we hope this Work will be allowed to exceed what has gone before it.

And forasmuch as Geography alone is Dry and Fejune, and makes but small Impression on the Memory; We have intermixt the History of Nations with the Descriptions of Countries; or rather a short Summary of History, wherein the Revolutions that have happen'd, the Princes that have Reign'd, and the considerable Actions and Accidents that have occur'd are briefly noted, for the Entertainment as well as Profit of our Reader. We flatter our selves that this Part will be very acceptable, because it shews by what means and degrees the several Monarchys of Europe arose or fell: how the Roman Dominions were torn in pieces by many Nations of Northern Barbarians: how France once under it's Charlemaign gave Laws to all Europe: how that Empire soon Crumbled into Petty Governments: how large a share of it England was once Master of; and how it again rose to the height we now see it. How Spain, England, Sweden, Denmark, Poland, Muscovy, &c. from a number of small Principalities, became considerable Monarchys. How Italy and Germany came to be divided into such a Number of Principalities and States, and how the several Families have succeeded one another, and especially how that of Austria arriv'd to it's towering grandeur. And lastly, how every Country and City hath either suffer'd thro' Wars, Conflagrations, Earthquakes, Inundations, &c. or been favour'd by Peace, Trade, Wealth, Priviledges, &c. To all which we have also added an Account of the Laws, Government, Policy, and noted Customs of every Nation, and a Chronological List of the Kings. And also been mindful of Antiquity by setting down the Roman Names of People and Places, and mentioning the Remains of Ancient Structures. Nor have we omitted the Natural Curiosities, such as Baths, Medicinal Waters, Mines and Minerals, Caves, Mountains, Lakes, Cataracts, Rocks, &c.

But tho' Topography and History do illustrate Geography, it will still be found lame and Defective without Tables and Maps, wherein may be seen at a View the Divisions of Kingdoms into Provinces, Counties and Governments, together with the Situation of the Cities and Towns in each Division. Wherefore in this Work we have by Analytical Tables at the Head of each Description shewn the Divisions, Subdivisions and chief Towns of every Empire, Kingdom or State: and have also added Maps fairly Engraven on Copper by Mr. Herman Moll, whose Skill in Geography is known to most of the Masters of the Science, and whose Ingenuity in Graving is seen in every thing he does. But let the Maps speak for themselves, tho' they be small they are comprehensive, and contain all the Provinces, and most of the Cities and great Towns in every Nation: and moreover, are all laid down according to the best and latest Discoveries, with more Corrections of former Errors than we have room to mention here; but will be readily seen in comparing 'em with the old Maps.

And lastly, to Render our Work as Compleat and Useful as may be, We have added Alphabetical Tables of the Names of Places, a General Index of the Remarkable Things mentioned in the Book; and a Table of Ancient Names of Places for the Use of the Students of the Classicks; whereby a Paralela Geographica Antiquo-Moderna may very easily be made. The Table of Modern Names we have divided into two Parts, viz. one of Europe, and the other of the other three Quarters, the former being plac'd at the Beginning, and the latter at the End, where also stand the Table of Ancient Names and the General Index. The reason of our dividing that Table, is because the number of Words under each Letter would be else so large that 'twould be tedious finding what we want: and few Persons are ignorant, whether the Town they seek for be in Europe or not.

As to the Composure of this Work, We have made use of all the Authors that could be any ways serviceable to the Compleat Furnishing and Adorning it, such as the best Histories of every Nation, the most esteem'd Ancient Geographers, and the best Modern ones; and more especially the latest and most approved Travellers, with Memoirs extant in the Philosophical Transactions, Observations by Messieurs de l'Academie Royal at Paris, and elsewhere, communicating many notable Corrections in Geography. And tho' We have not room always to quote out Authors, We can truly assure the Reader, that nothing is set down here but upon good Authority, and what may be found in the best Books on the Subject. But to be more particular, it must be acknowledg'd that Cluverius, Sanson, Luyts, and the English Atlas have been our Patterns in the following Work, but that these have been only Patterns is very visible by the vast Additions we have made. Cluverius's Introduction to Geography is deservedly acknowledg'd the most accurate Compendium extant, especially as it has been improv'd by Buno, Hekelius, and Reiskius. Sanson has adapted his Work more to the Modern Times, and by the Analytical Tables he publish'd with his Maps, has set Geography in a clearer Light. But if we venture to say, That that Author (notwithstanding his Fame) was too much a French man, and according to the Humour of his Country, too superficial, perhaps we should not slander him. Joh. Luyts a Learned Professor in the University of Utrecht, having writ a Body of Modern Geography, wherein he has made use of Sanson so far as was necessary, and hath moreover Consulted the Travel-

The P R E F A C E.

Travellers since his Time, and in the whole, Corrected and Improved that Author, we have rather Chosen to follow him, and not only had our Eye upon him and Cluverius throughout all Europe, but have Translated his Description of Asia, Africa and America entire. And because the Concern our English Nation has in the East and West-Indian Trade makes us all more than ordinary Curious of being Inform'd of those Parts, we have added to Mr. Luyts, a very particular, and (we hope accurate) Description of the East-Indies and our Plantations in America, extracted from the most Approved Histories and Travels thither. The English Atlas having the misfortune to suffer under an ill Character (perhaps worse than it deserves) we have been cautious of relying on it without other Authority, but must acknowledge we could not have made our Account of Germany and the Netherlands so perfect without Assistance from thence.

And now nothing remains but to bespeak a favourable Reception of what, after great Pains and Expence, we here present the World with: Desiring the Judicious Readers to consider the Difficulty of a Work of this Nature; how impossible it is to be absolutely free from Faults; and yet how necessary such a Work is, and therefore some Indulgence ought to be given to the Undertakers. Nevertheless we may without Vanity, take the Liberty to Affirm of our Work, I. That the Method of it is Exact, Clear and Intelligible. II. That by the Intermixture of History it is render'd Delightful and Entertaining as well as Instructive. III. The Topographical Part makes it exceeding useful. IV. The Maps are the Compleatest Sett extant that shew the Modern Corrections. And Lastly, the whole Work is, we doubt not, as free from Errors as the Nature of it will admit. However it being impossible to avoid all Faults, we shall be glad to be inform'd of those that have escap'd our Care, and promise not only to Correct 'em, but also very gratefully Acknowledge the Kindness of the Learned Gentlemen that will please to favour Us with such Informations.

INTRO-

AN INTRODUCTION TO GEOGRAPHY.

By Robert Falconer.

CHAP. I.

Of the WORLD, and its Parts.

THere is nothing so powerful to make us admire and adore the Providence and wonderful Wisdom of God Almighty, to advance Wisdom and sound Morality, and to breed in us a Contempt of all those Trifles that this World calls great, and the most part of mankind set their affections on; or to confound as well those who would have all things to have been without a Beginning, as those who would have them formed by a fortuitous Concourse of Atoms, than a Serious and manly consideration of the glorious Fabrick of the Universe, whereof the little Speck upon which we live makes so inconsiderable a part. For if we shall but consider the vast number and variety of the Heavenly Bodies (a great part of whom are hid from our sight, even when that is assisted by the best Glasses that have been, or perhaps can be invented) their Proportion and Symmetry, and the wonderful order that is observed in their several Motions, we must irresistibly confess an Infinite Power and Wisdom in the Making and Preservation of them.

In vain do Men employ their Time and Thought in searching into the beginning of these things, and the Methods of the Almighty Creator in making of them. How poor and trifling are the Grounds upon which they found the Production of the World, and the Formation of this Earth upon which we are placed? These things being removed beyond the Reach of Human Knowledge or even Conjecture; and such as the Divine Wisdom has not thought fit to reveal to Mankind. Yet such has been the Boldness and Curiosity of some Men, that they have officiously pryed into those things which Providence seemed willing to conceal: And as if really they had found out the Secret, have had the Vanity to impose their Discoveries upon the World. 'Tis not to be expected, nor would it be proper at this time, to give the Reader an Account of all the several Schemes and Hypotheses that have been advanced, of the Universe in general, or of the several Theories and Histories of our Earth in particular: And therefore we shall only hint a little at the most considerable of 'em.

Ptolemy was of Opinion, that the Earth was placed in the Center of the Universe, and that it stood fixt there, whilst the Sun, Moon, and Stars made their Tour round it every day, each in their several Orbits, and different distances from it. He placed the Moon nearest it; next to the Moon Mercury; then Venus, after her the Sun, beyond him Mars, then Jupiter, and lastly Saturn, and beyond him, the fixt Stars, as you may see in the following Scheme.

An Introduction to Geography.

SYSTEMA PTOLOMEI

This Situation of the World was universally received and approved of till about 200 years ago, that Copernicus disliking the System, by reason of that rapid motion which it supposed in the Planets, and much more in the fixt Stars; which at this rate must have moved many Millions of Miles in an hour: And besides, it did not seem to agree exactly with several Observations that he had made of the Course of the Heavenly Bodies: Wherefore he set himself to find out another Scheme, which might better satisfy and explain the several Appearances of these, and remove the difficulty concerning that rapid motion. He placed the Sun in the Center of the World, and made the Earth, as well as the other Planets, perform their Courses about him. Next to the Sun he placed Mercury, and next to him Venus. The Earth, together with the Moon (for according to him, the Moon, which finishes its Course round the Earth in 27 days and 7 hours, is carried along with it round the Sun) he removed into that Heaven where Ptolemy had placed the Sun. Next to the Earth he set Mars, beyond him Jupiter, with his four Secondaries, which attend and go round him as the Moon does the Earth. Next Saturn, with his five Satellites: And beyond all these the fixt Stars. All which you may see in the following Figure, where the Orbs the Planets move in are described in that order that they are placed round the Sun, drawn as near as can be in their true Proportions.

This Hypothesis, by reason it explains and demonstrates several Appearances which the other could not, and, particularly removes the difficulty concerning that Rapid Motion which Saturn and the first Stars must have had, upon the former supposition, has gain'd much Reputation in the World. Des Cartes in his Philosophy, hath endeavoured to illustrate, how these motions which Copernicus ascribes to the Earth and the Planets are performed. He supposes that the Sun is placed in the middle of the World, and surrounded with a vast space of Æther, extending many Millions of Miles; in which the several Planets float, at unequal distances from the Sun; which is observed to turn round its own Axis in the space of 27½ days) that it hath also a rapid Circular Motion from West to East about the Sun; by which the Planets are not only carried about in their periodical Courses, but are likewise turned round upon their own Axis from West to East, as they go along; just like a Stone roll'd down the Stream of a River, causes the Water for some space round it to run in a Circle. And as the General Motion of the Æther about the Sun, from West to East, carrieth the Planets along the same way, so likewise the Circular Motion of the Æther round about every Planet, turns it round upon its own Axis also. In this Æthereal Matter the Planets float, and are carried round by its Motion, and the thing that keeps them in their own Orbs is, that they themselves, and the matter in which they swim, equally strive to fly out from the Center of their Motion, or that the force of their Circular Motion is exactly equal to their Gravitation towards the Sun: And as the Primary Planets gravitate towards the Sun, so do the Secondary towards the Planets round which they move. But we will not insist longer on this Subject, lest it should be thought foreign to an Introduction to Geography, especially by those who know nothing of Astronomy; but only give the Reader a short account of the Periods of the Revolutions of the Planets, their Distances from the Sun, and the Proportion of their Bignesses to one another. First, As to their Revolutions, Saturn (according to Copernicus) moves round the Sun in 29 years, 174 days, and 5 hours; Jupiter finishes his Course in 11 years, 317 days, and 15 hours; Mars his, in about 687 days; the Earth in 365 days, and 6 hours or thereabouts; Venus in 224 days, and 18 hours; and Mercury in 88 days.

Concerning the distances of the Planets from the Sun, we shall only subjoin a Table, where they are express'd in such parts, as the distance between the Sun and the Earth may contain 100000 of them; which distance is thought to be 1550 Semidiameters of the Earth, or 6485200 Engl. Miles.

The distance of the Sun from	{ Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Earth, Venus, Mercury,	} is	{ 951000 519650 152350 100000 72400 38806	} of these parts.

The distance of the Moon from the Earth is 56 Semidiam. of the Earth, or 234304 Engl. Miles. The Secondary of Jupiter that is next him is distant 3 Diam. of Jupiter from him, the 2d five, the 3d eight, and the utmost 14. The first of Saurn's Secondaries is somewhat less than three of his Diam. from him, the 2d about 8, and the utmost 24.

These are the immense distances between the Planets and the Sun, which may perhaps be more easily and clearly comprehended by comparing them with some swift motion, as that of a Bullet, shot out of a great Gun, which may travel perhaps in a moment about 100 fathoms: Supposing then it move with this swiftness from the Earth to the Sun, it would spend 25 years in its passage; from Jupiter to the Sun, 125; and from Saurn thither 250.

Concerning the proportion of the bigness of these Bodies to one another, we shall assume the Semidiam. of the Earth, viz. 4184 Engl. Miles, as their common Measure. The Diameter of the Sun is thought to contain 117 Diameters of the Earth, and the proportion between it and the Diameters of the other Planets are as you see in this Table.

The Diam. of the Earth is to the Diam. of the Moon, as 7 to 2, very near.

From the Consideration of the Revolutions of these Bodies, their immense distances, & prodigious bigness, we may see, how vast they must be in respect of this little Spot upon which we live: and yet, as little as 'tis, one bit of it sets ambitious Princes together by the Ears, involves whole Kingdoms in all the Miseries and Calamities of War, and sweeps off whole Millions of poor Souls, before they can so much as once think what or where they shall be afterwards.

CHAPTER II.

Of the Sphere and its Circles, &c.

THE Sphere is a round and moveable Instrument, made up of divers Circles, which the Astronomers have invented for the more easily conceiving the motions of the Heavens, and representing the true Situation of the Earth. It consists of several different parts, viz. an Axis, Points and Circles. The Axis is a straight line, that crosses the Globe diametrically; and may, not improperly be defin'd, a Diameter, about which the Sphere mov'd. The points may be divided into Cardinal, Collateral, and Vertical. The North, or the Arctic Pole, the South, or the Antarctic; the East and the West, are the 4 Cardinal Points. The South East, the North East, the South West, and the North West are the Collateral. And the Zenith and Nadir are the Vertical: The former being that point in the Heavens which is directly over our heads, and the other that which is diametrically opposite to it. The Circles are the Aequator, the Zodiac, the Colure of the Solstices, the Colure of the Equinoxes, the Meridian, the Horizon, the Tropick of Cancer, the Tropick of Capricorn, and the two Polar Circles. The first six are call'd great Circles, because their Center is the same with that of the Sphere. The Aequator divides the Terrestrial Globe into two equal parts, and is also so call'd because it serves to measure all the rest: And it is call'd the Equinoctial, because when the Sun is under this Circle, the days and nights are equally long over all the World; which comes to pass twice in the year, viz. on the 10th of March, and the 12 September, according to the Old Stile.

The Zodiac has its name from the Greek word Zoon, which signifies a Living Creature, because it is adorned with 12 Altersims, or Images, resembling Living Creatures, whose names are these, and commonly marked thus,

The Sun seems to go about this Circle once every year, and the Moon once in a Month. The line in the Middle of the Zodiac is call'd the Ecliptick, from the Greek word Eclipse, which signifies to lack or wane, because under this line it is that the Eclipses of the Sun and Moon happen. The Sun never swerves from the Ecliptick, but the Moon and the rest of the Planets wander up and down for the space of 8 Degrees, and sometimes more on both sides; upon which account, the breadth of the Zodiac is suppos'd to consist of about 16 Degrees. This Circle is oblique, and its obliquity is the cause of the Changes of the Seasons, occasion'd by the Approach or Withdrawing of the Sun. The Ecliptick, as well as the Aequator, is call'd Immutable, because they are the same to all the Inhabitants of the Earth.

The Colures divide the four Seasons of the year; for the Colure of the Solstices, passing through the Poles of the World, and the first Degree of Cancer and Capricorn makes the Summer and Winter. The Colure of the Equinoxes, cutting the beginning of Aries and Libra, make the Spring and Harvest.

The Meridian passes through the Poles of the World, and the Zenith of every place, and therefore call'd the Verticalure, which is always the same when we go from South to North; but changes as we pass from East to West. It is call'd the Meridian, because when the Sun comes to it in his daily Course, he makes it Noon to those that are under it.

The Horizon, has its name from the Greek word Orizo, which signifies to terminate or bound: And it may be divided into Rational and Sensible, as you may see in this Figure. The former divides the Hemisphere in which we live from the other which is under us and hid from us: and the Sensible is that great Circle which one being placed in a Plain, or in the midst of the Sea, determines with his Sight round about, by which the Heavens and Earth seem to be joyn'd, as it were, with a kind of Clofure: And therefore the Sensible Horizon must change as oft as the Beholder shifts from one place to another; and therefore it, as well as the Meridian, is call'd Mutable.

There are three sorts of Rational Horizons, viz. The Right, the Oblique, and the Parallel: And from thence come the three different positions of the Sphere, viz. The Right, Oblique, and Parallel. The Right Sphere is when it is in such a Position that the Aequator and all its parallels, such as the Tropicks and Polar Circles, stand on the Horizon at Right Angles, and are cut by it into two equal parts, as you may see in this Figure. Whence it mult needs be that, no Stars lie hid, under the Horizon; but they all Rise and Set in order within the space of 24 hours: as also that they spend equal time in moving above the Horizon and below it; and on that account a perpetual Equinox continues in this place.

The

The Oblique Sphere is such a Situation of the World, as the Axis of it (being neither right nor parallel to the Horizon,) inclines obliquely to one of the sides of the Horizon as in this Figure. And in this case, when the Axis neither lies on the Horizon nor cuts it at right Angles, as much as one of the Poles is raised above the Horizon, so much the other is depress'd below it: and the Sun and Stars ascend and descend obliquely, and some of them never ascend at all. And here it will not be amiss to take notice of the difference of the four Seasons of the year. For from the Vernal Equinox to the Summer Solstice, the days are longer than the Nights, and they continually increase. From the Summer Solstice to the Autumnal Equinox, the days exceed the nights, but still decrease. From the Autumnal Equinox to the Winter Solstice, the days decrease and the nights grow longer. Lastly from the Winter Solstice to the Vernal Equinox, the days, tho they be shorter than the nights, are still increasing. The Twilights also, by reason of the oblique descent of the Sun, last much longer than they do in a Right Sphere: insomuch that in some of the most northern Countries, during the Summer Season, they continue for whole nights; where one may read at Midnight by the light of the Sun, without a Candle; because the Sun glides slowly, and descends not so far under the Horizon as elsewhere.

The Parallel Sphere is when one of the Poles is elevated so far as to fall in with the Zenith, or Vertical point; whilst the other is depress'd as far as the Nadir: and the Equator coincides with the Horizon: And all the parallels of the Equator are also parallel to the Horizon, as you may see in this Figure. And in this Case, all the Stars in their Course, neither ascend above the Horizon, nor descend below it, but move in a road parallel to it. As the Zenith is that point of the Heavens which is directly above our heads, and Nadir that which is directly opposite to it, so its Secondary Circles, which pass through every Zenith and cut every point of the Horizon are called Azimuths, as the Circles parallel to the Horizon are called Almucantarath.

The Tropicks are two Circles parallel to the Equator, and equally distant from it: One of 'em passing through the beginning of Cancer towards the North, the other through the beginning of Capricorn towards the South: and as far removed from the Equator on either side as the Ecliptick is, viz. 23 Deg. 31 Min. The former is call'd the Tropick of Cancer, the other the Tropick of Capricorn, and are called Tropicks, from the Greek word Tropo, which signifies Conversion or turning back, because after the Sun has arrived at either of them, he goes no farther towards either of the Poles, but returns towards the Equator. His arrival at the former, which is on the 11 of June, makes our longest day: And at the other which is on the 12 of December, our shortest day and longest night.

The Polar Circles, are parallel to the Equator: And as far distant from the Poles of the World, as the Tropicks are from it. One of them is call'd the Arctick Polar Circle, from the Greek word Arctos a Bear, the name of that Northern Constellation, and passes through Iceland, Norway, Lapland, the White Sea, and Greenland; the other, the Antarctick, because it is opposite to it, near the South Pole, and passes through Magellanica.

Besides these Circles which we have already spoke of, there are two other sorts belonging to the Sphere, viz. the Meridians and the Parallels. The Meridians serve to mark out the Longitude of places, (as the Parallels their Latitude) and are therefore call'd the Circles of Longitude. The Longitude of a Place is the distance between it and the first Meridian. The Latitude of a Place is the distance of it from the Equator, either towards the North or South Pole: and therefore there are two Latitudes, tho but one Longitude; which goes on continually for the space of 360 degrees; whereas the Latitude does not exceed 90, viz. between the Equator and either of the Poles.

Latitude and Longitude are Terms that ought to be particularly understood, because they occur in all Geographical Discourses, and are absolutely necessary to the understanding this Science; Latitude is the distance of any Place, either North or South from the Equinoctial Line, and is mark'd in all Maps on the East and West part, that is the two sides (for Maps ought always to have the North at top.) Longitude shews the distance of one Place from another Eastward, which is mark'd at top and bottom of the Maps, being deduc'd from some certain Meridian, or Line describ'd from the North to the South Pole. We call that our Meridian where the Sun is with us at Noon-day, so there are many Meridians; but for the better shewing the situation of Places, one certain Meridian is or ought to be made use of in all Maps, which is called the great or first, and from it the Longitude is counted quite round the Globe, to the number of 360 Degrees. This Meridian by Ptolemy and the Ancients was plac'd at the Peak of Teneriffe, one of the Canary Islands: but in the year 1634 the French Geographers, for more exactness, began to remove it to the West Shore of the Island Ferri or Isla del Hierro, one of the same Canary Islands, but seated two degrees and Half more Westward: This they did, because that Island is the most Westward part of Europe, and all our Hemisphere. On this account the Maps, tho right, do sometimes differ in Longitude; some following the New and some the Old: In the following Work we have endeavoured to keep to the old, and deduce the Longitude from Teneriffe, except in some of the Maps that are taken from the French, for the sake of the Corrections that Nation has made to the Geography of Asia and Africa.

Latitude and Longitude is express'd by Degrees and Minutes; a Degree is the 360th part of the Earth's Circumference and a Minute is the 60th part of a Degree. In the third Chapter of this

An Introduction to Geography.

Introduction is shewn the measure of a Degree, by which it appears that a Minute is something more than an English Mile; but the Reader is to take notice that the Miles we mention in this following Geography, are those whereof 60 make a Degree.

Degrees of Latitude are of the same Breadth quite round the Globe, being drawn Parallel from the Equator to the Pole; whereas those of Longitude, tho they be of the same breadth at the Equator as is a Degree of Latitude, yet because they all meet in a Point at each Pole (like the Sections or Cloves of an Orange, for Example) must necessarily grow narrower as they approach the Poles; wherefore the two Places one Degree distant from each other North and South, must always be reckoned 60 miles asunder, yet two places a Degree distant East and West may be but 50, 40, or 30 miles from each other, accordingly as it is seated in Latitude. This may be easily discover'd by measuring with the Compasses on the Map; however for the Readers Ease we have drawn a Table of the breadth of Degrees of Longitude in every Latitude.

Having briefly treated of the Circles and Points of the Sphere, we come in the next place to speak of the Zones, Climates, and the Inhabitants of the Earth, as they are distinguished according to their different Shadows and Situations.

Of the Zones.

The Ancient Geographers divided the Terrestrial Globe into Zones, Climates, and Parallels. For as the Heavens are divided into five parts, by the four lesser Circles, viz. the Tropick of Cancer, the Tropick of Capricorn, the Arctick Circle, and the Antarctick, so they divided the Earth by these Circles, which lie under those of the Heavens, and exactly answer to them, into five Zones. Zones, in this Case, are no other than Spaces or Parts of the Earth, which have different names given them according to the different temper of the Air which one breaths in them; and there are five of them, viz. one Torrid, two Temperate, whereof one is towards the North, the other towards the South; and two Frigid, in the like Position, i. e. one towards wards towards the North, the other towards the South Pole. The Torrid Zone (which the Ancients thought uninhabitable by reason of its excessive heat) lies between the two Tropicks; and contains the greatest part of Africa; the Indian Ocean, a part of Arabia, Cambaya, India; the Islands of the Indian Ocean, Madagascaron, &c. Borneo, Malacca; a great part of the Atlantick Ocean; the Island of Santia; Galapagos; Brazil; Madagascar. The Temperate Zone towards the North, lies between the Tropick of Cancer and the North Polar Circle; land contains very many parts of the Earth, which are almost all known and inhabited, viz. all Europe, Asia (if you except India, Moluccas in the Continent, and the Isles of the Indian Ocean) a great part of Northern America, and a part of the Atlantick and Pacifick Seas. The Temperate Zone, towards the South lies between the Tropick of Capricorn, and the South Polar Circle, and it contains little Land, neither is it all known; however, it contains some of Africa, where it runs out Southward into the Sea, a part of Monomotapa, the Cape of Good Hope, a great part of Magellanica; some of Brazil, the Magellanick Straits, much of the Atlantick, Indian and Pacifick Seas. The Frigid Zone towards the North lies between the North Polar Circle and the North Pole, and contains the Isle of Iceland, the Northmost parts of Norway, of Lapland, of Finmark, Samojeda, Nova Zembla, Greenland, Spitzberg, with some parts of Northern America. The Frigid Zone towards the South lies between the South Polar Circle and the South Pole; but what it contains, whether Land or Water, is more than we can well tell.

The Ancients thought both the Torrid Zone and the two Frigid were uninhabitable, the one for its insupportable Heat, the others for their excessive cold; but the Navigation of this and the preceding Age hath demonstrated the Contrary. The length of the Nights, the coolness of the Dews, the regular and continual Winds that blow there, the height of the Mountains, the great quantity of Vapours which the Sun incessantly exhales from the Sea, and which are turned into Dew, and gentle Showers, do all contribute to keep the Air in a tolerable temperature, in the Torrid Zone, and in the Frigid, the coolness of the Air is considerably mitigated by the long presence of the Sun above their Horizon. 'Tis true, the latter is not so well inhabited as the other, where the Soil is generally good, and abounding with all things necessary for the Life and Delight of the Inhabitants.

Of the Climates and Parallels.

Besides the division of the Earth into Zones, for distinguishing the different Temperatures of the Air, Geographers have thought fit to divide it also into Climates and Parallels, on the account of the difference of the longest natural days in the several parts of it. This difference of the day depends upon the obliquity of the Equick and the inclination of the Horizon towards the Equator; for there is no Climate but in the Oblique Sphere, because in the Equick and Parallel, there is no Inclination or Inequality of days. A Climate may be defined, a Space on the Terrestrial Globe comprehended between two Circles parallel to the Equator, so that from the beginning of one Climate to that of another next to it, there is half an hours difference in the longest Summer-day. A Parallel may be defined a space on the Terrestrial Globe, comprehended between two Circles, parallel to the Equator, between whom in the longest Summer-day there is a variation of a quarter of an hour: So that every Climate contains two Parallels.

The Ancients who had regard only to that part of the Earth which they thought was inhabited, reckoned only seven Climates, to which they gave the names of the most remarkable Island, Town, River or Mountain through which they passed. The first from the Equator towards the North, they called Dia-Meroes, because it pass'd through Meroe an Island in the River Nile; the second, Dia-Siencis, from Siencis, a City under or near the Tropick of Cancer; the third Dia-Alexandrias from Alexandria, the Metropolis of Egypt; the fourth Dia-Rhodon, from the Island Rhodes, an Island in the Mediterranean Sea; the fifth, Dia-Romæ, from the City of Rome; the sixth, Dia-Pontou, from Pontus; and the seventh Dia-Borsythenou, from the River Borsythenes. Ptolemy is said to have added two, viz. Dia-Rippon, and Dia-Dania. And it is to be observed, that as they did not begin their Climates at the Equator, but 12 or 13 Degrees from it, because they thought the Torrid Zone uninhabitable, so they extended them no farther than the Polar Circle for the like reason: But the Modern Geographers have extended the Climates as far as the Arctic Circle; on the other side of which, since the Sun does not Set during some days in the Summer, and on that account the light is no longer encreased by the augmentation of half hours, but with that of whole Weeks and Months, it was judged convenient, that to the number of Climates formerly established, other six should be added; which are distinguished by a monthly augmentation of light, and continued even to the very Pole it self; which made 30 Climates in all, viz. 24 from the Equator to the Polar Circle, and 6 from that to the Pole. The Parallels were invented for finding the true Position of Places that are situated between two Climates; so that a Town situated between the 7th and 8th Climate is found to be in the 15th Parallel. Now as many Climates may be reckoned on the South Hemisphere, that is, from the Equator to the South Pole, so there will be 60 Climates in all. Those that were invented by the Ancient Geographers upon the South Hemisphere had their names from those opposite to them on the North side of the Equator, as, Anti-dia-Meroes, Anti-dia-Siencis, &c.

But before we leave this Subject it will not be amiss to give a Table of Climates, in which may be seen, at the beginning, middle, and end of every Climate, the Elevation of the Pole, the Latitude of the Parallel marked, likewise the length of the longest day, and the distance of the Climates one from another.

Climates of the Frigid Zone, where the longest Day increaseth by Months.

The use of this Table is, 1. the Elevation of the Pole or Latitude of any place being given, to find the length of the longest day of that place, and the Climate where it lies. For doing this, you must look in the Table for the given Elevation of the Pole, and over against it you shall find the length of the longest Day of that place, and its Climate and Parallel. If you don't find in the Table the very same Elevation of the Pole that was given, you must take those two of the Table which are nearest to't, one of which exceeds it, and the other is less than it: And accordingly as it approaches to the greater or lesser, the longest day of the Place comes nearer to that which is over-against the one or the other of these Elevations of the Pole. 2. The length of the longest Day of any place being given, the Latitude of that place, its Climate and Parallel may be found in the Table, by looking first for the length of the longest day, and the Latitude or Elevation of the Pole is over-against it: But if the length of the longest day cannot be had precisely in the Table, we must take the two that are next, greater and less than it, in the Column of the longest Day, and as the Day that was given approaches to the one or the other, so does the Latitude or Elevation of the Pole that belongs to it, come nearer to that of the one or the other of these two longest Days.

Of the Different Shadows.

The Ancient Geographers divided the Inhabitants of the Earth according to the different Shadows which their Bodies did cast when the Sun was in its Meridian height with them, into Amphiscii, Heteroscii, and Periscii. The Amphiscii were those whose Shadows, at different times of the year; fell sometimes towards the South, and sometimes towards the North, according as the Sun removed from their Zenith, towards the North or South Pole, who consequently must be the Inhabitants of the Torrid Zone; for when the Sun is directly over their Head, which comes to pass twice a year, Bodies that stand perpendicularly make no shadow at all; but when the Sun leaves their Zenith and advances towards either of the Tropicks, the shadow falls towards one of the Poles, viz. towards the Arctick when the Sun is in the North Signs, and towards the Antarctick when he is in the South Signs. The Heteroscii were those whose shadows, at Noon, always fall to one side, towards one of the Poles, viz. that which is above their Horizon: And these must be the Inhabitants of the Temperate Zones. The Periscii were those whose Shadows turned round in the space of 24 hours; and these must be the Inhabitants of the Frigid Zones; because the Sun for many days being above their Horizon without ever setting, the Shadow must turn as the Sun does.

Of the different Situations.

The Ancients did likewise, according to the different and opposite Habitations of People, divide the Inhabitants of the Earth into Periaci, Antiaci, and Antipodes. The Periaci were those who live under the same Parallel, but opposite Meridians, and consequently must live in the same Zone, and the same Climate, and have the same Elevation of the Pole, the same length of Days, and Summer, Autumn, Winter, and Spring, at the same time; but when 'tis Noon with one, 'tis Midnight with t'other. The Antiaci are those who live under the same Meridian, but opposite Parallels. These live in the same Zone, the same Climate, have the same Elevation of the Pole, but different Poles and have Noon at the very same time; but have different Seasons, it being Winter with the one whilst it is Summer with the other; according as the Sun, in his annual Course, advanceth towards either of the Tropicks. The Antipodes are those who live under both opposite Meridians, and opposite Parallels, are distant from one another the whole length of the Earth's Diameter, and go with their feet, diametrically opposite to one another: and therefore have their Summer and Winter, their Noon and Midnight, add, if you please, the Rising and Setting of all the Stars directly contrary to one another.

Some of the Ancients could not imagine how there could be such a thing as Antipodes, or People situated diametrically opposite to one another on the Earth: And Lactantius and S. Austin gave themselves the trouble to write against the Antipodes: and Vigilius, Bishop of Strasbourg, was excommunicated and deposed by Pope Zachary for being a Patron of this Opinion; the truth of which is now, by experience found to be undeniable.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the Earth, its Figure, Dimensions, &c. also of Measures.

THE Opinions of the Ancients concerning the Figure of the Earth was very doubtful and different. Some held it to be like a large hollow Vessel, and others that it was an immense Plain, supported by Pillars like a Square Table: And the latter Opinion was stily maintained by some of the Fathers, particularly by Lactantius, Book 3. Chap. 24. But the better sort of Philosophers, and all the Mathematicians have constantly maintain'd that its Figure is Globular; which we shall endeavour to illustrate by several plain and undeniable Reasons.

1. I say that the figure of the Earth is Globular does plainly appear from the Eclipses of the Moon; for these being always round, that Body which intercepts the beams of the Sun, and is the Cause of them, must necessarily be of a Spherical figure. If it were triangular, the figure in the Ecliptic would be so also; if it were Square or Cubical the shadow must have four sides; if it were a Hexagon, or a figure of six sides, the Eclipse must be so likewise; and so of any figure; and therefore the figure of our Earth must be only Globular.

2. The nearer one approaches to either of the Poles, the Stars nearest to these are the more elevated from the Horizon towards his Zenith; and the farther one moves from the Poles, these Stars seem to withdraw from him, till at last they quite disappear. Just so, the Stars rise and set, sooner to one that is travelling toward the East than toward the West; or which is the same, the days are longer to him that travels towards the West, than to one that travels towards the East; inasmuch that if one should spend a whole year in marching round the Earth, towards the West, he should lose a whole day during his Journey: As he that march'd towards the East in the same time should gain one: Which could not possibly happen if the surface of the Earth were a Plain. For if it were so, the Sun and Stars would rise and set alike to all the Inhabitants of the Earth; the contrary of which every body may easily observe. But when we speak of the Globular figure of the Earth, we do not mean that it is exactly and Geometrically so, because the Hills and Mountains make some sort of inequality on its surface: and the Sea and Rivers are a little lower than their Shoars and Banks; but these inequalities are so inconsiderable in respect of the Bulk of the Earth, that they cannot be said to spoil its Globular Figure, no more than the seams and little bruises that are on a handball, otherwise perfectly round, may be said to make it another thing than a Ball.

Concerning the Dimensions of the Earth, there are three things to be considered, viz. The length of its Diameter, and its Circuit. 2. The Extent of its Surface, and 3. its Solidity: But because it would be impossible to measure the Compass of the Earth intire, it has been judged necessary to measure one part of it, from whence the bigness of the whole may be concluded; and this part is a degree or the 360th part of a Circle. Ptolemy, and many other of the Ancients have observed what space answered to one of these Parts or Degrees, and have found it to contain 66½ Miles. Those learned Men, whom Maimon King of Arabia, or Caliph of Babylon, employed about this Discovery, about the 800th year of Christ, found it to be 56, or 56½ Miles. Among the Moderns, Fernelius hath found that a Degree of a great Circle of the Earth contained 68296 Geometrical Paces, or 5746 Fathom, and 4 French feet. Snellius found it to be 28500 Rhinland Perches, or 55021. Parisian Fathom; and the Gentlemen of the Academy for Sciences at Paris have found it to be 57060 Fathom, according to the measure of the Chastelet of Paris, or very near 73½ Engl. Miles. As to the Calculations of Problemy, and the Arabians, we do not certainly know the proportion betwixt their Miles and ours, and therefore cannot tell whether they were right or not, in reckoning so many miles to a Degree of the Earth, but according to the latest and best Calculations, the Dimensions of the Earth will be found to be these.

The Circuit of the Earth is 26293½, very near of English Miles.

The Diameter of the Earth 8369 Engl. Miles.

The surface of the Earth 220048209½ square Engl. Miles.

The Solidity of the Earth 306930160535½ very near of Cubick Engl. Miles.

Any of these being once given, the rest may be easily found: For the Diameter of any Circle is to its Circumference, as 7 to 22, very near Also the Diameter of a Globe being given, the surface of it in square measure may be found by multiplying its Diameter into the Circumference of one of its great Circles, viz. such as divide the Globe into two equal parts: And its Solidity may be had in Cubical measure, by multiplying its surface into a sixth part of the Diameter.

Of Measures, Ancient and Modern.

There is no one thing that hath embarras'd the knowledge of History and Geography, more than this, that People of different Nations, and living in different Ages, have for the most part had very false or confused Apprehensions of the measures that have been used by those who lived before them, or in different Countries, with reference to their own; and yet the ancient names of Greek and Roman Measures have been retained, when in the mean time the true proportion between those and such as are now in use is very little understood. The Gentlemen of the Academy for Sciences at Paris, when they had resolv'd to try what the Measure of one Degree of a great Circle of the Earth, or the 360th part of the Earth's Circuit was, that other Nations and after Ages might know the quantity of it in their own measures, did compare the Toise or Fathom of the Grand Chastelet of Paris, which was the measure they made use of, with an Original taken from Nature it self, viz. the length of a Pendulum for seconds. The way that they did it was this. They had two great Pendulum Clocks, each of whose single Vibrations was one Second of Time, conformable to the mean motion of the Sun; by these they determined the length of a single Pendulum, and found it to be 36 Inches 8½ lines (the line is the 12th of an Inch) of the foresaid measure of the Chastelet of Paris. They took the double of this for an universal Toise or Fathom; which hath the same proportion to the Parisian Toise, that 881 hath to 864. If thus the length of the Pendulum for Seconds be once found express'd, according to the usual measures of every place by this means may be had the proportion of the different measures to exact, as if the Originals had been compared, and for the time to come any change therein would be discovered. If this way will not hold univerfally, because of the variations of the length of the Pendulum, yet in every particular place and Country there may be a constant and invariable measure established from hence.

A Table of Measures.

Supposing the London foot to be 1350 Parts.
 The Paris foot is 1440 of these Parts.
 The Rhine or Leyden foot 1390.
 The Boulogne foot 1686.
 The Brale of Florence 2580.
 The old Roman foot according to the Model that is to be seen in the Capitol. } 1306
 According to Ricciolus 1334.
 The length of a Pendulum for Seconds, according to these Measures, is

Of London Mea.	Inches	1000 parts of an Inch.
Paris	39	126
Rhinland	36	708
Boulogne	37	974
Florence	31	352
Roman	20	480
	40	459

A line is $\frac{1}{12}$ of an Inch: An Inch is $\frac{1}{12}$ of a foot: and is subdivided into more or fewer parts, according as the measuring requires more or less exactness.

The Miles and Leagues differ according to the Statutes or Customs of different Countries.

- 5280 Engl. feet make one of our Miles.
 6 Paris feet make a Toise, and 2000 Toyses, a Parisian League.
 2853 Toises a Marine League.
 2282 Toises an ordinary Country League in France.
 12 Rhinland feet make a Perch.
 1500 Perches make a Mile.
 5 Parisian feet make a Geometrical Pace.
 1500 Geometrical Paces, a Mile of Scotland.
 3400 Geometrical Paces, a League of Spain.
 5000 Geometrical Paces a League of Swedenland.
 6000 Geom. Paces a League of Hungary.
 24345 English feet, or $4\frac{86}{100}$ of English Miles, make a German Mile, 15 whereof go to a degree.
 6083 Engl. feet, or $1\frac{281}{1000}$ of English Miles, make one Italian Mile, or the 60th part of a Degree.

The Stadium of the Greeks contained 600 of their feet; which were equal to 625 Roman feet.

The Alexandrian Stadium was to that of the Greeks, as 144 to 125.

The old Roman Mile contain'd 1000 paces, or 8 of their Stadia: And are call'd Lapides, because at every Miles end, for some way round the City, upon their Highways, there were Stones set up with the number of Miles on it, that it was distant from the City.

The Orgyia of the Greeks contain'd 6 Feet.

The Cubit $1\frac{1}{2}$ foot.

The Parasang, which was the old Persian Mile, contain'd 30 Stadia, or 3000 of their Paces.

The Schœnus, an Egyptian Measure, contained 60 Stadia, according to Herodotus.

The old Arabian Mile was equal to $7\frac{1}{2}$ Alexandrian Stadia.

The Arabian League, in old times, is thought to have been the 25 part of a Degree; so that 25 of them was equal to $73\frac{1}{100}$ English Miles.

The Mile which the Turks use is thought to be equal to the Italian.

100 Indian Miles are said to be equal to one Degree.

The Inhabitants of Cambaja, and the Kingdom of Guzara use a Measure, 30 of which make one Degree.

The Chinese have three sorts of Measures for distances, which they call Li, Pu, and Uchan. Li is the distance as far as a Man, crying loud, may be heard, in a plain, and still Air: And is thought to be 300 Geom. Paces. Pu contains 10 of these Li, and an Uchan 10 Pu; and this last they reckon to be the Measure of one days Journey.

The Square Mile consists of Square feet, and the Cubick Mile of solid feet, as the simple Mile consists of feet of length. The Square Mile is produced by the Multiplication of the simple Mile into it self: and the Cubick Mile, by multiplying the Square Mile by the Mile of Length.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Air, and Winds, or Points of the World.

The Air or Atmosphere, is that Space round about the Earth, in which Vapours and Exhalations are raised from it by the heat of the Sun. For the Sun and Stars being so many Fires they cannot miss to produce such an effect: And experience confirms it that they do so, for we see them frequently rise. This Air is naturally heavy, since we find it inclines towards the Center of the Earth when it is not hindered; for when the Earth is dug up, the Air immediately descends into the Cavity that is made. And the reason why it ascends at any time; is, either, that when it is rarefied with heat it seeks more room for it self, or when another Vapour pushes it upwards it must ascend. When it is hot it possesses more room than it did before, and the colder it grows, it is contracted within the narrower bounds. This is plain in a Thermometer, in which we see, that the Air which is shut up in the Glass, Glass, grows thicker or thinner, that is, possesses more or less space, according to the different degrees of Cold and Heat. And it may be so rarefied by a vehement fire, as to take up seventy times the room it formerly possess'd: and on the contrary it may be condensed to that degree in a Wind-Gun, that it shall fill only the sixtieth part of its ordinary space. But neither is the heat of the Sun so violent, nor the coldness of the greatest Frost so vehement as to produce these effects. 'Tis true that under the Æquator, where the heat of the Sun has greatest force, Vapours are raised higher, and rarefied more than under the Poles: and for the like reason, they should be attracted to a greater height at Noon in any place, than at another time; but this rarefaction of the particular parts of the Air makes no considerable change either as to figure or height of the whole mass of Air that is about the Earth, which by observing the different Refractions of a Star in two different Altitudes of it, is found to be near a thousandth part of the Semidiameter of the Earth, that is, near four Engl. Miles.

The Air is commonly divided into three Regions; the first is that in which we live; the second or middle one, is that in which Snow, Hail, Rain, are gathered, the third extends from the Region of the Clouds to the utmost surface of the Atmosphere. The parts of the Atmosphere that are highest, must therefore be lightest and finest; but those in the middle Region may be thicker or grosser than the parts next the Earth, because there the Vapours do easily condense and run together, the lighter going up higher, and the Rays reflected from the Earth losing much of their force before they reach the second Region: The further any place of the Earth is from being directly under the Sun, or the higher it is to the Poles, the Region of the Air in which Rain, Snow, Hail, are generated, is proportionably higher to the Earth, because the Sun-beams fall more obliquely upon the places towards the Poles than upon those about the Æquator, and consequently produce less heat; which heat extending a shorter way from the Earth, under the Poles than under the Æquator, the grosser Vapours may more easily unite at a less distance from the Earth, than in another place where there is greater heat.

A moderate Cold does not make the Air clear, but cloudy, because Vapours are raised, but not discuss'd, or rarefied sufficiently, by that small heat which still continues. But an excessive Cold makes the Air clear: as we see it in a long Frost, 1. because it thickens and condensates the grosser Vapours of the Air, and thereby makes them fall to the Ground, by which the remaining Air becomes finer. 2. The Pores of the Earth are close bound up, and therefore new Vapours cannot rise from it to cloud or thicken it. There might be a great deal more said concerning the nature and properties of the Air, that might either instruct or divert an ingenious Reader, but least some should think that we have said too much already, we shall stay no longer on this Subject but go on to that which follows in the Title of this Chapter.

It is not to be expected that we should here entertain the Reader with a Discourse concerning the Nature and Causes of Winds, since our present business is only to consider them with respect to the several Regions or Points of the World. The four Cardinal Points are, North, South, East and West: and to these have been assigned four Winds of the same name, which are also call'd Cardinal Winds. It would be tedious, and of very little use, to tell the Reader how at different times in former Ages, Philosophers have differed about the number of them, (some allowing only one, some two some four, and some twelve, &c.) or what and how various the names that were given them have been. It is certain, that where there is no Meridian (which happens under the Poles, where the Sun in his diurnal Course is never at all, or very little higher at one time than it is at another) there is no distinction of Winds, because neither South nor North, East nor West can be distinguish'd. If you stand in the Frozen Zone, but not under the Pole it self, the Sun may seem to rise and set, and come to a sort of Meridian height, and then the Quarters of the world may be clearly distinguish'd. The two Cardinal Winds or Points, called the South and North, are the foundation of all the rest: and for that reason one of them, viz. the North in the Mariners Compass, is adorned with a Flower de Luce; from whence the opposite point comes to be known: and the Meridian line is conceived as 'twere to lie extended between these points. Another line cutting these at Right Angles, shews the other two Cardinal Points, viz. East and West: the former of which, for distinctions sake, is usually mark'd with a Cross; but those that lie in the middle betwixt these Cardinal Points partake of the names of the Points next to them on both sides, viz. North-East, North-West, South-East, South-West. Each of these 8 Winds has two, viz. one on each side of it, which retaining the names of their Principals, acquire also a Sirname from the Cardinal Point, to which they incline; for they are thus term'd, North-by-West, North-by-East; North-East-by-North, North-East-by-East, East-by-North, East-by-South, South-East-by-East, South-by-East, South-by-West, South-West-by-South, South-West-by-West, West-by-South, West-by-North, North-West-by-West, North-West-by-North. These Collateral Winds are 16 in number, which together with the 8 Principal ones make 24. Lastly, between these 8 Principal, as many others are placed exactly in the midst, viz. North-North-East, East-North-East, East-South-East, South-South-East, South-South-West, West-South-West, West-North-West, North-North-West. These in all are the 32 Points of the Compass; as you may see in the Scheme at the top of the following page.

The Scheme shewing the 32 Points of the Compass as they are described in the preceding Page.

CHAP. V.

Of the Parts of Time.

THE Chief Parts of time are, a Day, an Hour, Month, and a Year. A Day is either Natural or Artificial. The Natural, is the space of 24 hours which the Sun takes to run round the Earth, or rather the Earth to turn round its own Axis. The Artificial, is the space of time from the rising of the Sun to his Setting.

The Civil and Astronomical Day differs not from the Natural, unless in their beginning, according to the Custom of a Commonwealth, or the pleasure of Astronomers. The Babylonians began their Day from Sun rising, (as the Inhabitants of Nuremberg now do) the Jews and Athenians from Sun-set, as the Italians, Austrians, Bohemians, and Silesians do now. The Egyptians and Romans of old began their day from Mid-night, which is practis'd still by the Germans, French, English, and other Nations of Europe. The greater part of Astronomers began it from Noon, as Ptolemy, the Alphonsines, and Tycho Brahe, but Copernicus, following Hipparchus, takes its beginning from mid-night.

An Hour is either equal or unequal; an equal Hour is the 24th part of a Natural Day. The unequal, is the 12th part of the Artificial Day or Night; which varies, as to the Inhabitants of the oblique Sphere, as the Seasons vary; for the Hours of the day are much longer in Summer than those in Winter, and the Hours of the Night contrary. An equal Hour contains 60 prime Minutes, one Min. 60 Seconds, one Second, 60 Thirds, &c.

A Month is either Solar or Lunar. The Solar Month is either Astronomical, or Civil: The Astronomical

Astronomical Solar Month is the precise and exact number of days, hours, and minutes that the Sun takes to pass through one Sign in the Ecliptick. The Civil is a space of time consisting sometimes of 31, sometimes of 30, 28 or 29 days. The Lunar Month is likewise either Astronomical or Civil. The Astron. Lunar Month is either Periodical or Synodical. The former is the space of time that the Moon takes to roll from a certain point of the Ecliptick to the same again: the other is the time from its departing from the Sun till it over-takes him again. A Periodical Month consists of 27 days and almost $\frac{1}{2}$ of a Day; whereas the Synodical includes 29 days and very near an half. For when the Moon hath left the Sun in any point of the Ecliptick, before it can return to the same again, the Sun has advanced forward (or seem'd to do so while the Earth's doing of it) and pass'd through a whole Sign almost; wherefore 2 days must of necessity be allow'd the Moon before she can over-take the Sun. From the four different Appearances of the Moon the Egyptians and Assyrians seem'd to have form'd their Weeks, assigning seven days to each; but the Hebrews had another reason for doing so, as we're told by Holy Scripture. And from the Seventh or Sabbath, the rest had their Denomination, as the first, second, and third, &c. after the Sabbath; only the sixth was call'd Parasceve, or preparation for the Sabbath. This Custom of counting by weeks seems to have been peculiar to the Eastern People, for the Greeks counted by Decades, or Tens, assigning 3 to each Month: and the Romans, besides their Distribution of the Month into Calends, Nones, and Ides, divided the year into so many eight days. The names which we commonly give to the days of the week are those of the Deities which the Superstitious Heathens ador'd. The Greeks seem to have had them from the Assyrians, and the Christians from them. The Chaldeans who first applied themselves to the study of Astronomy gave the names of their Gods to the Planets: and to give the greater Authority to their Art, gave the Guardianship of every Month, Day, Hour, and perhaps Minute to some Planet or other, as of Monday to the Moon, because she presided that Day, and so of all the rest.

The year is either Astronomical or Civil: And the former is either Tropical, which is the space of time the Sun takes to go from one point of the Ecliptick till he return to the same again; or Syde-real, which is the time the Sun takes in moving from a certain fix'd Star, till he returns to the same again, which is somewhat longer than the former, by reason the fix'd Star hath shifted about 51 seconds farther: So that it will take the Sun some Minutes to over-take it. Hence it is that the Equinoxes do every year anticipate one another; and with respect to the return of the Sun to the Constellations of the Zodiack, happen almost a whole Month sooner now than in the time of Hipparchus: and this is call'd the Precession of the Equinoxes.

The Civil year is either Solar or Lunar, and both either moveable or fix'd. The moveable consists of 365 days, without reckoning the odd hours, through the neglect of which it happens, that every fourth year the moveable out-runs the other by one day: and therefore in four times 365 years, that is, 1460 years, the beginning of it moves through every month and day of our year, whence it is necessary, that the Equinoxes and Solstices should also pass through all the days of the moveable year. This sort was in use among the Egyptians, and therefore call'd the Egyptian year, consisting of 12 months, each of which contain 30 days, and 5 were added at the end of every year, which were call'd επιμαρτυρια.

The fix'd Solar year is the Julian, so call'd from Julius Cæsar; who after the Battle of Pharsalæ, thought it not unworthy of him to set about rectifying the Calendar: and to that end sent for Sossigenes, a famous Astronomer, from Alexandria. And it being found that the Solar year was just 365 days and 6 hours, it was appointed that every fourth year there should be an Intercalary day made up of these 6 hours: and so made the 4th year to consist of 366 days; which year was call'd Bissextile, from a day intercal'd or put between the 23 and 24 of February, for which reason it is writ by the Latines bis sexto Calendas Martii. But tho' this was a great and useful work, yet the time allowed to a year by Cæsar was too much, by almost a 11 minutes; which in the space of 131 years grew into a whole day: and therefore in the 1260 years that pass'd between the Council of Nice, which instituted the Term for the Celebration of Easter, and the time of Pope Gregory the 13th, who restor'd the Term that had been removed out of their proper places, these 11 minutes had amounted almost to 10 days. For in the time of the Nicene Council, the Vernal Equinox was fix'd to the 21 day of March; but in that of Gregory, it was found to have crept insensibly to the 11 of the same month. Wherefore when the Pope had determin'd to restore the Equinox to its former Seat, he took those 10 days out of the Julian Calendar: and left the Hinges of the year should slip for the future, he ordain'd that every hundred year of the Christian Account of Time, should be common, that is, consisting of 365 days, which according to the Computation of Julius Cæsar, ought to be Bissextile; but that every four hundredth year should remain Bissextile.

The moveable Lunar year consists of 12 Synodical months. The Arabians and Saracens, and after their Example, the Turks make use of it. It is less than the Solar year by 11 days: so that their first month Muharran hath no fix'd place in the Solar year; but in space of less than 34 years it runs through all the Seasons of the Solar year. And the exact duration of 12 Moons being about 8 hours, 48 minutes more than 354 days, they find themselves oblig'd in 30 years to add a 11 days extraordinary; which the Arabians most ingeniously invented. Of these 30 years, 19 are simple, that is, have but 354 days, and 11 Intercalary or Embolomick, each of which have 355 days.

The fix'd Lunar year is that which by the Intercalation every second or third year of one month, keeps the Hinges of the year from slipping from their proper months: So much for the Parts of Time.

C H A P. VI.

Of the Terms of Geography, and of the principal Lakes, Rivers, and Mountains in the Earth.

Some of these Terms are peculiar to the Land, some to the Sea, and some common to both; but we shall begin with those that are most considerable.

The Ocean is that great Sea which goes round the whole Earth, and hath different names given it according to the different Countries that it wathes; as the Sea that's towards the North Pole is called the Hyperborean Sea, and so, the Indian Ocean, the Chinese Sea, the British Sea, &c. Some parts of this Ocean run up into Land through narrow Passes or Streights, other freely without these; the former may be properly called Seas, the other Gulfs. Of the first sort may be reckoned principally the Baltick Sea, which lies between Denmark, Sweden, Moscovy, Poland, and Lower Germany; The Mediterranean Sea, that runs in, from the Atlantick Ocean, between Spain and Barbary, and lies between Europe, Africa, and Asia. The Archipelago, or Aegean Sea; The Sea of Marmora; the Euxin Sea; the Palus Maoris, the Caspian Sea.

The most famous Gulfs in Europe are, the Gulfs, of Bothnia, Finland, Lubeck, Danzick, in the Baltick Sea; the Catgate, between Norway and the Isle of Zeeland; the Gulf of Venice, or the Adriatick Sea, the Gulf of Lepanto. The most considerable in Africk and Asia are, the Gulf of Arabia, or the Red-Sea; the Gulf of Ormus or Balsora, anciently the Gulf of Persia, the Gulf of Cambaia or Guzarar; the Gulf of Bengal; the Gulf of Haynam, the Gulf of Nanquin or Zang. In America, Hudson's Bay; the Gulf of Mexico, the Gulf of Florida; the Gulf of Honduras, where sailing is very dangerous because of a strong Current; and the Gulf of Panama, in the South Sea.

A Straight is a little Arm of the Sea hedged in on both sides by the Land; and there are three sorts of 'em, for they are either, 1. a narrow passage betwixt the Ocean and the Ocean, or the Ocean and a Gulf, or betwixt one Gulf and another. Of the first sort are, 1. the Streights of Magellan, which joins the Atlantick and Pacifick Seas. 2. The Streights of Davis, so call'd from John Davis an English Man, who discover'd them in the year 1585. They are a passage from the North Sea to the Pacifick, between Greenland and the Northern parts of America. 3. The Strait of Waigatz, betwixt Samogeda and Nova Zembla, being a Passage from the Russian or White Sea to the Tartarian Ocean. Of the second sort are, .1. The Streights of Gibraltar, betwixt Spain and Africk, through which the Atlantick Ocean floweth into the Mediterranean Sea. 2. The Sound, betwixt Zealand, an Island of Denmark, and the Coast of Schonen, part of the Continent of Sweden, through which the Atlantick Ocean flows into the Baltick Sea. 3. The Strait of Babel-Mandel, through which the Indian Ocean floweth into the Red-Sea. Of the third sort are, 1. the Hellepont, or the Streights of Gallipoli and the Dardanelles, a narrow Passage from the Archipelago to the Sea of Marmora. 2. The Streights of Constantinople, from the Sea of Marmora to the Black-Sea. 3. The Streights of Caffa, from the Black-Sea to the Lake Maoris.

The depth of the Sea is not a like in all places; for in some places it is $\frac{1}{2}$ of a Mile, in others $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{3}$, $\frac{1}{4}$, and in some few places it hath been found to be one whole German Mile. The saltness of the Sea-water proceeds from the rough, picquant, and heavy particles that are in it; and of these Salt is made, while the other, that are light and soft, are exhaled by the heat of the Sun, or boiled out by common Fire. The Sea-water is observed to be fresher near the Poles than under the Æquator, because under this the excessive heat of the Sun raiseth more Vapours than near those, and consequently leaves fewer of the soft and light particles, so that the Salt ones prevail: and besides, those Seas which flow upon Salt Rocks will taste more of Salt, than those that have another kind of Channel: and the more Salt that the water is, the heavier it is. Fresh water being thinner and lighter than Salt, is not able to sustain the same burthen as it does: and therefore greater depth of River-water is required to make a Ship float than of Sea-water. This saltness of Sea-water is the cause why it doth not freeze so easily as fresh water does: and there is a spirit extracted from Salt, which the extremest cold cannot freeze. Though so many Rivers run into the Sea, it grows no bigger, because, 1. the water returns to the Fountains of the Rivers by Subterraneous passages. 2. The Sun raiseth every day a great many vapours from it.

The Philosophers have rack'd their Inventions to little purpose, to find out the cause of the Ebbing and Flowing of the Sea: and most of 'em attribute it to the Moon; tho they can give no satisfying account how it is done. There is indeed some sort of relation between the Course of the Moon and it; for in full Moon, and new Moon the Sea flows highest, and lowest at quarter Moon. And at the time of the Vernal and Autumnal Æquinoxes the tides

Tides rise higher than at any other time, and lowest at the Solstices. Tho this motion of the Sea is so irregular, that no precise Rule can be fet for it, as to all places and times, yet in most places it flows 6 hours 12 minutes, and Ebbs as long. There are indeed some few places, where the Tide takes longer time to Flow, than it does to Ebb; and others in which it Ebbs longer than it Flows, but both together make always the space of 12 hours 28 $\frac{1}{2}$ Minutes; and the double of this being near 25 hours, it follows that the Tide happens later every day by the space of almost an hour. And the reason of this perhaps may be that the Moon returns later to the same Meridian by 50 Minutes. If then the time of high water were given at any place, upon the days of full Moon or new Moon, we may know the time of it any day after by adding so many minutes, viz. 48 $\frac{1}{2}$ to the same hour of the following day. For instance, if at any place it be high-water at 12 a Clock, in the time of new or full Moon, it will be high-water there the day following according to this Table.

As there are Islands surrounded by the Sea, so there are some environ'd by the waters of Rivers; the most remarkable of which are, the Island of Schut or Kadochens, in the Danube, and Camargue in the Rhone: The ancient Geographers tell us of another in the River Nile, which they call'd Meroe; and some Moderns have been led into the same error, but since the course of the Nile has come to be better known, from its source to its mouth, it's found that there is no such Isle in it. It is true, by a very considerable winding it makes the Kingdom of Goiam a large Peninsula; which probably has been the ground of that ancient mistake. This is not a meer assertion without any warrant, for the Patriarch Mendez, Father Lobo, and Father Telles, Jesuit Missionaries, who lived in the Abyssine, Country many years, and the History of Abyssinia, written by Mr. Ludlos, Councillor to the Duke of Saxe-Weymar, and printed at Francfort on the Mein, An. 1682. do sufficiently confirm what we have said in this matter.

A Peninsula is a Portion of Land, surrounded with water, except in one place, where it is joined to the Continent by a small Neck of Land: The most considerable of these are;

Chersonesus Aurea, or Malacca, joining to India.

Chersonesus Cimbrica, or Furland, joined to Holstein.

New-France, on the East-side of North America. Jugatan, in the Gulf of Mexico.

Corea, on the East of Tartary.

Africk also may not improperly be reckoned among these, it being joined to Asia by a small Neck of Land that separates the Mediterranean from the Red-Sea.

North and South America, which are joynd by a narrow piece of Land; at Panama, about 17 Leagues long.

The Morea, or Peloponnesus, joined to Greece.

Taurica Chersonesus, or Crim-Tartary, at the mouth of the Lake Meotis, in the Euxin-Sea.

An Isthmus is a little piece of Land that joins a Peninsula to the Continent. The most considerable of these are,

The Isthmus of Suez, that joyns Asia to Africk.

The Isth. of Corinth, that joins the Morea to Greece.

The Isth. of Panama, that joins North America to South America.

The Isth. of Molucca and India.

The Isth. of Precep.

A Continent is all the firm Land that is neither Island, Peninsula nor Isthmus.

An Archipelago, may be call'd a Collection or Cluster of small Islands in a Gulf or Sea; and these four are most remarkable, viz. that of the Aegean Sea, the Archipelago of St. Lazarus; the Archipelago of Malucca; and that of the Maldives.

A Promontory is a high hill running out a great way into the Sea.

A Cape is the outmost point of a Promontory jutting out into the Sea. The most remarkable of these are,

The Cape of Good-hope in Africa.

The Cape of Matapan in the Morea.

The Capes of Pharo, Passero, and Coco, in Sicily.

The Capes of Finisterre and St. Vincent in Spain.

The Cape of Cornwall in England.

The Cape of Scagen in Furland.

The North Cape in Norway.

Cape Norr. in the North of Asia.

Cape of Liampo in China.

Cape Verde on the West of Africa.

Cape Charles in Canada.

Cape Froward in the South of Magellanica.

Cape St. Austin in the East of Brasil.

The Cape of Coremes to the West of New-Spain.

A Mountain is a part of the Earth raised to a considerable height above that which is round about it. The most considerable Mountains in the World are,

In Europe,

The Pyrenean Mountains, which separate France from Spain.

The Apennines, which divide Italy into two parts.

The Alpes, which ly between France and Italy.

The Carpathii Montes, now the Krapach Mountain, between Poland and Turkey in Europe.

The Mountains Castagnas or Balkan, anciently Hamus, dividing Turkey into Northern and Southern.

The Mountains in Moscovy call'd Camenypois.

The

The Mountains of Darefield, which separate Sweden from Norway.

The Mountains of Auvergne in France.
The Grampian Mountains in Scotland.

In Asia.

Mount Taurus, which has different names given it by the different Countries through which it passes. It begins in Asia-minor and reaches into India.

Mount Caucasus, between the Euxin and Caspian Seas.

The Mountains of China near Tartary.

Mount Imaus, which divides, Tartary into two parts.

In Africa.

Mount Atlas, which begins in Mauritania Tingitania near the Cabo de Guer, and reaches as far as the Desarts of Barca.

The Mountains call'd Sierra Liona, Leonum Mons, on the Confines of Guinea.

In America.

The Mountains of Apalache, between New-France, and Florida.

The Mountains call'd Andes, Cordillera, or Sierra Nevada, which run through all the west parts of South America, from the Equator to the Streights of Magellan, for the space of 3800 Miles.

These Mountains mentioned in the foregoing Table, are such as lie extended for a long way in a continued Ridge; but there are others that are confined within much lesser bounds, but generally rise to a greater height, such as these following,

1. El Pico, a Mountain in Tenariff, one of the Canary Islands, thought to be the highest in the World, its perpendicular height being about 5 English Miles. Its top reaches above the Clouds, and is seen at Sea at the distance of 100 Leagues.

2. The Pic of St. George, in the Island of Pico, one of the Azores, thought, by some, to be as high as the Pic of Tenariff.

3. Pelion, a Mountain in Macedonia in Greece, was measured by Dicaearchus: 10 Stadia of perpendicular height.

4. Olympus, a Mountain in Lesser Asia, which was found by Zenagoras to be also 10 Stadia of perpendicular height.

5. Arbos, a Mountain on the Sea-Coast of Macedonia, whose shadow, as Plutarch and Pliny say, reach'd as far as the Island of Lemnos, which is 87 Miles distance from it.

These Mountains are principally famous for their height; but these following are remarkable, on another account, viz. for their burning.

1. Etna, a Mountain in Sicily, now call'd by the Italians ill Mon Gibello, which is said to be nine miles of sloping height, and fifty in Compass at the bottom.

2. Hecla, a Mountain in Iceland, called by the people of that Country Sunlendingafjordingur.

It is sometimes as outrageous as Etna, and casts up great burning stones.

3. Vesuvius, a Mountain in the Kingdom of Naples, not far from the City of that name, call'd by the Italians Monte di Somma, and the distance from Naples to the top of it is said to be 8 miles.

These are the most famous burning Mountains; but there are several others of less note, of whom we shall only name a few. There is one in the Island of Japan, another in Sumatra, another in Fana, a fourth in Nicaragua, in America, and several more in the Mountains of Peru.

A Mine is a place in the Earth, out of which Metals and Minerals, such as Gold, Silver, &c. are dug. The most famous Mines for Gold and Silver are,

1. Those in Peru, which are judged by far to be the richest in the world. Girava, a Spanish Author, says that there were Mines near Quiro, out of which they digged more Gold than Earth. In the Mountain Porosi, there is an extraordinary Silver Mine, about which twenty thousand Men are employed for digging up the Earth.

2. Japan also affords very good Silver Mines:

3. The Mountains of Guinea produce much Gold, but they are a great way from the Shoar: and a great part of the Gold of that Country is gathered from the Sand and Channel of Rivers.

4. There are several rich Mines of Gold and Silver in Monomotapa.

5. Germany abounds more with Mines than any other part of Europe, some of them afford a little Gold, many of 'em yield Silver in considerable quantities; but most of 'em Copper, Iron, and Lead.

6. Swedeland hath a very rich Copper Mine, in a huge Mountain, near a mile high, which they call Copperberg, from this there is as much Copper dug every year as pays a third of the King's Revenue.

7. There are several considerable Mines of Salt in Poland, Transylvania, and the County of Tyrol, and the whole Island of Ormus, in the mouth of the Persian Gulf seems to be made of Chrystalline Salt, and the walls of their Houses are built of it.

8. The West of England, and especially Cornwal, abounds with the Finest Tin in the World: and some parts of Scotland afford good store of Lead.

A Wood is a large piece of ground cover'd with Trees and Shrubs, that grow naturally. The most famous woods of old were,

1. The Hercynian Forest, which began in the Low-Countries, and ran through all Germany, Poland, Muscovy, and Tartary.

2. The Caledonian Forest in Scotland, which extended as the Grampian Mountains did, from Aberdeen to Dunbarton, for above a hundred Miles.

The most famous Woods at present are those of Norway and Lithuania; from the former of which the Dutch, Danes, Swedes, and French are furnished with Timber for Shipping. In Africk, near Cape Verde, there are Woods of Orange-Trees. In Spain and Italy, Olives and Myrtles, and in England Oaks.

A Desart is a Tract of Land, not manured nor inhabited by men. Some Desarts are sandy, as the Desarts of Lop, Calmak, or Xamo, and of Arabia deserta in Asia, those of Libya and Sarra in Africa, &c. Others are Stony, as the Desarts of Pharon, in Arabia Petraea, &c.

A Kingdom is a Country or Countries subject to a Prince.

A Province, was anciently among the Romans, a Conquered Country enjoying certain Laws and Privileges; but is now put for a part of a Kingdom.

Satrapia was a Persian word signifying a Province.

A Dioecesis is used by the Modern Geographers to signify the limits of a Bishop's Jurisdiction.

A Town, Urbs, (tho' it would seem to need no definition) is call'd a large piece of Ground covered with houses, inhabited by Men and encompassed with Walls.

Civitas, (a City) was antiently distinguished from Urbs, in this, that the latter signified the place; the former the Inhabitants; but now the name of City is given by the Italians and Spaniards, especially, to any Town that has the title of a Bishoprick; and by most people these two names are confounded.

Oppidum, was used to signify a little Town.

A Mart-Town is a large one where People of several Nations come upon the account of Trade and Commerce.

Colonia (a Colony) was anciently a Town or Place into which the Romans sent some of their Free born subjects to inhabit it.

C H A P. VII.

Of the several Parts of the Earth, their Bounds and Divisions.

THE Earth has been differently divided by those who lived in different Ages of the World. Some having divided it into two, viz. Asia and Europe; others into three, according to the Number of Noah's Sons, who are said to have had it divided among them; others into four, viz. Europe, Asia, Aegypt, and Africa; and others into six, viz. Asia, Africa, Europe, America, the Countries towards the North Pole, and those towards the South Pole. But we will not now bestow any time upon either refusing or justifying any of these divisions; that being a thing that depends on the knowledge that men had, of the Geography of the Earth, and the different fancies of the Geographers who lived in different Ages of the World.

The Earth may not improperly be divided into the Old World, a part of which we inhabit, the New World which has been discovered within these two hundred years, and those Countries of which we know only a part of their Coasts. The Old World, which the ancients had but an imperfect knowledge of, comprehended Europe, Asia, and Africa.

Europe is bounded on the North with the Euxine Sea, on the East with the Archipelago, the Sea of Marmora, the Black Sea, the Sea of Zabaccha, the Tanais, as far as the Town of Taya, and the Oby, as far as its Mouth, where it empties it self into the Scythian Ocean; on the South, with the Mediterranean Sea, which separates it from Africa; and on the West with the Atlantick Ocean. Its greatest length, from Cape St. Vincent in Portugal to the mouth of the Oby, is about 3900 Miles; its greatest breadth from Cape Marapan in the Morea, to the North Cape, the most Northern point of Norway, is 2350. It is divided into the Northern, Middle, and Southern Parts. The Northern comprehends the British Isles, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Poland and Muscovy. The Middle, France, Savoy, Switzerland, The Low Countries, Germany, Hungary, Transylvania, Valachia, Moldavia and little Tartary; the Southern, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and Turkey in Europe.

Asia is bounded on the North with the Scythian Ocean; on the East, with the East Ocean, on the South, with the Indian Ocean; and on the West, with the Red Sea, the Mediterranean Sea, the Archipelago, the Sea of Marmora, the Black Sea, the Euxin Sea, the Sea of Zabaccha, the Don and the Oby: And is of much larger extent than Europe. Strabo divided it into five parts; and Ptolemy into 47 Provinces; but according to the Modern Geographers it comprehends these following Countries and Kingdoms. The three Arabias, viz. Deserta, Fœlix, and Petraea; Armenia or Curdistan, Asia Minor, the Island of Borneo, the Island of Ceylon, the Island of Cyprus, Diarbeher, or Mesopotamia, Gurgistan or Georgia, Japan, the Island of Fava, India, which may be divided into three parts, viz. India properly so called, or Indostan, India beyond the Ganges, and India on this side the Ganges, the Country of the Naimans or Kaimachies, the Maldiva Islands, the Malucca Islands, with others in the Indian Ocean, Persia, the Philippine Islands, China, Syria, which comprehends the Holy Land, the Isle of Sumatra, Tartaria deserta, anciently call'd Scythia intra Imaum, Great Tartary, Tobbar or Thiber, formerly Scythia extra Imaum, and Maurababer, anciently Sogdiana.

Sh

Africa, which is a large Peninsula joyned to the Continent by an Isthmus of 25 leagues, is bounded on the North with the Mediterranean Sea; on the East with the Red Sea, and the Isthmus of Suez, which joins it to Asia, on the South with the Indian Ocean, and on the West with the Atlantick. It has been variously divided at different times. The Romans divided it into six Provinces, viz. Africa propria or Proconsularis, Numidia, Tripolitana, Bizacena, Mauritania, Cæsariensis, and Mauritania Tingitana: But this division is to be understood only of that part of it which was under the subjection of the Romans. Ptolemy divided it into 12 Regions, and according to the Modern Geographers it comprehends these following Kingdoms and Countries, viz. Agypt, Abyssinia, Barbary, anciently Mauritania and Africa propria, Biledulgerid, anciently inhabited by a part of the Gutuli and Garamantes, the Country of the Cassies in Aethiopia inferior, the Kingdom of Congo, Guinea, the Island of Madagascar, Afomotapa, the Country of the Negroes, Nubia, Zaara, Zanguebar, the Islands of Cape Verde, the Canary Islands, the Azores or Flandrian Islands, The Isle of St. Thomas, that lies under the Line, and a great many more of less note.

America is bounded on the West, with the South or Pacifick Sea, on the South with the Streights of Magellan, on the East with the North Sea, and on the North, with Lands that are hitherto very little known. It was first discovered by Christopher Columbus, a Genovese, in the year 1492; but about five years after it received the name of America, from one Americus Vesputius, a Florentin, who pierced farther into the Country than the former had done. It is divided into two great Peninsulas, separated from one another by the Isthmus of Panama, which is about 17 leagues broad. North America comprehends Estoteland, Florida, New England, New York, New France, New Spain, or the Kingdom of Mexico, (comprehending the Provinces of Jucatan, Nicaragua, New Galicia, Mechoacan, Guatimala, and Honduras.) New Mexico, Virginia, the Island of California, the Island of Cuba, the Island of Hispaniola, the Island of Terra Nova, and a great many more comprehended under the name of Antille. The Countries in South America are, Brazil, Carrucas, Chili, Guiana, Magellanica, New Andalusia, New Granada, Paraguay, Parana, Paria, the Country of Paripuan, the Kingdom of Peru, the Terra Firma, Tierra del Fuego, Tucuman, and Venezuela.

Concerning those Countries whereof the Coasts are only yet known, they are barren Deserts and Wildernesses lying towards both the Poles without the Bounds of both the Old and New World. The Danes, Hollanders and English have viewed the Coasts of them, and given them the names of European Countries; but the inland Countries are yet unknown by reason no Europeans have hitherto pierced into them. The Northern Countries are Spitzberg, between Nova Zembla and Greenland, which reaches to the 80th degree of Latitude; Greenland, 20 Miles from Island to the North, and about the 60th degree of Latitude. The South part of this Country was discovered about the end of the last Century by Bajins, Forbisher and Munch: and since that time other Countries lying more Northerly have been discovered, some of them under 74, 75, 76, and 78 Degrees, as the Countries of Rus, Bacy, and Edam, and some Dutch ships have gone as far as the 79th, to find out a Northern Passage to the East Indies: and having sailed a hundred leagues to the East of Nova Zembla, they found a Sea free from Ice, and good sailing, inasmuch that they might fall very securely betwixt Spitzberg and Nova Zembla, provided a fit season were taken for doing it; for the parts of the Sea that are covered with Ice are those that lie next the shoar, which being mixed with fresh water are the more easily frozen, James Island lies between the Streights of Hudson and Davis; New Wales, which was discovered by the English in the beginning of this Century; Estoteland which lies to the North of New France and New Albion discovered in the year 1578 by Sir Francis Drake, which is thought by some to be a part of California.

The unknown Countries lying towards the South Pole, are, New Guinea to the East of the Moluccas, which was discovered by Antony d'Urdo-metta, a Spaniard, in the year 1528, and by most part of Geographers taken for an Island; the Country of Papous, which lies to the West of New Guinea, and was discovered by the Dutch not many years ago; New Holland, to the South of the Moluccas, the Country of Concord, which the Dutch, who discovered it in the year 1618, call landt van Eendracht; the Country of Dime, which Abel Tisfman a Dutchman, discovered in the year 1642, and gave it that name in honour of Antony Dime, President of their East India Company; Tierra Austral del Espritu Santo, which makes a considerable part of the Terra Australis, towards the south part of the Pacifick Sea, and discovered, by Pedro Ferdinand de Quiros, in the year 1606. It lies North-West and South-East, about 15 or 16 degrees South latitude, and has a great many Isles of less note lying about it.

C H A P. VIII.

Containing the Description of the Celestial and Terrestrial Globes.

A Globe or Sphere is a round Body, contained under one superficies, in the middle of which there is, or supposed to be, a point from which right lines being drawn to the surface, they are all equal one to another. The use and design of these Globes is to represent to us the fabrick of the World, and this Earth upon which we live; for the Celestial represents the Heavens with its luminous Bodies, in their true situation, order, and seeming Magnitude; the Terrestrial represents the Earth, with all its several Kingdoms, and Countries, Isles and Seas. And to the end that all these might be clearly and distinctly exhibited to our View, the Astronomers and Geographers have invented certain Circles, by which the Globes are divided, and the several parts of them distinguished one from another. Of those things that belong to the Globes, some are common to both, others peculiar to each. Of those that are common to both, some are placed without the superficies of the Globe, and others upon it. Without the Surface are,

1. The two Poles, one of which is called the North or Arctick Pole, from the Constellations called in Greek ἄρκτοι (bears;) the other South or Antartick, as being opposite to the former.

2. The brazen Meridian, one side of which being divided into degrees, and passing through the Poles, representeth the true Meridian, this side ought always to be turned to the East: and it is divided into four times 90 Degrees; of which twice 90 begin to be counted from that part of the Equator that appears above the Horizon, towards both the Poles; but the other two 90 Degrees begin to be counted from either Pole, and end in the Equator under the Horizon.

3. The wooden Horizon, the upper part whereof resembles the true Horizon, and is divided by divers Circles; the innermost of which contains the twelve Signs of the Zodiack, each of which is divided into thirty Degrees. Next to these is the Julian Calendar and also the Gregorian, and both of them divided into months and days: the former preceding the other by ten days: and sometimes is added the Scaligeri- an, with the names of the Months and Holy-days, and the Golden number. In the outmost part is to be seen the Circle of Winds, or of the Quarters of the World, as they are now term'd by Mariners.

4. The Horary Circle, divided into twice twelve hours; of which the Twelfth for Midday points upwards, towards the Zenith, and the other twelfth for Midnight, towards the Horizon; but both these twelfth hours ought to coincide with the East side of the Meridian, in such manner, that the Pole carrying the horary Index, may possess the Center, and the Index itself, turned about with the diurnal Motion, may shew the hours before Noon in the Eastern semicircle, and those after Noon in the Western.

5. The Quadrant of Altitude, made of brass, and divided into ninety Degrees, or the fourth part of a Circle, and so fitted that one end being fixed to the Zenith or Vertical point, it may be moved and carried along the Convexity of the Globe to any point of the Horizon. In this Quadrant are reckoned the degrees from the Horizon upward to the Zenith or Vertical point; and it is therefore sometimes call'd the Vertical Circle.

6. The Mariners Compass, which is set on a Pedestal, under the Meridian, and serves to adjust the Globe to the four Quarters of the World, so that not only the Horizon of the Globe may answer to the Horizon of the world but the Meridian to the Meridian, and all the Circles on the Globe to those in the Heavens. Sometimes in the Celestial Globe there is fixt to the Cardinal points of South and North the Semicircle of Position; which may be readily elevated from the Horizon towards the Meridian, to any situation: and serves to show the beginnings of the twelve Houses (as they call 'em) of the Heavens, which the Astrologers use to distinguish by six Circles of Position. All these are to be seen without the Surface of the Globes. And on the Surface it self are these following.

1. The Aequator, called also the Aequinoctial, and sometimes the Aequidial, because twice a year when the Sun in his annual course comes, or seems to come there, the day and night are equally long all the world over. It is divided into 360 Degrees, which begin to be counted from the Vernal Section of the Ecliptick and Aequator, or the beginning of Aries, and are continued round the Globe till you return to the same point. Through every degree of this Circle, there is or supposed to be, a Semicircle from one Pole to the other, which are called Meridians, or Circles of Longitude on the Earth; because on the Aequator the Longitude of Places is reckoned. It divides the Globe into two equal parts, and is 90 degrees distant from either Pole.

2. The Ecliptick, which lies obliquely to the Aequator, and mutually cut each other in two opposite points. One half of this Circle declines from the Aequator towards the North Pole, about the space of 23^d 31^m. The other as much toward the South Pole, and divide the Globe into the North and South Hemispheres. The Zodiack and Ecliptick agree in this, that they have the same Axis and the same Poles; but differ in this only, that the Ecliptick is a Circle in the middle of the Zodiack; without any latitude; and the Zodiack is rather a Zone, or space almost 20 degrees broad. It is divided into twelve Signs, and each of these into 30 degrees; as we have said before in the Chapter concerning the sphere.

3. The two Tropicks, viz. of Cancer and Capricorn; which are two Circles parallel to the Aequator, the former of which is removed as far from it as the Ecliptick is, viz. 23 deg. 31. Min. towards the North Pole; the other, as many towards the South Pole. They bound the Sun's Excursions from the Aequator towards the North and South, and enclose the Ecliptick on both sides.

4. The two Polar Circles, viz. Arctic and Antarctic, which are as far removed from their respective Poles as the Tropicks are from the Aequator. These things which we have already mentioned in this Chapter are common to both Globes, only the Ecliptick and Semicircle of Position belong properly to the Celestial; but are added to the Terrestrial for the explaining, particularly, those appearances that depend on the annual Motion of the Sun.

But those things which are peculiar to each Globe, are, 1. Circles, viz. in the Celestial, the two Colures, and the Circles of Latitude; in the Terrestrial, the Meridians, Parallels, and Rhombs, or Points of the Compass. 2. Representations, particularly in the Terrestrial Globe of the Earth and Seas; which are the proper subject of Geography; in the Celestial, of the fixt Stars and Asterisms, or Constellations, which are formed of them, being in Number 48. 12 of which possess the Zodiack. There are 21 Constellations North from the Zodiack, and 15 South from it. The first are, Ur- sa Minor, Ursa Major, Draco, Cepheus, Erythraeus, or Leo, Corona Borealis, Hercules, in Cornibus, Lyra, Cygnus, Cassiopeia, Pegasus, Andromeda, Triangulum, Auriga, Ergolus, Equiculus, Delfis, Sagitta, Aquila, Serpentarius, and Serpens. The second are. Cetus, Eridanus, Lepus, Orion, Canis Major, Canis Minor, Navis Argo, Hydra, Crater, Corvus, Centaurus, Lupus, Aras, Corona Australis, Filix Austrinus.

Besides these 48 Constellations that are conspicuous to us, there are others observed about the South Pole, to the number of twelve. viz. Phoenix, Grus, Indus, Xiphius, Pavo, Anser, Hydrus, Passer, Apus, Triquetrum, Museus, Chamaeleon.

The Via Lactea, or Milky way, is a broad white circle, encompassing the whole Heavens, and extending it self, sometimes with a double path, but for the most part with a single one. Some of the Ancients imagined, that this Circle consisted only of a certain Exhalation, hanging in the Air; but by the ingenious observations of this Age, it hath been observed to be an innumerable heap of fixt Stars, different in Situation and Magnitude; which being only discerned by the Telescope, are not usually represented on the Globe.

After this short Description of the Globes, it will not be amiss to subjoin a short account also of the way of making these and Maps; that the Reader may the more easily and clearly comprehend the use and design of them. The easiest and most exact way to make a Terrestrial Globe, is that whereby the Points of a Globe, representing the several places of the Earth, are fixed and determined from the Longitude and Latitude of every particular place, taken by observation: for if those be once given, the place it self shall be represented by a point upon the Surface of the Globe, of the same Longitude and Latitude. But because this Method would be both slow and troublesome, and is seldom us'd but when very large Globes are made for Princes or great Men who are willing to bear the Charge, the Common Artificers take another way. They suppose the surface of the Globe to be divided into twelve equal parts by the Meridians drawn from Pole to Pole. Then upon a plain they delineate a figure like to this twelfth part of the Globe, enclosed by two Arches of a Circle (which prove afterwards to be Semicircles of the several Meridians of the Globe) and each of these twelfth parts of the Globes is again subdivided into lesser portions by the Meridians which are conceived to pass through every degree of the Aequator, and the Segments or Arches of the several Parallels. There is a twelfth part of the Aequator in the middle of this figure, represented by a straight line; and the Meridians meet at the Poles or it. Afterwards they take any one Meridian for the first, and from it they count the Degrees of the Aequator, under this first meridian they set a mark for that place of the Earth, which their Tables of Longitude suppose it to pass through; so that after they have divided the Æquator into 366 parts; beginning from this first Meridian, they may count the degrees of Longitude of each place upon it, as they do those of the Latitude upon the Meridian, each Semicircle of which is divided for that very end into twice 90 degrees, from the Æquator towards each Pole.

This being done, the places of the Earth are marked upon the several parts of these Plans, according to their degrees of Longitude and Latitude taken from Tables made by observation. After all this is done upon paper, they engrave so many Copper Plates in like manner, from which they print off as many Copies as they please; which Prints are afterwards pasted upon the Globes, so as all their extremities meet at the Poles; though for the most part they reach no farther than the Polar Circles: and they make one piece to represent the space contained within these Circles; the application of this one piece being easier than to make the extremities of all these twelve Plans join together and meet exactly at the Poles.

Maps are Representations of the Globe, or some of its parts, upon a Plan; and therefore they are either Universal or Particular. The Universal Map is that of the whole Earth, and in it are represented the Circles of the Globe of the Earth and the several Kingdoms, Countries, Islands and Seas in it. The Circles are the same as you see in the Terrestrial Globe, viz. 1. The Æquator and its parallels, which are 10 degrees distant from each other, and are 16 in Number. The Æquator is represented by a straight line that lies along both sides of the Universal Map, and is divided into 360 degrees, 180 of which are on one side of the Map, and as many on the other. 2. The Meridian and its secondaries, in number 34. It surrounds and is as 'twere a hemm round both sides of the Map, so that there seem to be two Meridians, tho' really there is but one, and if the Map is not round but square, then the Meridians are represented as straight lines. In Geographical Tables or Maps the secondaries of the Meridian are lines like to Semicircles, drawn through the Æquator towards both the Poles. 3. The Zodiac is also sometimes described on these Maps, but more for ornament than use. 4. The two Tropicks and two Polar Circles: and usually the Rhombs and Seamans Compass are represented.

The Representation of places, is the same on Maps, as on the Globe: and these are either more considerable, as Countries, Islands, Seas, Rivers; or less considerable, as Mountains, Woods and Rocks: and Cities also are distinguished by their names. All these ought necessarily to be exhibited: But there are other things which are added more to please the eye, than for use, such as the Pictures of Birds, Beasts, and the several habits of People, to denote the product of these Countries, and the habits that are used by the Inhabitants: Besides all these, in General Maps, are represented also the five Zones, the four Quarters of the World; the Amphiscii, Heteroscii, and Periscii, the Antaci, Periaci, and Antipodes: and some Maps have the Climates and Parallels, and several other things represented upon them.

Particular Maps are either greater or lesser; the former are those of the four parts of the World, viz. Europe, Asia, Africa, and America; the other are those of particular Kingdoms and Countries, as England, France, Spain, &c. and upon these are delineated not only particular places, but also certain Circles and a scale of Miles. The great Circles, viz. The Æquator and Meridian are not to be seen in the Map of Europe, because no part of it lies under the Æquator or first Meridian; neither are the Tropicks or Polar Circles represented in the Maps of those Countries that do not lie under or near to any of these; but instead of the Æquator or Meridian lines parallel to these are drawn, for finding the Longitude and Latitude of places: and these lines are drawn on the Margins of the Maps, and are divided into a proportionable number of degrees; those that represent the Æquator and are parallel to it, are drawn from East to West, as those that answer to the Meridian are drawn from South to North: The former serves for finding the Longitude as the other for discovering the Latitude. In some Maps the scale of Miles is simple, that is contains only the Miles of such a particular Country, of one kind: in others it is compounded, that is, has German, French and Italian Miles, distinguished one from another. Cities are distinguished from Towns, Towns from Villages, Villages from Castles, Castles from Monasteries, &c. by such marks as the Artificer thinks fit: and usually he affixes a Table of them. Universities are commonly denoted by little Stars, Bishops Seats by Crosses, Forts by Turrets, &c. The Mariners Compass is also to be seen in some Maps for adjusting them to the Quarters of the World. The use of particular Maps is easily known by that of the Globe and general ones, as, 1. By the Elevation of the Pole and Longitude of the place one may know in what Zone any Country lies. 2. The Longitude of any place may be found by laying a thread or rule from the top to the bottom of the Map, so as it pass through the place. 3. The Latitude may be found by laying the thread or rule from one side of the Map to the other East and West, over the place, whose situation you would know. 4. The Map may be easily adjusted to the Quarters of the World by the help of the Mariners Compass, or Meridian line. 5. The distance of one place from another may be found by the Compass and scale of Miles, or by a thread extended from one of these places to the other, and measuring the same afterwards upon the scale of Miles. These and a great many more might be enlarged upon, but we are unwilling to be thought tedious, and therefore rather choose to refer those who have a mind to be more fully informed in this matter to those Authors who have treated fully on this subject, particularly Varenius, Adrianus Metius, Johan. de sacro Bosco, and Gulielmus Bleau.

It would not have been improper in this place to have said something concerning the Nature and Construction of Maps; but because these cannot be fully understood without the knowledge of the Rules of Perspective; and there being few who understand these in any tolerable measure, we were unwilling to disoblige the Generality of People, who are apt to togle at things they have never seen before.

EUROPE

OF the Name of Euroopa the Ancients tell many fabulous Stories, and make it deriv'd from a certain Daughter of Agenor King of Phœnicia, nam'd Euroopa, whom Jupiter falling in Love with, metamorphiz'd himself into a Bull, and swam with her on his Back to the Island Creeer or Candy. But a little to palliate this Fable, the Poetical Part is taking away by others, and the Story told, That one Asterius a Cretan Captain, making War with the Phœnicians, carried away this charming Princess, and sail'd with her in a Ship call'd The Bull to Creeer, where he married her, and had Issue Minos and Rhadamanthus, whom the Poets make two of the Judges of Hell. This Rape is by Historians judg'd to have happen'd about the Year of the World 2660. in the time of Gideon Judge of Israel.

But whether this Lady, or any other particular Person, or whether the small Province of Thrace, call'd Euroopa, gave Name to this part of the World, we must conclude with Herodotus, is utterly unknown. But whence soever the Name was deriv'd, it was call'd Euroopa by the Romans, and at this time Euroopa by the Italians and Spaniards, l'Europe by the French, and Europe by the English; but by the Turks, Rumeli or Alfrank, Frankoba by the Georgians, and Frankistan by the rest of the People of Asia.

It is bounded on the North by the Frozen Ocean; on the South by the Mediterranean Sea, which divides it from Africa; on the East by Asia, from which it is parted by the Archipelago, the Euxine or Black Sea, and the Palus Meotis, or Sea of Zabach, and thence by a Line drawn from the River Tanaïs or Don, to the River Oby in Muscovy; and on the West it is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean.

Europe is seated between the 34th and 72 Degree of Latitude, titude, and between the 7th and 100th Degree of Longitude, reckoning the first Meridian to pass through the Island of Teneriffe; and contains in breadth from the North Cape to Cape Metapan in the Alca, about 2000 Miles: and in length from Cape St. Vincent in the West, to the Mouth of the River Oby in the East about 3600 Miles.

Altho' Europe be the least of the four Parts of the World, it is however more considerable than any of them; being much to be prefer'd for the Mildness of the Air, the Fertility of the Soil throughout, the many Navigable Rivers, the great plenty of Corn, Cattel, Wine and Oyl, and all things necessary, not only for Sustainance, but even for the Luxury of Human Life; but especially for the Beauty, Strength, Courage, Ingenuity and Wisdom of its Inhabitants; the Excellency of their Governments, the Equity of their Laws, the Freedom of their Subjects, and which surpasses all, the Sanctity of their Religion.

Europe was Peopled after the Flood, as is generally believ'd, by the Posterity of Japhet, who came from the lesser Asia over the Hellespont into Greece. Tho' others say, that those of Shem passing by Land betwixt the Caspian Sea and the Palus Mexis, went thro' Tartary and Scythia into Scythia, and thence afterwards into France, Germany, &c. Whether of those two Opinions be most to be credited, we know not: But be that as it will, Europe hath for many Ages been exceeding Populous, and her Inhabitants Illustrious for their Courage, Wisdom and Vertue; by which they Conquer'd the greatest part of Asia and Africa, and made those Parts subject to the two Empires of Greece and Rome. And in these latter Ages, almost one half of the Earth that was formerly unknown, hath been discover'd by Europeans, and possess'd by the Colonies they have sent thither.

The CHRISTIAN RELIGION is profess'd throughout all Europe, except that Part of it possess'd by the Turks. But by reason of the Innovations made by the Church of Rome, the Western Church is divided; Italy, Spain, France, part of Germany, and the Netherlands, with Poland, still following the Doctrine of the Church of Rome; whereas England, Scotland, Ireland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, great part of Germany, the United Provinces Switzerland, &c. have embraced the Reformation, and profess the Protestant Religion. And in Moscovy, some parts of Poland, in Walachia, Moldavia, Podolia, Volhinia, and Greece, the Doctrine of the Eastern or Greek Church is follow'd.

For Learning and Arts the Europeans have been most renown'd: All the Scholastick Sciences they have brought to a much greater Perfection than either Asiaticks or Africans ever did: and the Invention and Improvement of many useful and ingenious Arts, particularly Navigation, is wholly owing to the Genius and Industry of the Inhabitants of this part of the World.

The Languages of Europe are many, but are all deriv'd from these six Original ones, viz. The Greek, Latin, Teutonick or Old German, Gothick and Slavonick; different Dialects whereof, with accidental Additions, being the Languages of all the considerable Parts of Europe, except Tartary and Turky.

The Governments of Europe are mostly Monarchical, but exceedingly more easie and gentle than those of Asia and Africa.

In Europe are these Sovereign Princes and States, viz.

The Emperor of Germany.

The Emperor or Czar of Moscovy.

The Grand Seigneur or Emperor of the Turks.

The King of Great Britain.

The King of Spain.

The King of France.

The King of Portugal.

The King of Sweden.

The King of Denmark.

The King of Poland.

The King of Hungary.

The Pope.

Six Republicks, viz. 1. The State of Venice; 2. The States General of the United Netherlands; 3. The Cantons of Switzerland; 4. The Grisons; 5. The Republick of Genoa. And 6. The Republick of Lucca.

There are besides these, no less than 300 Subaltern Sovereign Princes in Germany, Italy, &c. who tho' they are Tributaries or Fieftees to the Emperour, or some other Superiour Prince, have Supream Authority in their own Estates: Of these there are both Spiritual and Temporal.

Of the Spiritual the most considerable are,

The Grand Master of Malta.

The Grand Master of the Teutonic Order in Germany.

The Three Spiritual Electors of the Empire, viz. The Archbishops of Mentz, Triers and Cologn.

The Archbishop of Saltzburgh, and 22 Bishops in Germany.

The Grand Prior of Malta, who is also call'd, The Grand Prior of Germany.

Several Abbats, whereof the Abbot of Fulda in Germany hath the largest Territory.

Several Provosts of the Church, whereof the most considerable is that of Berchellgaden.

Of the Temporal Princes there are Five Electors of the Empire, viz. The Duke of Bavaria, the Duke of Saxony, the Marquis of Brandenburg, the Count Palatine of the Rhine, and the Duke of Hannover.

An Arch-Duke of Austria.

A Great Duke of Tuscany.

Many Dukes; the most considerable whereof are

The Dukes of Savoy, Mantua, Modena, Parma, &c. in Italy.

The Dukes of Wurtemberg, Lunenburgh, Mecklenburgh, Holstein, Lauenburgh, Weimar, &c. in Germany. And

The Duke of Curland in Poland.

Several Marquisses, viz.

Of Baden, Dwylach, Obnspach, and Culembach in Germany.

Several in Italy, whose Estates are of small Extent.

The Landgraves of Hesse Darmstat.

Several Princes, whereof the most considerable are

The Princes of Orange, Anhalt, Domber, Monaco, Solfarin and Castiglione.

Divers Counts, the principal whereof are

The Counts Nassaw, Furstenberg, East-Frizeland, Hohenzollern, Arenberg, &c.

Besides these, there are

The Cham of Tartary.

The Waiwoods of Transylvania, Walachia, Moldania and the Ukraine.

And the small Republicks of Geneva and Ragusa.

The Division of Europe into its different Regions is already set down in the Introduction, and will be seen more particularly in the following Description of them.

BRITAIN.

BRITAIN, Britannia, in General:

BRITAIN, an Island large, populous and fruitful, is, in Longitude, about 15 Degrees and 50 Scruples; and in Latitude, in the North-part 59 Degrees, 40 Scruples; but in the South about 50 Degrees and 10 Scruples. Among the Ancients it was look'd upon to be so considerable, that in their Writings they call'd it Insula magna; and Cesar went yet higher, boasting, That he had found another World. By the best estimate that can be taken, 'tis computed at about 1836 miles in compass, viz. from Cathness to the Lands-end, 912. from the Lands-end to the Kentish-foreland, foreland, 320. and from thence all along the Eastern-coast to Carbneß, about 704. The Ancients differ exceedingly in their accounts of this matter, but their Authority is not much to be heeded: For few of those Writers knew the Island, and those that did, had not yet such a near acquaintance with it, as to take its Dimensions with a tolerable exactness.

The FORM of it is Triangular, the Lands-end, the Kentish-foreland and Carbneß, shooting out into so many Promontories, and making the three Corners. It's Bound, the Sea, has several Names, adapted to the several Shores: On the North, 'tis called the Northern-sea; on the West, the Irish sea; on the South, the Channel; and, on the East, the German-Ocean. This advantage of the Sea surrounding it, as 'tis a Security against Enemies, so also against the violent Colds to which the Climate would be otherwise expos'd: It supplies us both with Peace and Health. For the Tides and constant Motions of the Sea send us in a softning sort of Vapour which qualifies the natural sharpness of the Air, even to that degree, that in some parts of France and Italy they feel more of the Winter than we in England.

The SOIL does, in a great measure, owe its Fertility to the same cause; the Vapours not only softning the Air, and by that means nourishing every thing that grows, but also furnishing us with easie Showers in their proper Seasons. Inasmuch, that our Ancestors had a fancy, that this must needs be the Fortunate Islands, so much talk'd of by the Ancients; as having of all others the best claim to those agreeable Pleasures and Delights, with which they furnish'd that happy place. I know not whether it was not more the Courage and Vigour (observ'd to be in these Westerly Inhabitants) than any natural Cause, which gave rise to that Opinion. That the farther West, the Constitutions were more firm and the Courage greater.

That part of the Island which lies toward the Western Ocean, is mountainous, as in Cornwall, Wales, and also many parts of Scotland; but the inner Tracts are generally a plain, champain Country, abounding with Corn and Pasture. The most remarkable MOUNTAIN, is that continu'd Ridge which runs from South to North, dividing, as it were, the whole Island into the East and West parts, and is by Writers call'd the English Apennine.

The ISLANDS lie round it in great numbers; some single, as the Ile of Wight, the Ile of Man, &c. others as it were in Clusters, as the Cassiterides, the Orcades, and other little Slips that are scatter'd all along the Coast of Scotland. It has on all sides very convenient Harbours, and is accommodated with navigable Rivers in abundance, which convey the Riches of the Sea and of Foreign Nations into the very heart of the Kingdom. Of all the rest, these three are by far the most considerable; the Thames, the Severn, and the Humber, which carry along with them into the Sea vast numbers of lesser Rivers. Their course, with the Towns and Cities they touch upon, are better represented in the Map, than they would be by an enumeration of Particulars.

The INHABITANTS of the several Parts, are of a different original. Those of Cornwall and Wales are in a great measure the Posterity of the ancient Britains, who, upon the Invasions first of the Picts and then of the Saxons, betook themselves to those mountainous corners and out-skirts, and have ever since maintained both themselves and their Language too, against the mixture of Foreigners. Of late years indeed, the Cornish are come over to the English modes and ways of Living, and have begun to lay aside their ancient Tongue; which cannot perhaps be more plausibly attributed to any one thing, than the great number of Representatives they return to Parliament; for whom 'tis natural to carry back with them the Humours and Inclinations of the Court, and, at their return, to settle themselves in a method of Living agreeable to the Entertainments they meet with in their time of Attendance. But the Welsh have no such intercourse with the polite parts of the Kingdom; and so keep on in the old Channel, both as to Customs, Language, and other Circumstances of Life. The Scots are originally Irish, but not without a mixture of Picts, who (tho' they were subdu'd by the former, and fell under their Government) could not yet be entirely cut off; any more than the Conquer'd usually are in other Kingdoms. Bede and our other Historians are very clear and positive in the matter, That the West-parts of Scotland were Peopl'd from Ireland; and the Irish, which is their Language, puts it beyond all dispute: But the exact time when this should happen, is a point the Learned still differ about, while the Natives are concern'd for their own Antiquity, and their Neighbours do not love to see them run up their Original too high. As for the rest of the Island, tho' the Britains were for many hundred years in full possession, and after that the Romans made a considerable figure among us; yet we cannot well imagine there is much of the Blood of either Nation among us at this day. The Britains indeed may with some reason value themselves upon their descent from the Romans, with whom, in such a vast compass of time, they could not but have frequent Inter-marriages, and so incorporate themselves as it were into one People. This they may insist upon, and by such a step be carried to the Trojans, (whom they are so fond of) with more reason and less vanity. But whoever considers, how the Foreign Wars under the later Emperors clear'd this Island of the Romans, and how the prevailing power of the Saxons swept off the miserable Britains, will have but a mean opinion of our Title to a Descent from either. 'Tis true, we have more of the Roman Language to shew than the Britains, but we had it at second hand only from the Normans; whereas, the Remains they produce have been deriv'd to them from Age to Age; ever since their mutual Correspondence with that People, So that the Saxons are as far as we can go with any tolerable probability; and they, along with the Danes (who for many years over-ran the whole Kingdom) and the Normans (who conquer'd it) are the great Ingredients of our Inhabitants at this day.

And as we are a mixture of the Northern Nations and of the French or Norman; so we seem to retain something of the HUMOUR and TEMPER of both, keeping a mean between the two. The French-man is brisk, gay and airy; the Hollander and German is unactive, heavy und unwieldy; the English-man has neither so much of the first Qualities as to carry him to Levity; nor of the second, as make him fairly chargeable with Dulness. His Fancy does not out-run his Judgment, nor his Judgment drown his Fancy. This difference is very remarkable in two particulars, War and Learning. In the first, what more notorious than the slowness of the German, the quickness of the French, and the settl'd Courage and Conduct of the English? In the second, nothing is more apparent, than the Bulks of Lectures, and Comments, and Common-places, that the first have given us; the little Whimsies and pert Essays that we have have had from the second; and the solid Argument and substantial Matter which the last have sent into the World. The French, 'tis true, have done great Honour to Learning, under the protection of a Prince; who has establish'd a more lasting Name, by his eminent Patronage, to that, than by the progress of his Arms. But they have this advantage, that their Language has settl'd it self in most parts of Europe, and conveys the utmost extent of their Learning, as far as it reaches. Could but our English Tongue propagate it self into as many Corners of the World, or would the great Men among us make themselves Masters, of the Roman Style, and so pen their Discourses in a Language universally known, our Books would undoubtedly make their own way: They would carry Instruction abroad, and bring Reputation to our own Kingdom. Our Divinity, particularly, as it is grave and substantial, so it is much courted and admired by Foreigners; insomuch, that of late years we have had great numbers of Germans, Sweeds, Danes, and other Nations, who have travell'd into England upon no other design, but to inform themselves in our methods of Preaching, and by learning the Language to be capable of receiving profit by our Writings.

The State of RELIGION, so far as we have any light from History, is in short thus. When Julius Cæsar came over, his short stay and small correspondence with the Natives gave him little opportunity of informing himself in their Affairs. But when he observes, that such of the Gauls as desired to be instructed in the Rites and Discipline of the Druids, came over into Britain for that purpose, 'tis plain that this was the Religion of the place. Nor need we build only upon that hint, after he has told us how at that time 'twas a current Opinion, that the Discipline of the Druids came originally out of Britain, and was thence transplanted into Gaul. This was their Religion, till the plantation of Christianity; for which their old Persuasion (which taught 'em to believe One God, and the Immortality of the Soul) may seem in some measure to have made way. How early it was introduc'd, is a point which has been much disputed among the Learned. Some will have it, that Joseph of Arimathea sail'd from Gaul, and preach'd Christianity among them; But that, in several particulars, looks too like a piece of Monkish Forgery. The general Tradition is, that, at King Lucius's request, Pope Elutherus sent over Elurbanus and Meduanus to preach Christ; an Opinion which is handl'd at large by Archbishop Usher and Dr. Stillingfleet. The latter of these is inclin'd to have Christianity very early in this Island, proving it to have been planted by no less Hand than that of S. Paul. The Reasons alledg'd by the particular Patrons of these Conjectures, are too many and too large for this place: The Authors themselves have deliver'd 'em at large. Upon the invasion of the Saxons, Christianity was confin'd to that poor corner which was the shelter of the Britains, and nothing but Paganism prevail'd amongst that warlike Crew; till Pope Gregory sent over Austin the Monk, who, by his indefatigable Industry laid such a foundation for Christianity, that his Successors gain'd ground apace, and in Some years propagated it over the whole Nation. Such was the pious Zeal of those times, that Religion quickly receiv'd encouragement from all Hands, and Kings and Princes honour'd it with Religious Houses and Churches in great numbers. Thus it went on without Interruption, till the Danes broke in upon them; who, from an innate barbarity and hatred to Religion, as well as a thirst after the Wealth and Riches of those holy Places, spar'd none of them that lay in their way, but burnt and plunder'd whatever they came near. Upon an accommodation with that People, it reviv'd and grew mightily; so that England, for number of Religious Houses, was perhaps as considerable as any part of Europe. Till King Henry the Eighth by Act of Parliament had them dissolv'd, when (quitting his subjection to the See of Rome) he made a Reformation of the Corruptions that had crept in among us, and establish'd the Protestant Religion.

The first LANGUAGE in this Nation, was British, which (as the People and Religion) was driven off by the Conquerors, and succeeded by that of the Saxons. By the Danish Invasions, a mixture of that Tongue crept in among us; but did not cause any considerable Alterations, especially as to the Fundamentals, wherein they agree pretty much. But the Norman Conqueror, so soon as he was settl'd in his new Territories, quickly discourag'd both; and succeeded so well in his endeavours to establish the Norman, that before the end of Henry the Second, (what by contraction of the Old and interpolations of the New) we find the true native Saxon quite moulded into another form. For how should it be otherwise? Their publick Pleadings were in French, French was the Language of the Court, and Children were to learn no other Tongue. Thus, by degrees, (partly by reason of a fondness we have always entertain'd for French Fopperies, and partly becaule of a harshness that has been still fancy'd to run through our own Language) our Ancestors have endeavour'd to supply and refine it from the French, and every Age has been bringing in new Words, new Phrases, and new Dialects. So that now it makes a very great figure in our common Conversation and Writings; tho' we may still safely affirm, That the most full and significant Words in use among us, are the remains of the old Native Stock. And as it has been an unaccountable Levity in our Ancestors to affect Foreign Commodities when they had more substantial Wares at home; so would it become their Posterity to look back thro' the Ruins of their original Language, and try whether they cannot meet with expressions of a stronger meaning, than the loose and verbal Harangue of our Neighbours, agreeable indeed to the Humour of an effeminate Nation, but by no means suited to the masculine Genius of the English. This way of restoring our old Words has been of late practis'd, with good success, by an eminent Author.

S E C T. II.

Of the ancient State of BRITAIN.

The name Britannia and Insule Britannica were of a large extent among the Ancients, and us'd sometimes to signify all the Islands lying in this Western part of the World. But to restrain them to the more limited acceptation: Britain (as I observ'd before) was so little known to Julius Cæsar, that, as one says, He rather show'd it to the Romans then subjected it to the Empire. So that his accounts of it are short and lame, rather taken from report than any certain knowledge he could have of their Affairs. He tells us, That all the Sea-coasts over against Gaul were peopl'd from that Country, but that the inner parts were Aborigines, or sprung out o' the Ground; which is a fair Confession that he knew nothing o' the matter. Had he drawn the In-landers from the same Original as he did the Sea-coasts, he had light upon that by Conjecture which after-Ages have found reason to advance into an establish'd Opinion. The British Language is so much of a piece with the old Gaulish (as near as we can judge by the broken remains that are left us of this latter;) the Customs of both Nations were so alike; and 'tis likewise so very natural to imagin, that after the propagation of Mankind, in their progress Westward and their quest after new Countries, out of Gaul they should come over into Britain, lying within Sight; that an impartial Judge cannot stick in this point. Let it suffice here barely to have recited the common Heads from which the Arguments for this Opinion are fetched; especially since the great Oracle of our Nation, Mr. Camden, has prov'd every Particular with such a strength of Reason and Judgment as puts the matter beyond Dispute. I know the Britains are very proud of their original from the Trojans, and would fain have Brutus to have left his Name to the whole Island; but the same Author has considered their pretences to that Title so exactly, and convinc'd them so fully of their Mistake, that if any thing could, nothing need to be added to what he has left us. Claudius was the next Man that came among us, who by his own Conduct and that of Anlus Plautius, made his way into the more inward parts of the Island, by the defeat of the Britains. After these, Vespasian, Publius Ostorius, and Paulinus Suetonius, prov'd very troublesome to the Inhabitants, who all the while omitted no opportunities of returning their kindness, by surprizing the Roman Legions, entering into Confederacies against their new Governors, and more then once breaking out into actual Rebellion. But it was Agricola, who under Vespasian, Titus and Domitian, gave the finishing stroke to the Conquest of Britain; not by the same methods which his Predecessors had us'd, Hardships and Severities, but by the more gentle ties of an obliging Humour. 'Tis true, he was almost continually engaging one Party or other of them, for eight years together; but unless his good Temper had seconded this success of his Arms, though he might quell them for the present, yet he had left them in an entire hatred to their Roman Lords, and a full resolution to take up Arms upon the first opportunity. By which means, the Supplies necessary to defend the Garrisons, would have cost the Romans more than all the Revenue of the Island was worth. But he observ'd, he had a stubborn morose People to deal with; a Nation that was inur'd to all kinds of Hardship; and therefore instead of Threatnings (which could not work upon them) he betook himself to artificial Insinuations, and began to encourage the Roman Customs and Modes of living. This softn'd them by degrees, and melted them into Idleness and Luxury; so that in a short time, he had par'd off that aversion to the Romans, and happy was the Man that could imitate them most.

To the Romans succeeded the SAXONS, who came over upon this occasion. In the Reign of Valentinian the Younger, the Necessities of the Empire abroad, had oblig'd the Romans not only to recall most of their own Forces out of Britain, but also to deprive the Island of her own native Strength by their frequent Levies. The Scots and Picts (two Warlike People) laid hold of this opportunity to plunder the Frontiers, and make in-roads into the Territories of the Britains, who by this time were quite dif-spirited by Slavery, and had suffer'd their old native Courage to dwindle into Ease and Cowardise. In this condition, all the refuge they had, was to fly to the Romans, who had neither left them Forces to protect them, nor (which is worse) a manly resolute Spirit to stand upon their own Guard. The Romans were too warmly engag'd nearer home, to relieve them; upon which they send the same request to the Saxons, who had convinc'd them of their Courage, by their frequent Piracies upon our Coasts, even while the Romans continu'd among us. So that we find under the later Emperors, the Comes Littoris Saxonici, or Count of the Saxon Shore, to have been a standing Officer, whose business it was to guard the Sea-coasts against their In-roads and Depredations. Upon this application, they come over, repel the Enemy, and are mightily pleas'd with their new Quarters, especially being a little straitn'd at home. In short, they begin to lay hold on all occasions of a Quarrel with the Britains, pretend they had not stood to their Terms; and carry on their Designs so successfully, that they never desist'd till they had banish'd the old Inhabitants, and made themselves Masters of the greatest part of the Island.

The DANES about the year 800, though they had not so fair a pretence of coming over, yet by main force edg'd themselves in among the Saxons, and us'd them much at the same rate as that People had done the Britains. They robb'd and plunder'd, till they had forc'd them to a Composition, and had Lands assign'd them in several parts of the Kingdom. Nor would they be content with this; but made frequent Incurfions into their Neighbours Territories, which occasion'd the raising of that sort of Tax call'd Danegels, a Bribe to keep them from overrunning the Kingdom. But neither did this do. Their Insolence was such, that the English could not long bear it; so, entering into a secret Plot, they made a general havock of them in one single Night, putting them all to the Sword. At this, Sueno, King of the Danes, was highly enrag'd, and to revenge the Injury, invaded England with a strong Army, and possess'd himself of the Crown; which was enjoy'd only by four Kings of that Race, and then return'd to the Saxons.

Scarce had the Saxons recover'd their ancient Rights and Government, but they fell into a worse Confusion, upon the Death of Edward the Confessor. He was an easie Prince, and rather inclin'd to attend the Duties of Religion than the Secular Affairs of his Kingdom. Leaving no Issue behind him, the Title to the Crown came to be contested by two very powerful Parties, who yet had neither of 'em a right to it; for Edgar Atheling was the only Man then living of the Saxon Line. But Harold Earl Godwin's Son, took advantage of his tender years, and possess'd himself of the Throne. William Duke of Normandy, afterwards stiled the Conqueror, took these proceedings very heinously, imagining, that by his relation to that Family, by virtue of the Confessor's Promise when he was banish'd into Normandy, and also Harold's obligation to see it discharg'd, he had fairer pretentions than any other. Whereupon he landed with a powerful Army, Conquer'd the English in a set Battle, (wherein Harold was slain) and immediately took possession of the Government.

SECT. IV.

The Civil Government of BRITAIN.

Of the Administration of the ancient Britains, we have these two general Heads left us by Julius Caesar, That in times of Peace, the Druids had the Conduct of all Civil Affairs; and in times of War they chose some one of remarkable Courage to be General of their Forces, upon that Expedition. The Romans Govern'd it by their Propr.ctors and other Sub-ordinate Officers, who were to act according to Instructions from Rome, and had some Legions ready for their defence upon any emergent occasion. But the Saxons as they gain'd Ground, settl'd many distinct Kingdoms; which upon their Entire Conquest, amounted to Seven, and have been since still'd the Saxon Heptarchy. The names of them, with their Extent and Jurisdiction, are as follows:

The Saxon Hierarchy.	1. The Kingdom of Kent contain'd	} The County of	} Kent.
	2. The Kingdom of the South-Saxons contain'd
	3. The Kingdom of the East-Angles contain'd	} The Counties of	} Norfolk Suffolk Cambridge, with the Isle of Ely.
	4. The Kingdom of the West-Saxons contain'd
	5. The Kingdom of Northumberland contain'd	} The Counties of	} Lancafter York Durham Cumberland Westmoreland Northumberland and Scotland to the Fryth of E-denburg.
	6. The Kingdom of the East-Saxons contain'd
	7. The Kingdom of Mercia contain'd	} The Counties of	} Gloucester Hereford Worcester Warwick Leicester Rutland Northampton Lincoln Huntingdon Bedford Buckingham Oxford Stafford Derby Shropshire Nottingham Chester, and the other part of Hertfordshire.

But though these were distinct Kingdoms, yet still there was a face of Monarchy in the Nation; and the Prince that was most Powerful of the Seven, generally Lorded it over the rest, as if they had been only so many Tributary Kings. For they were continually at War one with another, and the Conqueror always taking the Dominions of the Enemy into his own Kingdom, they all came at last into that of the West-Saxons, under King Egbert; who by a publick Edict, order'd the whole Kingdom to be still'd Engla-land, which we have now contracted into England. One of his Successors, presently upon this took the Title of King of Great Britain, and another that of Monarch of all Albion.

The Succession of our English Monarchs from Egbert, is thus:

The King is Supreme in all Causes, both Ecclesiastical and Civil; having the same Power, in Matters relating to the Church, that the Pope had, before this Island disown'd his Jurisdiction under Henry the Eighth. But yet he cannot enact Laws singly and by himself, but must have the Concurrence of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and of the Commons assembled in Parliament, before any thing can pass into a Law. The Parliament does not meet but upon the more weighty Affairs of the Kingdom, and are both call'd and dissolv'd at the King's Pleasure, who is suppos'd to be Judge of the Exigencies of the Nation. This is the Supreme Court, wherein Causes are finally determin'd, and from which there lies no Appeal; whereas, Appeals are made to this from the other Courts.

The chief Courts are, 1. The King's Bench, so call'd, because the King us'd to sit there in Person; but now administers Justice by a Lord Chief Justice, and three more Judges, or as many as he shall think fit. 2. The Common Pleas (from determining Pleas between Subject and Subject) consists of a Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and three other Judges to assist him. 3. The Exchequer (from a Table at which they sat;) where all Matters belonging to the King's Revenue are determin'd by the great Officers and Judges belonging to it, viz. The Lord Treasurer, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Chief Baron, and four other Barons. 4. The Chancery, (so call'd from sitting within the Rails or Chancels;) instituted to moderate the Rigour of the Law, which by reason of an infinite number of unforeseen Circumstances that attend a great many Causes, is too often Oppression and Injustice. Hither, therefore, they make their Appeals, who think themselves injur'd by the Letter of the Law: And if it appears that they have Equity on their Side, the Judgments given upon strict Law are revers'd, and the Parties reliev'd. In this Court is the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and twelve Masters of Chancery, as Assessors, the chief whereof is the Keeper of the Rolls. 5. The Court of Admiralty, where Sentence is given in Marine Affairs, by the Admiral of England, a Judge, two Clerks, &c. 6. The Court of Requests (from the Petitions receiv'd there) managed by the Lord Priory Seal, the Masters of the Requests, a Clerk, and two or three Attorneys.

The Court of Wards and Liveries (from taking Cognizance of the Causes of Minor's) and the Court of Star-Chamber (which was chiefly to restrain the Exorbitances of Great Men, and punish Misdemeanors, &c.) are both abolish'd.

Besides these Courts, the King, for the Ease of the Subject, sends down two Judges into each County; the one of Life and Death, and the other of Nisi Prius, who are to determine Causes without putting the Parties to the Trouble and Expence of giving Attendance at the Superior Courts; except where the Cause is weighty and difficult, and then it is refer'd to a Trial at Westminster: And as these Circuits were contriv'd for the Ease of the Nation in general; so for the Peace and good Government of each particular County, the King has Lord Lieutenants, whose Care it is that the State suffer no Damage. Each County also has its Sheriff, who is to get up the Publick Revenues, to attend the Judges, to take care that such as are condemn'd be duely executed, &c. And several Justices of the Peace, who may Commit for Felonies, Trespasses and other Misdemeanors.

Before the Conquest, we find that England, according to its several Branches, was govern'd by three sorts of LAWs, the West-Saxenlage, the Danelage and the Merchenlage. For as the Authority, which the first and last of these three bore in the Hierarchy, was sufficient to establish their own Laws in their neighbouring Countries; so the Power to which the Danes arriv'd, did effectually engage such Places as they over-ran most, in the Use of their Customs and ways of Living. But upon William the Conqueror's coming in, these Laws were in a great measure laid aside. At first, he intended to have brought in the Norman Usages, and to have establish'd them here entire; till he found the Humour of the English were much fet upon their own Laws, and so was induced, from a prudent Regard to his own Safety, only to Reform, Alter, Add, &c. but so, that the old Body was his Foundation. Tho' in his whole management of Affairs, he omitted no Opportunities either of Force or Insinuation, to discourage the establish'd Customs, and to wean them from the Affection they had to the Usages of their Fore-fathers. Thus, he won upon them by degrees, till he had confirm'd himself in his New Conquests, and in an absolute Power, or something that look'd very like it; especially, if we take an Estimate from his Arbitrary Proceedings towards the English, rather than from his fair Words, Contracts and Promises; which Conquerors, when they find them inconsistent with their Designs, seldom want either Inclination or Pretences to break and cast off. But the succeeding Kings (whether for want of Policy, or Courage, or both) found it hard to maintain themselves in that absolute manner of Government, and to complete what their Predecessor had begun. For the People began to insist upon their Liberties (whether justly or unjustly, I shall not determine; 'tis a Controverisie has cost Pains and Paper enough already) omitted no Advantages of Wars abroad or Disturbances at home, whereby they might gain Ground and extort new Privileges. More especially, in the Reigns of King John and Henry III. they broke into open Wars, for the Redress of Grievances; and brought them to such Straits, that they were glad to come off by submitting to the Regulations insisted upon, and by admitting the Nobility and Gentry into a nearer Share of the Government. Whereupon, the Great Charter, call'd Magna Charta, was granted, and Statutes began to be made according to the Necessities of the Kingdom; by which, and the Common Law, or the common Usages of the Nation, our Law-Courts proceed at this Day, in their Judgments and Decrees.

SECT. IV.

The Ecclesiastical Government.

The Church of England is govern'd by two Archbishops and twenty five Bishops. The Archbishop of Canterbury is Primate of all England; the Archbishop of York is Primate of England, but not of all England: A Controverisie which caus'd many hot Disputes and Quarrels, but was at last determin'd in favour of Canterbury, against all the Pleas and Arguments brought by the other for Independency and Freedom. The Archbishopricks and Bishopricks, with their Extent and Jurisdiction, will best appear from the following Scheme.

Contains

The other Part of Kent.
Essex, Middlesex, and part of Hertfordshire.

Suffex

Hampshire, Surrey and Isle of Wight, with Gernsey and Jersey.

Wiltshire and Berkshire.

Devonshire and Cornwall.

Somersetshire.

Glocesterhire.

Worcesterhire, and Part of Warwickshire.

Huntingdonshire, Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, and the other Part of Hertfordshire.

Cambridgeshire, and the Isle of Ely.

Norfolk and Suffolk.

Oxfordhire.

Northamptonshire and Rutlandshire.

Dorsetshire.

To these add four in Wales, S. Davids, Landaff, Banchor, and S. Afaph.

Besides, every Bishop holds his Court within his own Diocess, and takes Cognizance of Excommunication, Censures, and other things relating to the Church.

SECT. V.

The Divisions of England.

The most remarkable Divisions of England, are these three. 1. That of the Romans into Britannia prima, secunda, Maxima Caesariensis, Valentia, Flavia Caesariensis. The Bounds of these several Branches are very uncertain, and can only be gathered from Conjecture. Britannia prima seems to have been the South Part of Britain. Secunda probably was Wales. Maxima Caesariensis and Valentia seem to have been those Countries that lay upon their Frontiers of Scotland. And Flavia Caesariensis was, likely enough, the Heart of England.

2. That of the Saxons, into seven Kingdoms; whereof we have given an Account, under Sect. 3. concerning the Civil Government.

3. That of King Alfred, into Hundreds (call'd in some Parts of England, Wapentakes) and Counties.

Besides these, the Romans branch'd it into so many several People, the Names whereof are generally of a British Original, relating either to the Figure of the Place, the Nature of the Soil, or the Disposition of the Inhabitants. This Division cannot be more conveniently represented, than in a Table along with the Counties of England, as they stand at this Day, and fall within the Bounds of the several People.

Within the Province of Canterbury, which hath part of Kent for its own peculiar Diocess are

- Rochester
- London
- Chichester
- Winchester
- Salisbury
- Exeter
- Bathe and Wells
- Glocester
- Worcester
- Hereford
- Lichfield and Coventry
- Lincoln
- Ely
- Norwich
- Oxford
- Peterburrow
- Bristol

Within the Province of York, which hath Northamptonshire for its peculiar Diocess, are,

- Chester
- Durham
- Carlisle
- Sodor

As to the Precedency of these, the Archbishop of Canterbury is first, York second, London third, Durham fourth, Winchester fifth; and the rest according to order of Consecration.

As in the Civil Government, the Parliament is the Supreme Court, so is a Synod in the Ecclesiastical; call'd among us a Convocation: Wherein Matters of Doctrine and Discipline are from time to time stated and determin'd, and by the King and Parliament pass'd into Laws.

The chief Courts of the Archbishop of Canterbury are,

1. The Court of Arches, where the Dean of the Arches sits as Judge.
2. The Court of Audience, where all Complaints, &c. are received.
3. The Prerogative-Court, where the Business of Wills is handl'd.
- The Court of Faculties, where the Rigour of the Canon-Law is moderated.
5. The Court of Peculiars, wherein is lodg'd a Jurisdiction over Parishes exempt from the Bishop of the Diocess.

CORNWALL.

THE County of CORNWALL has its Name from lessening by degrees into a sort of Horn: which very exactly answers the Nature and Form of that Tract; as may be seen either by the General or Particular Maps. As it lies out from the rest of the Kingdom, so had it formerly its Laws and Usages distinct from England. But 'tis by degrees reconcil'd, not only to the same Laws, but even to the same Language. Now, few or none among them know any thing of the old Cornish; having a great fondness for the English Tongue and Modes of Living.

Their greatest Commodity is Tin; which has given occasion to an Opinion that the Phœnicians traded thither, and left Name not only to the County in General, but to many Particular Places in it. But whatever Advantage might be reap'd from the Mines anciently (which probably was very considerable;) 'tis certain that the Earls of Cornwall have been prodigiously enrich'd by the Revenues arising from them. Nor could it be well otherwise; all Europe fetching their Supplies, at least the greatest share of them, from these Parts. Which vast Incomes have induc'd the Earls to grant them large Privileges; to procure them such Charters from Time to Time as might tend to the Improvement of their Trade or Convenience of Management, and to erect Courts and constitute Officers, in a Method agreeable to the Nature of the Employment, and the Humor of the People.

'Tis observable, That through the whole County, abundance of Towns are scatter'd, which have their Names from Irish Saints, who had come over into these Parts; and on account of their Piety and Religious Course of Life had a wonderful Veneration paid them. And after their Deaths, the particular Places wherein they had spent their Time in Devotions and Retirement, were consecrated to their Names, and had signal Pieces of respect paid them by their Neighbours.

The most Remarkable Places are	}	Falmouth,	}	Fowey,
		Launceston,		Saltash,
		Truro,		S. Columbs.
		Wadebridge,

Falmouth, a Town of considerable Trade, which the Convenience of the Harbour brings to it. 'Tis a Port very Large, and withal Safe, by reason of the Creeks on all Sides, which protect it against the Violence of Winds and Storms. The two Forts, one on each Side, viz. S. Maudit's and Pendina, render it a Place of yet greater Strength and Security.

Launceston or Launston, on the East-side of the County (call'd in Domesday Launstonaveton, from a College there dedicated to S. Stephen) is two Towns, now grown into one, and is become so considerable that the Assizes are always held in it.

Truro, a Mayor-Town, suppos'd to be so call'd from it's three Streets; but especially considerable in those Parts for the more than ordinary concern that it has in the Stannaries.

Wadebridge, about five miles from Padstow, is remarkable for a Bridge of seventeen Arches, the largest by much in the whole County.

Fowey, a Haven on the South-side of the County, remarkable for Sea-Fights; and has in Memory of them, for its Arms, a Compound of those of the Cinque-Ports.

Saltash, on the West-side of the River Tamar, a Town conveniently seated for Trade, well stor'd with Merchants, and endow'd with good Privileges.

S. Columbs, not far from the Irish-Sea, tho' a Place of no great Trade or Resort, is made famous by its Relation to S. Columba, a very pious Woman, from whom it had the Name.

Ancient Places.

Voluba seems to have left its Name in our present Falmouth before-mention'd.

Belerium can be no other than the Land's-End; call'd also by Ptolemy Αλιβεσσαυ or Αντιβεσσυμ.

Cenionis ostium, cannot any where be plac'd more probably than at that large Port, the Convenience whereof we have describ'd under Falmouth.

Ocrinum (probably so call'd from Ochr, an Edge) seems to be that Promontory, call'd at this Day, the Lizard.

Uxella seems to have left some Remains of its Name in the present Lestmbiel, which was a Place of good Note and Trade, till the Sands stopping up the River, hindred Ships from coming up to it.

Tamara is the River which parts this County from Devonshire, and likewise a Town upon it, now call'd Tamerton.

Things Remarkable.

Biscaw-waine (near S. Buriens) a Place so call'd, where are nineteen Stones set in a Circle, which by some are imagin'd to have been erected in memory of a Victory. But if we compare them with others of the same Nature, in other parts of the Kingdom; to imagine them Funeral Monuments, will perhaps be a more plausible Conjecture.

Main-Amber (near Pensans) a stone of a prodigious Bigness, which yet was so plac'd that one might move it with a Finger. In the late Civil Wars it was thrown down.

Other-half-stone (not far from S. Neot's) an Inscription, with large barbarous Letters, the Reading whereof implies it to have been a Funeral Monument. See Camden's Brit. Engl. p. 9.

Wring-cheese; near this Place, is a large Stone like a Cheese, and so plac'd between some others, that it seems to be press'd by them.

Hurlers, at a little distance, is a square Set of Stones, so call'd from an Opinion advanc'd by the common People, that they are so many Men chang'd into Stones for hurling the Ball, on Sunday; an Exercise for which they have been always famous. But we need not acquiesce in their Fancies, since it appears plainly enough, that these (as well as many others in this County) were Funeral Monuments; from a Cross discover'd upon one of them, by an ingenious Gentleman.

DEVONSHIRE.

AS Devonshire in the Time of the Romans was included under the same common Name, Danmonii, with its Neighbour Cornwall; so in after-Ages did it share in several Privileges and Advantages. Particularly in those of the Tin-mines, which it had in great abundance; as the four Stannary-Courts, and the Officers belonging to them do plainly evince. Nay, by the best Computations which can be drawn from the Registers and Publick Papers belonging to each County, it appears that this afforded a greater Plenty than Cornwall. And that not only of Tin, but also of Silver; Mines whereof were discover'd about Comb-Martin, in the Time of Edward I. and did great Service to King Edward III. towards carrying on the French Wars.

The Soil of it self is Lean and Poor; but they improve it strangely, by a fort of Sea-Sand, which they sprinkle upon it: And where that is scarce, they make use of Marle, Lime, and burnt Turf.

The more considerable Towns, are,	}	Tavestock,	}	Exeter,
		Plymouth,		Bernstaple,
		Tornesse,		Topsham,
		Torbay,		Okehampton.
		Tiverton,

Tavestock, adjoining to Cornwall, is not at present remarkable for either Wealth or Buildings; but receives all its Glory from the old Abbey, and the Laudable Custom (while that stood) of reading Saxon Lectures, in order to keep up the Knowledge of our old Mother-Tongue.

Plymouth, a flourishing Town, occasioned by the Convenience of its Harbour, for the Reception of great Ships. Which the Government observing, has pitch'd upon it as the most convenient Place in those Parts, for the Building of Ships, and has accommodated it with a Dry-Dock, capable of a First-Rate-Ship, a Bason before it of above two hundred Foot square, and Houses for Officers, Stores, &c. in proportion. They had a Mayor granted them by Henry VI. who governs the four Wards, into which the Town is divided; whereas before they were govern'd by four distinct Captains (for they so term'd them) and their inferior Officers. The Place is eminent for the Birth of Sir Francis Drake.

Tornesse, upon the River Dent, was formerly, a Town of great note, and accordingly had very considerable Privileges granted it by the Kings of England. The Condition of it at present, will not bear the Character which it formerly had.

Torbay, upon the Eastern Coast, has been very remarkable and much talk'd of for the Landing of the Prince of Orange, now King William III. on Nov. 5th. 1688.

Tiverton, upon the Ex, is remarkable for a good Free-School, and for its Woollen-Trade, which very much enriches the Inhabitants.

EXETER, the most considerable Place in all these Parts, stands upon a gentle Hill, and is encompass'd with a Ditch and very strong Walls. That the Romans knew it, is plain from the Itinerary of Antoninus, which begins here. The Saxons came then into the entire Possession of it, when Athelstan turn'd out the Britains, who had not till that Time solely enjoy'd it, but had the Liberty of Living in common with the Saxons. As the Kings of England have endow'd it with many Privileges, so has it suffer'd very much from Sieges: Notwithstanding all which, it might have been more considerable than it is at this day, if the Wears of Topsham did not hinder Ships of Burden from coming up to the City, as they formerly did. On the East-Side stands the Cathedral, built by King Athelstan, and by Edward III. honoured with the Title of an Episcopal See.

Bernstaple, on the Ivish-Sea, is a neat Town, govern'd by a Mayor, two Aldermen, and a Common-Council of twenty four. 'Tis a Place of good Trade, so that the greatest part of the Inhabitants are Merchants; and is pretty eminent for a Bridge, built by one Stamford, a Citizen of London.

Topsham, a Town near Exeter, had its Rise from the Misfortune of that Place: for upon the Obstructions of the River Ex, made by Edward Courtney, Earl of Devonshire, upon a Displeasure conceiv'd against the Citizens; this began to be a Place of Resort, where the Vessels landed, and from whence the Lading was carry'd by Land to Exeter. But in the Time of King Charles II. such effectual Endeavours were made towards the removing of those Damms, that now they carry Lighters of the greatest Burthen up to the City-Key.

Okehampton, so called from the River Ock; upon which it stands, is a considerable Market-Town, incorporated by King James I.

Ancient Places.

Isca, mentoin'd by Ptolemy, is so plainly convey'd to us in the present Ex, call'd by the Britains Isca; that there's no Place of doubt, but this is the same River.

Isca Damnoniorum, is our Exeter.

Moridunum, tho' it has left nothing of the Name, seems yet to have its Meaning preserved in a Sea-Coast-Town, call'd at this Day Seven: For Mor is Mare, and Dunum a Town.

Herculis Promontorium is easily discover'd by the present Name Herby-point; of which no tolerable Reason can be given, unless we allow it to be a Corruption from that old Name.

Things Remarkable.

Lay-well, is a Well near Torbay, which in the compass of an Hour Ebbs and Flows several Times; bubbling up now and then like a boiling Pot. The neighbouring People look upon it to be Medicinal in some sort of Fevers.

At Withcombe, in a Storm of Thunder and Lightning (14 Car. I.) a Ball of Fire came into the Church, while they were at Divine Service, which kill'd three Persons, and wounded sixty two; and besides, did Damage to the value of 300*l.* and upwards.

And at Crews-Morthard, in the same County, a like Storm happen'd, which melted the Bells, Lead and Glafs; and was so violent, that it rent the Steeple: This was in the Year 1639:

The Organ in the Cathedral at Exeter is accounted the greatest in England; the largest Pipe being 15 Inches Diameter.

At North-Taunton, there is a Pit of ten Foot deep, out of which there sometimes springs up a little Brook, that continues for many Days together.

The Common People tell you, That it presages some Publick Calamity; but whether the particular Times, at which it has been observed to rise, will justify that Interpretation, I know not.

DORSETSHIRE.

TH^O the County of Dorset lies much upon the Sea, yet have they not those Advantages from Navigation, or such Convenience of Harbours, as other Counties that have less Sea-Coast. Which possibly may be owing, in some measure, to the fruitfulness of their Soil, which both employs the Inhabitants, and supplies them with all Necessaries of Life; whilst Parts that are more barren send the Natives to Sea, both to employ their Time and provide a Maintenance.

The more considerable Towns { Lyme, { Dorchester,
 { Shirburn, } { Shaftesbury,
 { Blanford,

Lyme, a Place of good Trade and well-stocked with Merchants, lies upon the Sea-Coast, near the Borders of Devonshire. Navigation is that which has raised it from a very mean Condition; for the Convenience whereof they have built a very remarkable Pier, which requires a great Sum of Money yearly to maintain it. This Advantage supplies it with Wealth at home; but, that which has given it a name abroad, was the Landing of the Duke of Monmouth, upon which occasion we frequently meet with it in the Histories of those Times.

Dorchester, the Place from which the whole County had its Name, must, for that Reason, have been formerly of much more note than it is at present. Its Decay probably is owing to the Revolutions of Wars; for that it has been a Place of Action, we learn both from our Histories and the Remains of Antiquity they still meet with. Of late Years it seems to have recover'd it self; being thought fit to have the Privilege of a Mayor and Aldermen bestow'd upon it by King Charles I.

Shirburn, upon the Edge of Somersetshire, derives its ancient Glory from being an Episcopal See; and its present from Populousness, and their improvement of the Woolen Manufacture.

Shaftesbury, seems to have been of considerable Note in the Times of the Saxons; in whose Histories we find it frequently mention'd. That it was built by King Alfred, appears by a Stone dug up out of the old Ruins, the Reading whereof Malsbury has convey'd to us. It grew so considerably, that about Edward the Confessor's Time it had no less than 104 Houses.

Blanford (upon the Stour) a pretty Market-Town, which owns its Beauty to a Fire that happen'd in it, and burnt it down; after which it was nearly rebuilt.

Wimburne, upon the same River, is seated at the Foot of a Hill; being pretty large and populous. In the more early times it was famous upon the account of Religion, and the Nunnery there; But afterwards for being a Seat of War in the Danish Commotions,

In this County, we must also observe Portland, an Island of about seven Miles Circumference, guard'd with a continued Ridge of Rocks running round it. The Inhabitants are not many; but the Soil affords good store of Corn and Pasture.

And on the East-side of the County, Pimbeck, which is of a contrary Nature, being mostly Heath and Wood; but well stock'd with Fallow-Deer.

Ancient Names.

Durnovaria, mention'd by Antoninus in these Parts, can be no other than the present Dorchester, whether we respect the Name, the Distances, or the Remains of Roman Antiquity, which they trace out.

Vindogladia also discovers it self in the present Name of Wimburn; the first Syllable whereof is manifestly a Relick of the old Denomination: And the second (which implies a River) does very well answer the Gladia, deriv'd from the British Clediau, Swords; by which Expression they sometimes denoted their Rivers.

Things Remarkable.

In the Isle of Portland, Wood is so very scarce that their common Fuel is Cow-Dung dried hard by the Heat of the Sun; which being so order'd makes a clear Fire, without any offensive smell.

Maiden-Castle, near Dorchester, is a most stately Piece of Antiquity, and appears from the Form, Contrivance, and other Circumstances, to have been a Work of the Romans.

White-Hart-forest, on the Borders of Somersetshire, has its Name from a White-Hart, kill'd by a Gentleman of this Country, against the express Order of King Henry III. For which Fact, there is yearly paid into the Exchequer a pecuniary Mulct, call'd White-hart-Silver.

It was a pleasant Humor, and a very lucky Discovery, that happen'd some Years ago near Wimford-Eagle. Digging a Barrow or Tumulus, the Workmen came to an Oven (with an Urn in it) and one of them putting forward his Hand, in hopes of some farther Discoveries, found it too hot for him to hold it long there. 'Tis probably owing to some Mineral; the same natural Heat being commonly discover'd by the Miners.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

THE County of Somerset is no: so well accommodated with Harbours, as might be expected from a Tract of Ground that lies so much to the Sea. In some Parts it is exceeding Marshy; but in others affords plenty of good Corn and Pasture.

The more considerable Towns are,

The more considerable Towns are,	{	BRISTOL,	}	Bridgwater,
		BATH,		Somerton,
		WELLS,		Taunton.

BRISTOL is parted by the River Avon, which divides this County, for some miles together, from Gloucestershire. It's Wealth and Glory cannot be of any great Antiquity, because we find little or no mention of it in the early Times of the Saxons. No, nor in the Danish Plunders neither; which few Places escap'd, that had Riches enough to expose them to the Depredations of that People. But after the Convenience of the Place for Trade with most Parts of Europe, was observ'd and understood; the Inhabitants seem to have flock'd thither, and by their good Success and Commerce to have improv'd it to that degree of Wealth and Beauty, it may justly glory of at this Day. Their Buildings are fair, the Inhabitants numerous, and their Churches and publick Edifices very Beautiful. To these Advantages, a new Honour was added by King Henry VIII. who made it a Bishop's See, upon the suppression of the Monasteries, and gave it for its Diocess the City of Bristol (a County incorporate by it self) and the County of Dorset, formerly belonging to Salisbury.

BATH stands upon the same River, and has the same Dignity of a Bishop's See, but in other respects fall far short of Bristol. It lies low in the middle of a Range of Hills, wherewith it is very much fortified. This natural Strength of the Place was, no doubt, the reason of all those contests which the Saxons and Britains had about it, in their Engagements in those Parts. It's Name and Reputation have both the same Original; the hot Springs, I mean, arising there, which many Ages have known, but none have experienc'd so Medicinal as the present. Great numbers of the Nobility and Gentry flock thither in the Summer-time, and the Physicians begin to frequent them more than ever: Which conourse from all Parts, makes it a little strange that the City should not increase more in Wealth and Buildings. As it affords Remedies to the Sick, so does it give a great Diversion to the Antiquaries, by shewing a number of Ancient Monuments and Inscriptions, set up in the Walls. That it enjoys the Title of a Bishop's See, was occasioned by Joannes de Villula, Bishop of Wells removing his Seat thither, about the Year of our Lord 1088. Whereupon to compose a Quarrel which had risen between the Monks of Bathe and Canons of Wells about the Right of Election; it was agreed among other things, That the Bishop should take his Title from both Places; tho' by others 'tis affirm'd that for some time after, he was only call'd Bishop of Bathe.

WELLS, so call'd from the Wells and Springs in it, is situated at the Bottom of Mendip-Hills. It was made a Bishop's See by Edward the Elder, about the Year 905, and the Bishop kept his Residence in it, till John de Villula, the Sixteenth Bishop, having purchas'd the Town of Bathe of King Henry I. transferr'd it thither. The Place is populous, and very beautiful, whether you respect the publick or private Buildings.

Bridgwater (corruptly so call'd from Burgh-Walter, as appears by the ancient Records) lies upon the River Parret, and is a large and well-peopled Town.

Somerton, as inconsiderable as it is at present, was once the chief Town in this County; as may be reasonably infer'd from its giving Name to the whole; and from the frequent mention of it in our ancient Histories.

Taunton, a Town seated upon the River Tooze, which gives it the Name, is very neat and beautiful in it self; but render'd much more agreeable by the delicate Prospect it gives us of green Meadows, and numbers of pretty Villages all round.

Ancient Places.

Uzelli, mention'd by Ptolemy, is an Actuary on the West Side of this County, occasion'd by the concourse of two large Rivers, emptying themselves into the Sea about the Stert-point.

Ischalis, appears from the Coins and other Marks of Antiquity, that are dug up at Ivelchester (a Town upon the River Ivel) to have been seated at that Place.

Aque Solis, by the Course of the Itinerary, and the Import of the Word, can be no other than our Bathe; especially, if we add to these Evidences, the Monuments mention'd to be found, in the Description of that Place.

Things Remarkable.

Ochie-hole, a remarkable Cave in Mendip-hills, of a vast length; where they discover several Wells and Springs.

The Serpent-Stones are common at Cainsbam near Bristol.

Abundance of Diamonds are about the Rock near Bristol; being lodg'd very artificially in a hollow sort of Flint.

A Monument of large Stones, nor unlike that of Stone-Henge in Wiltshire, is at Stanton-drew in this County; but being interrupted with Buildings and Enclosures, it is not so much taken notice of as it might otherwise deserve.

Cbeddar-Cheefes (so call'd from the Place near Wells, where they are made) are so large as sometimes to require more than one Man to set them upon the Table.

The Elvers at Bristol is a Fish perhaps not to be met with elsewhere: 'Tis a sort of Bel, which at a certain Time of the Year, swims upon the Surface of the Water in great Numbers. These they skim up in small Nets, and by a peculiar way of Dressing, bake them into little Cakes; and so fry, and serve them up.

Amongst the Rarities of this County, Glassenbury, may justly be reckon'd; which by the Remains of Religion and its venerable aspect, affords abundance of Pleasure to a curious Admirer of Antiquities.

WILTSHIRE.

AS the County of Wils was for many hundreds of Years almost a constant Scene of Action in the Wars between the Saxons and Britains, and afterwards between the several Saxon Kings; so does it afford greater remains of Antiquity than perhaps any County in England can pretend to. 'Tis divided into North and South; and agreeable to this Division, is of a different Soil and Aspect. The first bounds with little Hills, which are render'd very entertaining by the small Rivers gliding between; and naturally produces much Wood. The latter is a Champain Fruitful Country.

	Malmesbury,
	Devizes,
	Marlburrow,
	Wilton.

Salisbury is two-fold, the Old and New. Old Sarum was seated upon a High Hill (as most of our ancient Towns here in Britain are observ'd to have been) being a Place chiefly intended for Strength, and a defence against the Enemy, but what was a security against Foreigners, prov'd a Grievance to the Inhabitants; who found the insolences of the Garrison-Soldiers to be such, that they seem'd Intolerable. To remedy this Evil, and to accommodate themselves with the convenience of Water, (the want whereof had been a great inconvenience in their old Quarters) they began to remove into the lower Grounds in the time of Richard I. where they laid the Foundations of New Sarum. And immediately Richard Poor, the Bishop, began a most stately Cathedral Church, which at this day has deservedly a name among the most considerable Structures of this Island. The Bishop's See was remov'd to Salisbury, upon the uniting of Sherborn and Wilton into one, by Hermannus, about the year 1056. But though that may be of advantage to the place, and set it somewhat forward in its growing condition, yet it could never have arriv'd to that Degree of Wealth, Populoufness and Splendor, if the Western-road had not been turn'd that way, by the Authority of some who was nearly concern'd for its prosperity. Their want of Water was amply supplied by their remove from the higher Grounds; for now every Street has its little Rivulet running through it.

Malmesbury, though at present a handsom Town and well maintain'd by the Clothing-Trade, was yet formerly much more considerable on account of its Monastery. For Maildulphus an Irish-Scot leading here an Hermit's Life, left behind him a Scholar (Aldehelmus) a very eminent Man, who built a stately Monastery; whereupon the place was call'd Mealdelmesbyrig, and by contraction Malmesbury; which Name seems to be a compound of Maildulphus and Aldehelmus, the Master and the Scholar.

Devizes, anciently very famous for a strong Castle, the Government whereof has been thought an Hono-orable Post by Persons of the best Quality. But now, that is quite Demolis'd; and the advantage of Peace hath given it what is much more valuable, a good Trade, a thriving People, and plenty of every thing. It is Govern'd by a Mayor, Recorder, &c. and hath in it two great Parishes.

Marlburrow, upon the River Kennet, runs along the side of a Hill: It was formerly eminent for its Castle, and it is mention'd in our Law-books and Courts of Justice, upon account of the Statute made here for the suppression of Riots, in 32 Henry III. call'd to this day Statutum de Marlburrow. The Keep of the old Castle is figur'd into a Mount of curious contrivance, by his Grace the Duke of Somerset, the Owner of it.

Wilton does not require a mention upon account of any Figure it makes at this day, but may justly call for that respect, as being once the chief Town in the whole County. And it might have improv'd as well as its Neighbours, had it been allow'd the advantage of the Western-road, which at first it enjoy'd. But when that was turn'd through Salisbury, the rise of one was the ruin of the other; and this Place has ever since been dwindling by degrees into that low condition we see it in at present.

Ancient Places.

Cunctio may very probably be sett'd at Marlburrow, the Castle there appearing from Roman Coins to be of Roman Antiquity.

Sorbiodunum is agreed upon by all Authors to be Old Sarum. However they may differ about the original of the Name, they are unanimous in their opinion of its Situation.

Verlucio, keeps something of its name in the present Worminster, (a Town lying upon the little River Dever-vil;) for by chainging the (v) into (w) which without any straining may be done, and adding the Saxon Termination mynster, we have the Name complete.

Things Remarkable.

Wansdike, or Wodensdike, (so call'd from the Saxon God Woden) is a wonderful Ditch crossing this Shire from East to West. Whenever it was cast up, the design seems to have been a Boundary or Fence, either to distinguish Territories, or to be a guard against the Enemies in this Frontier Country.

Stone-henge is a Monument so remarkable, that it has engag'd many Learned Pens in conjectures about its Founder's design and Antiquity. The Opinions contain'd in three or four separate Books written upon that Subject, are drawn up, and the whole matter Stated in the new Edition of Caesars's Britaina, page 108, whether I refer the Reader.

The Barrows upon Salisbury Plain, lying scatter'd here and there, afford good entertainment to a curious Traveller; and the rather, because they are of several Forms and Figures, which perhaps in other places is not so common.

H A M S H I R E.

OF all the Counties which border upon the Sea, there are few that have the advantage of so many Creeks and Havens, as Hampshire. By which means the South part is abundantly supplied with all the conveniencies the Sea affords. Through the whole, they have good Store of Corn, and plenty of Wood in all Parts; but what they are most remarkable for, is their Bacon, which is reputed to be the best in the Kingdom, and accordingly is sold into all parts.

Towns more considerable, are, Winchester, Southampton, Portsmouth, Basingstoke, Andover, Christ-Church.

Winchester, whether we consider its ancient or present condition, may deservedly lay claim to the first Place. For as it was of good Note in the times of the Romans, so under the Saxon Government was it the Seat of the West-Saxon Kings. But that which has chiefly secur'd its flourishing condition, is the Bishop's See, settl'd there very early by Kingcils the Saxon; and (which is more) never remov'd from its first Foundation, as most of its Neighbours have been, to the great damage of the Places from which they were drawn. This favourable concurrence of Circumstances was increas'd by Edward III. when he settl'd here the Staple for Cloath and Wool. The Cathedral hath been from time to time enlarg'd and put under the protection of several Tutelar Saints. But its greatest Glory, is the College built here by William of Wickham, Bishop of this See; which supplies both Church and State with great numbers of Learned Men. The Royal Palace began by King Charles II. is very itately and magnificent; and the Hospital built by Bishop Morley for 10 Ministers Widows, is a work of great Charity and Goodness.

Southampton within these hundred years was a rich, populous, beautiful Place; but now by the loss of its Trade, all this Finery is gone, the Buildings decay'd, the Town poor, and the Inhabitants thin. It ought not however to be omitted amongst the considerable places of these parts, both upon account of its former Eminency, and also for the Figure it still bears in our Naval Affairs.

Portsmouth, after it was by Queen Elizabeth completely Fortified with new Works, became a place of great Note and Resort, in times of War especially: but in times of Peace, the Trade it has will hardly maintain it in the same Grandeur. And as the Place is of great importance to the Nation by its Strength, and Works of the best Contrivance; so is it of great consequence to our Fleets, being furnish'd of late years with Docks and all other necessaries for building and repairing Ships of the highest Rates.

Basingstoke is a well frequented Market, upon the High-road.

Andover is a Corporation pretty large and populous.

Ancient Places.

Regnum can be nother than the present Ringswood, (lying upon the River, Avon) which may seem by a fair Interpretation to signify the Wood of the Regni.

Alauni Ostim, is probably that Mouth out of which the Stour and Avon empty themselves jointly.

Trisantonis Ostim is agreed upon all hands to be the Harbour of Southampton, beginning at Calstoor-Castle.

Claufentum, by the distances from the two Stations on each side, as it stands in the Itinerary, must of necessity be that Old Town which stood formerly near the present Southampton, and was call'd by the same name.

Brage, by the course of the Itinerary, is probably a little Country Village that lies between Salisbury and Winchester, the two Stations on each hand, and is call'd at this day Broughton.

Venta Belgarum, is undoubtedly Winchester, to which it has probably given the first Syllable of that name.

Segontiaci, mention'd by Cæsar, by all the Circumstances must have been those People who liv'd about the Northern limits of this County, about the Hundred of Holefoot.

Vindonum we call at this day Silcester; though by the Britains it was call'd Caer Segonte, as being the chief City of the Segontiaci, just now mention'd.

Things Remarkable.

Arthur's Round-Table at Winchester is much talk'd of and admir'd as a Relick of King Arthur's. But that Fancie is to be reckon'd among those many ridiculous Errors which have been convey'd to the ignorant country People by Ballads and Romances, and having got such footing that 'tis hard to undeceive them. This Table is probable as old as the Torneaments; and it may be a good Conjecture, that it was design'd to prevent all quarrels about Precedency among the Combatants.

Silcester, which we observ'd but now to be the Vindonum of the Ancients, shews vast remains of its Antiquity and once flourishing condition. The thinness of the Corn where the Walls and Streets have run, with other Observations to be made upon the Place, afford very good entertainment to a curious Traveller.

The Isle of WIGHT.

South of Hampshire lies the Isle of Wight, about 20 Miles long, and 12 over where broadest. The North is mostly taken up with Pasturage, Meadows and Wood; but the South bears abundance of Corn. As to Ecclesiastical Government, it is under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Winchester; but as to Civil, under Hampshire. The Inhabitants are a Stout sort of People, having been all along inur'd to frequent Skirmishes, by lying expos'd to the first Attacks of the invading Enemy.

Caresbrook, a Castle in the middle of the Isle of very great Antiquity. Of late Years the Imprisonment of King Charles I. has made it more Remarkable.

Yarmouth and Cowes, both lying over against Hampshire, are their two Havens of greatest Safety and Importance.

The Needles, the Shingles, the Mixon, and other Shelves round it, are a good security to the Place against an Enemy, but very troublesome to the Seamen.

BARKSHIRE.

THE County of BERKS lying out in length from South-East to North-west, as it is accommodated all over with very convenient Rivers, so has it the advantage of the Thames running along one side of it. Which being navigable, is of great profit not only to the particular Towns seated upon it; but also to the whole County, the narrowness whereof gives the Inhabitants an opportunity of conveying Goods by Water, without any great inconvenience or expence of Land-carriage. This I take to be the great enricher of the County: for tho' in several parts, especially in the middle, and where it borders upon Wiltshire, they have good store of Corn; yet this, without the assistance of the River, could not turn to near the same account.

Towns of note,	{ Abingdon, Windsor, Reading, Wallingford,	} { Newbury, Hungerford, Maidenhead.

Abingdon carries in its very name the character of Religion, being so call'd from the famous Abbey that was built there by Cissa the West-Saxon. Some modern Authors are inclin'd to think this the old Clovesbo, so famous in our Ancient Histories for the solemn Meetings and great Councils before the Conquest. And the situation of the place makes it convenient enough for holding such general Assemblies, being almost at an equal distance from the several Parties concern'd. But whether this Honour belongs to it or not; 'tis certain, the Abbey grew to be so eminent and considerable, that here (as in many other places throughout England) it laid a good Foundation for a handom Town; which encreas'd strangely, after that Henry V. had contriv'd the high Road through it. Malt is its greatest Trade, and the Market-House its greatest Ornament.

Windsor stands in the North-west corner of this County, upon a high-Hill; from whence there is a delicate Prospect of Woods and Field all round. This advantage of situation, with its convenient distance from London, has induc'd several of the Kings of England to take a more particular delight in it, both on account of its Strength and Pleasure. The Palace is a most noble Structure, adorn'd with a delightful Terrace-walk by Queen Elizabeth, but beautify'd chiefly and brought to perfection by King Charles II. who at a vast expence, adorn'd it with most curious Paintings. St. George's Chappel and the noble Order of the Garter, instituted there by King Edward III. are Honours wherein the place may justly glory; the greatest Princes in Europe having esteem'd it a high favour to be admitted into that Society. And it was an honour to this Castle, to be the Prison, to the King of France and King of Scots, at the same time, under the powerful Prince Edward III. As for the Town: Old Windsor is very much gone to decay, upon the rise of the new one, which lies to the West of the Castle, and (as it were) under it. The growth of the Town is in a great measure owing to the Court, which the pleasure our Princes have taken in it, has drawn hither. And accordingly, 'tis easie to observe, what difference there is between its present condition, now 'tis almost forlaken by the Court; and its state in the Reign of Charles II. by whose inclination to the variety of Diversions it affords, the Town flourish'd much beyond its Neighbours.

Reading is conveniently seated upon the River Kene, at a small distance from its emptying it self into the Thames. It was before the Conquest eminent for a strong Castle; which lasted no longer than the time of Henry II. by whom it was demolish'd least it should afford Refuge and Protection to King Stephen's Party. About an hundred years ago, Cloath was its greatest Trade and Employment; but the advantage of the situation upon the River has in a great measure drawn the Inhabitants from that Business, and turn'd them to the Malt-Trade, by which the Wealth of the Town is much improv'd. The Streets and Buildings are neat and handom; and sometimes the Assizes are held here.

Wallingford, upon the River of Thames, was also famous for its Castle, which was exceeding strong and attempted more than once by King Stephen, in the civil Wars between him and Henry II. That which made Abingdon chiefly flourish, was the cause of this Town's decay, viz. the change of the High-Road. But yet for all that, the Malt-Trade does not only support it, but of late years has also encreas'd its Wealth, Buildings, and number of Inhabitants.

Newbury carries its rise and original in the very name, which implies a relation to some old Burgh near it; and that was Spene, at a little distance from this new Town. Tho' the name destroys all its pretensions to Antiquity, yet it bears figure in our modern Histories, upon account of Engagements here between the King and Parliament, in the late Civil Wars. The Cloath-Trade and the convenience of the River, have improv'd it into a handom, pretty Town.

Hungerford, upon the edge of Wiltshire, has been all along more considerable, upon account of the Title it has for many Ages given to a very eminent Family, than for either Wealth or Neatness. In all the Country round, it has a particular reputation for the best Trouts.

Maidenhead, considering what time has it had for improvement, is grown into a handom Town. For its first encrease was occasion'd by building a Wooden Bridge over the Thames; which before that, us'd to be Ferry'd, at the expence and trouble of the Traveller. But the new Bridge, as it made the Road this way much more easie and convenient, so did it induce the Inhabitants to build Inns and provide all Accomodations for the Entertainment of Strangers.

Ancient Places.

Gallewa was undoubtedly our Wallingford, as appears both from the courtle of the Itinerary, the remains of the old Name in the present, and the ancient grandeur and largeness of the Town.

Spine is now an inconsiderable Village, about a mile from Newbury; which carries the old name in its present Spene, and has also left the remains of it in a part of Newbury, still call'd Spinbam-Lands.

Bibroci, also, a People in those Parts, may seem to have left something of the name in the present Bray near Maidenhead.

THE County of Surrey, (as we call it at this day) lies all a long upon the South-side of the River of Thames; from which Position, it has the Name. For, what our Age has contract'd into Surrey, was call'd by our Fore-fathers Surbige. That part of the Country which borders upon the Thames, is to adorn'd with a mixture of Woods, Meadows, and fair Buildings, that nothing can be more Entertaining: The other parts are Fruitful enough, though not so Pleasant.

More considerable Towns, are, { Southwark, Guildford,
Kingston, Richmond,
Lambeth,

Southwark, (so call'd from its Southerly Situation, with respect to London) by its near intercourse with that noble City, has improv'd it self into a flourishing condition, not only beyond all other Places in this County, but equal to most of our Cities in England. Before the building of the Bridge, their Commerce was maintain'd only by Ferrying; but upon erecting a Wooden-bridge, it seem'd to be a sort of Suburbs to London; and lastly, by the stately Stone-bridge of 19 Arches, (upon which the buildings are continu'd like a street) one would think it a Part of the City. Accordingly, in the Reign of Edward VI. it was annex't to London; and by virtue thereof the Inhabitants had a Power granted them to use all such Laws within their Burrough, as the Citizens did within their City.

Guildford, (for so it is commonly pronounc'd, though written Guldford and Guildford) is seated upon the River Wye, and is a populous Market-Town: I know not whether we may attribute its growth, in some measure at least, to the Benefaction of Sir Richard Welfson; by whose Industry, principally, the River upon which it stands, was made Navigable. 'Tis certain that all this part of the Country is very much en-gag'd to the first Contrivers, since they receive such considerable advantage from it.

Kingston upon Thames, has its Name from the Solemn Coronation of three Saxon Kings, Athelstan, Edwin, and Ethelred, in the Danish Wars. 'Tis a Market-Town, not very large indeed, but populous and of good resort.

Richmond, hard by, has been particularly pitch'd upon by several of our Kings, for their Diversion and Pleasure, whenever the Affairs of the Nation would give them leave to retire.

Lambeth, over against Westminster, upon the River of Thames, has all its Reputation from the Palace of the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, which is very large and stately. It has belong'd to them successively ever since Arch-Bishop Baldwin, obtain'd a Manour in this Place by exchange with the Bishop of Rocheſter, about the year 1183.

We meet with none of the old Stations in this County; the Noviomagus, (which Mr. Camden places at Woodcot) being more conveniently sett'd in Kent.

Things Remarkable.

The Mole (a considerable River) in two several places goes under Ground for some space; particularly, for 2 miles together, near Witchbill; from whence the Place is call'd the Swallow.

At Albury the Hypogæum, or Perforation, made through a mighty Hill, and design'd for a Coach-passage, is Remarkable and Surprising.

Epsom-Wells have been in so great request of late years for their Mineral-waters, as to cause a considerable increas of Buildings, for the Entertainment of Gentlemen resorting thither, for their Health or Pleasure.

A Skeleton 9 Foot 3 Inches long, taken up in the Church-yard of Wotton, and distinctly measur'd, may justly be reckon'd among the Remarkables of this County.

S U S S E X.

Sussex, (or as it is more truly written, South-sex) derives its name from the ancient Inhabitants, the South-Saxons, who had that denomination with respect to the East-Saxons. The Downs take up the Sea-coast; the middle consists of Meadows, Pastures, and Corn-fields; and the more Northerly part of it abounds with Wood. The Iron-works turn to good account; as did formerly the Glass-Houses; but now the latter are quite laid aside.

More considerable Towns,
are, { Chicheſter, Arundel,
Lewes,
Rye.

Chicheſter, in its Saxon name Ciſſanceaſter, discovers its first Founder, viz. Ciſſa, Son of Aella, who sett'd the Kingdom of the South-Saxons. Notwithstanding which Antiquity, we do not find that it flourish'd very much till the Conqueror's time, when the Bishop's See was remov'd from ſelsey to this Place; where it still continues in a good condition. The City had undoubtedly been much more Wealthy, Large and Pöpusous, if the conveniency of the Harbour had seconded the advantage of the Bishop's See. But the Haven is of it self not very commodious; and is also at too great a distance.

Arundel, owes its Name and Reputation more to the Castle and its Earls, than either the populousness of the Town, or wealth of the Inhabitants. The Castle was a place of great strength, and of considerable moment in our Wars; and the Earls, Persons of great Worth and Honour. But though the condition of the place will not answer either the figure it makes in our Histories, or the reputation it has in the opinion of Strangers; tis however a Market-Town, and sends two Burgeses to Parliament.

Lewes, at a little distance from the Sea, is seated upon a rising ground, and is a Town of good Note: Tho' anciently it seems to have been more considerable. For when King Arhelstan tent'd Mints in the more eminent Towns of the Kingdom, he pitch'd upon this place for one, and gave it two Minters.

Rye, upon the Sea-Coast, joyning to the County of Kent, owes its rise to the decay of its Neighbour Winchelsea. For the Sea, in those parts, does as it were dispose of its wealth among the Coasters, according to the several ages. So that by its breaking in one while and retiring another, they enjoy the advantage of it in their turns, Rye has flourish'd by its kindness these many ages, in Buildings, Navigation, and Fishing; whilst many of its Neighbours are ready to starve, and are daily drawing towards ruine.

Ancient Places.

Portus Adurni (the place where the Exploreatores kept watch against the Saxon Pirats under the later Emperours) must be upon this Coast. And we cannot pitch upon any part with greater probability, than Ederington, a little Village, which seems still to retain something of the old Name; and besides, is a very convenient place for Landing. Which indeed in our present search, is a circumstance of great moment; since those Guards upon the Sea-Coast, were set to hinder the Pirats from Landing; and by consequence, must have been fixt where the shore was most convenient for that purpose.

Things Remarkable.

It was a pleasant humour of John de Camois Lord of Broadwater in this County, in Edward the First's time; to make over his own Wife to Sr. William Painell, by Will, in the same manner as Men bequeath their Goods and Chattels.

The Arch with the Inscription, at Lewes, in the little demolish'd Church near the Castle, is well worth the sight of a curious Traveller, if there be any thing left of that ancient Building, But if Time has destroy'd it, the best information we can have, is from Mr. Camden's draught, which he has given us in the Britannia, under his Description of this place.

KENT.

AMONGST the Counties of England, no one can pretend to lead us so far back into its Antiquities, as this of Kent. In all Revolutions, this has had the first share: The Romans made their first Attempts upon it; and Julius Cæsar has left us a general account, in what condition he found them at that Time. Their Successors, the Saxons, after Depredations, Piracies, and at last open Violence, establish'd their first Kingdom in this Corner, about the Year 456. The Norman too (if we may believe a Tradition, which is not grounded upon much Evidence from History) had it particularly in his Eye; and had us'd it as he did the rest of the Kingdom, but that they obtained the Continuance of their Ancient Customs and Usages, by a notable Stratagem.

Nor could it well be otherwise: For as their Situation exposes them to the immediate Attempts of Foreigners; so do the Riches and Fruitfulness of their Country invite them to a settlement there before any other Part. The Soil is exceeding rich; so that they abound with excellent Corn-Fields, Meadows, and Pastures. They have Apples also, and Cherries in great abundance; which turn to better account here than in other places, by reason of their nearness to London, whither they sell them by whole-sale. Besides this Fruitfulness of the Soil, which furnishes them with most Necessaries; they are supply'd with what conveniences our foreign Trade brings in, by their Harbours and noble Rivers.

More Remarkable
Places are, { Canterbury, } { Deptford, { Rochester, } { Maidston, { Dover, } { Romney,
 { Greenwich, } { Chatham,

Canterbury, upon the River Stour, as it is the principal City in those parts, so is it the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom. For upon the conversion of the Saxons to the Christian Faith, Ethelbert King of Kent gave this Place to Austin the Monk; who was made Arch-Bishop of the English, and so fixt his See here. And here it has continu'd ever since; save that for a little while it was remov'd to London (the chief City of the Kingdom;) but in honour and memory of St. Austin, it was return'd to Canterbury. The Church that is most eminent, is Christ-Church; for St. Austin's (built below the City for a burying-place for the Kings of Kent and the Arch-Bishops, when it was not lawful to bury in Cities) is laid in its own ruins; by which we may still perceive what a stately Fabrick it has once been. The City is populous and wealthy; having in it abundance of Walboones and French; the first of them sett'd here in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and brought along with them the Art of Weaving Silk; the second came over of late years, upon the persecution of Lewis the XIV.

Rochester, is the other City of this County, being made an Episcopal See by the same Arhelbert that gave Canterbury to St. Austin, upon his Conversion to the Christian Faith. The situation of it, is low, and the bounds narrow, but the Suburbs make it pretty large. Anciently, it was of great note for its Castle, which the nature of the place render'd exceeding strong: So that when Odo held it against William Rufus, nothing could bring him to a surrender but want of Provisions. The noble Stone-bridge (through which the Medway runs with a most hideous noise) was built, upon Simon Montefort's cutting down the Wooden one, in his attempts upon this place.

Dover, next these two, makes the greatest figure in our Histories; not for its extent or riches, but the convenient passage it affords into France. It has also a Castle of great strength; and was Anciently accounted of so much importance, as to be commonly called the Key of England, without which it was impossible for Foreign Enemies to make their way, with any advantage, into this Nation. Upon this account, William the Conqueror took particular care to have it well fortified and guarded; distributing vast quantities of Land to his Soldiers, purely for that Service. The Peer was built by Hemy VIII. and repaired by Queen Elizabeth at vast expence, after the Sea had begun to break in upon it.

Greenwich,

Greenwich, lying upon the Thames, is remarkable for its Royal Seat, built by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, and enlarg'd by King Henry VII. and is a place much celebrated in our Histories for giving Birth to that most excellent Prince, Queen Elizabeth.

Depeford is at a little distance, and draws its reputation from the noble Dock and other Accommodations for building and repairing of Ships; whereby it is of great use and importance to the Royal Navy of England.

Maidston, (so call'd from the Medway upon which it lies) is a pleasant populous Town, and seems to have been formerly of greater eminence than its Neighbours, as being the Shire-town, where the Affizes are generally held. Unless, possibly, the convenience of its situation, almost in the middle of the County, may have been the principal means of procuring that honour.

Romney, lying near the Sea-Coast to the South-East, was formerly very considerable both for its Harbour, and the Sea-Services done by the Inhabitants to the Crown. But when the Ocean overflow'd these parts, in the Reign of Edward I. and remov'd the passage of the River another way, it began to forsake the Town, and by consequence to rob it by degrees of its former glory.

Chatham, near Rocheſter, is eminent for the station of the Navy-Royal; and has been much more so since the improvements of Docks, Launches, Store-houses, &c. made by King Charles II. and King James II. 'Tis also remarkable for its Fund of Naval Charity, for the support of Persons wounded in the Sea-Service; establish'd in the Year 1588. under the Title of the Chest at Chatham.

Ancient Places.

Vagniacæ, by the course of the Itinerary, must be Maidstone, especially if Noviomagus, the next Station on one Hand, may be fix'd at Hollowood-hill, and not at Woodcot in Surrey (as Mr. Camden imagins.)

Durebrovis is agreed on all hands to be Rocheſter.

Regulium, mention'd by the Notitia, has left the express Remains of its Name in our present Reculver; which also demonstrates its Antiquity by the Roman Coins discover'd thereabouts.

Durovernum is beyond all dispute to be settl'd at Canterbury.

Duroletum seems to fall in (as to the sound) with Lenham; which yet is too far out of the Road, and has nothing to support it, besides the bare similitude of Names. Bapchild lies directly in the way, and does not want either Antiquity or a due distance to answer the Itinerary; which has induc'd a modern Author to remove the Station thither.

Dubris, by the present name and the circumstances of the place, can be no other than Dover.

Anderida, mention'd by the Notitia, has been by some fix'd at Newenden, by others at Hastings or Pemsy in Suffex. Indeed the names mention'd in that Book, wanting the assistance of the Distances, are very hard to find out; having no other Directions, but barely their situation upon the Sea-coasts; which we infer from the use of them, viz. to be a Guard against the Invasion of Pyrats.

Lemanis is, by Mr. Camden, plac'd at Stratfall-Castle near Hithe; but by Mr. Somner at Romney.

Noviomagus, by the Distances in the Itinerary, must be brought much nearer Maidstone than Woodcot in Surrey is, where Mr. Camden fixt it. The discovery of a large Roman Camp upon the River Ravensbourne (which empties it self into the Thames near Greenwich) makes it probable enough that the old Noviomagus ought not to be sought in another place.

Rhurupie, is the same as our Rieburrow; which daily shews the Marks of its Antiquity; viz. Roman Coins of Gold and Silver.

To these we may add the Island, which Solinus (according to different Copies,) calls Tbanatos and Arbanatos, from whence the present name of Thanet is deriv'd. This made by a division of the Waters of the River Stour, near its entrance into the Sea, and is about eight miles long and four broad. The Soil is a white Chalk, which produces Hay and Corn in great abundance.

Tortani Insula is probably Shepey.

Things Remarkable.

The vast Pits near Feverſham, narrow at the top but within very large, are thought to be some of those out of which the Britains us'd to dig Chalk to manure their Grounds. Which seems a more probable Opinion, than that the Saxons should contrive them, in imitation of their German Ancestors, for a sort of Granary wherein to protect their Corn and Goods against the violence of Cold and Plunders of an Enemy.

Below Greenwich, there is a great plenty of Scirry-grass.

Bromley Hospital, built by the right Reverend Father in God Dr. John Warner, for the maintenance of twenty poor Ministers Widows, is a most noble Foundation, and may well serve for a Pattern to Persons who are dispos'd to settle such Charities in other Places.

The Royal Observatory at Greenwich, furnish'd with all sorts of Instruments for Astronomical Observations, and a Dry Well for discovery of the Stars in the daytime, is very curious.

Tunbridge Wells have of late years been found so useful for carrying off several Distempers, that the great resort of Gentry has caus'd the building of a good number of Houses near the place; and of a Chapel, wherein Prayers are read twice a day during the Season.

Gavel-kind is a Custom peculiar to this County; whereby all Lands are divided equally among the Males; and in default of them, among the Females. They would derive this and other Privileges from their Composition with William the Conqueror; which Opinion is yet stiffly oppos'd by their Learned Country-man Mr. Somner, in his excellent Treatise upon that Subject.

The Cinque-Ports are a Constitution not to be met with in other places, being five Ports under the Constable of Dover-Castle, establish'd by William the Conqueror for the better security of this Coast. The Ports are Hastings, Dover, Hithe, Romney and Sandwich; which, upon account of their Sea-Services, enjoy several Immunities; their Governor is styl'd Lord Warden of the Cinque-Ports.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

THE County of GLOUCESTER, according to its several parts, has a different Soil and Appearance. In the East, 'tis hilly; in the West, woody; and in the middle, a sweet fruitful Vale. The middle parts are much indebted to the Severn, which runs along for forty miles together, bringing in Necessaries from abroad, and conveying the Native Commodities into Foreign Parts. The Western Tract was one continu'd Wood, thick and unpassable; but the discovery of the Veins of Iron (which requires vast quantities of Wood to support them) has made it much thinner.

The more remarkable Towns are,

{ Gloucester, Tewkesbury, Cirencester,
Camden,
Winchcomb.

GLOUCESTER, the principal place in this County, is a Town well-built, beautify'd with many fair Churches, and exceeding well provided with Hospitals for the maintenance of their Poor. The Severn, along which it is stretch'd, secures it on one side, and it has Walls to defend it on others. About the time of William the Conqueror, forging of Iron seems to have been the Business of the Town; since Domesday tells us, That the Tribute requir'd of them, was a certain quantity of Iron-bars. It has had its misfortunes both from Wars and Fire, but still rose again and flourish'd, at length K. Henry VIII. made it an Episcopal See; which at this day is its greatest Glory.

Tewkesbury, seated at the meeting of the Severn, the Avon, and another little River, is a large beautiful Town, the great Business whereof is Woollen-cloth. In the Histories of our Nation 'tis mention'd upon account of the Battel between the Houses of Tork and Lancaster, wherein the latter Party was almost entirely defeated.

Cirencester, call'd commonly at this day Ciciter, was of good note both under the Romans and Saxons. Its eminence among the first is discover'd by ancient Coin, Pavements and Inscriptions; and the frequent mention of it in the Saxon Histories make it probable that it bore some considerable Figure among the latter. Add to this; the extent of the Town, which has formerly been two miles round; but now not above a fourth part of that compass is inhabited. They have also had three Parish Churches, of which only one is left, very fair indeed and large.

Camden, in the North part of the County on the edge of Worcestershire, is a good Market-town, famous especially for the Stocking Trade. The South Isle of this Church is adorn'd with several most noble and curious Monuments of Marble.

Ancient Places.

Abone appears by its situation upon Severn, its distance from the next Station, and most of all from the present name, to be that which we call at this day Aventon.

Trajectus, where they Ferry'd over the Severn, was probably at Oldbury; which both carries Antiquity in its name, and is situate over against Abone.

Corinium, mention'd by Ptolomy, was our Cirencester.

Glevum is agreed by all to be the present City of Glocester.

Things Remarkable.

The Whispering-place, in the Cathedral of Glocester, is a Curiosity much talk'd of and admir'd by Travellers. 'Tis a Wall built so in an Arch of the Church, that if you whisper never so low at one end, another that lays his Ear to the other end shall hear each distinct Syllable. Which yet the more knowing Inhabitants affirm to be purely accidental, and not the effect of any curious contrivance.

Stones like Cockles and Oysters are found about the Head of the River Avon, or the Hills near Adersey.

In some parts of the County, they had formerly a Custom very unaccountable, That the Lands of condemn'd Persons should be forfeited to the King only for a year and a day, and after that return to the next Heirs; but 'tis now quite abolisht.

OXFORDSHIRE.

THE County of OXFORD is accommodated with three large Rivers, which answer the Necessities of its several parts. The Thames supplies the South and West, the Tame the East, and the Cherwell the middle. The two last empty themselves into the first, and are carried with it in one Channel into the Ocean. The bottoms of this Shire abound with Meadows and Corn-ground; the Hills are well stor'd with Wood; but were much more so before the Civil Wars between the King and Parliament.

The more considerable Places, are

{ Oxford,
Woodstock, } { Dorchester,
Banbury, } { Henley.

OXFORD, as it gives its name to the whole Country, so is it upon several accounts very eminent: The Air is sweet and healthful, the Prospect on all hands very pleasant; the private Buildings are neat, and the publick sumptuous. But that which gives it a Reputation, not only above its Neighbours, but above all other places in the Kingdom, is, One of the most noble Universities in the whole World. The Constitution whereof is so regular, the Discipline so strict, the Endowments so plentiful and convenient for Studies; and, in a word, every thing so agreeable to the education of Youth, that we need not wonder it should daily send abroad such numbers of learned Men, for the Service of Church

Church and State. Of what Antiquity it is, I shall not pretend to determine: Whole Volumes have been writ upon that Subject already. Let us thank Providence, that 'tis in such a flourishing condition at present, and leave the nice Dilquisition of what it has been, to others. The following Scheme will afford the best view of its State and Increase, in the several Ages.

The Danes, who were a rude unpolish'd People, enemies to Learning, Religion, and every thing that was Honourable, sack'd and burn'd this place among others, in their Ravages through the Kingdom. And about the Reign of King John, (at which time 'tis said there were three Thousand Students, who lodg'd up and down in the Town,) the Scholars were heavily afflicted with the rude carriage of the Citizens, and retir'd great numbers to Reading, Cambridg, Salisbury, and other places: But about Henry the Third's Reign, and so downward, (as pious Persons built Colleges and Halls for the entertainment of Students) they began to be less dependent upon the Town; especially being supported with good Revenues, as well as accomodated with convenient Lodgings.

The chief of its publick Buildings are,

1. The Schools a noble stately Pile of Building, wherein Exercise for the several Degrees are performed, the publick Lectures read, &c.

2. The Library, built by Sir Thomas Bodely, and commonly call'd the Bodleian Library; famous throughout Europe for its prodigious Stock of Books, both Printed and Manuscript.

3. The Theater, a Magnificent Work, and of admirable Contrivance, Built by the Right Reverend Father in God, Gilbert Sheldon, Arch-Bishop of Canterbury.

4. The Museum, commonly call'd Astcmole's Museum, is a near Building; the lower part whereof is a Chymical Laboratory; and the upper, a Repository of Natural and Artificial Rarities.

Woodstock, distant from Oxford about 6 miles to the North, by its name implies a situation in a woody part of the Country; and accordingly its greatest Reputation has been the Park, along with a Royal Seat built there by King Henry I. who probably was induc'd to pitch upon this place for the convenience of Hunting; a Diversion much us'd and admir'd by our Fore-fathers. At present the Town is not very populous, nor the Trade considerable.

Banbury, on the edge of Northampton-shire, is a pretty large Town; and is principally known upon account of its excellent Cheefe.

Dorchester lyes upon the River Tane, at the other end of the County; and is a place of great Antiquity and Dignity: For, as it seems to have flourish'd under the Romans, so had it the honour of an Episcopal See under the Saxons; till in William the Conqueror's Reign, that was Translated to Lincoln. The removal of the See, and the turning of the Highway another way, have left scarce any Image of its former Grandure.

Henly stands in the utmost Limits of this County, Southward; and is a Town of good Wealth and Buildings. The growth of it has probably been owing to its situation on the River of Thames; and partly also to the Passage over the same River by a Wooden-bridge, which drew Travellers that way.

Ancient Places.

Ancalites, a People mention'd by Cesar, seem to have liv'd in these Parts; and 'tis probable, by the Circumstances, that were seated about the South-corner of the County; and that Henley was their chief Town; especially if it may be allow'd so much Antiquity, as some are willing to grant it.

Things Remarkable.

Rolle-rich-stones, in the Western part of this County, are a number of huge Stones plac'd in Circle, which some have thought to be Monuments of a Victory; others, a Burying-place; and again, others, a place for the Coronation of the Danish Kings. See Plot's Oxfordshire, p. 342.

The Labyrinth made by King Henry II. at Woodstock, for his Fair Rosamund, is much talk'd of; tho' now nothing is to be seen of it.

Astrop-Wells near Banbury, have been much resorted to of late years by the Nobility and Gentry.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

THE County of Buckingham (so call'd probably from great numbers of Bucks in this Woody Country) is for many miles together extended from North to South. The Chiltern is one part of the County; which is a continu'd Ridge of Hills; and below them, lies the other Branch call'd the Vale, being a pleasant champain Country, consisting of Meadows, Pastures and Corn-grounds.

The more considerable
Towns are, } Buckingham, Alisbury,
Wickham,
Stony-Stratford.

Buckingham gives name to the whole County, and is at present a Town of good Note; though anciently it was not very considerably, if we may go by the computation of Hides and Burgeses in Domesday. I know not whether the strength of the place, may not be the reason why it made so considerable a Figure, when the Houses were few, and the Inhabitants thin. 'Tis certain the Castle (now quite gone) was built a good while before the Conquest; and Nature too has in some measure contributed towards its Safety, by surrounding it on all sides but the North, with the River Ouse; which must needs make it a valuable Refuge in those troublesome and warlike Times.

Alisbury was also a place of Note, in the beginning of the Saxons; being taken from the Britains about the year 572. At present it is a large and populous Market-Town, pleasantly seated in the midst of Meadows and Pastures, wherein are fed prodigious numbers of Sheep.

Wickham, in the Road between Oxford and London, is a large populous Corporation, well built, and of good Trade. It has a throng Corn-market; and the Woods all round bring in considerable Revenues yearly, by supplies sent to the neighbouring Counties; some of which are hard enough put to it for Fuel.

Stony-Stratford, in the North part of the Shire, takes its name from the Stony-Ford that led over the River, at that Place. 'Tis a good large Town, in the middle whereof stands the Cross, erected by King Edward I. to the Memory of Queen Eleanor.

Ancient Places.

Pontes, by the course of the Itinerary, must be somewhere about Colebrook; for if that Guide were wanting, the condition of the place would naturally point this out in our search after the old name: For, where should we search for it, but at a division of the River into four Channels; over each of which there is a Bridge, within a very little space one from another?

LeGodorum does not discover it self by the same evidence, but yet seems plainly enough to be Stony-Stratford, both upon account of its Situation upon the Military way, and also from the import of the name in the British, which by those who are skill'd in the Language, is affirm'd to signify the same thing as our present Appellation.

Things Remarkable.

At Borstal they still preserve the Horn, by the Li-very whereof that Estate was convey'd to Nigel de Borstal in the time of one of the Williams.

Pen, and the Towns upon that Ridge, are observ'd to be the highest Ground in all these parts; there being a sensible ascent thither all along from London, and as sensible a descent when you are past it.

BEDFORDSHIRE.

THE County of Bedford in the South part is Barren; in the middle Woody, and in the North, Fruitful. As the Soil distinguishes it into these three Parts, so has Nature divided it into other two, by the Channel of the River Ouse, which is the principal River of the County, and runs through it.

Towns more remarkable are, } Bedford, Dunstable.

Bedford, the principal Town of the County, tho' it can hardly pretend to Roman Antiquity, was yet of very good repute among the Saxons; and was one of those which suffer'd from the Danish Depredations. But its greatest Miseries were occasion'd by the Castle built there after the Conquest, which was a certain refuge to one Party or the other in all the Civil Wars that follow'd. The Town is parted by the River Ouse, and join'd by a Stone-Bridge: The South-side has two Churches, and the North three. The Site of the old Castle is now a spacious Bowling-green, whither the Neighbouring Gentry resort for their Recreation.

Dunstable, so call'd from its high situation, stands upon the end (as it were) of the Chiltern, upon a dry chalky Soil. This quality of the Soil puts them to some inconvenience for Water; with which notwithstanding they are supplied tolerably well with four publick ponds, one in each Street. It is pretty populous, and well furnish'd with Inns, having the advantage of lying upon the Northern-road, from London. The Cross in the middle of the Town was erected by Edward, to the Memory of his Queen Eleanor.

Ancient Towns.

Saline must in all probability be the place now call'd Chesterfield, near Tempsford; by the course of the Itinerary, the Roman Money, with other marks of Antiquity, discover'd there.

Maginninum, need be sought at no other place than Dunstable which stands upon a Roman-way; and has the evidence of Roman Money to assert its Antiquity.

Things Remarkable.

At Harewood, the River was observ'd to stand in the year 1399; and again in 1648; which have been look'd upon as Prognosticks; the first of the Civil Wars that ensu'd, the second of the Death of Charles I.

Fuller's-Earth is dug up in great abundance about Woburn.

A Woman in Dunstable, had nineteen Children at five Births; 5 at two several ones; and three together at 3 more.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

THE County of Hertford seems to owe its flourishing Condition more to its situation than Soil: For the many Thorow-fairs to and from London, have mightily Enrich'd the particular Towns, by the advantage of entertaining Travellers; and its nearness to the City, (together with the Healthfulness of the Air) has induc'd great numbers of the Nobility and Gentry to purchase and build in those Parts.

The more remarkable Towns are, { S. Albans, } { Hatfield, }
 { Hertford, } { Royston, }
 { Ware, } { Stortford. }

S. Albans, (the old Verulamium of the Romans, and the Watling-chester of the Saxons) was of such considerable Note under the Romans, as to be a Municipium; but in the famous Insurrection of Queen Boadicia, was entirely laid Waste by the Britains: However it recover'd it self, and afterwards had the honour of being the Birth-place of S. Alban (the Protomartyr of Britain, in the time of Dioctlesian;) a Person so eminent for Piety and Goodness, that the Town afterwards took his Name, as the greatest Honour it could do it self. For when Offa had built a large and splendid Monastery, Dedicated to the Memory of S. Alban, the Town presently flourish'd, and was particularly ambitious of a Relation to that Saint. From time to time there have been discover'd vast remains of Roman Antiquity, in the place where the old Verulamium stood, now turn'd into a Corn-field. The Church of the Monastery is still standing, and is a most noble Pile of Building. At present, 'tis a large flourishing Town, having the advantage of being a Thorow-fair, on the Northern road from London.

Hertford, (so call'd, as if one should say a Ford of Harts; for their Arms is a Hart couchant in the Water) is a Town rather noted for giving name to the whole County, than any riches or beauty of its own.

The Assizes indeed are still kept here, a mark of its ancient Prosperity; but the Place is neither Populous nor of any tolerable Trade.

Ware, (so nam'd from the Wear in the River Lea) is a populous thriving Place, owing its rise to the decay of Hertford: For about King John's time, the High-road was turn'd this way; and ever since, Ware has been encreasing, and the other dwindling away by little and little.

Hatfield is more remarkable for the stately Seat of the Earl of Salisbury, than any thing the Town it self can boast of beside.

Royston, or Royse's Town (on the North-side of the County) is so call'd from a certain Lady nam'd Royssa, who erected a Cross in this place. The Town (ever since Richard I. granted it the privilege of a Market) has been still growing; and deals especially in Malt and Corn.

Stortford, upon the little River Stort, is of late years grown into a considerable Market-Town, and is very well furnish'd with good Inns.

Ancient Places.

Verulamium has been by all Men and all Ages so undoubtedly sett'd at S. Albans that it is even at this day known by the name of Verulam in several of our Writings; and commonly enough in Conversation.

Durocobrive, upon account of the beginning and end must be sought somewhere upon a River, dur signifying Water, and briva a Passage. The course of the Road directs us to look for it below Flamsted, where the ancient High-way crosses the Water.

Things Remarkable.

The little Brook Womer near Redborn, is by the Inhabitants thought to portend Dearth of troublesome Times when it breaks out. The Font at S. Albans, wherein the Children of the Kings of Scotland us'd to be Baptiz'd was a most noble Monument, plac'd here by Sir Rich. Lea, Masters of the Pioneers; but it is since taken away, as it seems in the late Civil Wars.

MIDDLESEX.

THE County of Middlesex, or Middle-Saxons (so call'd from its situation between the East and South Saxons) is of no large extent, but is furnish'd with great numbers of fair Buildings and sweet Seats, for the retirement of Nobility and Gentry.

Places most considerable are. { London, Cap. } { Fulham, }
 { Westminster, } { Chelsey, }
 { Oxbridge, } { Hansted. }
 { Hampton-Court, }

LONDON, (The Metropolis of our Nation) as it is one of the most flourishing Cities in the whole World, so is it of such Antiquity, that the most ancient Records and Memorials, can give us no account of its Original. Under the Britains, it was a considerable place; and Ammianus Marcellinus, even in his time, calls it an ancient City. Its Glory appears more distinctly under the Romans, who (probably out of a jealousy of its Greatness) would not grant it the privilege of a Municipium; Governing it by a sort of Commissioners sent yearly from Rome. But though they would not allow it too much Power and Authority, they own'd its Glory and Eminence, by giving it the honourable name of Augusta. Also, when Constantine had confirm'd Christianity; upon the removal of the Flamin, a Bishop's See was sett'd here. At the beginning of the Saxon Government, it had its share of the Misfortunes with which this Warlike People oppress'd the whole Nation; but bore up however against the Storm, till the Conversion of that People to Christianity. Then Æthelbert King of Kent, built a Church dedicated to S. Paul, which Posterity by degrees improv'd into a most stately Fabrick. This, along with the greatest part of the City, was Consum'd in that most dreadful Fire which happen'd in the year 1666; and put all things into such confusion, that the ancient State of this noble City, must have been in a great measure hidden from from Posterity, had not the industrious and learned Mr. John Stow, rescu'd it from Oblivion by his excellent Survey. To him I refer the Reader for matters of Antiquity; and shall content my self with a short description of the several Buildings, and other Curiosities, which it boasts of at this day. Premising thus much in general; that within these Hundred years and especially since the above mention'd Fire, the City has grown so strangely both in publick and private Buildings; has also stretch'd it self out so far on all sides, that by a Draught of an hundred years old; nay, of one taken immediately before 1666, compar'd with its present extent and Beauty, one could not imagine it to be the same City.

I. The Tower, at the East-end of the City, is a large stately Fabrick, fortified with Walls and a broad Ditch; where the Arms and other Warlike Preparations are laid up as in a common Store.

II. Gresham College, so call'd from Sir Thomas Gresham the Founder, was instituted for the Improvement of Arts and Sciences; and accordingly there are general Salaries settl'd for the several Professors of Divinity, Law, Physick, Astronomy, Geometry and Musick.

III. The Royal Exchange was built by the same Sir Thomas Gresham, and a most noble Ornament to the City, as well as a singular convenience to Merchants.

IV. Guild-hall, (or the Senate-house) a most beautiful Building.

V. Paul's Church, as was observ'd before, was consum'd in the dreadful Fire of 1666; but is now rising again with new Beauty and Majesty. A magnificent Buildings it is, if we look upon its Extent and Strength; and if upon the Contrivance, a most curious Fabrick. The Quire is finished, and Divine Service constantly celebrated in it.

VI. Christ-Church-Hospital was Founded by King Edward VI. for the Maintenance of Orphans; one Thousand whereof are suppos'd to be annually provided for by this Charity. After they have gone through the several Schools, they are bound out Apprentices, at 15 years of Age; or sent to one of the Universities, where they are maintain'd for 7 years.

VII. Charter-house (so call'd from the Carthusian Monks) was erected into an Hospital by Thomas Sutton Esq; by the name of The Hospital of King James, endowing it with Revenues sufficient for the Maintenance of 80 Poor Brothers or Pensioners, who are to be either poor decay'd Gentlemen, or Merchants, or Superannuated Soldiers, 40 poor Scholars, who are either put to Trades, or sent to the University; with a Master, Preacher, Physician, and other Officers.

VIII. The Inns of Court are chiefly Four, The Inner-Temple, the Middle-Temple, Grays-Inn and Lincolns-Inn; besides several others of less Note. Here great numbers of young Gentlemen are educated in the study of the Laws, and qualified either for publick Pleadings, or for the Service of the Kingdom in any other Capacity, that requires a more than ordinary knowledge of our Customs and Constitution.

Besides those Ornaments we have mention'd, the Churches are spacious and beautiful; the publick Halls of the several Companies large and stately; the Squares uniform and pleasant, and the private Buildings and Shops exceeding pleasant. A late ingenious Author hath made it probable from the number of Burials and Houses in London, Paris, and Rouen; that the first of these is altogether as big and populous as both the other two.

WESTMINSTER, as it is a City distinct from London, with separate Magistrates and Privileges, so was it formerly at least a Mile distant from it, till by degrees the Suburbs of the former join'd the latter, and made them both together like one entire City. It seems to owe its rise to the Church, which Sibert King of the East-Saxons built there to the honour of S. Peter; and which together with its Westerly situation from London, caus'd its name to be chang'd from Thorney, into the present one of Westminster. Edward the Confessor built it anew, and endow'd it largely: His Fabrick was afterwards demolish'd by Henry III. who erected a new one very stately and magnificent; to which Henry VII. added a Chappel, commonly call'd King Henry VIII's Chapple, for the burial of himself and Children. It was by Q. Elizabeth converted into a Collegiate Church, consisting of a Dean, twelve Prebendaries, &c. The greatest Curiosities it affords are the Tombs and Monuments of our Princes, and of the most eminent Nobility, with several Persons famous for Learning and other Excellencies in their respective Ages.

Near the Abbey is Westminster-hall, a spacious Room, wherein (and in places round it) Justice is publickly admittred in the several Courts, mention'd in the Introduction. Nor ought the School to be omitted, since it is so serviceable to Church and State, in furnishing both with Persons every way qualified for the discharge of their several Stations.

White-hall is conveniently seated between S. James's Park and the Thames, and is the Residence of our Kings. It was the House of Cardinal Wolsey, and converted into a Royal Palace by King Henry VIII.

Oxbridge, upon the edge of the County, is a pretty large Town, stretch'd out on each side a long Street; lying upon the Road, it reaps great advantage by the entertainment of Travellers, and is well stor'd with Inns. 'Tis mention'd in our Histories, particularly upon account of the Treaty held there, in the Reign of Charles I.

Hamton-Court, is a Royal Seat, lying pleasantly upon the River Thames, and accomodated with most excellent Prospects all round. Cardinal Wolsey begun it, and King Henry VIII. finish'd it: But their Structure though very large and magnificent for that Age, is far excelled by the Additions made to it by his present Majesty; whether we compare the Buildings themselves, or the Gardens, and other contrivances about it.

Fulham, is only remarkable for the residence of the Bishops of London, who have here their Palace for a retirement out of the City.

Chelsey, situated pleasantly upon the Thames, is noted only for its noble Hospital, built for the maintenance of lame and decay'd Soldiers. It was begun by King Charles II. carry'd on by King James, and finish'd by his present Majesty; a Building as in it self very magnificent, so accomodated with all manner of Officers convenient for the design, and also with pleasant Walks and Gardens.

Hamsted, at a little distance from London to the North-west, is remarkable for the goodness of the Air, which has caus'd its enlargement in Buildings of late Years.

Ancient Places.

Sulloniace is Brockly-hill upon the edge of this County, as appears both from the distances and remains of Antiquity, (Coins, Urns, Bricks, &c.) that have been discover'd there.

Londonium, London, call'd also Augusta, a Title of Preheminence among the Romans.

The Green-houses at Hampton-Court, with Stoves under them, to preserve foreign Plants in gradual Heats, suitable to the Climes whereof they are Natives, is an admirable Contrivance.

E S S E X.

E S S E X is so call'd from the East-Saxons who inhabited it, and had that name from their situation, with relation to the South-Saxons. 'As 'tis on the side accommodated with the Sea, so is it in all parts furnish'd with good Rivers, which do not only water it, but convey likewise all Necessaries from abroad, and give them an opportunity of sending out such Commodities as they can spare for the use of foreign Parts.

Towns more remarkable, are

- Colchester,
- Chemsford,
- Harwich,
- Maldon.

Colchester, seated on the brow of a Hill and extended from East to West, flourish'd in the times of the Romans under the Name of Colonia; from whence possibly the present Colchester (or as the Saxons call'd it Colneceaster) has its original. Next to this their Antiquity; the Inhabitants glory that Helena, Mother to Constantine the Great, was born in this place. At present 'tis large and populous, containing a great many Parishes.

Chemsford or Chelmsford, has a convenient situation, just at the meeting of two Rivers. The place seems to have been of no great note, till the Bishop of London, in Henry I.'s time, turn'd the high Road through it, which before lay through Writtle. At present the Affizes are held in it.

Harwich is more famous upon account of its Harbour, than either the Riches or Building of the Town. The Convenience of Passage from hence to Holland, is the occasion why 'tis so much spoke of, and so well known.

Maldon, tho' of it self large and well-inhabited, (being one Street reaching a mile in length) is yet of greater eminence by reason of its Antiquity, and the considerable Figure that it made among our Forefathers. Claudius Caesar, in his attempt upon Britain, storm'd this place, and left a strong Garrison to hold and defend it. But when the Insolence of the Soldiers came to such a height, that the poor Britains could no longer bear the Indignities and Oppressions, these (under the conduct of Boadicia) form'd themselves into a Confederacy, burnt this Colony, and put all the Inhabitants to the Sword. Under the Saxons we hear little or nothing of it; tho' in the Conqueror's time, it seems to have been in a tolerable condition, Domesday reckoning 180 Houses.

Ancient Places.

Drovolitum, by the course of the Itinerary, the found of the present Name, and the Remains of Antiquity discover'd thereabouts, cannot well be any other than Layton, about six miles from London.

Corvennos Insula, has the plain Remains of the old name left it in the Island Canvey, above five miles in length, which feeds great numbers of Sheep.

Casaromagus is Dunmow, written anciently Dunmage and Dunmawg, the last Syllable whereof is a plain Relick of the old magus; and as for the first (Dun) every one knows how common that is in the ancient names of places. All the Objection is, That it lies a little out of the Road, which the Itinerary seems to take in that Journey; but any one who observes what wheelings and windings the Itinerary takes in other parts of England, will reckon that to be no exception.

Canonium, is Writtle, through which the High-way pass'd before Henry I.'s time: And, besides, 'twas a place of note among the Saxons, and after the Conquest; which agrees well with that observation, That the Saxons settl'd in the deserted Stations of the Romans.

Orbona, a Garrison under the Count of the Saxon Shore, seems to have been at Irthamchester, mention'd by our Histories, and seated about the utmost point of Denny Hundred.

Camalodunum, from the present name, the course of the Itinerary, and the consent of all judicious Writers, must be concluded to have been at Maldon, which we describ'd before.

Ad Ansam seems to be Witham; for the Road lies through it, the distances answer, and it still shews an old Camp.

Colonia is by all agreed to be Colchester.

Idumani fl. ostium, is Black-water-bay, idu in British signifying black.

Things Remarkable.

The Caverns near Tilbury, in a chalky Soil, have given occasion to some Conjectures; tho' perhaps no one does so well agree either with the nature of the Ground or the custom of the Britains, as the opinion That they were intended by that People for Supplies of Chalk to manure their Lands.

Walfleet-Oysters, are got in great abundance upon this Coast, and so call'd from a Wall (built to secure the Inhabitants against Inundations) along which they lie.

It was a pleasant Custom which they had in the Priory of Dunmow, That whoever did not repent of his Marriage in a year and a day, upon Oath made thereof before the Prior and Convent, should have a Gammon of Bacon deliver'd him.

S U F F O L K.

T H E County of Suffolk, contracted from Suth-folk (for so it was written among the Saxons) is so call'd from its situation with respect to Norfolk or North-folk. The Soil is, in most parts, very fruitful; assist'd by a sort of Marle mixt with Clay.

Towns more remarkable, are

- Bury,
- Ipswich,
- New-market,
- Clare.

Bury (so call'd by contraction for S. Edmunds-bury) seems seems to owe its original and growth, in a great measure, to the Translation of the Body of S. Edmund to this place; an excellent Prince, who was barbarously murder'd by the Danes. And even the Danish Cruelties, which were the ruin of most other Places, did a considerable Service to this Town; King Cnutus out of a desire to make amends for the Injuries done it by his Father Sueno, taking a particular liking to it, and endowing it with many Privileges. The Popes also, out of a regard to the Sanctity of S. Edmund, granted it large Immunities. So that the Monastery and Town grew apace in Wealth and Reputation, till the general Dissolution by King Henry VIII. And now, tho' the first is destroy'd, the second is still in a flourishing condition.

Ipswich, is a place mention'd in our Histories about the latter end of the Saxons; by whom it was call'd Gypswic. The advantage of a Harbour has made it considerable; and, accordingly, that of late years having not been so commodious as formerly, the Town it self has gone a little to decay. For about an hundred years ago, they had fourteen Churches, which are so far from being increas'd, that at this day there remain only twelve. Their number of Ships also is considerably diminish'd of late years; which must be an Argument that their Trade is not so good as it has been.

Newmarket, upon the edge of Cambridgeshire, by the very name betrays its wants of Antiquity. That it is of note at present, is not owing either to Manufactures or any particular Commodities; but partly to its situation upon the Road, and partly to its convenience for Hunting and Horse Races: By which Entertainments the Court is often drawn thither; and accordingly, there is a House built for his Majesty.

Clare, upon the River Stour, is very often mention'd in our English Histories, on account of the Earls to whom it has given Title, and who, in their several Ages, have been Men of great Worth and Eminence.

Ancient Places.

Villa Faustini seems to belong to S. Edmunds-Bury, by the course of the Itinerary.

Combretonium discovers it self in the present Brettenham, upon the River Bretton; the Termination Ham being an addition purely Saxon.

Extensio or Ἐξοχή, a Promontory, shooting it self a long way into the Sea; which we, at this day, call Easton-ness.

Gastonorum, is Burgh-Castle upon the Coast of Norfolk, near Tarmouth.

Things Remarkable.

That vast Ditch which runs along Newmarket-beath, is a Work so prodigious, that the common People cannot conceive it made by any but the Devils; and upon that fancy have call'd it Devils-dike. Whereas, 'tis plain, that it was contriv'd as a common Fence and Bound between the two Kingdoms in the Saxon Heptarchy.

It was a facetious sort of Tenure, by which Hemington in this County was holden, viz. upon condition, That every Christmas-day the Lord of it should dance, make a noise with his Cheeks puff'd out, and let a Fart, in the presence of the King.

Upon the Sea-coast, near Aldburrow, the Inhabitants valu'd themselves upon a signal favour of Providence; which, in a time of great Dearth, sent 'em a Crop of Pease among the hard Rocks, in the beginning of Autumn. But the more judicious find no occasion for the Miracle; but think it may be very well solv'd, by imagining the Sea might cast in some Pulse left in it by the Shipwrack, and so cause that unufal growth.

NORFOLK.

THE County of Norfolk is so call'd with respect to Suffolk, as if one should say, the Northern People, or the Northern Branch of the East-Angles. Of all the Shires in England, this is observ'd to be most populous, for the compass; and to be thickest set with Towns and Villages. They are generally rich and live handsomly, which perhaps may be one reason why they have been so much given to the study of the Laws; so that even your ordinary sort are not altogether unacquainted with the little Niceries of Courts and Pleadings. Riches breed Quarrels, and Quarrels Law-suits, and those drive the Parties engag'd to the Examination of their Cause; which would never be thought of nor started, if they were as hard put to it for the common Necessaries of Life, as they are in many other places.

The more remarkable Places are, { Norwich, Tarmouth,
Lynne,
Walsingham.

Norwich, is, as much as one should say a Castle or Fort to the North, with relation to Castor, about four miles South from it, out of the Ruins whereof Norwich seems to have risen. For that it is much more modern, appears from hence, that we do not find it mention'd before the latter end of the Saxon times;

whereas Castor was, no doubt, the ancient Venta. It is seated upon the side of a Hill from North to South, about a mile and a half, or two miles in length. The Inhabitants are wealthy, the City populous, and the Buildings (both publick and private) very neat and beautiful. It has 11 Gates, and is surrounded with Walls, except where 'tis defended by the River, viz. on the East. Domesday tells us, it had no less than 1320 Burgeses; and altho' it suffer'd very much by the Insurrection of Ralph Earl of the East-Angles against William the Conqueror, yet was that damage abundantly repair'd, and the Episcopal See was remov'd hither from Thetford. The great number of Netherlanders, who came over, upon the Tyranny of the Duke of Alva, and sett'd here, seem also to have been a mighty advantage to the City, by setting the Manufacture of Worsted Stuffs.

Tarmouth, on the mouth of the River Yare, seems to have risen out of the Ruins of the old Gariotonum, as Norwich did out of those of Castor or Venta. It is not of so much note, as one would expect from the advantage of the Sea, and the convenience of the Harbor. The reason is, because the violence of the Wind upon this Coast, is such that they have much ado to keep the Haven so open and free from heaps of Sand, as to maintain a tolerable Trade. At present their great Business, is the Herring Trade. They have but one Church, very large and stately, with a high, lofty Spire.

Lynne,

Lynne, about the entrance of the Onfe into the Ocean, next to Norwich, is the best Town in those parts, having grown in Wealth, Buildings and number of Merchants, by the convenience of a very safe and advantageous Harbour. The Soil too, all about it, contributes to its greatness; for 'tis far and luscious, and very fruitful. The very name implies a moist, fenny situation; Hlyn signifying so much in the old British.

Walsingham was one of the most famous Places in these parts, till the Dissolution of Monasteries by King Henry VIII. for then, its Monastery (from whence sprung all its Glory, Reputation and Riches,) was plunder'd and demolish'd. Before, rich Jewels, Gold and Silver, were heap'd in with so much profuseness, according to the Superstition of those Times, that it was the great admiration of Strangers and Travellers.

Ancient Places.

Sitomagus seems to be Thetford, which was formerly a place of great note, till the Bishop's See was removed to Norwich, and then it fell to decay.

Gariensis Ostrium discovers it self by the present name of the River Tare, and of the Town at the mouth, Tarmouth.

Venta Icenorum, the capital City of the Iceni, was at Castor three miles South of Norwich; now fallen to decay, but known to be a place of Antiquity by the old Walls, and the discovery of Roman Coins.

Metaris Estuarium, mention'd by Ptolemy, is suppos'd to be the Washes, near Lynne.

Iciani, by the name should seem to be Iceborough.

Brannodunum is plainly Brancafter near Walsingham.

Things Remarkable.

Carleton in this County was held by a pleasant Tenour, That 100 Herrings bak'd in 24 Pies should be presented to the King, in what part of England soever he was, when they first came into season. The custom is still observ'd, and the Herrings duly convey'd to the King by the Lord of the Manor.

Herrings are observ'd to be more plentiful upon this Coast, than any other part of England; which brings in great advantage to the Inhabitants.

S. Bennet's, an Island, is so loose and unfix'd, that it seems to be kept from swimming away, only by the Roots of Trees.

CAMBRIDGSHIRE.

THE County of Cambridge, according to different parts, is of a different Soil. The South is fertile, well-till'd, and bears abundance of Barley; whereof they make vast quantities of Malt. The North is more wet and spongy, and so fitter for Corn than Pasture; not only upon account of its loose softness, but by reason also of the frequent overflowing in those parts.

The principal Towns are Cambridge, Ely.

Cambridge seems to be the Daughter of the old Cambarium, and possibly may have borrow'd the first Syllable of her name from the Mother. The University is her greatest Glory, which for many hundred years has furnish'd Church and State with Persons of Learning, Piety and Prudence. When it was first instituted, let others determine: Thus much is certain, that like Oxford, at first it afforded the Scholars no publick reception or place of Studies, but oblig'd them to take up with such Lodgings in the Town as they could get. By degrees, the inconvenience of this method was observ'd, not only from the mean Accommodation they met with, but also from the frequent Commotions caus'd by the Insolence of the Towns-men. Whereupon, pious and charitable Persons began to erect Inns and Hostels for the reception of Scholars, in order to give them an opportunity of retirement, and an independence upon the Town. But still they liv'd upon their own Estates, enjoying only the convenience of Lodgings, without any manner of Endowments; till, in the Reign of Edward I. they began to build Colleges, not only for the Reception, but also for the maintenance of certain numbers of Scholars, according to the Revenues assign'd to that purpose. The order and time of their Foundation, with their respective Founders, are as follow.

Peter-house,	Hugh Balsham.	1284

Sidney-Suffex,	Frances Sidney.

This University, as well as its Sister Oxford, has its publick Schools and Library; but falls far short of them in stateliness of Buildings, number of Books, and other Ornaments. The Structures most remarkable in Cambridge, are, 1. King's-College-Chappel, which for contrivance and largeness, is look'd upon to be one of the finest in the World. 2. Trinity-College-Library, begun under the Government of the famous Dr. Barrow, and now entirely finish'd; for beauty and design (considering also the bigness of it) perhaps it cannot be match'd in the three Kingdoms.

Ely is seated in the chief of those spongy Islands, wherewith this northern part of the County abounds. Whether it had the name from Eels, I shall not dispute: 'Tis certain, the softness of the Soil and the watry situation do both make the Conjecture more plausible, than Polydore Virgil's fancy about the Greek Greek $\lambda\theta$, signifying a marsh. For what have we to do here with a Greek original? The place owes its rise to Religion; for Erbeldreda Wife to Egfrid King of Northumberland, founded here a Nunnery, which afterwards, by the Patronage of Kings and Noblemen, grew up to an incredible degree of Wealth and Revenues. Inasmuch, that in Henry I.'s time it was advanc'd to the dignity of a Bishop's See, and had Cambridgeshire assign'd it for its Diocess, which before belong'd to Lincoln. Notwithstanding these Advantages, the City cannot boast of any great beauty, either in publick or private Buildings; for its fenny situation making the Air thick and gross, has render'd it no very desirable place of Residence. The Cathedral, indeed, is a spacious and beautiful Building.

Ancient Places:

Cambroritum, situated upon the River Cam, and implying as much as a Ford over it, to the old Grancester of the Saxons, out of the Ruins whereof the present Cambridge seems to have risen.

Things Remarkable.

The vast Ditches thrown up by the East-Angles in several parts of this County, to prevent the Incurfions of the Mercians, are such as few other places can shew.

Sturbridge-fair, so call'd from the River Sture upon which it is kept every year in September, is very famous for resort of People and variety of Wares.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

THE County of Huntingdon seems to have that name from the convenience of Hunting, an opinion that is back'd by the ancient condition of this Shire, which is said to have been almost one entire Forest till the Reign of Henry II. At present it is a very good Corn-Country; and the East-parts, which are fenny and very far, afford excellent Pasture.

The more remarkable Towns, are

Huntingdon,
Goodmanchester,
Kimbolton,
S. Ives.

Huntingdon, the chief Town of the Shire, is seated upon the River Ouse. Formerly it was much more considerable, than at present it is; as appears from its fifteen Churches, being reduc'd to two. The cause of this decay seems to be the obstruction mention'd by Speed to have been made in the River which before was navigable to this Town, to the great profit of the Inhabitants.

Goodmanchester, call'd formerly Gormonchester, stands over against Huntingdon, on the other side of the River. It has improv'd it self chiefly by Agriculture, wherein the Inhabitants are very industrious; and they boast, that at one time they have entertain'd the King in his progress, with a noble Show of nine score Plows. And, in this their Employment, they have been so successful, that in the Reign of King James I. the Town was made a Corporation.

is the Ornament of the East-part of this County.

S. Ives, upon the River Ouse, is call'd by a late Writer, a fair, large and ancient Town: But within these three or four years it was a great part of it burnt down; and so, possibly, may hardly merit that character at present.

Ancient Places:

Durobrivæ, i. e. the passage of the River (viz. Nen) must be Dornford, formerly call'd Dorn-cestre and Caer-Dorn; whether we respect the course of the Itinerary, the discovery of the ancient Coins, or the marks of an old City.

Durosponte, by the import of the Word, must have been some place upon the Ouse; the name signifying a Bridge over the Ouse. Gormonchester bids fairest for it; which, as an Evidence of its Antiquity, throws up old Roman Money: And, besides, that more modern name was only given it, when King Alfred bestow'd these parts upon Gorman the Dane.

Things Remarkable.

It has been observ'd of this County, that the Families have gone strangely to decay; and that even an hundred years ago, there were few Sir-names of any note, which could be drawn down beyond the Reign of Henry VIII. The cause is uncertain; unless we should impute it to the great quantity of Abby-lands that were in this Shire; which, upon the Dissolution, fell into Lay-hands, and perhaps would no more stick by them here, than they have done by their owners in other places.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

THE County of Northampton is a plain, level Country, abounding with Pasturage and Corn-fields. The number of Churches is an argument of its populousness; for they are so thick set, that from some places you may see no less than thirty Steeples at a time. For Houses also of the Nobility and Gentry, it may vie with any County in England, of an equal bigness.

The more remarkable Towns, are

Northampton, Peterborough, Dantrey.

Northampton, seated at the meeting of two Rivers, seems to be of no great Antiquity, since we hear little of it in our Histories, till after the Conquest. But in the Commotions rais'd by the rebellious Barons, it was made the Seat of War: And sometimes, the Kings of England have held their Parliaments at it; induc'd by the convenience of its situation, almost in the Heart of the Kingdom. The Buildings of it were very handfom, and the Town it self pretty large; having within the Walls seven Parish-Churches, and in the Suburbs, two. But in our Age, a most dreadful Fire laid it in Ashes; by which the Inhabitants tants must have been ruin'd, and the Town it self have been buried in Oblivion, had not the liberal Contributions of the Kingdom reliev'd the one, and repair'd the other. So that now the first are wealthy much beyond their Neighbours; and the second need give place to no Town in England for nearness, beauty and situation.

Peterborough, seated upon the River Nen, is so call'd from a Monastery begun there by Poada first Christian King of the Mercians, and dedicated to S. Peter. It suffer'd much from the Danes, who destroy'd the Monastery and Monks together; so that it lay desolate for above an hundred years. Then Ethelwold, Bishop of Winchester, rebuilt it, and restor'd the Monks; who liv'd in great abundance till the dissolution by King Henry VIII. The same King erected it into a Bishop's See, giving this County and Rutlandshire for its Dioceses. The Cathedral is a most noble Fabrick; but was much more so before the Civil Wars, when it was defac'd, and depriv'd of many considerable Ornaments.

Dantrey is a good Market-town, well stor'd with Inns. Some have imagin'd, the name came from a relation it might have to the Danes; and, that the large Fortification near it, was the work of that People. But the form of it, which is four-square, and the Coins of the Emperors, do sufficiently assert it to the Romans.

Ancient Places.

Tripontium, is probably to be fixt at Torchester in this County; which by the ancient Coins they dig up, is undoubtedly a place of great Antiquity.

Bamaevenna is certainly Weeden on the Street, upon the River Nen; not only because it is a place of Antiquity, but also because the distances on both sides exactly answer, and a military way goes directly along by it.

Things remarkable.

Burghley-house, upon the Welland, was a most noble Structure even an hundred years ago; but now, is mightily improv'd by the present Earl of Essex; So that for the stateliness of Rooms, Pictures, Paintings, Carvings, Gardens, Walks, Terrasses, and all other things which furnish out a compleat Seat, it may vie with the best in England. Few Travellers of Curiosity, that go this way, are willing to lose the opportunity of such a goodly sight.

Near Liburn upon the edge of Warwickshire, upon digging a Burrow in hopes of meeting with hidden Treasures, they found nothing but Coals; From whence some have concluded it to have been rais'd for a Boundary, building upon the Authority of S. Austin and other ancient Writers, who mention that custom.

Within the Demesnes of Broughon in this County, is a petrifying Well; from whence a Skull all over Stone (both within and without) was brought to, and preserv'd in Sidney-College in Cambridge.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

THE County of Leicester is a Champain, abounding with Corn; but very few parts of it afford any Wood. The old Roman way, call'd Watling-street, runs along the West-side of it.

The more considerable Places are,

{	Leicester, Melton-Mowbray, Ashby de la Zouch.
---	--

Leicester, standing upon the River Soar, is a place of great Antiquity; for when the Mercian Kingdom was divided into Diocesses, a Bishop's See was settl'd here; which is a great sign of its eminence at that time. But tho' that was quickly remov'd, we find that in the Conqueror's time it was in a very good condition, and continu'd so till the Reign of Henry II. under whom it was grievously harass'd upon account of the Rebellion of Robert Bossu Earl of Leicester. At present it is a beautiful Town, pleasantly situated, and adorn'd with handfom Churches.

Melton Mowbray, so call'd from the Mowbrays formerly Lords of it, is a good Market-town, and the most considerable for Cattle of any in that part of England. There is little in the Town worth our notice, besides the large and handfom Church.

Ashby de la Zouch, so call'd probably from the de la Zouches Lords thereof, is a very pleasant Town, belonging now to the Earls of Huntingdon.

Ancient Places.

Bennotes must be about Cleythook, both because the ancient Ways cross here (as Anonimus has hinted) and also because of the ancient Coins, and Foundations of Buildings that have been discover'd. Bensford-bridge, not far off, may seem to have something in it of the old Bennotes.

Rara has the same evidence to assert it to Leicester, where several pieces of Antiquity have been found; and an old Trench call'd Randikes may possibly have some remains of the old name.

Verometum must be settl'd upon Barrow-hill, where are the visible marks of an old Fortification; tho' now it is turn'd into arable Ground.

Things Remarkable.

The Lazers or Lepers had an Hospital in this County, at Burton Lazars; which is thought to have been built about the beginning of the Normans, when the Leprose overspread England.

'Tis a remarkable Epitaph, that is in the Church of St. Martins, in Leicester; whereby we learn that one Mr. Heyrick (who dy'd April, 1589. aged 76.) liv'd in one Houe with Mary his Wife full 52 years, and in all that time neither bury'd Man, Woman nor Child, tho' they were sometimes twenty in Family.

RUTLANDSHIRE.

Rutlandshire is the least of all the Counties in England; and, before the Conquest, seems to have been part of Northamptonshire. For till long after the coming in of the Normans, we do not find it nam'd as a distinct County. 'Tis of form almost circular; the Soil is rich, and the situation pleasant.

Uppingham, in the South-part of the Shire, is a well-frequented Market-town, and has a handsome School.

Okeham (situated pleasantly in the middle of the Vale of Catmore, and so call'd from Oaks) belong'd formerly to the Ferrars, and is at present a Market-town of good note.

Ancient Places.

Margidunum, by its Termination, seems to point out to us some Hill in these parts, where we are to look for it. Marker-Ovverton has certainly the best right; which, as it is seated upon a high Ground, and answers the distances exactly enough, so does it cast up abundance of Coins in testimony of its Antiquity; and shews store of Marle, to answer the Marga in the beginning of the old name.

Things Remarkable.

At Okeham, was born a Dwarf who was scarce 18 inches high, when a year old, and when 30, only about 3 foot and 9 inches. When the Court came in progress that way, he was serv'd up in a cold Pye at the Duke of Buckingham's Table.

'Tis an old custom at the same Town, That the first time any Baron of the Realm comes through it, he shall give a Horse-hoof to nail upon the Castle-gate: And in case he refuses, the Bayliff has power to stop his Coach, and take one off his Horse's Foot.

LINCOLNSHIRE.

THE County of Lincoln is very large, and is branch'd into three parts, under three several names, Holland, Kesteven and Lindsey. The first is a soft, marshy Ground, abounding with Rivers and Fens; the second is much better Peop'l'd, has a more wholesome Air, and a Soil more fruitful; the third juts out into the Ocean with a large Front, and is bigger than either of the other two.

Lincoln (probably so call'd from its warty situation, Lbin in British implying so much) is the chief Town of this County both in Antiquity and Dignity. For it was fortify'd by the Britains; and Vortimer himself was bury'd in it. Notwithstanding the Calamities which the Danes brought upon it, it still kept up its Head; and, at the Conquest, was in a thriving condition, as we learn from Domesday. About which time, the Bishop's See was transfer'd thither from Dorchester; upon a publick Order, that no Bishops should have their Seats in obscure Villages. The Diocels was exceeding large; and notwithstanding Ely was taken out of it by Henry II. and Peterborough and Oxford by Henry VIII. it is still by much the greatest in England. The Cathedral, as it now stands, is a most stately Pile, and of excellent Workmanship; to which perfection it was brought by several Hands. 'Tis said, there was once 50 Churches in it; but now not above 18. So much has Time spoil'd it of its ancient Grandeur.

Stamford, upon the River Welland, is so call'd from the Stony Ford that was in that place. Before the Conquest, it flourish'd much; and in the time of Edward III. upon a Contest between the Northern and Southern Students in Oxford, a great number of them retir'd hither, and settl'd an University. But upon an Accommodation, they went back again, and a publick Act was pass'd, That no Oxford-man should ever profess at Stamford. In the Civil Wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, it was destroy'd with Fire and Sword, and could never after perfectly recover it self; tho' at present it contains some seven Parishes.

Boston or Botolph's Town, at the mouth of the Welland, is built on both sides that River, and join'd with a wooden Bridge. In Edward I's time, it was ransack'd and burnt down by a wicked Gang, which could never be discover'd: Only, their Ring-leader confessed the Fact, and was hang'd. But it recover'd it self; especially by the Staple of Wool being settl'd here, which very much enrich'd it. The Inhabitants at present deal mostly in Merchandise and Grazing; and with so good success, that the Town is populous and well-built, and the Market much frequented. Their Church is a beautiful Building, the high Steeple whereof is a good Guide to Mariners.

Grantham is a good Market-town; and is much talk'd of upon account of its exceeding high Steeple.

Ancient Places.

Gausfenne may be conveniently enough settl'd at Brig-casterton near Stamford, where the River Gwash or Wash crosses the High-way; which possibly may be some remain of the old Gausfenne.

Ad Pontem is plainly Pauntun, near the Head of the River Welland; which may be infer'd not only from the similitude of Names, but also from the distances and marks of Antiquity, discover'd in that place.

Crococalana, tho' it wants the Analogy of names to claim a place at Ancafter, is yet sufficiently demonstrated to belong to it, both by the distances from the Stations on each side, its situation upon the high Way, and the Coins, Vaults, &c. that have been discover'd there.

Lindum

Lindum is on all hands agreed to be Lincoln.

Things Remarkable.

About Belvoir-Castle, they find the Astroites or Star-stone, resembling little Stars with five Rays.

In Stamford they have the custom, which Littleton calls Burroughs-Englisb; whereby the youngest Sons inherit such Lands as their Fathers die possess'd of.

Between Stamford and Lincoln, they have many Spaws or Chalybiate-Springs: Those which are moit used, are Bourne and Walcot, near Folkingham.

At Wragby, 8 miles East of Lincoln, a Woman brought forth a Child with two Heads, An. 1676. which liv'd some hours.

At Salsbery, near the Sea-coast, one Mr. John Wat-son was Minister 74 years; in which time he bury'd the Inhabitants three times over, save 3 or 4 Persons. He dy'd Aug. 1693, aged 102.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

THE County of Nottingham is exceeding well water'd by the River Trent, and thole lesser ones that run into it. The West-part of it is all taken up with the spacious Forest of Shirwood.

The Towns more considerable, are { Nottingham, Southwell,
Newark,
Mansfield.

Nottingham, the chief Town of the County, is very pleasantly situated; having on one side sweet Meadows; on the other, Hills of an easie ascent. The Town is very beautiful, being adorn'd with a delicate Market-place, near Churches, and convenient private Buildings. But that which has made it most famous in all Ages, is it strong Castle; built by Peveel base Son to William the Conqueror. In the beginning of the Civil Wars, Charles I. set up his Royal Standard here in the year 1642. but a little after, it came into the Hands of the Parliament, and that War being over, it was order'd to be pull'd down. The Duke of Newcastle hath since erected a splendid Fabrick in the place, begun in the year 1674.

Southwell is famous at this day for its Collegiate Church of Prebendaries, dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Here, the Archbishops of Tork have a Palace, and three Parks.

Newark is a pretty Town lying upon the Trent; so call'd as if one should say a new Work, from the new Castle built there by Alexander Bishop of Lincoln. our modern Histories mention it pretty much upon account of its being a Garison for King Charles I. which held out to the very last.

Mansfield is the chief Town in the Forest of Sherwood, and is a plentiful and flourishing Market.

Ancient Places.

Agelocum or Sezelocum is probably at Littleburrow upon Trent, both because the old Way goes along by it; and also because within the marks of an ancient Wall in the neighbouring Field, the Country People meet with Roman Coins, which they call Swine-penies.

Things Remarkable.

Mortimer's Hole, and that Vault wherein David II. King of Scotland was kept Prisoner, are Rarities wherewith they entertain Strangers in the Castle of Nottingham.

At Workensop, they have Liquorice in great abundance.

DERBYSHIRE.

THE County of Derby, towards the South part is hardly six miles broad; but in the North, is thirty. The East and South are well till'd and fruitful enough; but the West, commonly call'd the Peak of Derby, is nothing but Rocks and Mountains: Which yet makes amends for its Barrenness, by the abundance of Lead, Iron, &c. which they dig in those parts.

The Principal Town of this Shire, is Derby, so call'd from being a shelter for Deer, which implies, that this was formerly a woody Tract. It was pretty famous in the times of the Saxons; but at the Conquest was very much impair'd: Whether by the Danish Tyranny, I know not; only thus much is certain, That the Danes made it a Harbour and Retreat in their Depredations, till they were driven out of it by the victorious Lady Ethelseda. At present, it is a handom Town and pretty large, having a reputation for admirable good ALE above its Neighbours. The Trade of the place is a sort of Retail, viz. buying Corn in order to make advantage of it by Sale to the High-land Countries.

The Peak (as was observ'd) is a craggy, mountainous Country, yet is not altogether useless; for the Hills feed great numbers of Sheep, and it affords also a mixture of Vales pleasant enough. Under Ground they meet with, 1. Lead, 2. Antimony, 3. Mill-stones, 4. the Fluor, a Stonelike Crystal.

Remarkable Things.

Buxton-wells, in the Peak of Derby, have a good reputation among the Naturalists; and are said to have a Vertue very Sovereign in many Distempers.

The Devil's Arse in Peak, is a spacious Hole, with a great many corners, like so many Apartments.

Elden-hole is remarkable for its deepness: Mr. Cotton plumb'd it to the depth of 800 fathom, but could find no bottom; at least, that he could certainly know to be so.

Near Pooles-hole, is a little Brook, consisting of both hot and cold Waters, which are unmixt, and yet so near that you may put the Finger and Thumb, one in hot and the other in cold, both at the same time.

WARWICKSHIRE.

THE County of Warwick is divided into two parts, the Feldon, and the Woodland; that on the South-side, and this on the North-side of Avon. By this division 'tis certain, that as one was a Champaign, so the other was a woody Country: The first afforded all the Pasture and Corn-grounds, and the second was of little use, besides Fuel. But the Iron-works in the Counties round, have so consum'd the Wood, that they have long since made way for the Plough; and at present, what by Marle, and other good Contrivances, all this part produces abundance of Corn: So that the Feldon is turn'd, in a great measure, into Pasturage.

The chief Towns, are

	Covenry,
	Bremicham,
	Stratford upon Avon.

Warwick, the principal Town of this Shire, tho' it seems to have been eminent even in the time of the Romans, does yet owe its rise, in a great measure to the noble Lady Ethelfleda, who rais'd it out of Athes. And indeed, we cannot wonder why it should be particularly pitch'd upon, in those warlike times for a Retreat and Sanctuary, since Nature her self seems to have made it for that purpose. The Hill on which it stands, is one entire Rock of free Stone; and the four ways leading into the Town were cut through it. The Castle is exceeding strong, and was of great consequence in times of War; but now 'tis a noble and delightful Seat. On the South of the Town, is a Prospect of a sweet, fruitful Champaign; on the North, of Groves and Parks. The two publick Ornaments, are the Country-hall and the Market-house. This was the condition of the place, till of late; when a most dreadful Fire, enforc'd by a very strong Wind, laid the best part of the Town in Ashes: But 'tis hop'd, the Contributions of the Kingdom will be so liberal, that in a few years we shall see it rise out of its Ruins with a fresh Beauty.

Covenry, so call'd from a Convent there, had formerly the honour of a Bishop's See; which, within a few years, was remov'd back to Lichfield; but upon this Condition, That the Bishop should take his Title from both places. They own Leofrick Earl of Mercia and Godiva his Wife, for their greatest Benefactors. The growth and increase of the Town seems to be owing, in a great measure, to the Manufacture of Cloathing and Caps, for which they were once very eminent; tho' now they are almost laid aside. That which they value themselves upon, is a stately Cross, built by Sir William Hollies Lord Mayor of London, for Beauty and Workmanship not to be match'd in England. The Walls (which were very strong,) were demolish'd at the Restoration, by order of King Charles II.

Bremicham, is a very populous Town, abounding with handfom Buildings: It seems to be of a late date, and to have risen chiefly by the Iron-works, which are the great Business of the place.

Stratford upon Avon is a pretty Market-town; and has a fine Stone-bridge over the Avon, consisting of 14 Arches.

Ancient Places.

Prasidium, mention'd by the Notitia, is in all probability the Town of Warwick; than which no situation can be more proper for a Garison.

Manduesfeldum must be sought for upon Watling-street, and there we meet with Manchester; which as it carries in it some Remains of the old Name, so does it shew its Antiquity by a Fort, which they call Oldbury.

Things Remarkable.

On the side of Edge-hill, is the shape of a Horse cut in the Ground; and the Trenches that form it are kept open by a Freehold in the Neighbourhood, who hold Lands by that Service.

About Shugbury, they often meet with the Astroites; which being put into Vinegar, keep themselves in motion, as appears by Experiment.

In memory of Godiva their great Patroness, the Inhabitants of Covenry have a yearly Cavilcade or Solemn Procession, with a naked Figure, representing her riding naked on Horse-back through the City. The occasion is this: Godiva (as Tradition says) redeem'd the Town from very heavy Taxes, laid upon them by her Husband Leofrick; these he would upon no Terms remit, unless she would consent to ride through the Town naked; which she did, and cover'd her Body with her long dishevel'd Hair.

WORCESTERSHIRE.

THE County of Worcester is very happy both in its Air and Soil; and is excellently water'd by the River Severn, which runs through the very midst of it. The South-part has also the advantage of the Avon, running out of Warwickshire into the Severn.

The more remarkable Towns, are

	Kedderminster,
	Evesham,
	Droitwich.

Worcester, the chief place in this County, seems to have had its original from the convenience of its situation upon the Severn. For that River being the Boundary between the Britains and Saxons, the frequent Incurfions of the former oblig'd the latter to fence and guard it with the utmost diligence. And to go yet higher; it might probably enough be one of those Garisons which the Romans built to keep in awe the Britains in those parts, and to secure themselves against Plots and Insurrections. In the year 680. it was made an Episcopall See, and the Church was fill'd with marry'd Presbyters; till Dunstan turn'd them out and plac'd Monks in their room. But those too were at last ejected by King Henry VIII. who plac'd there a Dean and Prebendaries. The City it self is large, populous and wealthy, dealing much in the Cloth-trade. 'Tis govern'd by a Mayor and six Aldermen, who are Justices of the Peace and elected out of the 24 capital Citizens.

Kedderminster, at a little distance from the Severn, is not remarkable for any Antiquity it can claim; but is, however, a handfom Town, adorn'd with a beautiful Church, and has a Market very well frequented.

Evesham, upon the River Avon, was very famous among our Fore-fathers, upon account of the Monastery built there by Egwin, about the year 700. The Town is seated upon a gentle ascent, and is near enough; receiving not only great Advantages, but the pleasure also of an open, free Prospect, from the spacious and fruitful Vale of Evesham, which produces Corn in great abundance.

Droitwich, upon the River Salwarp, has got both its Reputation and Riches, by the Brine-piss, and the purest kind of Salt which they make. They had a Charter granted them by King James I. and the Burrough is govern'd by two Bailiffs and a certain number of Burgessees.

Ancient Places.

Branwinum, call'd also Branogenium, is undoubtedly the City of Worcester, call'd by the Britains at this day Caer Wrangen.

Things Remarkable.

The Brine-piss at Droitwich afford great quantities of fine white Salt; and would yield much more, but that the Proprietors are careful, for their own Interest, not to over-stock the Markets.

The River Severn, about Holt and the neighbouring Parts, breeds prodigious numbers of River-Lampreys.

Waskebourn under Bredon-hills, with some other Villages, are entirely sever'd from the main Body of the County.

STAFFORDSHIRE.

THE County of Stafford, as to the Figure, is broad in the middle, but narrow towards each end: As to the Soil, 'tis mountainous, and not very fruitful towards the North; but in the middle and South-parts, is very fertile and pleasant.

The chief Towns } Stafford, are, } Lichfield.

Stafford, upon the River Sow, requires our mention, more upon account of its giving name to the whole Country, than any Beauty, Riches or Populoufness of its own. Nor was it very considerable, about the Conquest; For we find by Domesday, That the King had in this place only 18 Burgessees. The Barons of Stafford, owners of Stafford-Castle, were exceeding favourable to it, got it erected into a Burrough in the Reign of King John, and procur'd for it large Priviledges and Liberties.

Lichfield, upon the River Trent, is a very ancient Town, and seems to have had that name from the dead Bodies of those Christians who are said to have been put to death here, in the time of Dioclesian. Oswy King of Northumberland sett'd a Bishop's See in this place, as early as the year 606, which also afterwards had its Archbishop for some time; but that lasted not long. The situation of it is low; and the City is handfom and pretty large. Its greatest Ornaments, are, the Cathedral, the Bishop's Palace, and the Houses of the Prebendaries; which make a noble Show. 'Tis divided into two parts by a fort of Lough, which yet have communication by two Cauleys. It was first made a Corporation by King Edward VI. who granted to it Bailiffs and Burgessees.

Ancient Places.

Eocetum will best suit with the course and order of the Itinerary, if it be sett'd at Wall, about a mile South of Lichfield. For the Remains of old Walls and Buildings, plainly shew it to be a place of Antiquity; which being gain'd, the agreement of the Distances are a sufficient Argument to prefer this place before any other.

Pennocrucium should seem, at first sight, to be Penkridge, upon the River Penk; and the Distances, as well as Sound, would favour such a Conjecture well enough. But there is one Objection against it, That it lies a considerable way from the Old Road, and so cannot well be suppos'd to be one of their Stations, which seldom were remov'd from the Way. Stretton, a little lower, carries Antiquity in its very name (as much as if one should say the Street-town) suits the Distances very well, and has the advantage of lying upon the Road, from which it takes the name.

Things Remarkable.

Below the Confluence of the River Tame and the Trent, northward, there is great store of Alabaster.

The three Stones, erected Spire-wise in the Church-yard at Checcley, with the little Images cur upon two of them, upon what account soever they might be set up, are very remarkable.

SHROPSHIRE.

Shropshire (as a Frontier-Country between the Welch and English) has more Castles built in it, than any other County in England. Inasmuch that a late Author observes, That it seems to be parted from Wales with a continu'd Wall of Castles: And 'tis said by another, That no less than 32 Castles have been built within this Shire, besides the forty'd Towns. The Soil of it is fruitful, and the Country pleasant.

The chief Towns } Shrewsbury,

Shrewsbury, the chief Town of the County, tho' it cannot pretend to Roman Antiquity, did yet rise out of the Ruins of an old, neighbouring City, Uricondum; and was of very good note among the Saxons. So that, about the Conquest, we find 252 Citizens reckon'd

Things Remarkable.

The County is remarkable for making excellent Cheefe, which it sends thorow the whole Kingdom.

In the Heaths and Bottoms, through which the Wever passes in the South-part of the Shire; they dig up Trees under ground; a thing indeed not peculiar to the County, but remarkable enough.

In this County, they make abundance of Salt.

HEREFORDSHIRE.

THE County of Hereford is water'd by the pleasant Rivers Wye, Lug and Munow, which empty themselves in one Chanel into the Severn. Being a sort of Frontier in the Wars between the English and Welsh, it has had greater numbers of Forts and Castles, than most other Counties. Tho' it abounds with good Corn and Pasture-grounds, yet is it most eminent at this day for its vast quantities of Fruit, of which they make so much Cyder, as does not only supply their own Families, but furnish London and other parts of England. Their Red-streak (so call'd from the Apple) is highly valu'd in all parts.

The chief Town

Hereford, so call'd as if one should say The Ford of the Army, is encompass'd with Rivers on all sides, but to the East. 'Tis Daughter to a place of Antiquity at about three miles distance, call'd by the Romans Ariconium, at this day Kenchester. But our Hereford seems not to have risen before the Saxon Hep-tarchy was at its height; nor to owe its Growth to any other cause than the Martyrdom of Ethelbert King of the East-Angles, villanously murder'd by Quindreda Wife to King Offa, while he courted her own Daughter. Whereupon, he was taken into the Catalogue of Martyrs, and had a Church built to his memory in this place; which was not only soon after erected into a Bishop's See, but had signal Respects: shew'd it by the West-Saxon and Mercian Kings. The City is pretty large: Before the Civil Wars, it had six Churches; but now it has only four.

Ancient Places.

Blestium, by the Distances, can be no other than Old Fôari (upon the Munow) call'd by the Britains Castle-bean, a name implying Strength and Antiquity.

Ariconium must be Kenchester, near Hereford; which asserts its claim to Antiquity by the old Walls, Chequer-works, Bricks, Coins, &c. observ'd and discover'd about it.

Things Remarkable.

A Well, below Richard's Castle, is full of small Fish-bones or Frog-bones; and notwithstanding it be sometimes empty'd, a fresh Supply always succeeds: Whereupon, 'tis call'd Bone-Well.

Marcley-hill, near the Confluence of Lug and Wye, was in the year 1575. remov'd by an Earthquake to a higher place.

In a common Meadow call'd the Wergins, between Sutton and Hereford, two large Stones set on end were remov'd to about twelvelfore spaces distance, no Body knew how: This happen'd about the year, 1652.

YORKSHIRE.

THE County of York is, by much; the largest in all England, being divided into three Branches; each of which is as large, or indeed larger than any ordinary County. The Divisions are term'd Ridings; a name corrupted from the old Saxon Thriking, which consisted of several Hundreds or Wapentakes. They are, according to the several Quarters, call'd West-Riding, East-Riding and North-Riding, to which we may add Richmondshire. We will consider each of these under their several Heads; but the West-Riding being the most flourishing part, and abounding most with beautiful Towns, requires the first place.

WEST-RIDING.

West-Riding is for some time bounded by the River Ouse, by Lancashire, and the Southern-limits of the County in general.

The more considerable Towns, are

{	York,	}	Halifax,
	Leeds,		Wakefield,
	Rippon,		Pouffraet.

YORK, the Metropolis of this County, and an Archiepiscopal See, stands upon the River Ure or Ouse, which runs quite through it from North to South. At what time precisely it was built, we have no evidence: Thus much is certain, That it was the Residence of the Sixth Legion call'd Victrix, that Severus had his Court here, that Constantius the Emperor dy'd in this place, and was immediately succeeded by his Son Constantine the Great, who receiv'd the last Breath of his dying Father. We need no further Evidence of its Glory under the Romans. Upon the settlement of the Saxons, it was erected into a Metropolitan See by Pope Honorius; and has continu'd so ever since. It suffer'd very much in the Danish Ravages; but it recover'd it self, when the Norman Government was establish'd, and the Disturbances of that Revolution were blown over. The City is large, pleasant and adorn'd with beautiful Buildings both publick and private. The Bridge over the Foss or Ditch is so throng'd with Buildings, that you would rake it for one continu'd Street. The publick Structures of greatest note, are, 1. The Minster, or Cathedral Church, built in the Reign of Edward I. 'Tis a most stately Pile, and particularly remarkable for the fine Carvings in the Quire. 2. The Chapier-house, for its small Pillars and the contrivance of the whole Fabric, is one of the neatest Buildings in England.

Leeds, upon the River Aire, is of good Antiquity; and the very name implies that it has been all along a populous, thriving Town; for 'tis deriv'd from the Saxon Leod; gens, populus. It has grown strangely by the advantage of the Cloth Trade especially; and was by King Charles II. honour'd with a Mayor, 12 Aldermen and 24 Assistants.

Rippon, situated between the Ore and the Skell, was of good note even in the Infancy of the English Church, upon account of the Monastery built there by Wilfrid Archbishop of York. The Town has grown mightily by the Wollen Manufacture, which they have now pretty much laid aside. The Church is a neat and stately Fabrick, with three Spire-steeple; and was built by Contributions.

Halifax, upon the River Calder, is suppos'd to be nam'd from a certain holy Virgin, who had her Head cut off by a lustful Villain, with whose impure Desires she would not, by any means, comply. Her Head was hung up on a Tree; and was reputed so sacred, as to be frequently visited in Pilgrimage. Whereupon, the little Village of Horton came by degrees to be a large and noted Town, and took its name from that which had rais'd its Reputation, viz. the sacred Hair of the Virgin's Head: For so much Halifax implies. Notwithstanding the Soil hereabouts is very barren, the Inhabitants by their Industry in the Cloth Trade are grown exceeding rich. The Parish is vastly large, having in it twelve Chapels under the Mother-Church of Halifax, two whereof are Parochial.

Wakefield, upon the River Calder, is a large Town, neatly built, has a well-frequented Market, and has grown mainly by the Clothing-Trade.

Pontfract, so call'd from a broken Bridge, is a Town well-built and admirably situated. It had a most noble large Castle, seated upon a high Hill, which is now demolish'd.

Danum, mention'd by Anonimus and the Notitia, is undoubtedly Doncaster; call'd by Ninius Caer-Daun.

Cambodunn belongs to the little Village Almond-bury, six miles from Halifax; as appears both by the Distances on each hand, and the Ruins of an old Roman Work, with a triple Fortification; still plainly visible.

Legcolium cannot be more conveniently seated than at Castleford, near the Confluence of Calder and Aire; where they meet with great numbers of Coins, which they call Saxons Heads.

Olicana appears to be Ikeley, from the affinity of the two names, the remains of Antiquity found about it, and its situation in respect of York.

Calcaria, tho' commonly seated at Tadcaster, and that upon very plausible Reasons, ought nevertheless to be remov'd to its Neighbour New-ton-kime, where the ancient High-road runs along, crossing the River at S. Helensford, and where they meet with great store of Roman Coins; and other marks of Antiquity.

Isurium is sufficiently asserted to Aldburo near Burrow-bridge, both by its nearness to the River Ore, the great number of Coins they dig up, and its due distance from the City of York, answering the computation of Anonimus.

Eboracum is by all agreed to be the City of York, the eminence whereof in the time of the Romans, we have already taken notice of.

Halifax-law is eminent: By it, they behead any one that's found stealing within such a Liberty, without staying for a legal and ordinary Process.

S. Wilfrid's Needle at Rippon was mighty famous. In the Church, they had a little close passage into a Vault, whereby they pretended to try the Chastity of Women: If they were Chaste, they pass'd without ease; if not, they were stop'd and holden, without any visible Impediment.

The Devil's Bolts, near Burrow-bridge, are three huge Stones, set on end in the form of Pyramids: which have their name from a foolish fancy of the Vulgar, that they were pitch'd there by the Devil; but are by the Learned (according to different Conjectures) look'd upon to be either Monuments of some Victory, or British Deities.

In the Levels or Mitches, they dig up great quantities of Err and some Osk.

EAST-RIDING.

The Bounds of the East-Riding are thus: The North and West-sides are limited by the River Derwent; the South, by the mouth of Humber; and the North, by the German Ocean. In some parts 'tis pretty fruitful, tho' in every respect it falls much short of the West-Riding; the middle of it being nothing but Mountains, which they call York-wolds.

The chief Towns Beverley, Hull.

Beverley began to be a Town of note, after Johnde Beverley Archbishop of York, a Person of great Piety, rear'd hither, and ended his days in it: For King Athelstan having a singular Veneration for him, for his sake endow'd the Town with several Immunities; and others of our Kings have been exceeding kind to it upon the same account. So that now (notwithstanding its nearness to Hull, which one would think should very much prejudice it) it is above a mile in length, and is adorn'd with two beautiful Churches. The Minster is a very fair Structure. The chief Trade of the place, is Malt, Oatmeal, and Tanned Leather.

Hull, or Kingston upon Hull, is so call'd from the River upon which it stands, and King Edward I. its Founder. By the convenience of their Harbour, the advantage of their Island-Fish-Trade, and the particular Favours of their great Patron Michael de la Pole, the Town is so grown both in Wealth, Buildings, Populoufness and Commerce, that it infinitely exceeds all its Neighbours. They have two Churches; an Exchange for Merchants, and a Trinity-house for the Relief of Seamen and their Wives; besides other Buildings, which are very ornamental and of great use in the management of their Trade, and the administration of their Government. As to the Strength of the place, they have a strong Citadel begun in the year 1681. But their situation is the best Bulwark against the Enemy: For by advantage of the Level all about, they can let in the Flood, and lay all under-water for five miles round.

Derwent must be seated somewhere upon the River Derwent: Auldby is the likeliest place, both upon account of its name, which implies an old Dwelling; and also by reason of the Remains of Antiquity still visible about it.

Abus can be no other Estuary than the Humber, which is a very spacious one, and receives a great many considerable Rivers.

Delgovin is probably Wigton, upon the little River Foulness; Dege in British signifying a Seat or Image of a Heathen God, and it appearing that not far from hence there stood an old Temple.

Ocellum Promontorium, is Spurnhead; where Kelbssey seems to be a Remain of the old Ocellum.

Prætorium discovers it self by the present name Pa-rrington, and by its distance from Delgovitia.

Sinus Salutaris is that Bay near Bridlington; in the turn whereof is Sureby, which exactly answers the name, as 'tis translated into Latin, from the Greek Ευλίσφυρ.

Things Remarkable.

The Vipsys or Gipsys (for so they are call'd at present) about Elaborough, are a sort of little Springs which jet out of the Ground, and spout up Water to a great heighth. They never come, but after great Rains, and lasting wet Weather. See Camden's Britannia, English, pag. 748.

NORTH-RIDING.

The North-Riding is (as it were) the Frontier of the other two; extending in a narrow Tract from East to West, for sixty miles together, and bounded on one side with the River Derwent and the Ouse, on the other by the Teer.

The chief Towns

Gibburgh, four miles from the mouth of the Tees, formerly famous for the Abbey there; which, by the Ruins, seems to have been equal to some of the best Cathedrals in England. Its Eminence appears, in that it was the common Burial-place for the Nobility in these parts. The pleasant Situation, the goodness of the Air, the neatness of the Inhabitants, and other Advantages, make the place very agreeable and delightful.

Ancient Places.

Dunus Sinus discovers it self by a little Village seated upon it and call'd Dunestey, hard by Whitby.

Things Remarkable.

About Whitby, they find the Serpent-stones; which the credulous, common People imagine to be Serpents, turn'd into Stones by the Prayers of S. Hilda.

Upon the same Shore, they find the Black-Amber or Gate, which grows within the chink or cliff of a Rock.

The Seales (or Sea-reales, call'd also Sea-eaves) sleep upon the Rocks near Huncliff in great Droyes, and there Sun themselves.

RICHMOND SHIRE.

This part of the County lying to the North-west, is almost all Rocks and Mountains, which yet in some places afford good Pasture; and under-ground, great store of Lead, Coal, &c.

The chief Town is

Richmond, upon the River Swale, so call'd as if one should say a rich Mount; which name it had given it by Alan the first Earl, immediately after the Conquest; who fortify'd it with Walls and a very strong Castle. It has three Gates; and taking in the Suburbs is pretty large and populous; but within the Walls it is but narrow.

Ancient Places.

Bracchium is to be fought for at the confluence of Baine and Ure; where, at a place call'd Bugh, are the Remains of an old Fortification; and where an Inscription was discover'd making express mention of this name.

Catractionium (so call'd from a Cataract in the River Swale) does plainly discover it self in our present Cattarick.

Lawarre, by the course of the ancient High-way and the Distances in Antoninus, must be about Bowes, on the edge of Stannemore; which has had its Antiquity attested by ancient Inscriptions.

Things Remarkable.

Upon the Confines of Lancashire, where the Mountains are rough, wild and steep, there are little Rivulets hurry along so deep in the Ground, that it creates an Horror in one, to look down to them:
Those they call Hell-becks, upon account of their gastriness and depth.

Sir Christopher Medcalf, a Gentleman of these parts, when Sheriff of the County, is said to have been attended with 300 Horle, all of his own Family and Name, and all in the same Habit, when he receiv'd the Judges, and conducted them to York.

D U R H A M.

Durham (commonly call'd the Bishoprick of Durham), from the absolute Power which the Bishops hereof us'd to exercise in this County) is nam'd by our ancient Writers, the Patrimony of S. Cuthbert. This Saint, who liv'd here in the Infancy of the Saxon- Church, was so much respected by our Kings and Nobility for his exemplary Virtue and Piety, that they thought they could never sufficiently express their respect to his Memory, nor heap Lands, Privileges and Immunities enough upon his darling Church. Insomuch, that at length, it was made a County-Palatine; and accordingly the Bishops have their Royalties, and are both Spiritual and Temporal Lords.

The more considerable Towns, Durham, are Bernard-castle, Siocton.

Durham, in Saxon Dur-holm, from its high situation, owes its original to the miseries and misfortunes of the Monks of Lindisfarne, in the time of the Danes. For being by that barbarous People disturb'd in their own Seats, they were forced to seek Protection for themselves, and a shelter for the Relicks of S.

Cuthbert, in the most convenient place they should meet with: Here they fix'd; and when that dreadful Storm was blown over, and Religion reviv'd, they flourish'd in great Pomp and Reputation. In William the Conqueror's time the place was made a Seat of War, by those who could not bear the violation of their ancient Rights and Liberties. The Town is defended by the River, on all sides but the North; and is wall'd round: The Cathedral is a noble Pile of Building, and the Church exceeding rich.

Bernard-castle, upon the River Tees, was so call'd from Bernard Baliol (Grandfather to John Baliol King of Scots), its Founder. 'Tis a good Town; and is eminent in those Northern parts, for the best Wheat-bread.

Stockton, about three miles below Faram (a considerable Market-town) about thirty years ago, had no Houses

Houfes but of Clay; and thatch'd. Now, 'tis well built, is a Corporation, and drives a great Trade in Lead and Butter.

Ancient Places.

Tuesis, or Téaxis in Ptolomy, is plainly the River Tees.

Vedra, mention'd by Ptolomy, does likewise belong to this County, and is undoubtedly the River Wore, call'd by Bede, Wimus.

Vinocium in Antoninus, in Ptolomy, Binovium, seems by the very Name to settle it self at Binschester, near the River Wore; where appear large Ruins of Walls: and Coins, with other marks of Antiquity, are dug up.

Condercum seems to be Chester on the Street, near the River Wore; especially, if the Saxon name of the place be Cöncester: All the Objection is, That the Notitia settles this Station ad Lineam Valli, so that Chester on the Street is perhaps too far remov'd from the Wall to lay claim to this piece of Antiquity. An Altar found at Benwall in Northumberland seems to give it to that place; against which there is not the same Objection.

Things remarkable.

The Pits call'd Hell-kettles near Darlington, are much admir'd both by Travellers and the Inhabitants. There are three of them, full of Water to the brim; possibly by a communication with the Tees only: the Water in them is said to be of a different kind from that in the River. They look much like old-wrought Coal-pits that are drown'd.

LANCASHIRE.

THE County of Lancaster, call'd by the northern People Lancaster, where it is level yields good store of Barley and Wheat; and in the Valleys, Oats. The Mosses, tho' as to their produce they are of no real value, are yet of considerable advantage both by the Fuel above ground, and the old Trees underground. Its greatest Glory is, that 'tis a County-Palatine, as well as its neighbour Cheeshire.

The more considerable Lancaster, Manchester, Wiggin, Leverpoole.

Lancaster, (so call'd from the River Lone upon which it stands) gives name to the whole County, and was; accordingly, the most flourishing Town in it. But now 'tis much out-grown by Manchester, having no advantage of Trade, or any other Employment besides that of Agriculture; to which indeed the nature and situation of the place may seem in some measure to have determin'd the Inhabitants. For the Grounds about it are very fit for Cultivation, and 'tis seated in an open free Trade.

Manchester, at the Confluence of the Irk and Irwell, is the most populous and thriving Town in this County. The Inhabitants may be estimat'd from the number of Communicants; who in the Town and Parish round it made no less than 20000, sixty years ago; since which time the Inhabitants have increas'd proportionably to their incredible growth in Trade. They are most famous for the Fustian-Manufacture, commonly known by the name of Manchester-Cottons; tho' they deal also in many other Manufactures, all which are call'd by one general name, Manchester-Wares. They have more publick Buildings than are commonly to be met with in our County-towns. 1. The Collegiate Church is a very stately Edifice, the Quire whereof is particularly remarkable for its curious carv'd Work. 2. The College (consisting of a Warden, four Fellows, two Chaplains, four Singing-men, and four Choristers) is a noble Foundation. 3. The Hospital for the maintenance of sixty poor Boys, is much of the same Government and Constitution with that of Christ-Church in London. 4. The Library is furnish'd already with Books, to almost the number of 4000, and will daily increas'd by an annual Salary of 176 l. per Ann. sett'd upon it for that purpose, and for the maintenance of a Librarian. 5. The School has three Masters, who have plentiful Salaries.

Wiggin, near the rise of the River Dugles, is a handsome, plentiful Town, having the honour of a Mayor and Burgessees.

Leverpoole (near the entrance of the River Mersey into the Sea) tho' it can boast of no great Antiquity, is yet a place both of Name and Wealth. The first it derives from the convenience of a passage from hence over into Ireland, which of late years has been much us'd by reason of the Commotions in that Kingdom. The second is owing to its Trade with the West-Indies, and the Manufactures round it: By the advantage whereof the Buildings and Inhabitants are more than doubly increas'd, and the Customs augmented eight or ten-fold, within these 28 years last past. Of late, they have built a Town-house, plac'd upon Pillars; and under it, the Exchange.

Ancient Places.

Mancunium, is Manchester, which may seem to have taken part of its name from the Roman one.

Bellisama must be an Estuary hereabouts: The latter Syllable of the name of Ribell would induce us to pitch upon the mouth of that River before any other.

Ribodunum (if we may change Ptolomy's Rigodunum, into that) need not be sought in any other place but Riblechester, which produces a variety of Roman Remains; and however inconsiderable at present, gave rise to Preston, a handsome, large and populous Town.

Bremetonacum cannot probably be more conveniently seated than at Overburrow (at the confluence of Lac and Lone) which, tho' it has no remains of the old name, does yet carry Antiquity in the latter part of its present one, and has the Tradition of the Inhabitants on its side (who tell you of a spacious City that was formerly there) and the Evidence of Roman Coins, Inscriptions, &c.

Longovicium is plainly Lancaster, call'd by the Inhabitants and the northern part, Lopcaster; besides which Analogy of Names, they meet now and then with Coins of the Roman Emperors

Things Remarkable.

Lancashire-Oxen are famous throughout England, for huge, bulky Bodies and large Horns.

Wimwick, near the River Mersey, is reckon'd one of the best Parsonages in the Kingdom.

At Hey in this County, we see such a Plantation of Fir-trees (by the industry and contrivance of its present Owner Thomas Brocherton, Esq;) as perhaps can hardly be met with elsewhere.

Lathom-spas in this County, tho' not much frequented (by reason of the want of suitable Accommodation) has done considerable Cures.

Burning-well, near Wiggin, if a Candle be put to it, will presently take Fire and burn like Brandy; and in a calm quiet Season will continue for a whole day together, even to that degree, that by the heat of it they boil Eggs; Meat, &c.

WESTMORLAND.

THE County of Westmorland is so call'd from its westerly situation; lying West of that great ridge of Mountains which divides these Northern Counties. The out-skirts of it on most sides are hilly and mountainous, which feed great Flocks of Sheep, and have a mixture of fruitful Vales; but the heart of it is an open, champain Country, which affords good store of Corn and Wood.

Apleby claims the first place, both upon account of its Antiquity; and also because 'tis the County-town, where the yearly Assizes are held. Otherwise, 'tis neither rich nor beautiful; only the situation indeed makes it very agreeable, having the advantage of pleasant Fields round it, and being wass'd by the River Eden.

Kendal, call'd also Kirby Kendal, has its name from the River Can, and implies as much as a Dale or Valley upon that River. This is much beyond Apleby, whether we respect the Trade, Buildings, Number or Wealth of the Inhabitants. It has two good Streets, which cross each other, and is enrich'd by the Industry of the Towns-men and the Wollen Manufacture, for which they are very eminent, and drive a Trade with it throughout England.

Amboglana, if we follow the Analogy of Names, cannot be plac'd more conveniently than at Ambleside, upon Windermere-water; which may be done with so much the less scruple, because it shews the Ruins of an old City, and other marks of Antiquity.

Ancient Places.

Ituna is undoubtedly the noble River of Eden, which marches through this County, towards the Sea.

Verteræ must be Brough under Stanemore, for several Reasons: The Name imports Antiquity; then it stands upon a Roman High-way; and lastly, the Distances from Levatæ and Broocnacum agree very exactly.

Aballaba is so visible in our present Apleby, and so well answers that situation, that there is no room for dispute.

Gallatum is probably Woolp-castle, near Kirby-Thore, where are the Ruins of an old Town, and very considerable Remains of Antiquity.

Setantiomum Lacus may well enough be Windermere, upon the edge of Lancashire; one of the largest Lakes in the Kingdom.

Things Remarkable.

King Arthur's round Table, in the North of this County, is much talk'd of by the Inhabitants and others: But we need go no farther for its original than the Ages wherein Tilting was in vogue; this being a round Entrenchment with a plain piece of Ground in the middle, and very convenient for that purpose.

Gold-sike, in the Parish of Orton, is a little Spring which continually casts up small thin pieces, of a substance shining and resembling Gold.

In Windermere-water there is great store of the Fish call'd Charræ, which is not to be met withal in the South, and only in very few places of the North. They are bak'd in Pots, and so sent up to London, and other parts, where they are an acceptable Present.

CUMBERLAND.

THE County of Cumberland is the farthest of our English Counties to the North-west, and borders upon Scotland. Whether it fetch the name from the old Britains, call'd Cambri and Cumbrî; or, (as a modern Author imagins) from our Cumber, the Shire being encumber'd with Lakes and Mountains, and made very difficult to Travellers, I shall not determine. The former Conjecture has this advantage, that some of the Britains posted themselves for a long time, in these parts, when the Saxon Conqueror, drove them to the out-skirts of the Island, and made them seek for shelter among Hills and Mountains. The remains of British Names hereabouts concur, to the establishment of the same Opinion.

Carlisle is happy in its situation, standing between the Rivers of Eden, Peteril and the Caude; which, as they make it very agreeable, and furnish it with great plenty of Fish, so do they add considerably to its Strength; a circumstance that in these bordering Countries was very valuable. For before the union of the two Crowns, the Scots were continually making Incurions upon the Frontiers; which put the Government under a necessity of building Castles, Towers and fortify'd Places, for the defence of it self, and of the Subject. The City is wall'd round, has a Castle, with a Citadel built by King Henry VIII. Its situation upon the Wall, with the marks of Antiquity dug up about it, put it beyond dispute, that it was a place of some note among the Romans. The Danes utterly destroy'd it, and it lay in desolation for about two hundred years; till William Rufus took it into his protection, built here a Castle, and planted it with a new Colony of Husbandmen, to till the Ground round it. It has had of late Years of considerable note; but owes its greatest Honour to the Bishop's See, establish'd in it by King Henry I. The Cathedral stands almost in the middle of the City; but the Bishop's Seat is some few miles distant from the City, at Ros-Castle.

Penrith is a Market-town upon the South-border of the County, of good note in these parts. The Town is well enough built, and the Inhabitants are pretty wealthy; having the advantage of standing almost in the middle between two Countries. In the Town they have a handsome Church; and at a little distance, an old Castle.

Morbium seems to have left its name in the present Moresby, upon the Western Coast; where they find great remains of Roman Antiquity. Arberia also may seem to point out its old situation by the name of a Town at the head of the River Elen; now call'd Ferby.

Volantium, if it is not allow'd a place at Elenburrow, at the mouth of the River Ehne; must remain unsettl'd till some more lucky discovery fix it in its true place. 'Tis certain, here are all the signs of Antiquity that can be wish'd; great store of Altars, Statues, Inscriptions, &c. and (which is of most moment) one of the second sort, with this Writing on the back-side, Volantii vivus.

Moricambi, signifying in British a crooked Sea, cannot be settl'd at any winding, more agreeable to the name, than that near Holme Cultram, upon this Coast.

Castra Exploratorum, if we respect the Distances on each hand, will fall in well enough with the present Old Carlisle, at the head of the little River Wize; a place (by reason of its high situation) fit for the discovery of an Enemy; and where they find such plenty of Roman Remains, as put it beyond all dispute that it was of considerable importance under that People.

Blatium-Bulgium discovers its ancient situation by the present name Bulness; where are Tracks of Streets and old pieces of Wall.

Petriane seems to be Old-Penrith (near the Town of that name) where a broken Altar was dug up, implying that the Ala Petriane quarter'd there.

Congavata is possibly the place we now call Ros-Castle, the Seat of the Bishop of Carlisle. Lugwallum is agreed upon by all to be the present Carlisle, and seems to owe the latter part of the name to its situation upon the Pills-wall.

Asica must be sought for somewhere upon the River Esk. Netberby bids fairest for it, proving its claim by the vast Ruins of an old City; how inconsiderable however it may be at present.

Bremennium should seem to be Bramton in Gilliland.

Things Remarkable.

Pearls are found in great abundance in the little River Ir; being call'd Muscle-Pearls. Some Gentlemen have lately procur'd a Patent for the Pearl-fishing in this River.

The Font at Bridekirk, with a fair Runick Inscription, is a Curiosity that has been long taken notice of by Antiquaries, but must be clear'd and illustrated by that learned Gentleman Mr. Nicolson, in his Antiquities of the Kingdom of Northumberland.

The Circle of Stones call'd Long-Megg and her Daughters (at Little Salkeld) have had several Conjectures spent upon them, but will be fully illustrated by the same worthy Gentleman.

The Pills-wall, so much talk'd of in our Histories, and among the Common People, begins at Bulness upon the Irish Sea, so runs by Carlisle; and afterwards passing the Rivers of Cambe, Irthing and Poltroff, enters Northumberland. It was built in the latter end of the Romans, to prevent the Incursions of the Scots and Picts; who (upon calling over the Roman Forces to assist in Foreign Wars) took all opportunities of making Excursions into the Territories of the poor Britains. At convenient Distances they had Towers and Garisons; that the Enemy should not surprize them, and that they might be in a condition to get together upon the first Motion and Alarm.

NORTHMBERLAND.

Northumberland was formerly us'd in a much greater latitude and extent, than at present it is; for it denoted all those Counties, which (according to the import and meaning of the Word) laid beyond, or on the North-side of the River Humber. Before the Union of the two Kingdoms, this County was almost continually a Seat of War, and the Inhabitants were daily exercised with the Skirmishes of the Neighbouring Scots. This, as it made them a warlike, stout sort of People, so did it fill the Shire with little Forts and Castles, which private Men built for their own defence. In those times they were rude and unpollish'd, coming pretty near the manners and behaviour of the bordering Scots; but since, they have taken to the English modes of Living, and are as decent and regular as any of their Neighbours.

The more considerable Towns are, { Newcastle, Berwick, Hexam.

Newcastle is seated conveniently upon the River Tine, which makes a secure Harbour, and carries up Vessels of Burthen. 'Tis of good Antiquity, tho' the Name imports it to be only of a modern date; but that it got, when Robert, Son to William the Conqueror, built a New Castle at it. It is surrounded with good strong Walls, which were begun by a wealthy Citizen, in the Reign of Edward I. The growth of it is owing to the Trade it drives upon the Coasts of Germany, and the plenty of Sea-coal with which it furnishes London, and a good part of England; especially, so much as lies upon that Coast. By Henry VI, it was made a County Incorporate; and since that time, has improv'd so considerably in Wealth and Trade, that 'tis now the great Emporium of the North-part of England, and of a good share of Scotland. S. Nicholas is the Mother-Church; besides which, there are six other Churches or Chapels.

Berwick, seated at the mouth of the River Tweede, is the farthest Town in this Kingdom; and standing between England and Scotland, has ever born the first Assaults

Affaults, upon the breaking out of War between the two Nations. By which means it was a sort of continual Garison, one while in the Hands of the Englishs, and then again in the possession of the Scots; till it was reduc'd to the obedience of Edward IV. and partly by the Union, partly by its great Strength, has ever since continu'd in subjection to our Kings. About a hundred years ago, it was reputed the strongest place in the whole Kingdom; but as the apprehensions of Danger from that Quarter have for many years ceas'd, and so put a stop to the Improvements which would otherwise have been made upon it; so Enemies from other Parts have oblig'd us to spend more Pains and Industry upon Hull, Portsmouth, Plymouth, &c. which at present much out-do it in Strength and Fortifications.

Hexam was a place of mighty note among the Saxons; and is much talk'd of in our Histories. For here, Ælfred sett'd a Bishop's See; which might have continu'd longer (to the honour and interest of the place) if the Danes had not given them such violent Disturbances, as put the Monks under a necessity of removing; and seeing out for new Quarters. The Church, which stands still entire, (except the West-end) is a stately Fabrick.

Ancient Places.

Magna, mention'd by the Notitia, is probably Chester in the Wall; not only because it stands upon the Priests-wall and takes its name from thence, but also because it has shewn us some Altars and Inscriptions; as Evidences of its Antiquity.

Hunnum, tho' it has left no Remains of its name, in any place in these parts, yet the Wing which resid'd at it, call'd by the Notitia, Sabiniana, may seem to have given some ground to the present Seavensale, upon the Wall.

Gallana discovers it self in the present Walwick; which probably had this denomination from the old name.

Habitancium should seem to be Rifingham upon the River Rbead, where are many Remains of Antiquity, and an Inscription was dug up which made express mention of the old name.

Cilurnum may very conveniently be plac'd at Cilcester near the Wall; which may seem to owe the first Syllable of its name to it.

Axelodunum is so manifest in our present Hexam; that the latter seems only to be a contraction of the former; especially, if we consider the various meltings and mouldings of this name under the Saxons. Add to this, that the termination Dunum does very well suit with the high situation of this place.

Procolitia seems to be our Prudhoe-castle, upon the River Tine.

Pons Ælii can be no other, than that which at this day we call Pont-Elend, upon the River Pont.

Borcovicus does still preserve the Remains of its name in Borwick, which seems to be a Compound of a Roman Initial and a Saxon Termination.

Vindolana, where the fourth Cohort of the Galli kept Garison, may very well be sett'd at Old-Winchester.

Gabryfenium is Garebead, a sort of Suburbs to Newcastle, where the Wall pass'd; or, as Antoninus terms it, Vindobala; as the Notitia; or, as Antoninus terms it, Vindombra; seems to imply as much as the Wall's end; and then we need not be at a loss for its situation, since we meet with a Village in these parts of the very same name.

Glanoventa (signifying as much as the bank of the River Went) must be plac'd somewhere upon the River call'd at this day Wentsbeck; tho' the Distances seem to hir well enough with Caer-worran, near which there is a place still call'd Glen-well; Alaunus, mention'd by Ptolomy, discovers it self plainly in the present name Alne; Tumocellum is plainly Tinmouth; call'd formerly Tummaester, from the old Roman name.

Segedunum needs no clearer Guide to its situation than the affinity it has with our present Seggill, upon the Sea-coast near Tinmouth. Alone may fairly enough be sett'd at Old-town; not only because that place carries Antiquity in the name, but also from its situation upon the River Alone; and the proper Distances from the Stations on each Hand.

Corstopium, is evidently Corbridge; and probably the same with Ptolomy's Curia Octadunorum.

Things Remarkable.

At Chillingham-castle, tis said a live Toad was found in the middle of a Stone at the sawing of it. One part of the Stone is now a Chimney-piece in the Castle, with a hollow in the middle; and the other also has the like mark, and is put to the same use at Horron-castle.

The Improvement in Tillage at Rock by John Salkeld, Esq. and in Gardening and Fruiterie at Fal-ladon, by Samuel Salkeld, Gentleman; are Fineries hardly to be met with in these Parts; The latter is the more remarkable, because of an Opinion which has prevail'd in the World, That the coldness of the Climate in these Northern parts, will not allow Fruit to come to its proper perfection and ripeness.

Not far from Newcastle, there are some Coal-pits on fire, which have burnt several years: The Flames are visible enough by night, and the burning may be trac'd on the day time by Brimstone, which lies on the Surface of the Ground.

W A L E S.

W A L E S.

THAT the Inhabitants of Wales are the Off-spring of the ancient Britains, who were possess'd of the greatest part of this Island before the coming over of the Saxons; we have shewn in the general Account of the several Inhabitants. The Severn was their Boundary on this side; for a long time; till the prevailing power of the Saxons, and of the Kings of England after the Conquest, oblig'd them to retire further Westward, and to seek shelter among the Mountains. Norwithstanding which, they still enjoy'd their own Laws, liv'd under their own Princes, and maintain'd their own Liberties against all the Designs and Attempts of the English. Till at last, in the Year 1282. Llewellen ap Gruffyth, Prince of Wales, lost both his Life and Principality to King Edward I. who yet did not think himself safe, notwithstanding his Victory seem'd entire and absolute. For he observ'd the Humour of the Welch to be bitterly set against any Foreign Prince or Governor, and was very hard put to it to settle himself in the secure possession of his new Conquests, till he enter'd upon this lucky Expedition. His Queen was then big with Child; so he sent for her immediately to come to Cannarvon, and when she was deliver'd of a Son, he summon'd a Meeting of the Welch Lords, and propos'd them the young Child (a Native of their own) for their Lord and Governour. To him they readily swore Obedience; and since that time, the eldest Sons of the King of England have commonly been created Princes of Wales.

As to the present condition of this Principality; it is divided into South-Wales and North-Wales; from the situation of the several Branches. The Counties of Hereford and Monmouth (which formerly belong'd to it) are now lopp'd off, and reckon'd among those of England. The former of these we have already survey'd: The latter (as being disjointed in a manner by the Estuary of Severn) we shall referre to its proper place, in the Survey of these parts. Passing therefore by Herefordshire, the next County to the North-west, is RADNORSHIRE.

THE County of Radnor, on the East and South-parts, is well cultivated and fruitful enough: The rest of it, tho' well water'd; is so very rugged and uneven, that the Plow can have no Employment there.

The chief Town is

Radnor, from whence the whole County takes its name. Old Radnor (call'd from its high situation Pencraig) was laid in Ashes, by Rhys ap Gruffyth in the Reign of King John. The new Town is well-built, for those parts; and was formerly defended with Walls and a Castle. It might have been much more considerable, had it escap'd the Fury of the Rebellious Owen Glyndwr, who burnt it down. But a more immediate cause of its decay, seems to be the Encouragement that was afforded to its Neighbour Prestean (about three miles off) by Martin Lord Bishop of S. Davids; by whose favour it grew up to a considerable Market, and must by consequence draw off the Trade and resort from Radnor.

The ancient Place in this County is Magi, mention'd by Antoninus; which possibly we may soonest find about the place we have been just now describing. I mean, Old Radnor, call'd by the Britains Maesved ben; for the middle-Age Writers call the Inhabitants of those parts Magestra, as much as if one should say the Seat of the Magi; and the Distances on both sides will hit well enough.

The Thing most remarkable, is Offa's-dike, a mighty Work of it self, and much talkt of by our Historians. The name, it has from the Contriver of it, King Offa, who had it cast up as a Boundary between the English and Welch; and a Protection for the former against the Invasions of the latter. It runs through Herefordshire; so over a part of Shropshire into Montgomeryshire; then again into Shropshire; and so through Denbighshire into Flinthshire; and ends a little below Holywell, where that Water empties it self into the Dee.

BRECKNOCKSHIRE.

THE County of Brecknock, on the South of Radnorshire, is of great extent, but very mountainous; tho' the pleasant and fruitful Vales (whereof they have a good number) make amends for this unsightly appearance.

The chief Town is

Brecknock, upon the River Usk; which as it gives name to the whole County, so is it situated almost in the middle of it. The Roman Coins, which they discover hereabouts, are a Testimony, that it has been of some note among that People. I know not whether the Town began to flourish when Bernard Newmarch (who conquer'd this Country) built a stately Castle at it; which was afterwards repair'd by the Breages and Boluns. 'Tis certain, King Henry VIII. added much both to the honour and advantage of the place, when he constituted here a Collegiate Church of fourteen Prebendaries.

There are no Ancient Places that can probably be fix'd in this County; nor any Remarkables which properly fall under our Design.

MONMOUTHSHIRE.

THE County of Monmouth, among other Advantages is abundantly supply'd with Water; being bounded (as it were) on all sides with Rivers, and parted in the middle by the noble River of Usk. The East part abounds with Pastures and Woods; the Western parts are a little Mountainous, but yet fruitful enough.

Monmouth (situated between the Rivers Mynyw and Uzhe) is the chief Town of this County, and has been a place of note ever since the Conquest. For the Castle flourish'd in the Time of the Conqueror, and seems to have been of great account in the Civil Wars, which happ'd afterwards in this Kingdom. Inasmuch, that the Town may seem in some measure to owe its growth to it; King Henry III. granting it large Privileges, after he had depriv'd John, Baron of Monmouth of his Inheritance, either for espousing himself the Interest of the Barons, or because his Heirs had clos'd with the Earl of Bretagne. It glories in the Birth of two Persons, very much talk'd of in our Histories; one for his martial Achievements, the other for his Learning and Knowledge in Antiquities. For here King Henry V. the Glory of England and Terror of France, had his first Breath; and here also was born the noted Jeffery (call'd from hence de Monmouth) Author of the famous British History. The latter I am the rather inclin'd to reckon an Ornament to the place of his Nativity, because the Britains seem to value themselves and their Nation upon the Original he has given them, and are inclin'd to give more Credit to his Relations, than their Neighbours are willing to allow them.

Chepstow, near the mouth of the River Uzhe, is of a pure Saxon original; which also intimates that it was a place of Trade and Commerce when that name was given it. The old Venta Silurum is about four miles from it; and some affirm, That it arose out of the Ruins of that ancient City: How truly, I know not. 'Tis at present, a Town of good note, secur'd by Walls of a considerable compass.

Ancient Places.

Venta Silurum, was the chief City of this People, and a large one it was for those Times, the Ruins shewing about a mile in compass. As the Remains of Antiquity point out the place, so is the memory of it preserv'd in the present name of Caer-went, not far from Chepstow.

Gobannium is seated at the Confluence of the River Uzsk and Gavenni; from which Confluence 'tis at this day call'd Aber-Gavenni.

Isca is plainly the River Usk; and the Station call'd by Antoninus Isca and Legio secunda is undoubtedly Caer Lheion, call'd also by the Britains, Caer Lheion ar wysk, intimating as much as, The City of the Legion upon the River Usk; from the Legio secunda Augusti which quarter'd there.

Burrium is plac'd by Antoninus 12 miles from Gobannium: 'Tis call'd at this day Brynbiga for Birenbegi (where the River Bryddin falls into the Usk) which name seems to retain something of the more ancient Denomination.

The Things most Remarkable in this County, are

The Chequer'd Pavements, which were discover'd about the ancient Venta Silurum or Caer-went in the year 1689. Upon taking them up, the Cement was dissolv'd; so that nothing but the cubical Stones of which they were compos'd, do now remain. The Stones whereof these Pavements are made, are of several Colours; and by the Artifice of the Workman are form'd into several Shapes of Men, Beasts, Cups, &c. or whatever else he pleas'd.

GLAMORGANSHIRE.

GLAMORGANSHIRE is by some suppos'd to take that name from a certain Prince call'd Morgan; which is a Conjecture probable enough, considering how common the name is in this Country. But if we respect the Situation of the County, we must rather fetch it from its relation to the Sea, or the Estuary of Severn, upon which it is stretch'd out towards the South; for Mor in their Language signifies the Sea.

are,

Llandaff is seated in a bottom upon the River Taf, from which and the Church there it takes the name: For Lhan in British signifies a Church. From this it derives its greatest Ornament and Reputation; being erected into a Bishop's See as early as the suppression of the Pelagian Heresie by Germanus and Lupus, the two Gallick Bishops.

Caerdiff, considering it lies nearer the mouth of the same River, has greater advantage by the Harbour; and is a pretty neat Town.

Ancient Places.

Ratofribius is a corruption of the British Traeth Tav, which signifying the Sandy Frith of the River Tav, we need not give our selves any further trouble in enquiring after the position of this ancient Place.

Bovium is Buerton, three miles from Cowbridge, a Market-Town.

Nidum also points its situation by the present name. Nedh, a Town of good note.

Leucarum is Lozbor.

The Thing most Remarkable in this County, is Caerphilly-castle, the noblest Ruins of ancient Architecture that we have in this whole Island; being larger than any Castle in England, except only Windsor. This seems to have been the Bellavum Silurum; which being turn'd into British, is Caer-Vyl, and that must be express'd like Caer-Vyl, or Caer-Vyli.

CAERMARTHENSHIRE.

THE County of Caermarthen, in British Kaer-Vyrdin, bears good store of Corn, and abounds pretty much with Cattel: Besides which Advantage of the Soil, it yields in several places good plenty of Corn.

The chief Place is Caermarthen, seated pleasantly upon the River Towy, among Woods and Meadows, whither Ships of small Burden are carry'd up. But the Sea has been a little unkind to it; having well-nigh stopp'd up the mouth of the River with a ridge of Sand. This Town has the honour of being the Birth-place of the famous Merlin, the British Prophet, so much talk'd of in ancient Story.

Ancient Places.

Tobius is manifestly the River Towy, which crosses this County from North to South, and empties it self into the Ocean a little below Kidweli.

Maridunum is plainly Caermarthen, just now describ'd; especially, if we take the British name of the place, Caer-mardkin.

PENBROKESHIRE.

THE County of Penbroke (encompass'd with the Sea, except on the North and East-sides) is fertile enough in Corn; which is improv'd by the plenty of Marle and other fattening Materials they make use of, to enrich the Ground. They are likewise well stock'd with Cattel, and have good store of Coal for Fuel:

The chief Towns { Penbroke, } { Haverford-west, } are, { S. David's, } { Tenbigh.

Penbroke (translated by Giraldus, The Cape, or Sea-Promontory) is seated in the Eastern-bay of Milford-haven. Arnulph de Montgomery built a Castle here in the time of Henry I. At present, 'tis a Corporation, and receives great Advantages from the Sea.

S. David's (seated in the utmost Promontory to the Westward) has its name from Dewi or David, a very religious Bishop, who translated the Archiepiscopal See from Caer-Leon to this place. This Honour it enjoy'd for a long time; till the Plague raging in those parts, the Dignity was translated to Dol in Little Britain, and never restor'd. Its nearness to the Sea has expos'd it very much to Pyrates; from whose barbarous Cruelties it has been a great Sufferer. So that, at present, 'tis an inconsiderable City; shewing no Buildings of note, besides the Cathedral, the Bishop's Palace, and the Houses belonging to the several Members of the Church.

Haverford-west, is a Town of good account and resort; being handsomly built and well peopl'd. The unevenness of the Ground upon which it stands is a great Enemy to the Beauty and Uniformity of the Streets. 'Tis however a Corporation, and a County of it self.

Tenbigh, on the South-coast, is a handsome Town and well fortify'd with strong Walls. 'Tis much noted for its plenty of Fish, and is accordingly call'd in British Dinbech y Pysgod: It is also a Corporation.

The ancient Place on this Coast, is Octopitavum Promontorium, which is that Neck of Land, where S. David's stands, call'd in English S. David's Land.

Things Remarkable.

Milford-haven, for largeness and security, is perhaps out-done by no Harbour in Europe. For it has 16 Creeks, 5 Bays, and 13 Roads.

In that little Tract, lying beyond Milford-haven, the Flemings were settl'd in the Reign of Henry I. Whose Posterity to this day are manifestly distinguish'd from their Neighbour-Welch, in Language and Customs, in both which they came so near the English, that the Tract it self is call'd Little England beyond Wales.

CARDIGANSHIRE.

THE County of Cardigan, on the West and South-sides, is an even champain Country; but on the North and East is taken up with a continu'd ridge of Mountains, which yet afford good Pasture for Cattel, and have in the Vallies underneath several large Lakes.

The chief Towns { Cardigan, } are, { Aber-ystwyth.

Cardigan (seated near the mouth of the River Teivi), and therefore call'd by the Britains Aber-Teivi) is the chief Town in this County, from whence the whole is denominat'd. It was fortify'd by Gilbert, Son of Richard Clare, but being afterwards treason-ably surrender'd, was laid waste by Rhys ap Gryffid.

Aber-ystwyth is seated at the mouth of the River Ystyth; from which position it has the name. The same Gilbert Clare who fortify'd Cardigan, did also wall this Town; which by Mr. Camden is call'd the most populous Town in the whole County. Whether the condition of it be chang'd since his time, I know not.

Ancient Places.

Tuerobius, mention'd by Ptolemy, can be no other than the River Teivi; the old name seeming to have been moulded from the British Dur Teivi, which is as much as The Water of Teivi.

to the South-west) which would tempt one to imagine that Langanum, as some of Ptolemy's Copies have it, is the true Reading.

Segontium is the Mother of the present Caernarvon, and seems to have first taken its name from the River Seiont, which runs that way into the Sea.

Conovius, is undoubtedly the River Conwy; as Conovium (which had that name from the River) is Aber-Conwy.

Dicium is suppos'd to be the ancient City Diganwy, which took that name from the River Conwy; but was confum'd by Lightning many Ages since.

Things Remarkable

Snowdon-hills are the highest ridge of that range of Mountains which takes up the inner parts of this County. The name it has from Snow, which you commonly see here about the latter end of June, but not the year round, as some Authors have affirm'd.

Pen-maen-mawr, is a perpendicular Rock, through which the Road lies, not without great difficulty and terror to Travellers. For on one side, you would think the Rocks ready to crush you; on the other the Sea and the Precipice down to it, are so frightful and dangerous withal, that one false Step endangers the life.

A N G L E S E Y.

THE Isle of Anglesey is separated from the Continent of Britain by the narrow Frith of Meneu, being about 24 miles in breadth, and in length some few more. By the Ancients it was call'd Mona, the Seat of the Druids; and was first attempted by Suctonius Paulinus, but conquer'd by Julius Agricola; as we learn at large from Tacitus. Many Ages after, the English conquer'd it; whereupon it was call'd Anglesey, i. e. the Isle of the English, or the English Island.

The chief Town in it is Beaumaris, built on the East-side; which (among other Towns in these Parts) owns King Edward I. for its Founder. It is grown into a place of good Note and Wealth.

D E N B I G H S H I R E.

THE County of Denbigh, according to the several Parts, has a different Soil: In the West 'tis somewhat barren; in the middle, an exceeding fruitful Vale; and in the East, not quite so fertile; tho' much better towards the River Dee.

The chief Town is Denbigh, which is remov'd from the place of its first Foundation. For it was seated upon a steep Rock; from whence the Inhabitants (either because the declivity of the place was inconvenient, or else for want of a due supply of Water) began in after-Ages to remove to the bottom of the Hill; where a handsome large Town is sprung up by degrees.

The ancient Town in this County, is Leoni Castrum (possibly from the Legio Vicesima Vindobona) call'd, as is suppos'd at this day, by the more modern name of Holt, upon the River Dee.

F L I N T S H I R E.

Flintshire is so call'd from Flint-Castle, which was begun by Henry II. and finish'd by Edward I. The Form of the County is oblong, and but small. It consists of a mixture of gentle Hills and Plains, which produce Corn in great abundance.

The chief Town is

S. Asaph (at the confluence of the Cluid and Elwy) so call'd from the Patron of the place, a holy and devout Person. It owes its reputation to Religion; having neither Neatness nor Wealth to recommend it. For about the year 560. Kentigern Bishop of Glasgow settl'd here a Bishop's See, and a Monastery consisting of 663 Monks. The Bishop of the Diocese has under his Jurisdiction, about 128 Parishes.

The ancient Place in this County, is Variis, which Mt. Camden has fixt in the Confines of Flintshire and Denbighshire, as a place call'd to this day Bod-Vari.

Things Remarkable

Holy-well, near Basingwerk, derives its Sanctity from the Memory of S. Winifrid, a Christian Virgin: A fabulous Story, which Dr. Powel thinks is owing to the Forgery of the Monks of Basingwerk, who would probably magnifie the Vertues of it for their own advantage. A little Brook runs out of the Well with such a violent Course, as to be able, immediately almost, to turn a Mill.

In the Parish of Mold, upon the sinking new Coal-pits, they have met with Leaves of Plants so exactly delineated in a sort of black Slat, that 'tis almost impossible for any Artift to represent them so completely, unless he take the Impression from the Life in some fine Paste or Clay. The Figure and Descriptions of them, are exhibited at large in the new Edition of Camden's Britannia.

The ISLE of MAN.

Between Britain and Ireland, there is stretch'd out a considerable Island from North to South, about 30 Italian Miles in length; but, where widest, not above 15 in breadth. The several ancient Writers have given it several names: By Cæsar 'tis call'd Mona; by Ptolemy, Menocæ; by Pliny, Monabia: And the same variety appears in such of our modern Authors, as make mention of it. It was first inhabited by the Britains, and then by the Scots. Many years after, the Norwegians got possession of it, and held it for a long time: Till at last, after several Revolutions, it fell into the Hands of the English about the latter end of Edward I. or the beginning of Edward II. and has ever since continu'd under their Jurisdiction. It has had several Lords; such generally, as had the greatest Interest in our Princes: Till the Grant hethof, together with the Patronage of the Bishoprick, was made to Sir John Stanley and his Heirs by King Henry IV. in which Family it has ever since remain'd.

The Soil is very fruitful, and produces such store of Barly, Wheat, Rye and Oats, as does not only furnish the necessary uses of the Island, but likewise gives leave for the Exportation of good quantities. According to the distinction of North and South it is different: In the first, 'tis healthy and gravelly; in the second, they have good Meadow and Pasture-Ground. The Air is very wholesome (the Plague having never been known to be in the Island) so that Fourcore is a common Age there. The People are call'd Mankmen, and their Language Manks. The common People live in little Huts, and are very abstemious in their Diet. The Gentry are but few; those they have, are very civil and courteous, and live in Houses of the English fashion.

The Execution of Justice is manag'd with all the speed and easiness imaginable. 'Tis true, their Sheedings-Courts (the same with our Terms) meet but twice a year; but they have a Court of Chancery (wherein the Governor is sole Judge) which he may hold once every Week, if there be occasion. Every Man pleads his own Cause, without Lawyers, Proctors or Attornies; and they are dispatch'd (whether they be Matters Spiritual or Temporal) without the Expence of one Farthing.

The great Officers of the Island, are 1. the Governor, who under the Lord, has the entire Command of the Island. 2. The two Deensfers, who are their Judges in Matters Civil and Criminal: 3. The Comp- troller, who calls the Receiver General to an account. And, 4. The Receiver General, who receives all the Rents (due to the Lord) from the inferior Collectors.

Their way of Trading, is pretty peculiar. They chuse four Merchants to buy all their foreign Commodities, for the use of the whole Island; and these are sworn to the true and faithful discharge of their Trust. Whatsoever Bargain they make with the Vessels that come in, the Island is bound to stand to; and the Inhabitants, in exchange, bring in their Native Commodities, Wool, Hides, Tallow, &c. in lieu whereof they are to have a proportionable share of the imported Wares. They had no Money before the late Civil Wars; when several of the Loyal Party flying thither, supply'd the Island so abundantly, that the Tenant was able to pay his Rent in Coin, which he us'd to do in Sheep, Hogs, &c.

As to the Ecclesiastical State: The Bishoprick is under the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of York. The Bishop has no voice in the House of Lords; but in the Lower House of Convocation is allow'd to sit uppermost. The Clergy are generally Natives, and have a very good Allowance. The Parishes are seventeen; every Church whereof bears the Name of some Saint or other, to whom it was formerly dedicated.

Castle-town, so call'd from a Castle and Garrison there, is seated on the North-side of the Island; and is call'd otherwise, Ruffin. Here, within a little Isle, was erected a Bishop's See, which had formerly jurisdiction over the Hebrides, but is now limited to the Isle of Man. This is the Metropolis of the whole Island.

Douglas has the best Harbour, and is most frequented by the foreign Traders, who bring over their Bay-Salt, and carry back Leather, Wool, and Salt-beef. The Houses both here and at Castle-town, are very uniform; and (which is of no great standing in this Island) three Stories high: They are cover'd also with Tiles instead of Thatch.

Peel is eminent for its Castle, being the second Fortrefs in the whole Island, and the common Prison for all Offenders. 'Tis strongly fortify'd both by the Sea, and also by Walls and Rampires.

SCOT-

SCOTLAND.

HAVING survey'd the Kingdom of England and Principality of Wales, we come next to Scotland; which, as it is a Branch of the same Continent, so it is united under the same Head and Governour, and makes up a part of the Title of King of Great Britain. Concerning the ancient Inhabitants and some other Heads relating to this Kingdom, we have treated in the General Account of England; and shall not here repeat them. Let it be sufficient to observe, That the two Kingdoms were united into one Monarchy in the Person of King James, the first of England, and sixth of Scotland:

By

By which the English have been freed ever since from those Incursions and Plunderings, wherewith that Nation was us'd continually to harass and torment them.

All that part of the Continent which lies beyond the Counties of Cumberland and Northumberland, belongs to Scotland, with great numbers of Islands on all the other sides, which are bounded by the Ocean. On the West it hath the Irish Sea, on the North the Deucaledonian, and on the East the German Ocean. 'Tis in length about 250 miles, and 150 miles broad. In the most Southerly part 'tis 54 deg. 54. min. in Latitude, and in Longitude 15 deg. 40 min. but in the most Northerly, 'tis 58 deg. 32 (or 30 min.) in Latitude, and 17 deg. 50 min. in Longitude. The longest day is about 18 hours and 2 minutes, and the shortest night 5 hours and 45 minutes.

The SOIL, take it in general, comes far short of England in fruitfulness, being much more fit for Pasture than Corn: Not, but in some of the In-land Country, they have good store of Grain; wherewith they Trade to Spain, Holland, and Norway. The Skirts of the Country abound with Timber; which is of a vast bigness, especially Fir-trees.

The AIR is very temperate, and not half so cold as might be imagin'd in so Northerly a Clime. Which (as in England) is owing to the warm Vapours and Breezes that come continually off the Sea; and likewise purify the Air, and keep it in such constant Motion, as generally frees them from all Epidemick Distempers. The nature of the Country is hilly and mountainous; the Plains being but very few, and those too but small. They have abundance of Cows and Sheep, tho' they are but little; for which defect, the fine taste of their Flesh makes amends.

Learning flourishes among them in 4 Universities, S. Andrews, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Edenburrow, wherein are Professors of most of the Liberal Arts, and those maintain'd with competent Salaries.

Christianity seems to have been planted here very early; especially, if those words of Tertullian, Britannorum inaccessa Romanis loca, Christo vero subdita, may be allowed to hint to these parts, as in all probability they do.

SCOTLAND, according to difference of Soil, Customs, Humours; as also of the Fancies and Imaginations of Men, has several Divisions.

1. The most eminent of them, is into the High-landers and Low-landers: The first are rude, barbarous and unciviliz'd, using the Irish Language; the second are civil and courteous, and use the Language and Customs of the English.

2. Into the Scots and Picts; this is the more ancient Division: The Scots had all the Western-Isles and the Skirts of the Country Westward; the Picts were possess'd of all that lay upon the German Ocean.

3. 'Tis divided by the Mons Grampius or Grantz-bain-hills, which run from West to East.

4. The Rivers divide it into three Peninsulas; one to the South, one in the middle, and one to the North. For the Rivers on each side run so far into the Country, as to be hinderd from meeting by a small Isthmus only; and if that were remov'd, it would make the main Land of Scotland, three Islands.

5. The Romans branch'd it into several People, according to the following Scheme.

Gadeni,	{ Teifdale; Merch, Lauden;	Caledonia,	Fife, Strathern, Argile, Cantire, Lorn, Braidalbin, Perth-shire; Angus, Mernis, Marr, Buquhan, Murray, Lochabre, Roiffe, Sutherland, Cathnes, Strath-avern.
Scigove,	{ Annandale; Nidifdale,
Novantes,	{ Galloway, Carrick, Cunningham, Glotta,
Damii,	{ Cluydefdale, Lennox, Sterling.

The Roman Wall.

6. 'Tis divided into so many Counties, which are again sub-divided into Sherifdoms, Stewarties, and Baileries, for the more easie Administration of Civil Government.

The Counties or Shires, with their particular Extent; are as follows:

The Shire of	}	Contains	Edenburgh	Midlothian.

King James VI. For the more convenient Regulation of Church-affairs, they had 2 Archbishopricks; under which were contain'd 12 Bishopricks, according to the following Scheme.

The Archbishoprick of S. Andrews, under which were,
 Edenburgh, Brechen, Dunkel, Ross, Aberdeen, Cathness, Murray, Orkney, Dumblane,
 The Archbishoprick of Glasgow, under which were,
 Galloway, Lismore, The Isles.

The Bounds and Extent of the several Diocesses, were as follows:

Diocess of	S. Andrews	Contain'd	Part of Perthshire, and part of Angus and Mernes.
	Glasgow		The Shires of Dunbarton, Ranfrew, Air, Lanerick, part of the Shires of Roxburgh, Dumfries, Peebles & Selkirk.
	Edinburgh		The Shires of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, part of Straveling-shire, Berwickshire, the Constabularie of Hadington and Bailerie of Lauderdale.

	Dumblane		Part of Perth and Straveling-shires.
	Ross		The Shire of Tain, Cromertie, and the greatest part of Inverness-shire.
	Cathness		Cathness and Sutherland.
	Orkney		All the northern Isles of Orkney and Zetland.
	Galloway		The Shire of Wigton, the Stewartie of Kircurbright, the Regality of Glentaurie, and part of Dumfries-shire.
Argile	Argile, Lorn, Kintyre, and Lohaber, with some of the West Isles.
The Isles	Most of the West Isles.

Their publick COURTS for the administration of Justice, are,

1. The Parliament, which is the supreme Court, and has the same Authority as ours in England. They have 32 Persons (elected out of the several Orders) whom they call Lords of the Articles; and who seem to be much the same thing, as to their Office, with our Committees in England, appointed by the whole Houle to consider of Matters under Debate: Only theirs are fix'd and certain in all Matters, and are chosen at the beginning of their Meeting; ours are appointed pro re nata, upon any emergent Occasion; and when that's over, have nothing to do in other Matters, without a particular appointment.

2. The College of Justice, or the Session; wherein the particular Officers appointed for that purpose (consisting of the Clergy and Laity) administer Justice (according to the Rules of Equity, and not the Rigour of the Law) from the 1st of November to the 15th of March, and from Trinity-Sunday to the 1st of August, every day except Sunday.

3. The Sheriff's Court in every County; where the Sheriff or his Deputy decides Controversies among the Inhabitants, relating to matters of an inferior concernment.

4. The Commissariat, wherein are pleaded Actions relating to Wills, Tythes, and other Ecclesiastical Affairs.

5. In Criminal Cases, the King's Chief Justice hold his Courts generally at Edenburrow; besides which, Justices are sometimes appointed by the King's Commission for the Examination of particular Causes.

The several Orders or Degrees, are,

1. The King; to whom the Constitution allows much the same Power and Authority, as ours here in England.

2. The Prince of Scotland, the King's eldest Son: The rest of the King's Children are stil'd simply Princes.

3. Dukes (who were brought into Scotland about the year 400.) Marquisses, Earls, Vicounts and Barons, as we have in England.

4. Their Knights also are the same; only, proclaim'd and created with much more Solemnity.

5. Lairds, which were anciently such only as held Lands of the King in Capite.

6. Gentlemen. 7. Citizens, Merchants, &c.
 The R E R I G I O N of the Kingdom by Law establish'd, is that which is contain'd in the Confession of Faith authoriz'd in the first Parliament of

Under

Under this Constitution, they had

1. A Session in every Parish. (consisting of the worthiest Persons therein) which took cognizance of some Scandals.

2. A Presbytery, wherein Cases too intricate for the Session were try'd; and particularly such as enter'd into Orders; were solemnly examin'd. This consisted of a number of Ministers, between twelve and twenty.

3. The Provincial Synod, who met twice every year.

4. The Convocation; which was the supreme. And now Presbytery is introduc'd, they retain the same Courts and Governments; with some difference only in the exercise and manner of Proceeding.

Having thus far given a short Account of the Soil and Air, the Degrees, Divisions, and Government of Scotland, we are, next, to take a particular Survey of this Kingdom. Which might have been done most conveniently by running through the several Counties, and observing the same method as we have done in England; but that the Towns here are very thin in many places, and some Counties afford none of any considerable note. I know not how to give a view of the Kingdom more distinct, and more agreeable to our Design, than by drawing up a List of the most eminent Cities and Towns, and of the Ancient Places, in an Alphabetical Order.

The most considerable Places are,	Aberdeen,	Dundee,	Hamilton,
	Airc,	Dunfries,	Inverness,
	Alloa,	Dunkel,	Linlithgow,
	S. Andrews,	Duns,	Passay,
	Bamfe,	Edenborough,	Peebles,
	Berchin,	Glasgow,	Perth,
	Canony,	Greenock,	Selkirk,
	Dumblane,

ABERDEEN, in the County of Marr, has its name from the River Done, upon the mouth whereof it stands; Aber in British signifying a mouth, or place where a River empties it self. There are 2 Towns of the name, the Old and New. Old Aberdeen is the Seat of the Bishop, having a large and stately Cathedral, commonly call'd St. Machar's. 'Tis, besides, adorn'd with King's College (so call'd from King James IV. who assum'd the Patronage) wherein is a Principal, with the several Professors of Divinity, Civil Law, Physick, Philosophy, and the Languages. In the Church before-mention'd, there is a most stately Monument erected to the memory of Bishop Elphinston, a great Benefactor to the place. Hard by the Church, they have a Library well furnish'd with good Books.

About a mile from hence is New Aberdeen, built upon 3 Hills; but the greatest part of it upon the highest, to which there is an easie ascent from the Plain. 'Tis, by much, the most considerable place in the North of Scotland; whether we respect the Largeness, Trade or Beauty of the Buildings, both publick and private. Of the first sort, the chief is its College, built by George Keith Earl Marshal, in the year, 1693. and from him call'd the Marshallian Academy. But since his time, the City of Aberdeen hath adorn'd and beautify'd it with several additional Buildings. They have a Principal, four Professors of Philosophy, one of Divinity, and one of Mathematicks. Add to this, the School, which has a Head-master and 3 Uthers; the Musick-School, for the more polite Education of the Gentry; S. Nicholas-Church, built of free Stone, and cover'd with Lead; an Amphitheatre, and three Hospitals. Nor must we forget the Library, which was founded at the charge of the City, and is supply'd with excellent Books from the Benefactions of several learned Persons; and also well furnish'd with Mathematical Instruments. The private Buildings are very beautiful, commonly four Stories high or more; behind which stand their Gardens and Orchards; so that the City at a distance looks like a Wood.

Aire, in Kyle, upon a River of the same name, is the chief Market-Town in the West of Scotland. 'Tis situated in a sandy Plain; yet is furnish'd with pleasant fertile Fields, which afford a Prospect very diverting. It has the honour of being the Sheriff's Seat and contains within its Jurisdiction thirty two miles. The more ancient name was S. John's-Town; but that is now quite laid aside.

Alloa, standing in the Shire of Clackmannan, is a pretty little Town, and very pleasant. It has a Haven, tho' but small. The greatest Ornament it boasts of is the Castle, the chief Residence of the Earl of Marr. This (with its Neighbour Clackmannan seated upon a rising Ground, and adorn'd with a stately Castle) receives great Profit from the adjoining Coal-pits; which, together with the Salt, furnish out a foreign Trade.

S. ANDREWS, above Fife-ness in the Peninsula of Fife, is seated conveniently for a delicate Prospect into the Sea. It seems, the ancient name of it, was Regimund; that is, Regulus's Mount: The present name was given it in honour to S. Andrew, (whose Bones are said to have been brought out of Peloponnesus to this place, by Regulus a Monk, in the year, 368.) It is adorn'd with an Archbishop's See, who is still'd Primate of All Scotland; with the New Church, wherein is a stately Monument of Archbishop Sharp; and with 3 Colleges. 1. S. Saviour, which has a Library well furnish'd. 2. S. Leonard's, wherein are several Professors, and a good Library. 3. New College, which, besides its two Professors of Divinity, has a Professor of Mathematicks, with an Observatory, and Mathematical Instruments.

Bamfe is the chief Burgh in the Shire of Bamfe, and is a Burgh-royal, wherein the Sheriff holds his Courts. 'Tis seated in a very fertile Tract, and receives great advantages from the Salmon-fishing.

Berchin, upon the River Esk, lies in the Shire of Angus, and is a Market-Town, considerable for Oxen, Sheep, Horses, and Salmon. The Ruins of the Bishop's Palace and the Canon's Houses, are an evidence of its ancient magnificence. Here is a stately Bridge over the River Esk.

Chanony (at Ness-mouth in Ross) has its name from a rich College of Canons, that were there. They had a large Cathedral Church, part whereof still remains. Its greatest Ornament, at present, is a magnificent House of the Earl of Seaforth, who has considerable Revenues in this Country.

Dumblane (seated upon the Bank of the River Allan on the Stewartry of Strathern) is a pleasant Town, but not large. It still shews the Ruins of the Bishop's and Canon's Houses; and part of the Church (a Fabrick of admirable Workmanship) remains entire. Their great Benefactor was Robert Leighton Bishop of the place; a Person of strict Life and Conversation. At his death, he left all his Books to the use of the Diocess of Dumblane, with a certain Sum of Money for the erecting of a Library; and his Sister's Son sett'd an annual Salary upon the Library-Keeper.

Dundee (so call'd probably from its Situation upon the River Tay) stands in the Shire of Angus, in a pleasant Plain; and is beautify'd with very good Buildings, both publick and private. They have 2 Churches; and the Constable hereof, by a peculiar Privilege, is Standard-bearer to the Kings of Scotland. The Inhabitants are generally rich, by the great Profits which arise from the Harbour; and by their Trade with Strangers, which is very considerable. There is a large Hospital, wherein such as fall to decay by Misfortunes and Losses, are provided for.

Dunfrise, in the Tract call'd Nidifdale, lies near the mouth of Nerb, between two Hills; and is a very flourishing Town. The Streets are large, and the Church and Castle stately. The Tide flows up to the Town, and makes a Harbour; and for the convenience of Trade, they have an Exchange for the Merchants. Here is a fine Bridge over the River, of nine Arches.

Dunkel, at the Foot of the Grainstain-hills in the Shire of Pertb, is conveniently situated in the midst of pleasant Woods, and upon the River Tay. It is the chief Market-Town of the High-lands; to the Ornaments whereof, the Buildings erected of late by the Marquels of Arbol, have added very considerably. It still shews the Ruins of a Cathedral Church.

Duns (in Mers or March, towards the German Ocean) stands upon a rising Ground in the middle of the Shire. 'Tis a Burrow and Barony, and has every Wednesday a throng Market of Sheep, Horses and Cows. But that which makes it most talk'd of, is, its being urg'd for the Birth-place of Duns Scotus, by such as are willing to believe him a Scotchman.

EDENBURGH, the Metropolis of this Kingdom, built upon an ascent; the Buildings gradually descending from the top to the bottom of the Hill. The original of it seems to have been the erecting of a Fort or Castle (than which no place could be more convenient for the purpose) under the protection whereof, the Neighbours might be possibly encourag'd to fix. At present, 'tis a large beautiful City, a full Scotch-mile in length, and half a one in breadth. Two Streets run along the whole length of the Town; the High-street is built, of late, of hewn Stone; since an Act of the Town-Council pass'd. whereby it is not lawful to build any more of Timber either in City or Suburbs, upon account of the many dreadful Fires that have hapn'd. The City has six Gates, the principal whereof lays to the East, and is adorn'd with Towers on both sides. They are supply'd with Water, from one of the best Springs in the Kingdom; which is about 3 miles distant, and is brought in Leaden-Pipes to the several Fountains. This convenience was projected and carried on at the Expence of the City, about 20 Years ago. Their principal Publick Buildings, are

1. The Palace (whereof his Grace the Duke of Hamilton is hereditary Keeper) bounded on all sides with lovely Gardens. It has four Courts: The Outer, which is as big as all the rest, has four principal Entries: The Inner has Piazza's all round, of hewn Stone. The Long Gallery is very entertaining; shewing the Pictures of all the Kings of Scotland, from Fergus I.

2. The College of King James VI. founded in the Year 1580. is a large Building, divided into three Courts. They have their publick Schools, and a common Hall; with a well-stor'd Library, under which is the King's Printing-house. The Professors and Students are very well accommodated with Lodgings.

3. The Parliament-house stands in a large Court, which is enclos'd on one side with the Exchangers, and with a Set of very stately Buildings. There is a House (perhaps the highest in the World) which mounts seven Stories above the Parliament-Court; for from the bottom to the top, one Stair-case ascends 14 Stories high.

4. The Cathedral, dedicated to S. Giles, is built of hewn Stone, and is so large, as to be divided into 3 Churches, each whereof has its Parish.

5. Heriot's Hospital, so call'd from its Founder George Heriot, Jeweller to King James VI. is more like a Palace than an Hospital. All round the Houses are pleasant Gardens, adorn'd with large Walks and Greens. Here, the Children of the poorer Citizens have their Education, 'till they be fit for the publick Schools and Colleges.

Glasgow is situated upon the East-bank of the River Clyde; and is, next Edenburgh, the principal City in the Kingdom; whether we consider the Buildings, Trade or Wealth of the Inhabitants. It is, in a manner, four-square; the four principal Streets crossing each other in the very middle. The principal Publick Buildings, are

1. The Cathedral (in the upper part of it) the Pillars and Towers whereof are said to shew a very exact and curious Piece of Architecture. 'Tis, indeed, two Churches; one whereof stands over the other.

2. The Archbishop's Castle, surrounded with a Wall of hewn Stone.

3. The College, parted by an exceeding high Wall from the rest of the Town.

4. The Tolbooth (a stately Building of hewn Stone) which stands at the crossing of the Streets.

Greenock, in the Barony of Ranfrew, is a well-built Town, the most eminent upon all that Coast. 'Tis the chief Seat of the Herring-fishing; and the Royal Company of Fishers have built a publick House at it, for the better convenience of Trade.

Hamilton (in Clydsdale) is the Residence of the Dutchels of Hamilton, and the great Ornament of that part of the Kingdom. The Court is on all sides adorn'd with very noble Buildings, has a magnificent Avenue, and a Frontispiece of excellent Workmanship. The Park is 6 or 7 miles round, through which the Brook Aven has its course.

Innerness, the Head-town of the Sheriffdom of that name, is the Sheriff's Seat, where he keeps his Court. The convenience of its Situation upon the River Ness, gives it a free and easie Commerce with the Neighbours. It has a Castle very pleasantly seated upon a Hill, which affords a noble Prospect into the Fields and Town. They have lately built a Bridge over the Ness of hewn Stone, and of 7 Arches.

Linlithgow, in the Shire of Linlithgow, is a Royal Burrough, which glories chiefly in its Palace, built almost in the form of an Amphitheatre. In the midst of the Court there is a Fountain, adorn'd with several curious Statues, the Water whereof rises to a good height. The Town is well built, and has a stately Town House, with a Harbour at Blacknesse.

Paslay, in the Barony of Ranfrew, is the most considerable in these parts for ancient grandeur and magnificence. It was formerly a famous Monastery, founded by Alexander II. High-steward of Scotland. The Abbey and Church, with fine Gardens and Orchards, are all enclos'd with a Stone-Wall, about a mile in Circuit.

Peebles, the Head-burgh of the Shire of that name, has a pleasant Situation, standing in a Plain on the side of the River. It has a noble Church, and a stately Bridge of 5 Arches over the Tweed. Pertb, Perth, in the Shire of that name, is call'd S. John's Town, a modern name, taken from a Church founded there in honour of S. John. Mr. Camden tells us, 'tis so divided, that almost every Street is inhabited by a several Trade apart. 'Tis pleasantly seated between two Greens, and the River Tay at every Tide, brings up Commodities from the Sea, in light Vessels.

Selkirk, in Teisdale, is a Burgh-royal, has the advantage of a weekly Market and several Fairs, is the head Burgh of the Shire, and the Seat of the Sheriff and Commissary-Courts.

Ancient Places in the Kingdom of SCOTLAND.

Aluna seems to have some Remarks preserv'd in the River Alon. in the Sheriffdom of Sterling.

Abravanus (for Aber-ruanus) is the mouth of the River in Galloway.

Alcium seems to be the present Dundee, in the Shire of Angus.

Banatia, mention'd by Ptolemy, is very probably Bean-Castle (in Murray) which may be inferr'd both from the analogy of Names, and the discovery of an engrav'd marble Vessel, full of Roman Coins, in the year, 1460.

Berubium, a Promontory, is thought to be Urdhead, in Strathaven.

Bodotria (for so Tacitus calls it, but Ptolemy Boderia) is agreed on all hands to be Edenburrow-fish.

Caledonia is all the part of Britain, which lies Northward beyond Graham's-dike, or the Wall built by Antoninus Pius.

Cantæ, were a People who inhabited the Parts about Ross.

Carini, mention'd by Ptolemy, (and sometimes written Carini) seems by the found and other circumstances, to be Catbness.

Castra Alata is agreed upon by all to be Edenburrow. Celnius, a River, now Killian in Ross, upon the Eastern Ocean.

Ceronæ, a People who dwelt anciently where now Affershire lies.

Corbantorigin seems to be Caer-Lawcock, anciently a very strong Fort in Niddisdale.

Cordæ, a Town that anciently stood upon the Lake Loch-cure, out of which the River Nid arises.

Coria Damniorum seems to be Camelot; where are some remains of an ancient City. It stands between the Duni Pacis and the Temple of the God Terminus, in the Sheriffdom of Sterling.

Cornubii, a People who dwelt in the utmost Coast of all Britain towards the North, where now is Strath-aven. 'Tis probable they had that name from the River Ruben, which Ptolemy places likewise in the these parts.

Dioa (mention'd by Ptolemy) is the River Dee in the County of Mernes.

Epidiorum Promontorium (a name possibly taken from the Islands Ebude over against it) is call'd at this day Can-tye, i. e. the Lands-head.

Glota is an Island mention'd by Antoninus in the Firth of the River Glota or Clyde; 'tis call'd at this day Arran, from a Cattle of the same name.

Giampius is a continu'd range of Hills, reaching as far as Murray; mention'd by Tacitus in his description of Agricola's Attempts upon those parts.

Horesti seems to imply no more than the Higl-landers in general.

Ila is a River in Catbness, possibly the same which they now call Wisse.

Lelanionus, mention'd by Ptolemy, is the River Le- vin, which gives name to the Country of Lemnox; call'd in Latin Levinia.

Leucopibia seems by the sense to be determin'd to Bede's Candida Casa and our Whirren in Galloway; especially if we may believe that Ptolemy wrote it Λευκ' οικησία, instead of which the Transcribers, by a blunder, have made it Leucopibia. The easiness of the mistake will readily be own'd by such as have opportunity of making their Observations upon the intolerable slips of ignorant Librarians.

Lintum is still manifest in our Lintibquo, describ'd among the more eminent Places.

Litus atrum seems to be Tarbat in the County of Ross, where the River rises to a great height; enclos'd on one side with the River Killian, on the other with the Haven Cromer.

Longus, a River, retains manifest footsteps of the old name in our present Lough-Longas, in the County of Ross, which empties it'self into the Western Ocean.

Loxa, by Ptolemy, is still evident in our present Losse, in Murray.

Nabus seems to be somewhere in the Country of Strath-aven, which the ancient Conubii formerly inhabited; a People, that seem to have been originally call'd from the River.

Nodius (mention'd by Ptolemy, and written in some Copies Nobius) is evidently the River Nid; from which Niddisdale takes the name.

Novantium Cheronefus is well known at this day by the name of Mull of Galloway.

Orcas (call'd also Tarvedrum and Tarvisum) is at this day nam'd Howburn; a Promontory over against the Isles of the Orcades.

Randoara seems to be no other than Ranfrew, which gives name to the Barony of Ranfrew, and is the principal Town in it.

Rerigonium is both a Creek and Town, mention'd by Ptolemy. Bargeny in the County of Carrick should be some direction to the old name; especially, considering that an ancient Copy of Ptolemy reads it Bea regonium.

Vacomagi, a People that liv'd about Murray.

Varavis sinus is, that Bay upon which Murray lies; whether that County have any remains of the old name, I dare not determine.

Victoria perhaps is Bede's Caer-Guidi, and our Inchkeith-Island in Lothien.

Vidogava was in Ptolemy's time, a place of good note in the Country of Kyle. There is Aire, at present a Town pretty considerable, which, possibly may have the best title to it.

Virvedrium is look'd upon to be the farthest Promontory in all Britain: We call it at this day Duncansbay, and by contraction Dunshy.

Upon the Coast of Scotland lye, dispers'd here and there great numbers of Islands; some of them of considerable note and extent, but the greatest part very narrow and of little importance. The Western-Isles so call'd from their westerly situation, are suppos'd by those that have travell'd them, to be in number 300 or more. They belong to the Crown of Scotland; but the Inhabitants speak the Irish Language, and retain the Customs and Modes us'd by the ancient Scots, as the Highlanders in the Continent do.

Another cluster of Isles upon this Coast is call'd Orkney, consisting of 26 Islands that are inhabited; and of some more (which they name Holms) us'd only for Pasturage. Here, the length of the longest day, is 18 hours and some odd minutes. A particu-cular account of these Islands (with the Customs of the Inhabitants, the Produce of the Country, and other material Heads) is publish'd in the new Edition of Camden's Britannia, pag. 1073, &c.

Ancient Names of Islands upon this Coast.

Dumna, possibly Fair-Isle, wherein they call the chief Town Dum, a Remain perhaps of the old name.

Epidium should seem by the name not to be far from the Promontory of the Epidii: The situation of Ila, a pretty large Island, agrees very well to that description.

Hebudes, call'd by a modern Author Hebrides, are the Western-Isles before mention'd.

Hebuda is two-fold, Eastern and Western. The first is thought to be Skie, which lies out in a great length; and the second, Lewes, a very craggy and mountainous Island.

Maleos, mention'd by Ptolemy, is manifestly the Isle of Mul.

Ocetis may be plac'd among the Islands of Orkney, in that we now call Herby.

Orcaedes are the Isles of Orkney, just now describ'd.

Pomona (call'd by Solinus, Pomona Diurina) is Mainland, the chief of the Isles of Orkney, and the Bishop's See.

Recine, call'd by Antoninus, Riduna, possibly instead of Ricluna; for there is one of the Western-Isles call'd at this day Racline, which seems to be the very place; and the change of (c l) into (d) is very easie, and might be made by a Copyist, otherwise accurate enough.

Tbule is a place mightily celebrated among the old Writers, and made use of to express the most remote parts of the habitable World; such, at least, as were then known. Sir Robert Sibalds has prov'd it to be the North-east part of Scotland; to whose Dissertation (publish'd in the new Edition of Camden's Britannia, pag. 1089, &c.) I refer the Reader, for the particular Reasons.

IRELAND.

LEAVING the Continent, we come to a large Isle on the West-side of Britain, call'd by Ptolemy Britannia Parva, and by other ancient Writers Ferna, Fuorna, Iris, &c. but by the Inhabitants Erin, and by the English IRELAND. The length of it, according to the best computations, is about 300 miles, but the breadth scarce 120. The Irish Sea bounds it on the East, the Deucalidian on the North, the Western Ocean on the West, and the Virgivan on the South.

The SOIL is very moist and Wet, abounding with Bogs and Lakes: Which quality is much less'n'd by the encrease of Inhabitants, who have (with great Industry) drain'd the Low-lands and Marshes. This abundance of Water and Moisture, makes them very inclinable to Fluxes, Rheums, and such like Distempers, against which they find their Uskebab the best Remedy. It dries more, but enflames less, than our English Brandy. And as the Husbandry of the Inhabitants is seen in these Drains; so is it also discover'd by the destruction they have made of the Woods, which abounded in this Country. Inasmuch, that now they have great plenty of Corn.

Who the first INHABITANTS were, cannot be learnt from Records; but must only be trac'd by conjecture and probability. Things at such a distance can receive no light, but what they have by these helps; unless we suffer our selves to be drawn by more modern Writers, into a number of extravagant and foolish Fancies. In short then, That they were Britains, we are encourag'd to believe, 1. Because the ancient Writers, some of them, call it Britannia parva, and Insula Britannorum. 2. Tacitus has told us, That in his time, their Customs were much the same with the Britains: And Strabo calls them expressly Britains. 3. At the first plantation of the World, 'tis very natural to imagine that this Island was Peopl'd from Britain, from whence the passage into it is short and easie. 4. A great many Words, in the Irish Language, appear to be of British Extraction.

That it was ever conquer'd by the Romans, is an Opinion which some have endeavour'd to establish upon little hints they have met with in the old Authors, that seem to look that way. But after all, there's no just reason to believe it: Nor can we imagine, but the Panegyrist would have run out largely upon such a Conquest, if the Romans had ever got footing in the Island. Towards the decay of the Roman Empire, the Scots (a People that are thought to have come out of Scythia into this Island) began to make a mighty figure in these parts; so that the whole Country from them, was call'd Scotia. Some of the Saxon Kings, and the Norwegians also, were very troublesome to them, but could not bring them under an absolute subjection. Nor were they conquer'd before Henry II. King of England invaded them with a powerful Army (in the year 1172.) brought the States of the Island to an entire Submission, and bestow'd the Sovereignty upon his Son John. But for all this the Kings of England were only Lords of Ireland; until the more ample Title of King was bestow'd upon Henry VIII. by the States in Parliament assembl'd.

They are said to have receiv'd CHRISTIANITY very early. What progress had made in it before the time of S. Patrick, we have no certain account: Probably, not very much. But that Saint (who was a Disciple of S. German) carry'd the Work on with so much success and resolution, as to convert the greatest part of the Island; which gain'd him the Character of the Irish Apostle, and mighty Commendations from all the Irish Writers. In the next Age, their Reputation was so advanc'd upon the account of Religion, that it was term'd Sanctorum Patria; Patria; and sent out great numbers of pious and devout men into other parts of the World. Nor was Religion their only Character; their Learning too is much celebrated by Authors both ancient and modern, who tell us, That the Saxons (particularly) very commonly sent over their Children hither, for a liberal Education.

Thus much of its ancient Condition. At present, the Inhabitants are in a great measure brought over to the Customs and Fashions of the English: Except in some parts, where they live at a loose, uncivilized rate; and are therefore term'd Wild-Irish.

They are govern'd by a Vice-Roy (sent over by the King of England) still'd Lord Deputy or Lord Lieutenant; whose Jurisdiction and Authority is very large and ample. As for their Orders of Degrees, Ireland has the same, that we have here in England: Their Courts of Justice too, and manners of proceeding differ very little. The Parliament is call'd and dissolv'd, at the pleasure of the King of England. They have their four Terms; their Chancery also, King's-Bench, Common-Pleas and Exchequer; with their Judges of Assize, and Justices of the Peace in each County.

Ireland is divided into five parts, arising from the number of its Governors heretofore. These, with their extent, will best be understood by the following Scheme.

The CHURCH is govern'd by four Archbishops; Armagh, Primate of all Ireland; Dublin, Cassil, Tuam. The particular extent of the Bishopricks has been so alter'd from time to time, that I had rather omit the List, than run the hazard of giving a false Catalogue. In the Survey of the Kingdom, we will use the method observ'd in Scotland; which (for the Reasons laid down, in the beginning of that Kingdom) is here also most convenient and easie.

The more confide- able Towns are,	{	Armagh ,	Down ,	Limerick ,
		Athlone ,	DUBLIN,	Lisnor ,
		Caricfergus ,	Galway ,	London-derry ,
		Cassil ,	Kildare ,	Wexford ,
		Clare ,	Kilkenny ,	Wenford ,
		Cork ,	Kinsale ,	Toghal .

Armagh, in the County of Armagh, near the River Kalin, seems to be the same which Bede calls Dearmach; where (as the same Author adds) S. Patrick built a very fine City; only, he subjoyns a Romantick circumstance, That he follow'd the Model which the Angels had drawn for him. But whoever was the Founder, 'tis certain, That in the year 1142. it was made an Archbishop's See, when Cardinal Papirio was sent over into Ireland to revive the decaying discipline of the Church. Nor is it only an Archbishoprick, but the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom; the Archbishop hereof being still Primate of all Ireland. The City was reduc'd under the power of the English by John de Curcy; but was afterwards utterly destroy'd by John O Neel; so that now nothing remains but a few Cottages, and the Ruins of the ancient Buildings.

Athlone, in the County of Roscommon, is a place of good strength, and has a fair Stone-bridge over the River. 'Tis much talk'd of in our Accounts of the late Wars in this Kingdom.

Caricfergus, in the Country of Antrim, is the most considerable Town upon all the Coast; having a very commodious Haven. In the late Wars in Ireland, it was much spoken of.

Cassil, upon the River Swire in the County of Tipperary, is only eminent for being an Archbishop's See, establish'd there by Pope Eugenius III.

Clare is a Market-town (in the County of that name) standing upon a Creek of the River Shannon.

Cork, the Metropolis of the County of that name, is encompass'd with the River on which it stands, and is of an oval form. It has the honour of being an Episcopal See, and is now mostly inhabited by the English; who by their diligence and industry have improv'd to that degree, both in Estates, Trade and Buildings, as to exceed all the Cities in Ireland, except only Dublin.

Down (the principal City in the County of Down) is of very great Antiquity; being mention'd almost under the same name (Dunum) in Ptolemy. 'Tis as present a Bishop's See; and the Inhabitants would claim a farther Honour, by making it the Burial-place of the great S. Patrick. But Armagh in Ireland, Glassenbury in England, and Glasgow in Scotland, do envy them that Happiness, and endeavour to assert that Eiteem to themselves upon several Authorities, which seem to countenance the several Opinions.

DUBLIN, the chief City in Ireland, has a very pleasant situation, by reason of Hills to the South, Planes to the West, the Sea to the East, and the River Liffy to the North. The River here makes a safe Harbour; but the heaps of Sand thrown into its Mouth, by the violence of the Winds, or else the ebbing and flowing of the Sea, hinders Ships of any great Burthen from coming up, but at high Water. The City is well Wall'd and neatly built: Within these hundred years, it is doubly increas'd in its Buildings, Ornaments, &c. Formerly, it was govern'd by a Provost; but King Henry IV. granted them a Mayor and two Bailiffs: And the two latter were chang'd into Sheriffs by Edward VI. Its publick Buildings of greatest note, are,

1. The College (which is situated in the same place on which the Monastery of All-hallows stood) dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and endow'd with the Privileges of an University by Queen Elizabeth. In Edward the Second's time, there was a Foundation laid here for an University, by the Institution of publick Lectures; but the Disturbances which follow'd, broke that Design.

2. The Archb'shop's Palace, in the Suburbs of S. Patrick; with a stately Church dedicated to S. Patrick; eminent without for its high Scepter, and within for its Pavements and arch'd Roof. This consists of a Dean, a Chamber, a Chancellor, a Treasurer, 2 Archdeacons, and 22 Prebendaries.

3. The King's Castle, well fortify'd with Ditches and Towers, and furnish'd with a good Arsenal.

4. Christ's Church, in the heart of the City; carry'd on and finish'd by Lawrence Archbishop of Dublin, and others.

5. The Town-hall, built of square Stone, and call'd Tolestale.

Galway (the chief place in the County of that name) is a neat Town built of Stone. The convenience of a Harbour has made it well stor'd with Merchants; who, by the advantage of a full Trade both by Sea and Land, are very wealthy.

Kildare has the honour of giving name to the County wherein it stands; but yet Nias is the Shire-Town. Its greatest honour is the Bishop's See, still'd in ancient Writings Episcopatus Dariensis.

Kilkenny (the chief place in the County, and the best In-land Town in the Kingdom) is fair-built and very plentiful, standing upon the River Neure. 'Tis divided into the English-town and the Irish-town. The English-town is the newer, said to be built by Ranulph III. Earl of Chester. The Irish-town is like a Suburbs to the other; but yet has the honour of

S. Canic's Church, who gave name to the City, which implies as much as the Cell of S. Canic; a Person very eminent in this Country for an extraordinary piety and strictness of Life. The Bishop of Offory has his Seat in this City.

King'sale stands at the mouth of the River Bandon, in a fruitful Soil; and receives its greatest interest and reputation from the commodious Harbor it enjoys.

Limerick (the head City in the County) is encompass'd by the divided Channel of the famous River Shannon. 'Tis parted into the Upper and Lower: In the first stands the Cathedral and Castle; the second is guarded with a Wall and Castle. It is a Bishop's See, and a place strongly fortify'd both by Art and Nature; as we may easily guess from the long Defence it made, when besieg'd by his present Majesty, in the late Irish Wars. This is the great Emporium of the whole Province of Munster.

Lisnor (upon the River Broodwater in the County of Waterford) has a considerable name in the Histories and Records of Ireland, upon account of the Bishop's See. But the Revenues thereof being almost quite alienated, and lost, it came afterwards to be annex'd to the See of Waterford.

Londen-derry, formerly call'd Derry, is now annex'd to the County of that name; and is famous in our modern Histories and publick Papers, for resisting two memorable Sieges, one in the year, 1649, the other in the year, 1689.

Waterford, the chief City in the County of that name, can neither recommend it self by a good Air nor fruitful Soil. Notwithstanding which, by the convenience of the Harbour, it was look'd upon for Wealth and Populoufness to be the second City in Ireland; till Cork (as we observ'd before) grew up, and over-topp'd it. Upon account of its eminent Loyalty to the English, our Kings having granted it several Privileges: But in the Rebellion of 1641. it lost its old Character of Fidelity, by the Influence of the Popish Clergy, sett'd there probably to carry on that bloody Design.

Weisford, the chief Town of the County, seems to be a place of some Antiquity; tho' that name be modern, and given it by the *German*s who sett'd themselves here. The Town is remarkable, for being the first in this whole Island that surrender'd to the English, and that receiv'd a Colony of that Nation. Which is the cause why all the neighbouring Parts do so much abound with English Inhabitants.

Yoghball, near the entrance of the River Broodwater into the Sea, stands in the County of Cork, being of an oblong form, and wall'd round. The Town is divided into Upper and Lower. The convenience of the Harbour, with the fruitfulness of the Country round, have made it a place of considerable Resort.

Ancient Places in the Kingdom of IRELAND.

Argita is a Lake in these parts; perhaps that which empties it self at Swilly in the County of Tirconnel.

Aufoba, mention'd by Protolmy, is a River about Lough-Corbes, in the County of Galloway.

Auten, a People in these parts, seem to have formerly inhabited that Tract where the County of Galloway is at present: Aterith may well enough be suppos'd to retain something of the old name.

Blani were a People, who (along with the Birgantes-Menapii and Cauci) inhabited the Province of Leinster.

Boreum Prora, now S. Helen's Head in Tirconnel County.

Bavinda is the River Byn, well known by reason of the late Wars.

Brigantes or Birgantes, have their name from the River Brigus (for so Protolmy calls our Barrow) and inhabited Kilkenny, Offory and Caterlogh, which are all water'd by the Barrow.

Cauci seems by the circumstances to have inhabited the County of Wicklow; now full of English Inhabitants, and by them improv'd to that degree, as to make a figure among the best Shires in this Kingdom.

Conceni, a People in those parts, inhabited the South-part of Conaght, viz. Clare, Galloway, the Territory of Clan-Richard, with the Barony of Aerith. 'Tis possible, our present Bonaght may have something of the name of this People; especially, if a more suitable Original cannot be found out.

Coriondi, a People who dwelt about the County of Cork; to which perhaps it might have left a tincture of the name.

Darni (along with the Voluntii, Robogdii and Erdini) peopl'd the Province of Ulster.

Dauronia, mention'd by Protolmy, and by Giraldus, call'd Lauranus, is probably the River which runs along by Cork.

Dunum is undoubtedly Down; an account whereof we have given in the descriptions of the Towns.

Duris seems to be the River which runs by Trailey through the County of Kery.

Etlana is agreed upon by all hands to be the City of Dublin.

Eblani were a People in those parts.

Erdini inhabited part of the Province of Ulster, along with the Voluntii and others.

Hieron Promontorium, may very probably be that Neck of Land which shoots out into the County of Weisford; where Benna, a Town's name, implies the same thing as Hieron, namely, sacred or holy.

Ibarni (call'd in some Copies Uterini) seem to have inhabited part of the County of Desmond, along with the Vilabri.

Jernus is a River, sett'd by Protolmy under the Promontory Noisium, as emptying it self there into the Sea. Maire (which runs under Drunckeran) bids the fairest for it.

Isanium is a Promontory call'd at this day S. John's Foreland in the County of Down.

Laberus, mention'd by Protolmy, seems to be the Castle Kil-lair, in the County of Meth; a name possibly deriv'd from Protolmy's old one.

Libnius keeps something of its name to this day in the River Liffy, which runs by Dublin.

Logia is the Lake Lough-Boyle, in the County of Tirconnel.

Luconi, a People who formerly inhabited West-Munster, along with the Vesabri and Uterini.

Maolicum, is now Malc, upon the River Shanon, in the County of Long-ford.

Menapii, mention'd in Protolmy, inhabited the County of Weisford; the chief City whereof, of the same name, seems to be the old Menapia.

Modona is a River in these parts, at the mouth whereof stood the ancient Menapia. If the latter be Weisford, the former must on course be the River Slane.

Nagnata is plac'd by Protolmy some where about the present County of Slego; the very spot is not yet discover'd, nor any remains of the old name.

Nagnatae must have their Seat in the same Tract, whereof Nagnata may seem to have been the capital City.

Notium in our Missen-head (a Promontory in the County of Desmond) under which he tells us the old River Fernus empties it self into the Sea.

Oveca seems to be that River which empties it self into the Sea, below Wicklow or Arcklow.

Rævius is the River Trebis, the northern Bound of the County of Slego.

Rbeba is still preserv'd entire in the old Rbeban, (near the River Barrow in Queen's-County) at present an inconsiderable place.

Regia may seem to have been seated about Patrick's Purgatory, in the County of Tirconnel; because the place, in the Life of S. Patrick, is call'd Reglis.

Rigia has some Relicks of the old name, in the Lake we call Lough-Regith, in the County of Longford: Which is of more moment, because the situation agrees very well with the account left us of it by Protony.

Rbobogdii inhabited all the northern Shore of Ire- land, about Tirconnel, &c. Robogh still preserves the manifest marks of the old name.

Robogdium Promontorium must also have been in those parts.

Senus (call'd also Sena, Sacana and Flumen Senense) is the noble River of Sbaunon.

Velabri (so call'd from the Fritbs and Æstuaries among which they dwelt; for so much Aber implies) inhabited part of the County of Desmond.

Vidua a River in Tirconnel, now Crodagh.

Vinderius is the Bay of Knock-fergus in the County of Antrim.

Vodia, a People, who, with the Coriondi, inhabited the Counties of Cork, Tipperary, Limerick and Waterford. The Territories Idou and Idoub seem to have something of the old name.

Vennicium Promont. now Ran's-Head in Tirconnel.

Volunt, along with the Darni, Robogdii and Erdini, inhabited the Province of Ulster.

J E R S E Y and G A R N S E Y.

BESIDES the Kingdom of Ireland, and the other Islands which lie round the Continent of Britain (the most considerable whereof are describ'd in the Counties upon which they border) there are two more, which could not be conveniently drawn into the Body of the Survey, by reason of their distance from the Continent. And yet they are of so great importance to the Crown of England, that in a Description of the three Kingdoms, it would be a gross Error wholly to omit them. These are Jersey and Garnsey.

JERSEY is that which Antoninus mentions under the name of Cæsarea, about 30 miles in compass, and defended with Rocks and Quick-sands. The middle parts are mountainous, but the Vallies are delicately water'd with pleasant Brooks, and planted with Fruit-trees; Apple-trees more especially. The Villages are thick-set, and make 12 Parishes; out of which 12 Jurors are chosen by their respective Parishes to assist the Bailiff (who is appointed by the Governour to administer Justice) in the management of Causes and Actions, both Civil and Capital. They have no Physicians, nor any Distempers but Fevers; which always come at a certain time of the Year. Instead of Fewel, they use a Sea-weed, which they name Uraic; and the Sea now and then furnishes them with a good prize of combustible matter. S. Hilary's on the South-side of the Island, is their chief Town, both on account of its Trade, and the Court of Justice settl'd in it. The name, it has from Hilary (Bishop of Pieters) suppos'd to have been bury'd here, in his Banishment.

GARNS EY (20 miles to the North-west) is by Antoninus call'd Sarnia; inferior to the other upon some accounts: For it contains only 10 Parishes, and is not so fruitful: But 'tis better fortify'd, being encompass'd with a continu'd Ridge of steep Rocks. This whole Island is Enclosure; but the Inhabitants do not follow Agriculture so closely, as their Neighbourts of Jersey. S. Peter's, a Town consisting of a long narrow Street, and seated upon a Bay in form of a Half-moon, is their capital Place, whether we respect Trade or Strength. For it is well stor'd with Merchants; and has the Mouth of the Haven defended by a Castle on each side. The Governour of the Island keeps his Residence here, and a Garrison for the defence of the place.

The Government of these Islands, is much the same in both; the Customs of Normandy obtaining in most cases. Their Drink is generally Cyder, by reason of the abundance of Apples; and Fish they have in great plenty. Their Language is the French; and tho' they are generally of the same Extraction, yet they seem not fond of an Alliance to that People, but had rather make out a Relation to the English.

CHAP. I.

FRANCE, Gallia, in General.

FRANCE

This new Map is laid down according to the Observations and actual Surveys, lately made by the Royall Academy of France. K. Moll fecit.

THE Country of France is very advantageously situated, in the midst of the Northern temperate Zone, and extended from the 42d degree of Latitude to the 51st degree; and from the 13th degree of Longitude, to the 25th degree, reckoning from Teneriffe. [But according to Sanson's Computation from the 15th degree to the 29th degree of Longitude:] So that it includes the space of 173 Leagues or

The Longitude of France has been strangely confounded by the Ignorance or Vanity of their Geographers, who have in their Maps extended it East and West a hundred Miles or more above its real Length: But the Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences, have by exact Observations and Calculations corrected that Error, and by Monieur de Fer's new Map it appears that the Length of the Kingdom from Cognac to Mentebiers is but 22 Degrees, tho' Sanson makes it 14 and others much more.

520 Miles, from the Pyrenean Mountains in the South, to Calis in the North. And from the Point of Corquet in Bretaign in the West to Alfatia in the East, about 160 Leagues or 480 Miles. On the North-east it is contiguous with the Spanish Netherlands, and parted from England by the British Channel: On the East it is bounded by Germany, Switzerland, Savoy and Piedmont, from the left of which it is separated by the Alps; on the South by the Mediterranean-Sea and the Pyrenean Mountains, which divide it from Spain; and on the West by the Ocean.

The AIR is very temperate, and not subject to the great Colds of Germany, Sueden and Muscovy, nor to the excessive Heats of Spain and Italy; but it is more or less hot or cold, according to the different situation of the several Provinces.

The SOIL is every where fertile, and produces, besides abundance of Corn and divers sorts of Fruits, a vast quantity of Wine and abundance of Flax; and in Provence and Languedoc, Oil. The Pastures and Meadows feed great Herds of Cattle, and the Forests which are spacious enough, but not so large as those of Germany, contain much variety of Game. Some Mines of Iron, Lead, Tin, Copras, &c. are found in France, but of these not many nor very considerable. Great quantity of Salt is made in the Isle of Rhce, about Rochford, and other parts of France, which yields the King a great Revenue.

The most noted MOUNTAINS here, besides the Pyrenean and the Alps, are those of Cevennes, Auvergne, Mont-jure or S. Claude towards Switzerland, and Mont-vogetse, or des-Faucilles in the Diocess of Langres.

The Chief ISLANDS are, I. In the Mediterranean-Sea, those of Hieres, S. Margaret, St. Honoratus or of Lerins, &c. II. In the Ocean, Oleron and Ree on the Coasts of Saintonge and Aunis; Noir-Monstrier, De-dieu, Bell-Isle, Queffant, &c. off of Bretaigne; and Aldernay near the Shoar of Normandy.

Its chiefest PORTS in the Ocean, are Calis, Ambleteuse, St. Valery, Diepe, Havre de Grace, S. Malo, Brest, Rochel, Rochfort, Bourdeaux, Bayonne, &c. And in the Mediterranean, Marseilles and Toulon.

The principal RIVERS of France are, 1. The Seine, which rises in Burgundy near Dijon, passeth through Champaign, the Isle of France and Normandy, watering by the way Troys, Paris and Roan, and receiving in its Course the Yonne, the Oyse, and several smaller Rivers, empties it self into the Sea at Havre de Grace, and makes a very good Haven, whence this Town hath its Name. 2. The Loyre is the largest River in France, and springs in Languedoc, in the Mountains call'd les Severins, passeth by Nevers, Orleans, Tours, Angers and Nantes, receiving by the way the Aller, the Cher, the Indre, the Vienne, the Sarve, the Ardre and many others, and falls into the Sea about 40 Miles below Nantes, and over against Bell-Isle. 3. The Garonne riseth in the Pyrenean Mountains, runs to Thoulouse, thence flows westward to Bourdeaux, a little below which the Dourdonne joyns it, and both together make it a very wide Haven, which is emptied into the Ocean near the Island of Oleron. 4. The Rhofne hath its Source in the Alps, passeth through the Lake of Geneva, flows to Lyons, where it receives the Saone, at Valence the Isere falls into it, as doth the Durance at Avignon, and quickly after empties it self into the Mediterranean-Sea in Six Channels. Besides these there is a great number of smaller Rivers, which are mentioned in the following Description of the Country.

The particular COMMODITIES of France, which they send abroad into foreign Countries, are Wine, Brandy, Canvas, and other Linnen, Paper, Salt, wrought Silks, Druggers and other Stuffs; several wrought Goods, as Gloves, Lace, &c.

The PEOPLE of France are a mixture of the Posterity of the ancient Gauls, Romans, Franks, Visigoths and Burgundians, but chiefly of the Gauls, whom though the Romans and Franks successively subdued, they did not however expel, those still remaining the body of the People, tho' these obtain'd the Government of them.

Of the TEMPER of the Gauls, Cesar says, They were quick-witted, but rash and unsteady; and their Successors the French are of the same nature. They have generally quick and ready Apprehensions, but too often run away with a superficial Knowledge of things, without having Patience to dive to the bottom: But tho' this be their general Character, there have been abundance of Particulars that must be excepted: France having produced very learned and industrious Men in all Arts and Sciences, especially in our Age; wherein beside the vast improvement they have made of the Art of War, all the parts of Learning have been industriously studied and improved by the ingenious Virtuosi of France; and even a Woman of that Nation hath been found an excellent Critick in Philological Learning. They abound in Compliments, and are really very civil, especially to Strangers; and have a natural freedom in their Conversation, which would be very agreeable if it were not overacted and mixed with Levity. Both Men and Women are full of Talk, and as familiar at first sight, as if they had been long acquainted. In their Habit they are something fantastical, but have generally an Air of Gentility; especially the Women, who are well shaped and fair enough, except in the Southern Provinces, where they have very swarthy Complexions. The French are much addicted to Litigiousness; more Law-suits are tried there, than in any Nation in the World; nay some say than in all Europe besides; which encourages all sorts of People to breed up their Children to the Law; and if a Father can raise Money enough to purchase his Son an Office, he thinks him well settled: By which means here are swarms of Advocates, Procurers, Registers, Notaries, and other Men of Law. The Gentry scorn Trade, so that the younger Brothers always apply themselves to the Gown or the Sword, which makes the French King's Armies so large and well stocked with Officers. In War they have been always esteemed furious in attacking, but quick in retreating, not to be brought on a second time, if they obtained not their End at the first Onset. Sicut primus impetus eis major quam virorum est, ita sequens minor quam seminarum, says L. Florus of them.

But tho' this may still be part of their Character, yet, what by strict Discipline and careful Instruction, their Soldiers will now endure the Fatigues of a Camp and a Siege as well as any in Europe, and in Battles too, they have behaved themselves very bravely.

The Religion of the Gauls was Paganism in its highest degree, even to the offering of human Sacrifices (saith Solinus) but as they became more civiliz'd this barbarity was laid aside; however, they still remained superstitious Idolaters, till the CHRISTIAN RELIGION was planted among them, by some of St. Peter's Disciples. St. Denis, the Areopagite, is pretended to have been the Apostle of Paris, and many ridiculous Miracles are related of him in their Legends; particularly, that after he was beheaded his Body rose, took up his Head and walked with it a Mile.

Mile: which is as true, as that this Denis was ever there*. However, it is certain, that Christianity was received here very early, and that the Learned and pious Father St. Irenæus came hither in the middle of the second Century, and succeeded. Pompinus (who was martyr'd An. Dom. 178.) in the Bishoprick of Lyon. But the Franks being Pagans, when they came, Christianity was again suppress'd, till Clovis the fifth King being converted, by the Persuasion of his Wife Crotilda, and the instruction of St. Vaast, and St. Remigius the first Bishop of Rheims, it was restored.

But in the succeeding Ages of Ignorance and Superstition, the Errors that crept into the Church in most parts of Christendom, prevailed here also; and though the Gallican Church was never so servilely subject to the Court of Rome as those of other Nations, yet the pernicious Doctrines were as generally received here as any where. Wherefore when the Reformation was set on foot, great numbers of the People of France were convinc'd of the falsthood of that Religion, and Calvin's Doctrine was readily receiv'd upon the preaching of Zuinglius. And so numerous did the Protestants or Hugonots (as they were called by the Romanists) grow, that even so early as the year 1560. there are said to have been 1250 of their Churches in France. But they were always persecuted by the Romish party, and even massacred in most barbarous manner several times; particularly at Paris on Saint Bartholomew's day, in the year 1572. where in the middle of the Night, more than 10000 of them were murder'd at once, and in other Cities three times as many; though a Peace was just concluded, and for assurance the King of Navarre, the Head of the Protestant party was that day married to the French King's Sister. King Henry IV. granted them Liberty of Conscience by an Edict made at Nants, and confirm'd and registr'd in the Parliament of Paris: By which means they again grew very powerful, and no less than 300 walled Towns were inhabited almost only by them, of which Rocheb was the chief. But Lewis XIII. deprived them of them all, even Rocheb it self, after a long and famous Siege. By which their Strength being broken, and the Heads of the Party being brought over, or otherwise reduc'd, the present King Lewis XIV. resolv'd utterly to suppress them, which he began by the revocation of the Edict of Nants in the year 1685, notwithstanding it had been so firmly ratified, and made a standing Law of the Kingdom; and afterwards caus'd the Protestants to be most cruelly persecuted by his Soldiers, which continued for two or three years; at the end of which, all those that could not be brought to renounce their Religion, were banished the Kingdom, after they had been long imprison'd, and deprived of all their Goods and Estates. And at this time the Persecution is renewed with such Heat, that none dare own any other Religion, than that of the Romish Church.

The ancient LANGUAGE of the Gauls was the same with that of our ancient Britains, as the learned Mr. Camden has prov'd at large; but when the Romans conquer'd it, they introduc'd the Latin, and by means of the long time they were Masters of the Country, establish'd it so effectually, that the old Gaulish was quite lost; afterwards the Franks, being Germans, introduc'd their own Language, which was us'd at Court for some Ages; but the German being a more harsh indocile Tongue, and the Latin the contrary, this prevail'd above that; so that though the present French Tongue be compos'd of the German and Gothic, as well as of the Latin, the last has much the greater share.

It is voluble and elegant, and admir'd for its sweetness; it is true by means of the liberty they take in the pronunciation, (leaving out harsh terminations and Consonants) it is pliant enough, but not so sweet as the Italian. The Royal Academy at Paris have of late years much improv'd and refin'd it, however it is not yet copious nor at all heroic; so that though in their Translations they have express'd the sense of some ancient Authors aptly enough in Prose, none of their Ingenious have been able to produce Heroick Poems like those in English.

But notwithstanding that this Tongue hath nothing of signal Majesty or Manliness in it, and seems rather fit for the Conversation of Women than of Princes and Statesmen, yet what by the greatness of the present King, and their Obstinacy in using their own Language in the Businesses other Nations have had occasion to transact with them, together with the splendor of the Prince's Court which hath invited Strangers to visit it, the French Tongue is at present us'd in many Courts of Europe, and the most generally understood of any modern one in Christendom.

SECT. II.

Of the ancient State of France.

THE want of Literature in the earlier Ages of the World, hath made it extremely difficult to discover the origine of Nations: The best that can be learnt of that of France, is, That it was peopled after the Flood, by the Posterity of Gomar the eldest Son of Noah: These growing numerous, compos'd many Nations, to whom the Greeks and Romans gave the general name of Galli; for what reason, as it is uncertain, so it is not very material; however under that name they were known in the time of Tarquinius Priscus the fifth King of Rome, and possess'd a Country of very large extent, comprising not only all the present France, but part of Italy also, as far as the River Rubicon or Pisatello, which falls into the Adriatick Sea between Ravenna and Rimini; and all that part of Germany and Belgium, that lies within the River Rhine, the Division whereof, according to the Roman Accounts, was thus, viz.

I. GALLIA CISALPINA or Citerior, with respect to the Romans, afterwards called LONGOBARDIA or LOMBARDY from the Bardi, a certain Gaulish People, and the Langons, so nam'd by reason of their long Javelins.

II. GALLIA TRANSALPINA, or Ulterior, which contained all the present France, and that part of Germany and Belgium westward of the Rhine.

The Gauls in general were a very vigorous and warlike People, those of the Cis-Alpina fought and defeated a large Army of Romans, march'd up to the City, took and sack'd it*, U. C. 565. laid Siege to the Capitol, and had well nigh taken it: For having observed on one side of the Cattle a place of more easie access than the rest, in the dead of night some of them climb'd up the Rock there, and go to the top with that silence, that they escap'd the Centinels and the Dogs; but disturb'd certain Geese that were in the Capitol, which by gagling and clapping their Wings, alarm'd the Soldiers; who presently running to their Arms, drove them back, and by that lucky Accident recover'd the Roman State, then reduc'd to its last gasp. At length the Siege was rais'd by Camillus the Dictator, and in time the Gauls were driven out of the Roman Provinces: But left so dreadful a Name behind them, that Cicero confesses the Romans were more afraid of them than any other Nation of the World. And Salust says, It was not Honour but Life that was to be disput'd with a Gaul. The Romans durst not attempt the Conquest of them, till they had subdued almost all the rest of the then known World. At length, Anno U. C. 628, Fulvius Flaccus the Consul made War upon them, and five years after Fabius Maximus reduced the Narbonensis into a Roman Province. About 70 years after this, Julius Cæsar undertook the Conquest of Gaul, which, after a very bloody War he effected, and totally subjected the whole Country to the Power of Rome, A. M. 3900 U. C. 703. ante Christ. 48. Cæsar at his arrival found the whole Country divided into three parts, whereof the Celte or Galli possessed the best and largest, being all the Country that is bounded by the Garonne on the South, the Ocean on the West, the Loire and the Rhine on the East, and by the Seine and Marne on the North; From the Confines of the Gallia Celtica to the British Sea, and along the lower part of the Rhine quite to the German Ocean was inhabited by the Belge; the other part, being all from the River Garonne to the Pyenean Mountains, quite cross from the Ocean in the West to the Mediterranean in the East, belonging to the Aquitains. Of these the Celte were the most civiliz'd, because of their Neighbourhood and Converse with the Romans, and the Belge the most warlike, by reason of the little Converse they had with other Nations, and the frequent Wars that the Germans made upon them. These great Nations were again subdivided into a multitude of smaller, whereof Cæsar mentions no less than LXIV. that had different Appellations from the chief City, as the Rheini of Rheims, the Suessones of Soissons, Bellovaci of Beauvais, Sessii of Soerz, &c. But by him it was divided into these four great Parts, viz. 1. Narbonensis, so called from the City Narbon, containing Languedoc, Provence, Dauphine, and some part of *Savo*y; called also Braccata, from a certain Habit worn by the People. 2. Aquitania, so named from the City of Aquæ Augustæ, now d' Acqs in Guienne, comprehending the Provinces of Gascogn, Guienne, Quercu, Xaintoigne, Poitou, Perigore, Limousin, Auvergne, Bourbonnois, and Berry, extending from the Pyenees to the River Loire. 3. Celtica, called so from the valiant Nation of the Celte, and Comata from the long Hair worn by them, and also Lugdunensis from the City Lyons, extending from the Loire to the British Sea, and comprehending the Province of Lyonnais, the Dukedom of Burgundy, Nivernois, &c. part of Champaigne, the Isle of France, the Provinces of Normandy, Bretaigne, Maine, Peyche, Beauce, Anjoy, and Touraine. 4. Belgica, named from the Belge a potent Nation, comprised all the Eastern part of Gaul, viz. Picardy, the rest of Champaigne, the Netherlands, and so much of Germany and Belgium, as lyeth on this side the Rhine, with the County of Burgundy or Franche Comte.

Afterwards the Emperor Constantine the Great, divided it into seventeen Provinces or Governments; six of which were Consular, and eleven under certain Presidents sent by the Emperor, who resided in these Cities, viz.

He also placed Counts in the Cities, and Dukes in the Frontier Towns to administer Justice according to the Roman Laws; and A. D. 330. dividing the Office of Præfectus Prætorio, or Lieutenant-General of the Empire, among four Persons; appointed one of them to reside among the Gauls; and under him, three Vicars, who were dispersed in Britain, France, and Spain.

Afterwards the Goths got footing in Gaul, the Narbonensis being granted to them by the Emperor Honorius upon their quitting Italy; and afterwards for Service done the Empire, Aquitain also was given them. And the Burgundians, a great and populous Nation on the Rhine, (at first called in by Stilico Lieutenant of the same Honorius, to defend the Borders against the Franks) possessed themselves of all the South-east parts and both the Burgundies, from them so called.

This was the State of Gaul, when the Franks or French entred it,

The FRANCS were a warlike People of Germany, who possessed all the Country that lies between the Rhine and the Weser, and from the German Ocean in the North to the River Mayne in the South; and consisted of the Nations of Sicambri, Bructeri, Salij, Cherusci, &c.

They also conquer'd the Country beyond the Mayne, and making the Banks of that River their chief Seat, gave the name of Franconia to the Country now called so.

The Sicambri, from whom some deduce the original of the French, are said to be of Scythian Extraction, and have come down into Germany A. M. 3519. ante J. Chr. 429. in a very great Body, under their Captain Marcomir, and settled themselves in those parts now called East-Friesland, Guelderland, and Holland. They were a rough unciviliz'd People, and often invaded and plundered their Neighbours, A. M. 3925. their King named Francus, was called by the Saxons to their assistance against the Goths, where he so signaliz'd himself by his Valour, that, as some Authors report, the Nation had from him the Name of Franci;

S E C T. III.

Of the French Kings.

Franci; but this seems improbable, since neither Strabo, Ptolemy, Pliny, Cæsar, Tacitus, or any ancient Author have mentioned them under that Name: From whence it is concluded, That they had it not till long after, that they took it up to denote the Freedom they enjoy'd from the Roman Yoak, which the Neighbouring Nations were Subject to.

The first notice of them in History under this Denomination is in the Reigns of Valerian and Gallienus, about A. D. 260, after which they are frequently mentioned on account of the Pillage they made in Gaul, &c. Constantine the Great, took their Kings Africanus and Rhadagaisus Prisoners, and exposed them to wild Beasts, for having violated their Faith in warring against him.

About A. D. 412 the Armorici, who inhabited the Maritime Provinces of Gaul, as Flanders, Picardy, Normandy and Bretaign, revolted from the Romans, to whom the Franks joyned, and by that means possessed themselves of part of the German and Belgick Provinces of Gaul, which the Romans were forced to grant them. Soon after this it was, that Pharamond was chosen their King; he reigned ten Years and had his Seat in Gaul, but about the time of his death the Romans beat the Franks out of Gaul again, and took from them the Lands they had given them, which Clodion the Successor of Pharamond endeavour'd to regain, but was beaten back. Meroveus succeeded Clodion, in whose time Attila King of the Huns invaded Gaul with a vast Army, and having plundered several other Cities, besieged Orleans; for the relief whereof Meroveus joyned his Forces with those of Actius the Roman General, and Theodorick King of the Visigoths, who altogether set upon Attila, and in Battel killed 200000 of his Men (as Historians report) and drove him out of Gaul. Actius, who was the great support of the Roman Power in Gaul, was soon after massacred by Valentinian, and he himself kill'd by Maximius. This put the Roman Affairs into such disorder, that Meroveus had time to extend his Conquests, which he did over all Picardy, Normandy and part of the Isle of France; and Childerick his Son took Paris, Orleans, and several other Cities, and established the French Monarchy. Clovis his Successor freed the French wholly from the Roman Power, and gave the Name of France to all the Country that reaches from the Rhine to the Loire. After the death of Clovis, the Dominion of the Franks was divided into two parts, viz. Osterrich, or the Eastern part called Austrasia, and Westerrich, or the Western part called Neustria: The former containing all the old France, and the Country beyond the Maine, which they had conquer'd, together with Reims, Chalons, Cambray and Laon; which was from that time a separate Kingdom, the Seat whereof was Metz in Lorraine. The latter contained all the Country that lies between the Meuse and the Loire, which was again divided into three Kingdoms, viz. 1. Of France at Paris, 2. of Orleans, and 3. of Soissons: And afterwards, when the French had subdued the Visigoths and Burgundians; two other Kingdoms were erected, viz. of Aquitain and Burgundy. These were several times united and divided, as the Royal Family happened to be more or less numerous. But the Title of Kings of France, the Historians have given to those only who have ruled in Paris; who are these mentioned in the following Table.

OF these Monarchs there are reckon'd three Races: The first is called Merovingian from Merovee, who putting aside the Children of Clodion, caus'd him self to be chosen King; and fixed the Regal Seat in Gaul, as hath been already shewn. This Race continued during the Reigns of XXI Kings, and ended in Childerick III. who being a weak man, was surnamed the Useless, and was degraded by the Assembly of the Estates; Pepin the Son of Charles Martel, Maire of the Palace, being advanced in his stead; who began the second Race, called the Carlian or Carlovingian.

The Maire of the Palace was an Office of great Dignity and Power; he was at first chosen by the Nobility and confirmed by the King; and was entrusted with the Management of all Affairs of State: Their Power was very great, which by reason of the Weakness and Supineness of the Kings, they encreased as they pleased; so that at last it became hereditary. Of these, Pepin and his Son Charles, surnamed Martel, were in a manner Kings themselves during the Reigns of Dagobert II. Chilperick, Cloaire and Thierry, and after the Death of the last, Charles made himself chief Governour, with the Title of Maire and Duke of the French, in which he was succeeded by his Sons Carloman and Pepin, during an Interregnum of 6 or 7 Years; and after the Expulsion of Childerick, Pepin obtained the Royal Dignity, as hath been already said. To Pepin succeeded his Son Charles, called le Maigne or the Great; An Episbet the Noble Actions he performed, very worthily deserv'd: For it was he that conquer'd the Barbarous Inhabitants of the most Northern Parts of Germany, and establish'd Christianity and Civil Government among them, after he had overcome Witiking the last King of the Saxons, whereof we shall have occasion to speak more particularly in our description of Germany. He also conquer'd the Boii or Bavarians, became King of Germany, and in the Pope's Quarrel carried his Arms into Italy against Desiderius King of Lombardy, who attempted to diminish the Papal Power and make himself King of all Italy; Him Charles defeated, seized his Kingdom, and was crown'd King of Lombardy. He also conquered the Saraxens in Spain, and the Huns, Danes, Normans, &c. that infested his own Countries: And finally, he was by the Romans chosen Emperor, to which he was crowned on Christmas-day, A. D. 800. thereby erecting anew the Western Empire, and making himself the greatest Prince of the Universe. But this mighty Monarchy was in a little time reduced to its former Limits; for his Son Lewis the Godly parted his Estates among his four Sons, and erected the Kingdoms of Italy, Aquitain, Bavaria, and Rbatia; and tho' some of his Posterity succeeded in the Empire, yet his Family degenerating, they not only lost that Title, but Charles surnamed the Simple, the great Grandson of Lewis the Godly, was for some time kept out of the Throne of France also, by Lewis and Carloman his Bastard-Brothers, and after them by Carolus Crassus Emperor, and Eudes Earl of Anjou; and though he obtained it at last, he was much disturb'd and forc'd to resign it to Rodolph of Burgundy, who having enjoy'd it two years, after his Death the Son of Charles the Simple was restored. But his Son and Grandson were disturb'd by Hugh Capet, Earl of Paris and Anjou, and Maire of the Palace. descended from the Eudes abovemention'd, who after the Death of Lewis the Sloathful, got to be chosen King by the assembly of the Estates at Noyon in the Month of May, A. D. 987. And began the third or Capetine Race of the Kings of France.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Government, Laws, Courts and Officers of Justice, and Taxes.

Gaul, as we have said, was anciently divided into many Nations, each of which was govern'd by a different King; whose Power was limited by Laws agreed between him and the People in a grand Council. But though these Nations were separate Governments, they all maintained a general Alliance, and upon extraordinary Occasions, a General Council of the chiefs of each Nation was conven'd; as we find there was to chosse Deputies to congratulate Cesar de Bel Gal. Lib. 1 Casir upon his Victory over the Helvetians, and to crave his assistance against Ariovistus King of the Germanis.

And like the Gauls, the French also at the beginning of that Monarchy, established a grand Council for making Laws, called the Assembly of the Estates; which was composed of Deputies sent from the Nobility, Clergy, the chief Cities of every Province, and from the Common People. These being assembled before the King, the Peoples Grievances were heard, the Necessities of the Kingdom considered and Laws were made for Imposing Taxes, Redressing Grievances, and what else was needful for the Publick Good: And the Laws there made obliged the King, as well as the People. The first Assembly of this Council, mentioned in History was A. D. 422 at Salifson or Seltz in Alsatia, which was called (says du Tillet) to interpret and Reform the Customs of France not yet written; and in this Council ('tis said) the famous Salique Law was made. Mention is made many times that Childebert assembled the Estates. Charlemaigne called them twenty times, To receive the Annual Gifts, and confirm the Priviledges of the Nobility, says a late French Author of good Learning; by which it should seem that they had the same Power that our English Parliament hath. It is at least certain, that in those days this Assembly had great authority: Drovis says it was an ancient Question, Whether the Estates or the King were superior. But at length their Power was much restrained and latterly they were not assembled in many years together. Lewis XIII. convoked the Assembly of the Estates to Sens, Sept. 10. 1614. thence adjourned them to Paris, where the Sessions began on the 27th of October, and on the 23d of February, 1615, the Result of their Deliberations being written down, were presented to the King, but whether passed into Laws or no I am not inform'd, the Historian leaving it there. Since that time they have never met; and the only Legislative Power in France at present is in the King, whose Edicts (with a Soit, car tel est notre plaisir; So be it, for such is our Pleasure) being registered in the Parliament of Paris (which too is composed of Persons that are at his Devotion) have the full force of Laws.

The Ancient Civil Law is used in France, besides which there are ancient particular Laws and Customs, and the Edicts of the Kings.

The Salique Law and that of Appenages are esteemed Fundamental and unrevocable: The first confines the Succession to the Crown in the Males, excluding the Females, and the Issue of them: What more it contained is not known. Many Conjectures have been made of the Reason of this Name Salique: some derive it from the Salii, one of the Nations of the Franks; others from the River Sala, on the Banks whereof it is pretended to be made, &c. But that which seems to be much the most Natural and Probable is the Judgment of a most ingenious Antiquary of our own Nation, who derives it from the Word S A H L or z A L, as it is now written, which in the High Dutch (the Language of the Franks) signifies a Hall or Court, so that it is the Law Salique, q. d. the Court-Law, or the Law of the Court, by which the King and the Royal Family were assur'd of their Honour and Prerogative. That of Appenage was made by Charles the Great, and is to hinder the King's younger Sons from having any part of the Kingdom with their Elder Brother; before which France was frequently parcelled out into several Kingdoms.

For maintaining the Publick Peace, and the better Administration of Justice, the King appoints one of the prime of the Nobility Governor in every one of the Twelve Governments, and under him Lieutenants and Governours of Towns, whose Officers are the same with the ancient Dukes and Counts, first established by the Romans, viz. to keep in Obedience the Provinces and Places given them in Custody, to maintain them in Peace and Tranquility, to have Power and command over their Armies, to defend them against Enemies and Seditious Attempts, to keep the Places well fortified and provided with what is needful, and to assist the Execution of Justice.

The Administration of Justice, both Civil and Criminal belongs to the Parliaments. Anciently the Kings administr'd Justice themselves, but it being troublesome to them, this Court was establish'd by King Pepin. Anno. Dom. 757. composed of certain Noblemen, whom the King appointed to hear the Complaints, and do Justice to his Subjects. At first it was held where the King resided, and follow'd him in his Journays: But for the Convenience of the People, Phillip the Fair made it sedentary, and gave a Part of his Palace at Paris to be the fixt Seat of the Parliament; and because of the multiplicity of Business, and the large extent of the Country, succeeding Kings erected new ones in several Parts of the Kingdom, so that at present there are Fourteen Parliaments in France and its Conquests, viz,

- | | | | |

These Parliaments are composed of certain Presidents, Counsellors, Advocates, &c. and divided into several Chambers, according to the respective Business. That of Paris is called the Court of Peers, because the Dukes and Peers of France, and several great Officers of State are Sworn before it, and are there tryed, when accused of any Crime. It is divided into Ten Chambers, viz.

The Grand Chamber, which tries great Causes, and judges Noblemen.

The Townelle (so called, because the Counsellors of the Grand Chamber attend in it by Turns) Civile, judges of Civil Causes to the Value of 1000 Livres or 50 Livres per Annum.

The Tournelle Criminelle, which judges all Appeals of Criminal Matters from the Subordinate Courts, not made by Noblemen.

Five Chambers of Inquest. Wherein the Depositions of Witnesses are written down, and Causes judg'd thereupon, in the Nature of our Bill and Answer in Chancery.

Two Chambers of Request, which judge the Causes of those that are privileged.

For the Service of these Chambers, there are one Chief President, and seven Presidents au Mortier (so called from a Cap they wear in form like a Mortar) who are all Persons of Quality: Twenty nine Counsellors, Clerks, among which the Archbishop of Paris, and the Abbot of S. Dennis have place; One hundred eighty and five Counsellors, Laicks; Fourteen Presidents of the Inquest and Request; Two Advocates General; one Procureur General, and Twenty Substitutes to him; Three Registers; with Grieffers, Notaries, Uffers, &c. and Four hundred Procureurs or Attorneys.

Besides the Parliaments, there are two other sorts of Supreme Courts in France, which are the Chambers of Accounts, and the Courts of Aides.

The Chambers of Accounts are Twelve in Number, and held at these Cities, viz. 1. Paris, 2. Roan, 3. Dijon, 4. Nantes, 5. Montpellier, 6. Grenoble, 7. Aix, 8. Pau, 9. Blois, 10. Lisic, 11. Aire, and 12. Dole. This Court administers the Oath of Fidelity to the Arch-

Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, &c. They Examine the Accounts of the Treasury, receive the Homage and Vassalage due from the Royal Feifs, &c. and Register the Treaties of Peace, and all other Contracts. Grants and Gifts of the King whatsoever.

The Courts of Aides are Eight, and held at these Cities, viz. 1. Paris, 2. Montpellier, 3. Roan, 4. Clermont Mont-ferrand, 5. Bourdeaux, 6. Aix, 7. Grenoble, and 8 of Burgundy at Dijon. This Court judges without Appeal all Causes relating to the Tailles, Aides Gables, and all other the Kings Revenues.

Under these Supreme Courts there are other for smaller Matters establish'd in all the Cities, and considerable Towns in the Kingdom, viz.

Presidial. A Court composed of several Judges who Try Civil Causes (and Appeals from Subaltern Justices in Villages) of Matters of smaller Importance. Each Presidial is divided under two Chiefs; The first judges definitively, and without Appeal, to the Sum of 250 Livres or 10 Livres per Annum; The second to the Sum of 500 Livres, or 20 Livres per Annum.

Generalities. Which are the Treasurers General of France; Of these there are Twenty three, conveniently disposed in several Parts of the Kingdom: Each Generality is composed of Twenty three Persons, who have the care of Assessing the Taxes, and Receiving the King's Revenue, in their respective Districts, which for their ease are divided into several Parts, called Elections. When the King in his Council, hath determined what extraordinary Sum must be levied upon the Subjects that Year, the Resolution is sent to the Generalities, who compute the Proportion of it that each of their Districts must raise: And then send their Orders to every Election, to raise so much as their Proportion amounts to, upon the Parishes within their respective Elections; and the Money being Collected, is returned with the Accounts to the Generalities, who remit it to the Exchequer. The same Method is used in levying the Tailles, and all Money raised for the King.

This is a Court also for judging Matters relating to the Crown-Lands and the Kings Revenue. They have the Inspection of all publick Works, and give out Orders concerning the building and repairing the Royal Houses (except Versailles and the Louvre) publick Bridges, Causeys, &c. They are Surveyors General of the High-ways, and Judge of the Nuisances without Appeal. All Letters of Enobling, Legitimation and Donation from the King must be registered in their Office. The Places that these Generalities are held in, will be seen in the following Description of the Country.

The Election is a subordinate Court to the Generality. It is composed of several Persons who compute the Proportion that every Parish in their Division must raise of the Sum demanded by the Generality, and send out their Orders to the Parishes accordingly, where the Inhabitants chuse one, who proportions it exactly among them, and collects it. This Court judges small Causes relating to the Imposts and Taxes.

For administering Justice and punishing Criminals, there are certain Officers and Magistrates in every considerable Town (who are commonly Lawyers) appointed by the King; they have different Titles, being in some places called Bailiffs, in others Provosts, and in others Seneschals, but their Power and Duty is much the same. The pursuing and seizing of Criminals belongs to them: They have Power also to punish them, as the Law directs, which they did formerly definitively, but since so many Parliaments have been instituted, Appeals are admitted to the Parliament from their Sentence. The District over which they have the Care is called a Bailliage, Proveste or Seneschausee.

There are also in some Places Officers call'd Intendants; these are men of the Law, whom the King sends into the Provinces or Generalities to give Orders in extraordinary Affairs. There are Intendants de la Justice, Police and Finance. They are also called Commissaries of Paris for executing the King's Orders in such or such a generality.

There are a multitude of other Courts and Officers in France, too many to describe here; what is said is enough to give the Reader a general Idea of the Government, and to explain the Terms of Generality, Election, &c. which often occur in the ensuing Description of the Kingdom.

The TAXES paid by the Common People of France are very large. Those that are constant, besides the extraordinary ones in time of War, are of six sorts, viz. 1. Tailles, a Sum paid yearly by every Houholder, according to his Substance and Family; granted by the Three Estates. 2. Tailions, paid by the same Persons as the Taille, and amounts to about one third of that; this was first imposed by Henry II. 1549. 3. Substance-Money, a Duty imposed by this present King for the Subsistence of the Soldiers in Winter, for which the Subject is excused from Free Quarter: It is paid in the same manner as the other two. These Taxes are paid by the Third Estate only, the Nobility and Clergy being exempt. 4. The Customs upon Merchandise imported and exported. 5. The Gabell, or Excise upon Salt, which is very high, and the People forc'd to take a certain quantity yearly, proportionate to their Family, and pay the Duty whether they can consume it or no. 6. Smaller Excises, Farms and other Demesns of the Crown, to the number of 26; all which raise a vast Sum.

The whole Revenue of the King of France in time of Peace hath been computed to amount to more than 150 Millions of Livres, or 11 Millions and 375 thousand Pounds Sterling per Annum.

The Accounts in France are kept in Crowns, Livres, Solz and Deniers; 12 Deniers make a Sol or Sou, 20 Solz a Livre or Florin, 3 Livres or 60 Solz make a Crown. A French Crown is of equal Value with Four Shillings and six Pence English; an English Crown yields in France 65 Solz; a Pound Sterling yields 13 Livres, and an English Guinea piece of Gold 14 Livres. The other Monies of France are a Double, which is two Deniers; a Liard, the fourth part of a Sol, Pieces of $\frac{3}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{2}$ Solz, the quarter and the half Crown, the two Livre piece. And of Gold, the Crown, value 5 Livres 14 Solz, Lys de Or value 7 Livres 10 Solz, the half Louis, the whole Louis d'Or, value 11 Livres, double Louis, &c.

SECT. VI.

Of the Extents of the French Dominions, and the Acquisitions of the present King.

Great part of the present Dominions of this Monarchy, were formerly divided among many Princes. Normandy, Aquitain and Anjou, were for some time subject to the Kings of England. Bretaigne was subject to its own Dukes, till A. D. 1484. The Dukes of Burgundy were powerful Princes for many Ages, and Lords of great part of the Netherlands, besides the Burgundies, till A. D. 1476, Charles the warlike, being kill'd in Battel by the Switzers, Lewis XI. seized the Dutchy of Burgundy: But that Family enjoyed the Earldom till the present King took it from the King of Spain, A. D. 1668. But being obliged to restore it at the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, he retok it, A. D. 1674, and both the Burgundies are now reckoned part of France.

Many little Principalities and Lordships were made Hereditary to certain Families, by Hugh Capet, which in time fell again to the Crown, as will be seen in the ensuing Description; and when the present King came to the Crown, he was in a manner the only Sovereign, very few of those Princes then remaining, and those that were, in time he found means to deprive of their Royalities, and render himself absolute, and sole Monarch of France.

Besides which, he hath encroached upon his Neighbours on every side, and hath made himself Master of the Province of Artois, great part of the Provinces of Flanders, Hainault, and Alsacia, The County of Burgundy above mention'd, &c. except what are restored by the late Treaty at Ryswick.

But the Reader may be better inform'd herein by the following Account of the Treaties of the Pyrenees, Aix la Chapelle, Nimeguen and Ryswick, viz.

By the Peace concluded in the Island of Pheasant, near the Pyrenean Mountains, A. D. 1659, these Towns were granted to the French King, viz. In Artois, Arras, Hesden, Bapume, Bethune, Lillers, Lens County of St. Pol, Terouane, and all the Bailiwicks and Castleries of Artois, except St. Omer, Aire, and their Dependencies; also Renty, if in the dependance of Aire, else not. In Flanders; Graveline, Pas, Fort St. Philip, with the Sluce, Hannuin, Bourlurg, St. Venant. In Hainault; Landreay and Quefnoy, with all their Bailiwicks and dependencies, Murienburg and Philippeville, in Exchange for la Bassée and St. Winocburg, Avenne. In Luxemburg; Tbionville, Montmidi, and Dumouilliers, the Provostships of Ivoy, Chavanay, Morville, Rocroy &c.

For

Cha

Chatelet, and Linchamps; so much of the Counties of Rouffillon, Conflent and Cardana, as lie on this side the Pyrenean; all the rest of those Counties, together with the Principality of Catalonia, being restored to the Spaniard. The upper and lower Alsatia; Suntgau, the County of Ferrette and Brisac, with its Dependencies, were also granted to the French.

The Duke of Lorraine by this Treaty was restored to his Dominions, except Miémizé. But the French King prevail'd upon him to make a Donation of them to him at his Death; by the pretence whereof, when that Duke died, A. 1675, the French entred upon them, and kept out his Nephew the late Duke of Lorraine. Afterwards at the Treaty of Nimeguen, at the instance of the Emperor, the Dutchy of Lorraine was offer'd to be restored to him, but with Condition, that the French King still keep the City of Nancy and its Jurisdiction, and also have four Roads cross his Country, of half a league in breadth from Nancy, viz. Into Alsace; to Vesout in the Franche Comte, to Metz, and to St. Dizier in Champaigne, together with the Sovereignty of all the Boroughs and Villages which lye in the said Roads of half a League's breadth; as also the Provostship of Longui, and its Dependencies, for which he was to exchange another Provostship of like value; by which means the French retain'd half Lorraine, besides all the Dutchy of Bar, the County of Clermont, and other Dominions of that Prince. But these Conditions were look'd upon by the young Duke as too hard, especially since the French King had promis'd him his whole Country; so that after much time in endeavouring to obtain better Terms, the Peace was concluded without including him; and the French possess'd the whole Country, till the late Treaty of Ryswick, whereby the present Duke was restor'd to the Royalty of his Ancestors: As is more particularly express'd hereunder in the Account of that Treaty.

By the Peace of Aix la Chapelle, or Aken, in the Dutchy of Fuliers in Germany, A. D. 1668. It was agreed,

That the French King should enjoy the Fortres of Charleroy, the Towns of Binck, Aeth, Doway, Tournay, Oudenard, Liste, Armentiers, Courtray, Bergues and Furnes, and the whole extent of their Territories, with the entire Sovereignty thereof.

By the Peace concluded at Nimeguen with the King of Spain, A. 1678. the Franche Comte, or County of Burgundy, with all the Towns and Places thereon depending, was granted to the French King; as also the Towns of Valenciennes and Bouchain, with their Dependencies; the Town and County of Cambrai, Air, St Omer, Menin, Conde, and Ypres, and their Dependencies; Warwick and Warneton on the Lys. Poperinghen, Bailleul, Mont Cassel, Bavay and Meunberge, with their Dependencies. And also the Town of Dinant.

And by the same Treaty the French restored these Towns, viz.

Charleroy, Ghent, Oudenard, Courtray, Binck, Aeth, St. Gbistain, Lewe, Limburg, and its Dutchy; the Country of Wates, and all the Dependencies of every of them in the Netherlands; and Puicercday in Cerdaigne, on the Frontiers of Catalonia, to the Spaniards. And to the Dutch, Mastricht.

And by the Treaty with the Emperor at the same place, A. 1679.

The Town and Citadel of Friburg in Brisgaw, with the Villages of Leln, Matbaufen and Kirkzarr, and their Liberties, as also a passage from Brisac to Friburg, were granted to the French; and in return Philipsburg was restored to the Bishop of Spire.

Soon after this Peace, viz. A. 1680. the French took Strasburg, which they still hold, together with the greatest part of its Bithoprick.

And A. 1684. they took the City of Luxemburg, and a great part of that Dutchy.

And once more this Monarch for his Glory, kindled the flame of War in Europe, which he began by the Siege of Philipsburg in the Month of September, 1688, and took it on the first of November following. And afterwards his Armies ravag'd and destroy'd the Palatinate, took and destroy'd the Cities of Hiedelburg, Spires, and Wormes. And in the Netherlands they took the Cities of Mons and Namur, and the Fortres of Charleroy: And in Savoy, Nissa, Suse, Montmellian, and Villa Franca. In Catalonia, Barcelona, &c. but Namur was retaken by the Confederate Army, under the Conduct of his Majesty King William, and all the rest were restored together with many other Cities and Places of Consequence, by the Peace concluded at Ryswick in Holland, September 10. 1697. where in it was agreed,

That to the Empire shall be restored all places possess'd by the French in Germany, out of Alsatia, with out demolition, and with the Artillery in them when taken: Particularly, Triers and Spires with all their Dependencies. The Palatinate to be restored, and the Dutches of Orleans to receive two hundred thousand French Livres per annum till her Pretensions be adjust'd. Friburg, Brisac, Philipsburg, to be restored with all their Dependencies, Fortifications and Artillery. Dinant to be restored (as when taken) to the Bishop of Liege. Sponheim, Veldents and Deny-Ponts with the Artillery, to the King of Sweden. Montbeliard to the Family of Wirtemberg. The Fort of Kiel restored, and those of Pille, Hunningen with the Bridge, Montroyal, Kembourg and Ebernbourg demolished. Trarbach restored, but dismantled.

On the other side, Strasburg was absolutely surrendered to France.

To the Duke of Lorraine was restored all the Estates which his Uncle was possess'd of in the Year 1670. with these exceptions, Sar Louis with half a League round it to remain to France, as also the City Longui with its Dependencies. Nancy and the Castles of Bitsch and Homburg, to be dismantled: And a passage permitted to the King of France's Soldiers thro' Lorraine, in the common Road, paying for what they take, and observing strict Discipline.

To Spain was restored, Barcelona, Gironne, Roses, Belver, and every place taken by the French in Catalonia. Luxemburg with his Fortifications, together with the whole Dutchy, and the County of Chiny. Charleroy and Mons with the Fortifications. Ath with all its Dependencies, except some few Boroughs. Courtray with all its Dependencies and Artillery. And in general all Places taken by the French since the Treaty of Nimeguen in all the Provinces of the Netherlands are restored.

The French have also Dominions in America; as Canada or New-France, upon the Continent; also Colonies in Now-Joundland, Martinico, St. Christophers, and other Islands, &c.

The Division of France.

This Kingdom is divided into Twelve Governments, Four of which lye to the North, Four in the middle; and Four to the South, viz.
 To the North, NORMANDY, PICARDY, the ISLE of FRANCE and CHAMPAIGNE.

CHAP. II.

NORMANDY, Normania.

THIS Province was under the Romans, part of the Lugdunensis in Gallia Celtaica; and when reduc'd by the French, was part of their Kingdom called Neustria; to which also Picardy, Champagne, and part of the Belgium belonged. But this part was ravish'd from them by some of those Northern People, that for many years infested all the Coasts hereabouts, and in the Reign of Charles the Simple, forced him to grant it to them: after which it was called NORMANDY, and Govern'd by its own Dukes descending from Rollo, who were powerful Princes, and often maintained Wars with the Kings of France. Of these William, surnam'd the Bastard, invaded England, upon a right he pretended to that Crown after the death of Edward the Confessor; and by his valour defeated Harold who had Usurp'd the Crown; and by his prudent management obtain'd the Government, and Reign'd Twenty years King of England. Afterwards this Province was part of the English Dominions for several Ages the History whereof is too long for this place. At present it is one of the most important Governments of France, affording a large Revenue to the Prince by reason of its situation on the Sea-coasts, and the fruitfulness of its Soil.

It is bounded on the North and West by the British Chanel, on the East by the Isle of France, and on the South by Perche and Maine, being extended from East to West for the space of about 160 Miles, viz from Amale to the Coasts of Coutantin; and about 70 Miles from South to North. The Country abounds in good Pastures, and is extremely fertile in Corn and Flax and divers sorts of Fruits, affording great quantities of Canvass, Cyder, and Beer, but little Wine. There are also Mines of Iron, together with some of Copper and other Metals. Moreover, a considerable Traffick is established in these parts, for Corn, Timber, Coal, Hay, Cattle, and Herbs proper for Dying, as Madder, Woad, &c. Within the Territories of this Government are contained 100 Towns, 150 large Burghs, and 120 Forests; as also, one Archbishoprick, 6 Suffragan Bishopricks, one University, and one Court of Parliament. It is water'd with 12 principal Rivers, viz. the Siene, Eure, Bresse, Toque, Dive, Orne, Vive, Selunc, See, Soule, Ouze, and Eu.

Normandy is usually divided into the Upper and Lower, the former comprehending four Bailliaiges, viz. those of Rouen, Eurieux, Caux, and Gisori. And the lower three, namely those of Caen, Alençon, and Coutance. But we shall distinguish this Province into the seven Diocesses, which are of Rouen, Lysieux, Bayeux, Coutance, Avanches, Seez, and Eurieux. The four first are situated on the Coasts of the English Chanel, in passing from East to West; the three other lie to the South of these, and are seen in returning from West to East; according to the order of the ensuing Table.

The Diocess of Rouen Arch- bishoprick divi- ded into four Countries, viz. those of	} Vexin Normand on the banks of the Seine, divided into these Parts, Roumois. Caux, Bray,	} Rouen Gisors Pont de l' Arch.

ROUEN or ROAN, Rotomagus aut Rosbomagus, the Metropolis of the Province, and Seat of an Archbishop, as also of a Court of Parliament, is seated on the North-side of the River Seine, in a valley environ'd with Hills and covered with Woods. It is a very considerable City, both on the Account of the Wealth of its Inhabitants and its Largeness, being extended for the space of seven Miles in compass. The Eastern-side is water'd with divers Rivulets, which passing through the Town cleanse the Streets, and after having turn'd a great number of Water-mills fall into the Seine: Over that River was erected a most stately Stone-bridge consisting of 13 Arches, but it is now ruined, and another of Boats of very artificial Structure, built near it, reaching 270 Paces in length; it rises with the Tide, and is paved like a Street. The City is defended with an old Castle on the Seine but that which stood on the adjacent Hill of St. Catharine, is now utterly ruin'd. It hath also good Walls, (in which are 16 Gates) large Ditches, Bulwarks, and Rampiers; It is enlarged with six very fair Suburbs and hath in it 13 Market-places, 136 Fountains and 35 Parish-Churches, and adorn'd with many noble Piles of Building; and among others the Cathedral Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the Quire whereof is lined round about with Copper: It hath three Towers of a vast height, particularly that of Renne, and that of the Pyramid; the Spire of which Steeple only (being made of Wood and cover'd with gilt Lead) hath 200 Steps, and the whole Edifice above 600. The great Bell in it, called George d'Amboise, is 13 foot high, and weighs 40000 pound: On the great Gate is a Triumphal Arch in Honour of King Henry IV. with emblems of his Conquest over the Holy League: The Body of the Church is supported by 21 Pillars, in which, and in the Chapel, are to be seen the magnificent Tombs of Cardinal d'Amboise, and of the Ancient Dukes and Archbishops; as also, the Monument of John Duke of Bedford, who was Regent of France under our King Henry VI. The other remarkable Buildings are, the Convent of the Cordeliers, the Church of the Jesuits, the old Palace or Castle, the Church and Abby of St. Ouen, and the Palace of the Parliament, which are very beautiful Structures. Also, the Archbishop's Palace, called Gailon, is a fair Building, adorn'd with fine Paintings and pleasant Gardens.

Rouen hath suffered many Calamities and Revolutions, it hath been almost entirely burnt at 13 or 14 several times; was taken by the Normans, A. C. 841. the English made themselves Masters thereof in 1418. and in 1449. it was surrender'd to the French King Charles VII. Afterwards it was storm'd and taken by the French Protestants, and retaken and pillaged under Charles IX. Anno. 1562. Anthony of Bourbon, King

King of Navarre, received a mortal Wound before it, but his Son Henry IV. took it in 1594. King William I. surnamed the Conqueror died here. It is distant 28 Miles from Eureux, to the North; 34 from Diepe to the South; near 40 from Beauvois to the West; 55 from Amiens to the South-west, 64 from Paris to the North-west, and 52 from Havre de Grace.

Pont de L'arche, Pons Arcis, or Pons Arcuensis, is a strong place seated a little below the confluence of the Rivers Seine and the Eure, and 10 Miles above Rouen to the South toward Eureux. It is strengthened with a Castle, and hath a fair Stone-bridge over the Seine built by King Charles the Bald. This was the first Town that surrendered it self to Henry IV. after his Accession to the Crown, in 1589. It is a place of Importance, and hath a particular Governor.

Gisors, Gifforium, Casfortium, aut Casfortium, stands on the Banks of the River Este, which divides Normandy from Picardy, and is fenced with a Fort now half ruin'd; it is the capital of a Bailliage, and is distant 40 Miles from Paris to the North-west, 30 from Rouen to the East.

In the Territory of the ROUMOIS are situated some small Towns and Villages, particularly Quiellebeuf, at the Mouth of the River Seine, and 30 Miles from Rouen to the West, and Montfort; but neither of these are places very considerable.

The Country of CAUX lies to the North part of the Vexin Normand, taking up the Northern and Western parts of Normandy on the North side of the Seine, and including a Bailliage of Parliament, together with these principal Towns, viz.

Diepe.	}	St. Valery.
Havre de Grace.		Eu.
Caudebec.		Aumale.

Diepe, Doppa, and Depa, is a noted Sea-port Town on the Shore of the British Sea, at the distance of 30 Miles from Rouen to the North, and 42 from Havre de Grace to the East. It is seated at the foot of the Mountains, and at the Mouth of the River Arques, which falling into the Sea makes the Haven; it is fortified with Bulwarks to the Sea, with a Fortrefs at the Suburb called Pollet, and a Castle; which, together with the craggy Mountains that lie on the South make it a place of good strength; and as such it was chosen by King Henry IV. for his Head Quarters when he was opposed by the League at his Accession to the Crown. The Town is reasonably large and well built, and is inhabited by Sea-faring Men, who are reckon'd very expert in Maritime Affairs; Mechanicks, that make curious Works in Ivory, and Merchants, who make considerable Traffick to foreign Parts, especially Newfoundland in America. Its Inhabitants were mostly Protestants till the late Persecution. The Haven is narrow but very long, and will receive Ships of great Burthen; but by reason of its straitness, is of difficult access. This Town hath been often taken and retaken in the Wars between the French and English. And in the year 1694. was almost totally destroyed by the Bombs that were shot into it from the English Fleet commanded by the Lord Berkeley.

Havre de Grace, Portus Gratiae, is a strong Sea-port Town at the Mouth of the Seine between Havreux and Fescamp, 40 Miles from Rouen to the West, 40 from Caen to the North East, and 20 from Lisieux to the North. It is a pleasant and well-built Town, and a place of good Trade, several Merchants inhabiting here that Trade to Newfoundland and other places. Francis I. and Henry II. fortified this Town to defend it from the Incurfions of the English; to which Lewis XIII. added a Citadel, which is flanked with four Loyal Bastions. In the Reign of Charles IX. it was seized by the Protestants, and by them delivered over to Queen Elizabeth in 1562. for the Assistance she gave them. But the next year it was vigorously besieged by the French, and as courageously defended by the English under the Earl of Warwick; but by reason of a Pestilence in the Town, they were forced to surrender on the 17th of July 1563, and returned home. This Town also was almost wholly destroyed by the Fire of the English Bombs the same year, 1694.

Havreux, a small Sea-port Town, stands at the mouth of the Seine, five Miles from Havre de Grace to the East. It was once a considerable Port, but Havre de Grace being found more convenient, this is now neglected.

Caudebec, Caledobecum, is seated near the Bar or Mouth of Seine, where that River meets the Sea-water, 24 Miles below Rouen toward Havre de Grace. It is remarkable on the account of its divers sorts of Manufactures, especially Hats, which bear the name of the place, and much are esteem'd in England and elsewhere.

Eu, Auga seu Augum & Eufium, is seated in the midst of pleasant Meadows, and on the banks of the River Brele which separates Normandy from Picardy, between Diepe and S. Valery, at the distance of one League from the Sea, 10 Miles from Diepe to the East, and 20 from Abbeville to the West. It is adorned with a stately Castle, and Abbey and a College of Jesuits; it gives Title to a Count and Peer of France, which hath been enjoy'd by several illustrious Families.

S Valeri, Fanum Sancti Valeri, stands on the Coasts of the British Sea, between Soreville and Veulveres, 40 Miles from Rouen to the North, and 20 from Diepe to the North West.

Aumale, Albamala, called Albermarle by the English, stands near the Spring-head of the River Ruffine in the Lower Normandy, and enjoys the Titles of a County and Dutchy: It is distant 36 Miles from Rouen to the N. E. 20 from Abbeville to the South, and 23 from Beauvois to the North.

Near Caudebec stands the Village Yvetot, which hath the Title of a Principality, and as some say, formerly a Kingdom. Longueville 10 Miles South from Diepe, and Estourville 15 Miles from Longueville give the Titles of Duke to two Peers of France, but otherwise not considerable.

The County of BRAY is extended on the right side of the River Seine, and contains these Towns, viz Gournay, Fleri, la Ferté, &c.

Gournay, Gornacum, is a small Town on the River Epte, distant 12 Miles from Gisors, and three from Neuf-Marche to the North.

The Diocess of LISIEUX lies between those of Rouen, Eureux, and Seex, and the Ocean on the South Side of the Seine.

Lisieux Bish.	}	Pont-l'Eveque.
Houfleur		Bernay, &c.

Lisieux Lexovium aut Noviomagus Lexoviorum a fair and large City, being the See of a Prelate Suffragan to the Archbishop of Rouen, is situated in a very beautiful Country in the Upper Normandy, and on the Banks of the River Lizon, at the distance of,

of 15 Miles from the Coasts of the British Chanel to the South, 46 from Rouen to the West, and 35 from Caen to the East. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to St. Peter. This See is of ancient Foundation, for Lotharius Bishop of Lysieux is found among the Bishops that assisted at the first Council of Orleans, held A. D. 511 as did also Theobald at the Third Council of Orleans in 538.

Henfleur, Honflorium, stands on the Coasts of the British Sea, at the Mouth of the River Seine, over-against Harfleur, from whence it is distant 8 miles to the South, as also 8 from Havre de Grace.

Pont L'evêque, Pons Episcopi, is Watered by the small River of Lezon, 8 miles below Lysieux to the North, and 5 from the Sea. This Town is more especially famous for a sort of excellent Cheefe made in it.

Berna Bernescum, is built on the side of the Rivulet of Carentonne, almost in the midst, between Eureux to the East, and Lysieux to the West, at the distance of 25 miles from both these Towns, and 26 from Candebeec to the South.

The Diocess of BAYEUX, lyes between the Ocean and those of Coutance, Sees and Lisieux, including these chief Towns, viz.

Breux Bith.	}	Vire ,
Caen .

Baveux Baioca, Baiocum and Baiocensis Urbs, olim Biducassel, Biducassum and Julobona, is Seated on the River Ave, which a little below is swallow'd up under Ground. It is distant 15 miles from Caen to the West, 35 from Coutance to the N. E. and but 5 from the Shore of the British Sea to the South. It is a very ancient City, dignified with the Title of a County, Bailliage, and Episcopal See; and its Bishop presides in the General Assemblies of the Clergy of the Province, during the Absence of the Archbishop of Rouen. The Cathedral Church Dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is extremely Magnificent, and Beautified with two high Spire-Steeples, besides a stately Tower. The City is divided into the Upper, and the Lower, or the Suburbs of St. John; whereto are joynd those of St. George and St. Patrick. It hath been often Pillag'd and Ruin'd in the X and XI Centuries, by the Incurfions of the Normans, and other barbarous Nations.

C A E N, Cadmus, aut Cadomus, is a large and well built City in the lower Normandy, having received its Name (according to the Opinion of some Authors) from Caius Cæsar, as the Latin word Cadomus, Cai Domus seems to import, in regard this Emperor resided here for some time, whilst he made preparations to pass into England. It is situated on the River Orne, and divided by its streams into the upper and lower Towns, between which there is a Communication, by the means of the Bridges of St. James and St. Peter, on the latter whereof is erected a stately Town-House, adorn'd with four large Towers. The upper Town is fenced with a Castle built on a Rock, very well fortified; the lower altogether incompass'd with Water. It is a place of good Trade, Boats of good burden being able to come up from the Sea to the Bridge of St. James. King Charles VII. Founded an University here, A. D. 1420, or 1431 which is become famous; also a Mint-Office about the same time. An Academy of Ingenious Men hath been Establihed here about twenty five years ago. It is believed that the second Council which Maurice Archbishop of Rouen Celebrated, in 1063, was held at Cæn in the presence of William Surnamed the Conquerour King of England, and Duke of Normandy, who was interr'd in the Abby of St. Stephen in this City, which he had founded. It is distant 74 Miles from Rouen, and 30 from Lisieux to the West, and 15 from Bayeux to the East.

Vire, Vira, is a very neat Town, Founded on the Banks of a small River of the same Name, about 33 Miles from Caen to the South-West, and as many from the Coast of the British Sea to the South.

Torigny, Toriniacum, Tauriniacum, is a small Town near the same River of Vire, being distant 15 Miles from that Town to the North, and 33 from Coutance to the East.

The Diocess of COUTANCE lies in the lower Normandy, between Bayeux, Avanches, and the Western Ocean. The Principal Towns whereof are these, viz.

Coutance Bith.	}	Bayfleux .
S. Lo.			Cberbourg .
Granville .			Valogne .
Carentain .

Coutance, or Constance, Castra Constantia, aut Consediæ, the Metropolis of the Country called from thence Le Coutantia, is a Bailliage, a Prefidial, and the See of a Bishop Suffragan to Rouen, Seated on the River Burd, at the distance of 7 miles from the Sea over against the Isle of Jersey to the East; and 52 miles from Caen to the West. The Adqueducts found in the Adjacent Territories of this City are a sufficient mark of its Antiquity; and the pleasant Meadows watered with a great number of Brooks, with which it is encompass'd, render its Situation very delightful. It is pretty large and Populous, and adorn'd with many stately Edifices, particularly the Cathedral Church, the Churches of St. Peter and St. Nicholas, divers Monasteries, a Colledge Founded by John Michael, a Canon of this Diocess; and King Lewis XI. caused the Walls of Coutance to be demolish'd, because the Inhabitants had declared in favour of Prince Charles his Brother; and under the same Reign it was expos'd to the Incurfions of the Bretons. It suffered much likewise during the English Wars, and was taken by the French Protestants, A. D. 1562.

Granville, Grandivilla, aut Magnavilla, a good Seaport, stands partly on a Rock, partly in a plain, on the Coasts of the British Chanel, 6 Leagues from the Island of Jersey; as also 16 from Coutance to the South.

Carentan, Carentonium is built in a Marshy Ground on the side of the River Orve, where it receives the Carentan or Carente, being distant 25 miles from Bayeux, to the W. 20 from Coutance to the N. and only 3 from the Sea; insomuch that the Vessels of the largest size arrive there at high Tides. It hath large Suburbs, a strong Castle, and firm Walls, and environ'd with Ditches full of Water. This Town bears the Title of a County, and hath been Subject to divers revolutions in the preceding Age.

Cberbourg, Caroburgus, aut Cæsaribus Burgus, is seated on the Sea-coasts between the Cape La Hogue and Barfleux, and hath a very capacious Harbour, at the distance of 32 miles from Coutance to the N. and 24 from Carentan to the N. W. In this place was formerly made admirable Glais, which for clearness and beauty even excell'd that of Venice; but the Work-houses have been lately remov'd for certain reasons of State, to Auxerre in Burgundy, and these Glasses are polish'd in the Fauxbourg St. Antoine at Paris. The Town of Cberbourg was the last of the Province Province that remained to the English, and fell into the Hands of the French under Charles VII. in 1453. It is very strong by reason of its Situation, (the Sea flowing almost round it every Tide) and its Fortifications lately erected.

Valognes, Valonie, olim Alaune, is a small Town on the River Ouze, in the Country of Coutantin, being distant 10 miles from the Coasts of the British Sea, 14 from Cherbourg, to the East, and 30 from Coutance to the North.

Barfleur, a small Town on the Sea-shoat, 10 miles from Valognes to the North. It was formerly the Landing place of our Kings that were Masters of that Province. And hath of late been made known by a very signal Victory the English Fleet, commanded by Admiral Ruffel, obtained over that of France, commanded by Tourville, May, 1692.

La Hogue, a small Sea Town on the Northwest point of Normandy, thence called Cape la Hogue, which hath been made notable to Posterity by the bravery of the English Seamen, who after the above mentioned Victory in 1692, did attack and burn the French Admiral, call'd the Royal Sun, (a very glorious and large Ship) and twelve more of their best and largest Men of War; which had been run aground here to avoid the English Fleet, and the Cannon carried ashore and planted upon the Plat-forms for their defence; notwithstanding which the English under Sir Ralph Delaval, did in their Boats burn them all as above said. This Cape is about 15 miles North from Cherbourg.

The Diocels of AURANCHES lies between those of Coutance, Bayeux and Seez in the South west part of the lower Normandy. Its most remarkable Towns are these.

Auranches Bith. } Mortain.
Mont St. Michael. } Pont Orson.

Auranches, Abrince, olim Legedia and Ingena Abrincataurum, stands upon a hill on the side of the River See, which a little below falls into the Sea, being distant 22 miles from Coutance to the South, and 50 from Bayeux to the S. W. It is a place of very great Antiquity, and (as 'tis supposed) was inhabited by the Ambliates, a People mentioned by Cesar in his Commentaries. Its extent is not very large, but it is however a Bailiwick and Vicounty, and hath in it besides the Cathedral, several Parish Churches, and Monasteries. It is well fortified with a strong Castle and other Bulwarks. Theodia and Albert, Cardinals and Legats of the See of Rome, held a Council or Assembly in this City by the special Order of Pope Alexander III. to take information concerning the Murderers of Thomas a Becket Archbishop of Canterbury; and Henry II. King of England was thereupon oblig'd to clear himself by an Oath from the Accusations laid to his charge. The Bishoprick was erected by Clovis the Great.

Mont St. Michael, Mons Sancti Michaelis in periculo Maris, is a large Town, together with a famous Abby, defended by a strong Castle, built at the foot of a Rock, which was heretofore a Mountain encompassed with Forrests, the Seat of certain Hermits. This Rock stands in the midst of a large sandy Shoar, or Strand, which is covered with the Sea-water at high tide. There goes a Fabulous Story that St. Michael the Arch-Angel appeared A. D. 708 to Albert Bishop of Auranche, admonishing him to cause a Church to be erected on the top of this Rock, and consecrated to his Name, whose Orders were soon put in execution by the Reverend Prelate, and Augustin Bishop of the same Diocels in the beginning of the VIII. Century, constituted Canons to Officiate therein; afterwards, viz. in 966 Richard I. Duke of Normandy, founded an Abby of the Benedictine Order; and his Son Richard II. furnished the Undaunted, finished the Church in 1026. This place is famous for the frequent resort of Pilgrims, and on the account of the great quantities of Salt extracted out of the Sands that are impregnated with Sea-water.

Mortain, Moritainum is seated near the River Ardeze, on the Frontiers of the Province of Mayne, being about 7 miles distant from thence, and 20 from Auranches to the East. This Town is the Seat of a Bailiff, and enjoys the Title of a County or Earldom, which Henry I. King of England and Duke of Normandy, granted to his Nephew Stephen of Blois, who obtain'd also that of Bohen, by his Marriage with Maud the Daughter of Englacc Earl of Bohen, and was afterwards King of England.

Pont-Orson, Pons Orsonis, stands on the Frontiers of Bretaigne, near the mouth of the River Croesfion, which a little below dischargeth it self into the Sea, 16 miles from Auranches to the South-east.

The Diocels of SEEZ is extended between those of Auranches, Bayeux, and Lisieux, toward the Southern part of Normandy, and contains these principal Towns, viz.

Seez Bith. } Falaise.
Aleson. } Argentan.

Seez, Saginn, olim Sessui and Vagoricum Sessuorum, is seated on the River Orne, near its Source, and but an ordinary built City, although dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See, which (as some Authors say) was translated hither from Oximum or Hiesmes, an adjacent Town of great Antiquity. Seez is distant 64 miles from Roan to the S. W. 37 from Lisieux to the S. 70 from Auranches to the E. and 12 from the Frontiers of Mayne.

Alencon, Alencomium, aut Alentia, is pleasantly seated on the River Sarte, in a fruitful Plain between the Forests of Escours and Perseigne, at the distance of 13 miles from Seez to the S. and 66 from Auranches to the E. It is a very fair and large City, having long since enjoy'd the Title of an Earldom, which was erected into a Duchy by Charles VI. 1414. and hath been often conferr'd on the Royal Progeny of France: In the principal Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, are to be seen the Tombs of the Dukes of Alencon, and not far from thence a stately Bridge erected over the Sarte, where it intermixeth its Waters with those of the Briane, which forms a small Island in the Town, whereon stands the Convent of St. Claire. This City hath been often taken by different Parties, and suffered much damage during the Civil Wars of France.

Falaise, Falefia, aut Falefia, a small Town of the Lower Normandy, took its name from the Rocks that environ it, and is situated on the little River Anne, at the distance of 18 miles from Caen to the South, and 34 from Seez to the North West. The first Dukes of Normandy chose it for their Palace in the time of Peace, and Fortrefs during the Wars. Here is a strong Castle built upon a Rock. It was the last place which the English subdued in this Province, and was by them exceedingly well fortified; and the last in like manner that surrendered to Charles VII. in 1430. The Suburbs called La Guibray, are famous for the Fairs that have been held there in the Month of August, ever since the Reign of William the Conqueror. The Town is encompass'd with large Motes and two Ponds, one of which can never be dried up; and not far from thence stands Mount Aricnes, whence Birds of Prey are often taken, and sometimes Eagles.

Notes

Argentan, Argentomum, Argentanium, Argentomacum, aut Argentomagium, is a very neat Town on the River Orne, distant about 10 miles from Falaife, to the S. E. 12 from Seez to N. W. and 20 from Alençon to the North.

The Diocesis of EUREUX lies between those of Seez, Rouen, and Lisieux, toward the Southern and Western parts of Normandy. The most considerable Towns whereof are these, viç.

Evreux, Bish. } Bugles.
Beaumont, le Roger. } Vernon.
Bretueil. }

Evreux, Ebroicum, olim Ebroica, and Mediolanum, Eburovisum, is seated in a very fertile Plain in the upper Normandy, and on the side of the Rivolet Iton, which a little below falls into the Eure, being distant 30 miles from Roan to the S. 48 from Seez to the E. and 54 from Paris to the W. It is a very ancient City; and an Episcopal See hath been long since established therein; besides a Bailliage and a Court Presidial. It contains a great number of Churches and Monasteries, more especially the Cathedral, adorned with twelve large Towers, and the Abbies of St. Thurin and St. Saviour. This City hath been formerly subject to the Jurisdiction of its own Counts or Earls, Princes of the Royal Blood, and other Potent Lords, from whom were descended Walter and Robert D' Evreux, Earls of Essex in England, &c.

Beaumont le Roger, Bellomontium Rogerij, stands on a rising-ground, 15 miles from Evreux to the N. W. towards Lisieux, and is water'd by the River Rille. This Town bears the Title of a County or Earldom, and hath been govern'd by very noble Lords, of whom Earl Roger gave his name to it, and caus'd it to be enlarged and beautified with a great many fair Buildings; since when it hath been well fortified.

Bretueil, Bretolium and Britolium, stands near the River Iton, about 12 miles from Evreux to the West. Henry II. King of England and Duke of Normandy, gave this Town to Robert de Montfort; and his Sister Amicia sold it to the French King Philip the August, A. D. 1210. Afterward it devolv'd as an Inheritance on Charles King of Navarre, who exchange'd it for some other Possessions with Charles VII. in 1416.

Vernon, Vernonium, and Verno, is water'd by the River Seyne, over which is erected a Stone-bridge, now half demolish'd; distant 26 miles from Roan to the South, and 16 from Evreux to the North-east.

For the Government of this Province the King appoints a Governour or Commander in general, and under him, two Lieutenant-Generals; besides which he hath a Lieutenant in every one of the seven Bailiwicks, and particular Governours in all the chief

CHAP. III.

PICARDY, was part of the ancient Gallia Belgica, and inhabited by Suessones, &c. But the Original of its present Name although Modern, is difficult to find out; there is little reason to believe that it was deriv'd from certain Picards of Bohemia, who were declared Heretics; nor from a Greek word, the signification whereof is conformable to the hafty and pettish Humour of the Inhabitants.

This Province is the most Northern of all France, and is extended along the Banks of the British Channel from Callis in a narrow tract of Land to the River Brele, which separates it from Normandy; from thence being much wider, it goes directly West for near 110 miles, where it is bounded by the Northern part of Champaign. Its whole length may be reckon'd 140 miles, for from Calais to Abbeville is about 54 miles, and from thence to the borders of Champaign is about 90 miles, but then the breadth is not answerable, for in the broadest part it is not above 35 miles, and in the Bolonnois not above 15 miles broad. On the South it is bounded by the Ile of France, and on the North by Artois and Hainault.

Picardy is esteem'd one of the most considerable Provinces of the Kingdom, and is remarkable on account of the most ancient Nobility of the Realm, who derive their Original from thence, besides a great number of Valiant Soldiers and experienc'd Commanders; the People are very Generous, Courteous, Civil and Courageous, yet somewhat too much inclined to Anger and Voluptuousness. The Soil is extremely fertile in Corn and divers sorts of Fruits, which hath given occasion to a Saying among the French, that Picardy is the Granary and Magazine of Paris; but this Country affords very little Wine. Its Principal River is the Oise, which receives into its Channel the Streams of the Serre, the Somme, the Aubie and Canche. The two former of these flow toward the East, and the three others towards the West, until they discharge themselves into the British Channel, near the Territories of Calais. It is observed, that the Waters of the Somme never freez nor diminish, as do those of the other neighbouring Rivers.

For the Administration of Justice, here are many Bailiages, Prefidials, and other Courts of Judicature that depend on the Jurisdiction of the Parliament of Paris. The Towns are govern'd by Mayors and Sheriffs; besides the General Governor, there are 18 particular ones. The Bishopricks in Picardy are Four, which are subject to the Metropolitan See of Rheims. This Province was never alienated from the Demefns of the Crown, and is usually divided into three Parts, viz. The Upper-Picardy, the Middle, and the Lower, according to the following Table.

Picardy is divided into 3 Parts.	}	The Upper on the Oise in 3	}	The Dutchy of Tierache Laonnois Soiffonnois	}	These two last are annexed to the Ile of France .
	}	The Middle on the Somme , in 3.	}	Vermandois . The Country of Santerre or Sangters . Amienois .	}
	}	The Lower on the Sea-coasts, in 3.	}	Pontbieu . Boulonnois .	}	The recover'd Countries.

The Dutchy of TIERACHE, Tieracœsia, is the most Eastern Part of Picardy, and lies between Hainault, Champagne, Vermandois and Laonnois, and includes within its Precincts, these remarkable Towns, viz.

Guise, La Fere, Verains, Marle,	}	La Chapelle, Ribermont, Moncornet, Aubenton.

Guise, Guifia, and Guifium Castrum, is situated on the River Oise, towards the Confines of Hainault, it is well fortified with a Castle and other strong Ramparts, and was strong enough to oppose the Spaniards, who besieged it in the year 1650. It is distant 80 miles from Paris, to the North East, 48 from Amiens to the East, and 25 from Cambray to the South-east. This Town at first bore the Title of an Earldom only, enjoyed by the younger House of Lorraine; till A. D. 1528. Claude the younger Son of Rene, Duke of Lorraine, was created Duke of Guise by Francis I. whose Grandson, Henry D. of Guise, made himself Head of the Holy League, which under the pretence of Religion and extirpation of Heresie, as they call'd Protestancy, fomented Sedition, and at length took up Arms and maintained a Rebellion against Henry III. and Henry IV. making France a Scene of War and bloodshed for many years; till at last Henry IV. by his Victorious Arms, brought them to submission, and restored the Peace of his Country.

La Fere, Fava, is situated also on the Oise, near the borders of the Ile of France, at the distance of 20 miles from Guise to the South, and 15 from Laon to the West. It is a strong place seated in a marshy Ground, and defended by a strong Castle, which stands between the two Suburbs of St. Firmin and the Virgin Mary, and deep Trenches full of Water, which renders the place almost inaccessible; by which means it hath been able to resist divers Sieges. However the Spaniards made themselves Masters of it during the Civil Wars of France in the end of the XVI Century. But Henry IV. regained it in the month of May, 1597.

Verains, Veroineum, stands on the Banks of the Rivulet Serre, in the midst between Capelle to the North, and Marle to the South, at the distance of 8 miles from both these Towns; as many from the Frontiers of Champagne to the West, and 15 miles from Guise to the East. This Town is more especially famous for a Treaty of Peace concluded therein between Henry IV. King of France, and Philip II. King of Spain, on the 2d day of May, 1598.

La Chapelle, is a Fortrefs near the Confines of Hainault, and is distant about 3 miles from the Oise, 15 miles from Landrechies to the South-east, and 15 miles from Guise to the North-east. It was built in the last Age, on purpose to restrain the Incurfions of the Flemings, and hath been often taken and re-taken by the contending Parties.

The Countries of Laonnois and Soiffonnois, being taken from Picardy, and made part of the Ille of France, an account shall be given of them in the Description of that Province.

The Country of VERMANDOIS, Ager Veromanduensis, lies between that of Tierache to the East, Santerre to the West, Cambresis to the North, and the Ille of France to the South, containing these chief Towns, viz.

St. Quintin.	} } } } } }	Beauvevoir,
Ham,		Bobaim.
La Casselet,

St. Quintin, Quintinopolis, aut Fimur Quintini, is seated on the rising Ground near the Source of the Somme, having the River on one side, and a steep Valley on the other, 15 miles from Guise to the West, and 15 from La Fere to the North. It sprang up out of the Ruins of Augusta Vermanduorum, or Vermand, a small Village near it, and is now a considerable City, being very populous, and hath divers sorts of Manufactures, especially Linnen Cloth, made in it. The Collegiate Church of St. Quentin, is a noble pile of Building; there are also other fair and well-built Churches, and a great number of Monasteries. This Town being besieged by the Spaniards, in 1557, the Constable Montmorancy came to its Relief, and fought a fatal Battel with the Spaniards, wherein the Constable was taken Prisoner, together with the Dukes of Montpensier and Longueville, the Marfhal de St. Andre, 10 Knights of the Order, and 300 Gentlemen; besides 600 Gentlemen and 3000 private Soldiers killed, Upon which the City was taken, but restored two years after at the Peace concluded at Chateau Cambresis, a Town near the Frontiers of Hainault.

Ham, Hamum, is situated in a Plain, having the River on one side of it, and a Marsh on the other, and stands 12 miles from St. Quentin to the West. Here is a Citadel which was built by order of Lewis of Luxemburg, or Constable de St. Paul, A. D. 1470. This Town was taken by the Spaniards, in 1595, after the Battle of St. Quentin; but the French took it again by Storm, and put the whole Garrison to the Sword.

SANTERRE, or Sangers, Ager Santerrensis, aut Sanguiterfa, is extended between Amienois to the West, and Vermandois to the East. The most considerable Towns of this Country are these, viz.

Peronne ,	} } } } } } } }	Nesle ,
Mont-Didier ,		Breteil ,
Roie ,		Chabames ,
Moreuil ,		St. Just .

Peronne, Perona, seated on the River Somme, is a very strong Hold, and one of the Keys of the Kingdom of France: The Spaniards have often endeavour'd to surprize it, but the Marthes that encompass it, and the Ramparts that defend it rendering it exceeding strong, they have always been repulsed. It is distant 15 miles from St. Quentin to the West, 20 from Cambray to the South, and 75 from Paris to the North, on the Road to Douay.

Mont-Didier; Mons Desiderii, aut Mondiderium, is a large Town, built on a Hill in the midst between Amiens and Compaigne, at the distance of 20 miles from both; 24 miles from Peronne to the South-west upon a small River which falls into the Aurence, that falls into the Somme at Amiens. It is a strong Town, and has often resisted the Spaniards.

Nesle, Nigella, is water'd with the Brook Ignon, which falls into the Somme. It stands upon the Road 15 miles South from Peronne. It is a small Town that bears the Title of one of the most ancient Marquises of the Kingdom. Charles the Warlike D. of Burgundy, took this place by Storm, in 1472. when it suffer'd all sorts of Outrages, by reason that the Inhabitants had killed a Herald at Arms, who had been sent to summon it and two of his Men, during a Truce which had been granted to them, inasmuch that the Altars were not able to protect the miserable People that fled for Refuge into the Churches; and they that escaped the fury of the Soldiers, were either Hang'd, or had their Hands cut off.

Roye stands on the River Aurence 10 miles South from Nesle.

Chaunes, Celociacum, situated in the midway between Amiens and St. Quentin, and 7 from Peronne to the South-west, is a small Town, nevertheless dignified with the Title of a Duchy. &c.

AMIENOIS, Ager Ambianensis, lies between Artois to the North, Santerre to the East, Beauvoisis to the South, and the Country of Caux to the West. The Towns of chiefest note are these, viz.

Amiens , Bish.	} } } } } }	Doutlans ,
Corbie ,		Pequigne ,
		Conti .

Amiens, Ambienum, alis Amviani, and Samarobrina, the Metropolis of Picardy, and the See of a Prelate Suffragan to the Arch-bishop of Rheims, is situated on the River Somme, forming a Triangle with Paris and Roan, being distant 66 miles from Paris, and 55 from Roan, as also 30 from Aras to the South, and 24 from Peronne to the West. It is a place of very great Antiquity, the Inhabitants having fought most resolutely against Julius Cesar, and even took up Arms against those of Rheims, only because they had too easily yielded to the Conqueror. Afterward Cesar erected a Magazine for his Army, and caused a general Assembly of the Gaulish People to be conven'd there. The Emperor Antoninus Pius enlarg'd it, as also did his Son Marcus Aurelius. The Emperors Constantin, Constantin, Julian, Valentinian, Valens, Gratian, and Theodosius, chose Amiens for their Royal Seat in Gaul. However it suffer'd much damage by the Incurfions of the Alans, Vandals, and Normans, A. C. 925. and was almost intirely burnt, but soon after rebuilt. The City affords a very pleasant Prospect, by reason of the largeness of the Streets, the Beauty of the Houses, and the extent of the publick Places, of which there are two, where seven fair Streets meet; the Ramparts have two rows of Trees planted on them, which form a delightful Walk. The River Somme enters into the City in three different Channels through as many Bridges, and after having water'd several parts of the City, they are united at the other end of the Town, near St. Michaels Bridge. The Cathedral Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is one of the fairest and best adorn'd in France: The Pillars, Quire, Chappels, Tombs and Paintings are admirable, and more especially the Gate flanked with two high Towers, on which are placed many Statues. King Philip VI. of Valois first fortified this City, which Lewis XI. much improv'd by additional Works, and Henry IV. built a strong Citadel after he had retaken it from the Spaniards, who had seiz'd it by Stratagem in 1597. Queen Isabel of Bavaria establish'd a Parliament there, but that was afterwards remov'd. At present it has a Bailiwick, Prefidial, and Generality, and the Bishop, Vidame, and Bailly, are after the King, the three chief Lords.

Corbie, Corbia, is likewise seated on the River Somme, which there intermixeth its waters with those of the Otnere, 7 miles above Amiens to the North-east, and 20 from Peronne to the West. It is a strong Place, but was however surpriz'd by the Spaniards in 1636. and recover'd by the French a little while after. This Town grew up out of an Abby, which St. Behilde Queen of France, the Wife of Clovis II. found- ed, together with her Son Clotaire III. A. C. 660. It is called Old Corbie, to distinguish it from Corbie or Corwey, a small Town of Westphalia in Germany.

Doullens, Dulendum, is a very strong Town divided into the Upper and Lower, and Water'd by the River Aubie on the Frontiers of Artois, being distant 20 miles from Arras to the S. West, and 18 from Amiens to the North. It heretofore belong'd to the Counts of Ponthieu, but was annex'd to the Crown in 1559.

Conty, Contiacum, is a small Burg on the Rivulet of Celle, about 10 miles from Amiens to the South: It is dignified with the Title of a Principality, which hath given name to a Branch of the illustrious House of Bourbon. It was at first subject to the Dominion of its own Lords, afterwards transfer'd to the Family of Maisil, and at length devolv'd on that of the Prince of Bourbon.

The County and Earldom of PONTHIEU, Comitatus Ponthovicus, was formerly an Inheritance of the younger Sons of France, and is extended along the Banks of the River Somme, which renders the Ground every where marthy. The Principal Towns are these, viz.

Abbeville.	}	Rue.
St. Riquier.		Montreuil.
Pont de Remi.		Cressy.
Le Croitot.

Abbeville, Abbatis Villa, or Abbevilla, is seated on the River Somme at the distance of 83 miles from Paris to the North, near 40 from Bullen, 25 from Amiens to the N. West, and 15 from the Coasts of the British Sea to the East. It is supposed to have been founded by S. Riquier, or some of the Abbots his Successors, and that Hugh Duke of France built the Castle. It is at present the Capital City of the County of Ponthieu, and one of the strongest and most important places of the Kingdom; it hath always enjoyed certain peculiar Privileges. Here is a Prefidial Court, a Canonship, 12 Parishes, and many Religious Houses, among which that of S. Usfran is most considerable. This City hath produced many great Men, and in this Age it hath given the World those Learned Geographers, Nicholas Sanson, William Sanson his Son, Peter Duval, and Philippus Brietius.

S. Riquier, Centula, nunc S. Richarius, took its name from a certain Saint who was a Native of this Place; it is near the River Cardon, and is distant 5 miles from Abbeville to the East toward Doullens.

Monstreuil, Monstrolium, aut Monasteriolum, stands on an Hill the Foot whereof is washed by the River Canche 8 miles from the Coasts of the British Sea, (from whence Boats of good Burthen come up to the Town,) 24 from Abbeville to the North on the Road to Calis. Its name is derived from two ancient Abbeys of the Benedictin Order, viz. one called S. Saviour for Monks, and the other S. Aufreberte, for Nuns. The Town is distinguish'd into the Lower, built along the Banks of the River, and the Upper, which is separated from the former by a Wall. It is the Seat of a Bailly, and was united to the Crown with the County of Ponthieu; and is defended by strong Works and a good Citadel.

Cressy, Cressacum, is a small Town or Burgh on the River Aubie on the Frontiers of Artois, and the Baili- age of Abbeville, from whence it is distant 12 miles to the North. It was heretofore only a Village, and is more especially famous on the Account of the memorable Battle fought between the English and French in the time of Philip of Valois, on the 26 of August, 1346. when the former, under the Conduct of their Valiant King Edward III. and his heroic Son called the black Prince, defeated their Enemies with a very great slaughter, and obtain'd a most signal Victory; for above 80 Standards were taken, 30000 of the French Infantry, and 1200 Horse were slain in the Field, where also John King of Bohemia, Charles Count of Alençon, the French King's Brother, and Lewis Count of Flanders lost their Lives, together with 12 other illustrious Counts and Earls, and even the whole flower of the Nobles of France. There is also another Town of Cressy in the same Province of Picardy, on the River Somme in the County of Tierache, 8 miles from Laon to the North, and as many from Fere to the East, besides a third in Champaigne, within three Leagues of Meaux, called Crecy or Cressy in Brie, &c.

BOULONNOIS. Comitatus Bolonnenfis, is extended between Artois, the County of Ponthieu, the recovered Country, and the strait of Calis, including these principal Towns, &c. viz,

Bolon, Cap. Bish.	}	Estaples,
Moni-Hulin,		Ambleteuse.

Boulogn, or Bolen, Bolonia, is situated on the Sea shore at the distance of 20 miles from the Town of Calis to the South, 10 Leagues from the nearest Coasts of England, 15 miles from Monstreuil, and 36 from Abbeville to the North. It is divided into the Upper and Lower Town, the former being well fortified with a strong Citadel, and adorned with divers publick Places and Fountains, as also a Palace wherein Justice is administred; a Cathedral Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, a Parochial Church of S. Joseph, an Abby of S. Vilemar, and some other Monasteries. The lower Town is not inhabited by so many Persons of Quality as the other, but is larger and more considerable for its Trafick, and extends along the Port at the mouth of the River Liane. The Harbour is not very commodious; in it formerly stood a Watch-Tower, called La Tour de Ordre, and by the English, The Old Man, said to be built by Julius Caesar, and repair'd by the Emperor Charles the Great; but being neglected, is now fallen down. The Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Rheims, was establish'd here by Pope Paul IV. after the destruction of Therouane. This City, together with the adjacent Territories, was formerly subject to the Dominion of its own Counts of great Reputation, from whom were descended Godfrey of Boulogn, and his Brother Baldwin, Kings of Jerusalem, but it was united to the Crown of France by King Philip II. the August, A. D. 1209. Bolen was taken by King Henry VIII. King of England, in 1544. and afterward restor'd to the French King Henry II. by Treaty of Peace in the Year 1550.

Mont Hulín, Mons-Hulini, is a Fortrefs standing on a Hill near the River Liane on the borders of Ayrou; it has a Citadel which was built against the Spaniards, and is distant 9 miles from Bolen to the East.

Eftaples, Stapule, a large Burgh, is fenc'd with an old Castle, and stands near the Sea a little above the mouth of the River Canebe, 6 miles from Monfneuil, and 14 from Bolen to the South.

Ambleteuse, Ambletofa, is a Village having a small Port on the Coasts of the British Channel heretofore called Amftat; it is distant only 7 miles from Bolen to the North, and about 12 from Calis to the South.

THE RECOVER'D COUNTRIES, Recuperata Dirio, is a small Tract not above 15 miles over, and lieth to the North of Bolen, containing these Towns, viz.

Calis. Guifnes. Ardes, Principality.

CALAIS or CALIS, Calerum, is seated in a marshy Plain on the Coasts of the British narrow Sea, called from thence the strait of Calis, at the distance of 9 miles from Gravelin, and the confines of Flanders to the West, 20 from Bolen to the North, and about 8 leagues from Dover, and the nearest shoar of England to the South-west. It is reported, That Baldwin IV. surnamed the bearded Count of Flanders, first built the Port, and that Philip Count of Bolen caus'd the Town to be encompass'd with Walls, which before was only a simple Burgh. However, it is at present a considerable Mart and a place of strength, its Fortifications consisting of 9 royal Bastions, besides those of the Citadel, and many other Out-works, all lined with Stone; being also encompass'd with a very large and deep Ditch, into which falls the River Hames, as well as a great number of other Brooks, after having pass'd through the adjacent Fens, with which it is surrounded, there being only one passage to the Town over a Causey, commonly called the Bridge of Nicullay, and none can enter without the Permission of the Garrison of the Ricebank into the Port, which is divided into two parts; one whereof is named Cap de Grey, the other is larger and shut up between two Moles built of Stone. The Town is extended in form of a Triangle, with a Castle: The most remarkable things in it are two stately Towers; the Altar of the Grand Church is all of wrought Marble, and its Dome extremely magnificent. In the Marshes are to be seen floating Islands; and Sluces, by which the Country may be overflow'd within a little space of time. Edward III. King of England took the Town of Calis from the French, A. D. 1347. but they at length recover'd it under the Conduct of the Duke of Guise in 1558. after the English had possess'd it above 210 years. Afterwards Albert Archduke of Austria and Viceroy of the Low-Countries, made himself Master of it in 1596. and it was restor'd two years after to the French King Henry IV. by the Articles of the Peace of Verbins.

Guines, Guifne, is a small Town, yet the chief of a County of the same name, formerly subject to its own Earls, who are celebrated in History: It is seated in a marshy Ground, and is distant 6 miles from the Sea; as many from Calis to the South, and somewhat less from Ardes.

Ardes, Ardra, and Arda, is a well fortified Town, and bears the Title of a Principality, altho' of a very small extent; It stands on the Frontiers of Arton, about 8 miles from Calis to the South, and somewhat more from Gravelin. A famous Interview was celebrated near this place, between Henry VIII. King of England, and Francis I. King of France, in the Month of June, 1520. for the ratifying of a Treaty of Peace. The Attendants of these two Princes were most richly cloth'd, and their Court appear'd so splendid that it was termed the Camp of Cloth of Gold. Cardinal Albert of Austria took Ardes in 1596. but was oblig'd to resign it to the French within a little while after.

The Governor-General of Picardy is also Governor of Artois, and under him are three Lieutenant-Generals. There are also particular Governors in these Towns, viz. Amiens, Abbeville, Boulogn, and the Boulonnais, the Town and Castle of Calis, with the Fort Nicullay and the recover'd Country. Dourlans, S. Valery upon the Somme, Guise, S. Quinton, the Bailliage of Vermandois, la Ferre, Peronne and Roye, Montdidier; the Town and Citadel of Hain, and the Town and Citadel of Monfneuil.

CHAP. IV.

CHAMPAGNE, Campania.

CHAMPAGNE is one of the twelve principal Governments of France, and the Province that best furnishes the Granaries and Cellars of Paris. It is so called (says Gregory of Tours) from the spacious and pleasant Plains which are found therein, more especially near Rbeims and Chalons. This name is Modern, and the first that hath mention'd it, is the Author of the Continuation of the Chronicle of Marcellinus, who is follow'd by the said Gregory of Tours, and other Writers. The Country of Champagne and Brie, according to the division of Julius C.esar, lies partly in Celtick and partly in Belgick Gaul, being situated between the 47 degree 30 Minutes, and the 50 degree of Latitude, and extends from Raviers in Sennois in the South to Rocroy in Rbevelois in the North, about 150 miles. From West to South-east, that is to say, from Cressy in Brie near Meaux, as far as Bourbon les Bains, near the Head of the River Meuse, about 120 miles; but in some places its breadth is not above 60 miles from East to West. It is bounded on the North by Picardy, Hainault and Luxemburg; on the South by Burgundy; on the East by Lorraine, and on the West by the Isle of France.

This Province was heretofore famous for the Grandeur of its Counts or Earls, who possess'd it as absolute Sovereigns, and were so potent that they maintained ained fierce Wars against the Kings of France and Burgundy: They were also so illustrious by reason of their noble Descent, that those Princes have not disdain'd to make Leagues with them, and even to contract Marriages with their Family. In the Division of Inheritances among the Sons of Clovis I. and Clotaire I. Campagne, constituted a part of the Kingdom of Metz in Aufrasia: And in the time of Segebert King of Metz, A. C. 570. there was a certain Duke of these Territories, named Lupus, who shewed much fidelity in preserving the Sates of the young King Childbert, against Orson and Bersvry; Guintrio or Vintrio, whom Brunebaut caus'd to be assassinated, was afterwards Duke. But this Title denoted then only a kind of Government, and not a perpetual Dignity. The first Hereditary Count was Robert of Vermandois, who made himself Master of the City of Troyes in 953. and left the possession thereof to his Brother Herbert. But in the year 1234. the whole Province was inseparably united to the Crown of France; which Act was confirmed by the Treaty of Laon, in 1317. and by another ratified on the 14 of May, 1335.

Among the principal Rivers are reckon'd the Seine, which receives into its Channel the Waters of the Jonny and the Aubre; the Marne, the Aisne and the Vesle, besides a great number of other small Rivulets that are very full of Fish. The River Meuse or Maes hath its Source in this Province, but it quickly runs out of it into the County of Barr, which it crosseth from South to North, and then returns into this Province and passeth by Sedan and Charlevoille, from whence it runs through the County of Namur, Bishoprick of Liege, and Duchy of Guelderland into Holland, where it falls into the Sea near the Briel.

The Soil although white and chalky, brings forth many sorts of Grains in abundance, particularly Rye. The vast Plains are extremely fertile in Corn and excellent Grapes, and yield good Pasture for Cattle. On the Northern side also are large Forests, affording variety of Game, together with Mines of Iron and other Metals.

But for a more particular description of this Province we will divide it into eight Parts, according to the method of most modern Geographers.

Champagne in 8 Parts.	{	Champagne prop.	Troyes Bish.

In the District of CHAMPAGNE, properly so called, are comprehended these most remarkable Towns, viz.

Troyes, Bishop.	}	Chalons, Bish.
Pont sur Seine.		Epernay.
Meri.		Ai.
Rameru, or Rameru.		Dormans.
Plancy.

Troyes, Treca, olim Augusto-bona and Tricassis, is seated on the River Seine, at the distance of 80 miles from Paris to the South-east, 64 from Rheims to the South, and 60 from the source of the Meuse to the West. It is a City of very great Antiquity, and is reckoned among the most considerable of the Kingdom for Trade, which consists chiefly in Linnen Cloth. It hath been long since dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See, the Jurisdiction whereof is extended over 510 Parishes, and depends on the Metropolitan of Sens. Nine or ten of its Prelates have been canoniz'd for Saints; of these St. Amate was the first, and S. Lupus the eighth, who hindred Attila from ruining the City; which was nevertheless afterward done by the Normans. But Count Robert caused it to be re-built, and it is at present a fair well built City, and adorned with a fine Palace; the Cathedral dedicated to St. Peter, is a very stately Structure, in which 40 Canons Officiate. There are also two Collegiate and ten Parochial Churches, besides the Abby of S. Lupus, a Colledge of the Fathers of the Oratory, and many other Religious Houses. The City is defended with strong Walls, and the Inhabitants are reckon'd Courageous, and are train'd up in Arms. Here is a fine Palace, and a Bailiage and Presidial.

Pont-Sur Seine, Pont ad Sequanem, a small Town so called from its Situation and Bridge over the River Seine. It stands 22 miles from Troyes to the North-West, and 57 from Paris. Rameru, Ramerucum, stands on the Banks of the Aubre, 20 miles N. East from Troyes. Plancy is in like manner water'd by the same River, and stands 15 miles West from Rameru.

Chalons, Catalaunum, is seated on a most pleasant Plain on the River Marne, over which here are many Bridges, distant 50 miles from Troyes to the North, and 80 miles from Paris to the East. It is a very ancient, large and well fortified City, and was esteem'd one of the Principal of Gallia Belgica in the time of Julius the Apostate. It is encompassed with firm Walls and deep Ditches full of Water. The whole City is divided into three Parts, viz. The City it self; the Island formed in it by the River Marne; and the Burrough. The Houses appear very white, being built of chalky Stone, and the Streets are large, the publick Places are fair and spacious, more especially those in which stand the Town-house and Collegiate Church, consecrated to the Virgin Mary. This City is the Seat of a Bishop. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to St. Stephen, and is remarkable on the account of its Tower extremely high and large. There are also 12 Parochial Churches, 3 Abbeys, and many other Convents. A considerable Trafick is maintained here, in Linnens, Cloth and Corn; which by means of the River are conveniently transported to Paris. Here is a Court of Justice and a Generality. This City was sometime governed by its own Counts, till they resigned their Right to the Bishop, who is dignified with the Title of Count and Peer of France. The Plains about Chalons are judg'd to be the Campi Catalaunici, wherein the famous Battle was fought by Mevaue King of the Franks, Theodorick King of the Goths, and Aetius the Roman General, against Attila King of the Huns, whom they defeated with the slaughter of near 200000 of his Men, as the French Historians relate. But others say it was at Sologne near Orleans, in the Campi Secalunicis that this mighty Battel was fought. And again, others say, it was near Toulouse in Languetac.

Espernay, Epernacum, is distant 16 miles from Chalons to the West as well as Ay; the former of these Towns standing on the South side of the River, and the other on the North, over against one another.

Dormans, Dormanum, stands likewise on the Banks of the Marne, 19 miles from Espernay, and 36 from Chalons to the West. This Town hath imparted its name to the noble Family of Dormans.

REMOIS, Ager Rhemensis lies between Cbaalonois, Soissonois, Rbetelois, &c. Its principal Towns are these. vi.

Rheims, Archb. Fimes. Mechaut.

RHEIMS. Remi, olim Durocortorum and Remorum Caput, is situate in the midst of a Plain, where the River Vesle washes part of its Walls, which are extended in compas above an Hour's Journey, and enclose a great number of spacious Courts, large Streets, well built Houses, and magnificent Churches; more especially the Cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary, which is a vast pile of Building, the Gate thereof being esteem'd the most stately throughout the whole Kingdom on account of its admiral Architecture, Images and other curious Ornaments. In this Church the King's of France are usually Crowned, and appointed by the Archbishop of Rheims, with a sacred Oil preserv'd in a small Vessel commonly call'd la Sainte Ampule, or the Holy Bottle, which (as they say) was sent from Heaven at the Inauguration of Clouis I. and is kept here in the Abbey of S. Remi. In this City are establish'd, besides a Metropolitan See, a Prefidial Court, another of the Bailliage, and an University founded by Charles of Lorrain Cardinal of Guise, with the permission of King Henry II. The Archbishops of Rheims are stiled the first Dukes and Peers of France; twelve or thirteen of these Prelates have been canoniz'd for Saints; and four of them have been Popes. vi. Sylvester II. Urban II. Adrian V. six Princes have possess'd the See, vi. Arnold the Son of King Lotharius, and Henry the Son of Lewis the Gros, and four others of the Royal Blood. Here are to be seen some Monuments of Antiquity, as a Fort of Julius Caesar's, and is a Roman Triumphant Arch that is quite entire; It is compos'd of three Arches, adorned with many Figures and Trophies; suppos'd to have been formerly the North Gate of the Town, and call'd Porta Martia, but had been covered with Earth for many Ages, and not discover'd till the year 1677. The City of Rheims is distant 74 miles from Paris to the North-East; 66 from Troyes to the North; and 24 from Cbaalons to the North-West.

Fimes, Fime, Fisme, is a Burgh on the River Vesle in the confines of the Isle of France 15 miles from Rheims to the West. It is more especially remarkable on the account of two Councils held there in the Church of S. Maive the Martyr Finibus apud sanctam Maivam, and for a certain Stone fixed not far from thence, which serves as a Boundary between the Bishopsricks of Rheims, Laon and Soissons.

PERTHOIS, Ager Perthensis, is extended on the Frontiers of Lorrain between the Rivers Marne and Ornay, and contains these considerable Towns vi.

S. Dizier, } Vitry le Francois, Sermalsc, } Harzicourt.

S. Dizier, Fimam Sancti Desiderii aut Desideriopolis, stands on the Banks of the Marne 30 miles above Cbaalons, near the Frontiers of the County of Barr. It was taken by the Emperor Charles V. in 1544. after a very notable Siege, and restored to the French at the Peace concluded at Cressie.

Vitry le Francois, Victoriacum Francicum took its Name from King Francis I. the Founder thereof who caus'd it to be built in the room of a Neighbouring Town that was burnt, which is at present call'd Vitry le Brusle. It is seated on the Confluence of the Marne and the Orne, being distant 18 miles from Cbaalons to the S.E.

RETELOIS, Rbetelenfis Ager, is the Northern

Part of the Province of Champagne, and includes these Towns of chiefest Note, vi.

*Rbetel, } Rocroi.
Mezieres, } Sedan, &c.
Charleville. }*

Rbetel, Retelium aut Reiteste, is situated near the River Aisne, 24 miles from Rheims to the North; 27 from Sedan to the S. W. and as many from Rocroy to the S. in the adjacent Territories of this Town, which bear the Title of a Dutchy, the French obtain'd a great Victory over the Spanish Troops, and the Prince of Conde commanded by the Marshal de Turrene, A. D. 1650.

Mezieres, or Misferes, Maderiacum aut Macorie, is a strong Town, and stands in a Peninsula made by the River Meuse, partly on a rising Ground and partly in the Valley, the Citadel being fortified with a double Rampart. It is a place of great importance, being a Passage from Luxemburgh into France. It is distant 23 miles from Rbetel to the North, 15 below Sedan to the West; not above 7 from the confines of the Dutchy of Luxemburgh, and 46 from Rheims to the N. E.

Charleville, Carolopolis, is in like manner seated on the Meuse just over against Mezieres, and was formerly only a Burrough call'd Arches, where Charles de Gonzagua Duke of Nevers and Mantua caus'd a very pleasant Town to be built, A. D. 1609, and gave it his Name. It hath been since regularly fortified, and on the other side of the River is erected the strong Fortrefs of Mont-Olympe, where is to be seen the Ruins of an old Castle, suppos'd to have been a Temple of the Pagans.

Rocroy, Rupes Regia, is a very strong Hold near the Forest of Ardenne on the Frontiers of Hainault, being distant 30 miles from Rbetel to the N. and 15 from Mezieres and Charleville to the N. W. The French Forces under the Conduct of the Duke of Anguien gain'd a Battel over the Spaniards, and defeated their General Don Francisco de melo near this Town on the 15th day of March, 1643.

Sedan, Sedanum stands on the East side of the River Meuse near the Frontiers of Luxemburgh, at the distance of 15 miles from Charleville to the East, and 28 from Rbetel to the North-East. This Town was formerly subject to the Archishop of Rheims; by whom it was afterwards granted to the King instead of Cormecy. In procel's of Time the Braquemonts and Marcans became Lords of it, and at length it devolved on the Princes of the Family of La Tour: But in the Year 1642 it was united to the Crown by a Compact made with Prince Frederick-Maurice de la Tour d'Auvergne, Duke of Bouillon and Lord of Sedan. It is a strong place, being defended with a good Castle and Walls, &c. It was chiefly inhabited by Protestants, who had a famous University here before the late Persecutions.

The County of VALAGE lies between those of Perthois, and Bassigni, and contains these principal Towns, vi.

*Foinville, } Bar sur-Aube, Brienne, } Clervaux, Abb. &c.
Vignoris, }*

Foinville, Fovis Villa, Joanvilla, aut Foville, is a small Town, but dignified with the Title of a Principality, seated on the River Marne at the distance of 15 miles from S. Dizier to the South, and 43 from Cbaalons to the South-East. This Principality was erect-erected by King Henry II. A. D. 1552. in favour of Francis of Lorraine Duke of Guise, to serve as an Inheritance for the younger Sons of that Noble Family, and hath been the Burial-place of divers of these Dukes. But that which hath made this City most noted, is, that the Holy League, which made so much disturbance in France, was revived here in the Year, 1584. by the Duke of Guise and his adherents.

Brienne, Castrum Briennium is a Town of a small compass, nevertheless honoured with the Title of a County, and stands on the Banks of the Aube, 25 miles from Joinville to the W. and 21 from Troyes. It was in time past one of the seven Peerages that were established by the ancient Counts of Champagne, and the place where the Peers usually held their Assemblies.

Bar-sur-Aube, Barium ad Albulam, aut Albam, is so called from its situation on the River Aube at the foot of an Hill in a very pleasant County, about 30 miles from Troyes to the East, and 15 from Joinville to the South-West. It is a well-built Town, and famous for its good Wines. It was for some time possess'd by certain particular Counts, but was at last reunited to the Crown at the same time with the rest of Champagne.

Clervaux, or Clairvaux, Claravallis is an Abbey of the Cistercian Order, famous for the Conversation of S. Bernard, by whom (as they say) it was Founded, through the pious Liberality of Thibaut or Theobald III. Count of Champagne, A. D. 1115. It is built in a Valley before called, The Vale of Wormwood, 14 miles from the Frontiers of Burgundy, and 5 from Bar-sur-Aube to the S.

BASSIGNY, Bassiniacus Ager lies on the South of Valage between the Spring-heads of the Marne and the Meuse on the side of Lorraine, containing these most considerable Towns, viz.

Langres, Bish. } Lusi, Chaumont, } Nogent-le-Roy.

Langres, Linganes aut Andomatunum is very advantageously situated on a Hill near the Spring-head of the River Marne, at the distance of 10 miles from the Confines of Burgundy; 50 from Troyes to the S. E. and 35 from Joinville to the South. It is a very ancient, large and well fortified City, and the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Lyon. It was ruined by the Vandals in the beginning of the 4th Century, but afterward rebuilt and restor'd to its former Grandeur. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to S. Mammez the Martyr. The Bishop of Langres, who takes place among the six Ecclesiastical Peers of France, bears the Title of Duke, Marquis and Baron, as being both Spiritual and Temporal Lord of these Territories, wherein he constitutes Bailiffs, Judges, and other Officers of Justice. Five or Six Rivers have their Source in the adjacent Country, which on that account is supposed to be the highest Ground of the whole Kingdom of France.

Chaumont, Calvomontium, and Calvus Mons, stands on a Hill near the Marne between Joinville and Langres, from whence it is distant 20 miles, and 15 from Bar-sur-Aube to the E. This Town, which had been before only a Burrough, was enlarged and encompassed with Walls, about the Year 1500. It was govern'd by its own Lords, until it was annexed to the Jurisdiction of the County of Champagne.

SENONNOIS, Senonensis Ager, is the South West part of Champagne, lying between Champagne proper, Brie, and Gastinois. This Country is extended 16 Leagues in length and 8 in breadth, and includes these principal Towns, viz.

Sens, Archb. } S. Florentina,
Pont-sur-Yonne, } Tonnerre, Joigni, } Chabli.

SENS, Senones, aut Agenticum Senonum, is seated in a verdant Plain on the confluence of the Seine and the Yonne, over which it hath a Stone-bridge; and is distant 55 miles from Paris to the South, and 30 from Troyes to the West. It is a very fair City, and without doubt one of the most ancient throughout the whole Kingdom of France. For the Galli Senonenses, heretofore extended their Conquests very far into Italy and Greece, took Rome, and (as it is generally believ'd) founded Sienna Senigaglia, and some other Towns, which still bear their Name. These Territories, during the Second Race of the French Monarchs, were subject to the Jurisdiction of certain particular Counts, until King Robert made himself Master of Sens, A. D. 1005. The City is large and well-built, and water'd with a great number of Brooks, which run through all its Parts, and serve for the convenience of the Inhabitants. It is the See of an Archbishop, who was formerly Metropolitan of Paris, Orleans, and four other Diocesses; but since Paris hath been erected into an Archbishoprick, he hath only Troyes, Auxerre, and Nevers for his Suffragans. The Cathedral Church of S. Stephen is admired for its stately Front, adorned with divers Figures and two lofty Towers; as also on the account of its large Body, rich Chappels, ancient Tombs, and the costly Basis of the High Altar, where is to be seen a Table of Gold enrich'd with many curious Stones, representing in Bas-relief the Images of the four Evangelists and S. Stephen. The whole Diocess comprehends above 900 Parochial Churches, and 25 Abbies, five of these being included within the City and Suburbs. Divers Councils have been celebrated here, the first of which was held by Archbishop Sevin, A. C. 980.

Pont-sur-Yonne, Pons ad Icaunum, aut Pons Syriacus, stands on the Frontiers of Champagne, and the Banks of the River Yonne, about eight miles from Sens to the North toward Paris: Joigni, Jozniacum aut Juniacum, a small Town, at the distance of 15 miles from Sens to the South, and as many from Auxerre to the North.

Tonnerre, Tornodorum and Ternodorum ad Herimontionem, is a considerable Town bearing the Title of a County, and built on the side of the River Armançon in the Confines of Burgundy, about 35 miles from Sens to the South-east.

Chabli, Cabliacum, stands about 10 miles West from Tonnerre. It is a small Town, but remarkable on the account of the excellent Wines that are made therein, and for the bloody Battle which was fought in the adjacent Plain, between the Sons of the Emperor Lewis the Debonaire. A. D. 841.

The County of BRIE is divided into two Parts, and made part of two Provinces of the Iste of France and Champagne. BRIE CHAMPENOISE, Brigiensis Salus, aut Bria, lies between the Rivers Seine and Marne, on the North of Sennonois, abounding in Pasture, and is very fruitful in Corn, Fruits, &c. The most considerable Towns in it are these, viz.

Meaux, Bish. } Colomiers,
Provins, } Sezanne,
Chateau Thierry, } Montreuil-faut-Yonne,

Meaux, Melde, Patinum Meldarum, the Capital City of Brie, and the See of a Prelate Suffragan to the Archbishop of Paris, is situated on the Marne, at the distance of 25 miles from Paris to the East; 50 from Rheims to the South-west, 60 from Chalons to the West, and 50 from Sens to the North. It is divided by the River into two parts, viz. one called the Town and the other the Market, and surrounded with three Suburbs. The Cathedral is dedicated to St. Stephen, and the Diocels contains 410 Parishes. There is also a Collegiate Church bearing the Name of St. Sainctin first Bishop of Meaux; and some others that are Parochial, and besides the Abby of St. Euron appertaining to the Benedictine Monks of the Congregation of St. Maur, a great number of Monasteries. This City was for sometime subject to its own Lord, before it was united to the Crown of France: It suffered very much in the year 1358. John King of France, being at that time the Prisoner of our King Edward III. For the Dauphine having possess'd himself of this Place, in his absence, the Citizens had plotted with those of Paris to take it from him, but were not able to effect it, for though they let in the Parisians into the Town, the Garrison kept the Market, overcame them, cut them to pieces and fir'd and pillag'd the City. It was afterwards taken by the Forces of our valiant King Henry V. after a Siege of three Months. This was the first City of France wherein the Protestants preach'd against the Errors of the Church of Rome, for which many of them suffer'd Martyrdom. In the Civil War, the Protestants got the possession of this Place, but it was taken from them by surprize by Claude Gouffier, Duke of Rouanex for King Charles IX. It is now a well-built, flourishing and populous City, and is the Seat of a Bailly and an Election.

Provins, Provinum, aut Pravinum, stands at the foot of an Hill and the Banks of the Rivulet Vouffe, being distant 10 miles from the Seine to the North; 25 from Meaux to the South; 36 from Troyes to North-West, and 38 from Paris to the South-East. This small Town is famous for an excellent sort of Roses which grow in the adjacent Fields, and bear the same Name. Chateau-Thierry Castrum Theodoricum, is a very fair Town with a Castle enjoying the Title of a Duchy, and seated on the South-side of the Marne, about 20 miles from Meaux to the East; 30 from Reims to the South-west; 40 from Chalons to the West, and 45 from Paris to the East.

Clomiers, Colomerie, aut Columbaria, is adorned with the Palace of Longueville, and water'd with the little River of Morin, 12 miles from Meaux to the South towards Provins, and 30 from Paris to the East.

Montreuil-Faut-Tonne, Monasterium ad Icaimam, Monasterium St. Martini in faucibus Icauna, aut etiam Mons Regalis, takes its Name from a place where the Yonne falls into the Siene. Being founded on the Confluence of these two Rivers, and defended with an old Castle, distant 16 miles from Provins to the South-west. The Town it self properly belongs to the Jurisdiction of Gastinois, and the Suburbs on the other side of the River to that of Brie. It was heretofore a Royal Seat, and is beautified with a fair Stone Bridge, on which John Duke of Burgundy was slain, on the 10th Day of September, 1419.

The Governor General of the Province of Champagne, hath under him four Lieutenant-Generals and two Bailiffs, all Noblemen. And in these following Towns there are particular Governours, viz. Troyes, Chaalons, Langyes, Chaumont, Rezel, Chateau-Portien, Rocroy, Maziers, Charleville, Sedan, S. Menchould, S. Dizier, Vitry, Bar-sur-Aube, Epenay, Fismes, and Brie-Comte-Robert.

CHAP V.

THE ISLE OF FRANCE, Insula Francie.

THE Government of the Ile of France, though it be one of the least of extent, is however the most considerable of the whole Kingdom, on account of its fertility and pleasant situation, the great number of stately Palaces, and the Capital City which stands therein; but more especially by being honoured with the presence of the King in his splendid Palaces of Versailles and the Louvre, S. Germain's, Fountainbleau, and S. Claude; all which; are seated within the Limits of this Government. The Ile of France, properly ly so called, lies between the River Seine, Marne, Oise, and Aisne; for which reason the Name of an Island hath been given it. But to make it a Government, some parts of the Neighbouring Provinces have been added to it; so that at present it is bounded on the East by Champagne, on the West by Normandy, on the North by Picardy, and on the South by Beauce and Gastinois, extending it self between the 48th Degree 20 Min. and the 49th Degree 40 Min. of Latitude; and includes from West to East, that is to say, from from Dreux to Lieffe, near 120 Miles, and from North to South, viz. from Noyon as far as Tourtenay in Gatinou 100 Miles.

The Soil is very fertile in excellent Wheat, Grapes, and other Fruits: There are also divers verdant Plains and spacious Forests, affording abundance of all sorts of Games. The principal Rivers are the Seine, the Mur and the Oise. The last of these is enlarged with the Waters of the Aisne, that passeth to Soissons, and those of Terrain, which conveys its Streams along the Walls of Beauvais, &c. This Government is usually divided into ten small Countries, nine of which are taken out of the Provinces of Champagne, Beauce, Normandy, and Picardy.

P A R I S, Parisi, aut Lucretia Parisiorum, so called from Lutum Dirt, and Parisi the ancient Inhabitants of the Neighbouring Country. To omit the ferveral fabulous Accounts of its Origine, it is certain that it is very ancient: Julius Cesar mentions it in his Commentaries; and Eusebius says, It was older than Rome. The Island in the Seine called la Cite, now the middle of Paris, was the first City, built in that place by the Parisi (as some say) to avoid the Ravage of War and Pestilence that raged among them.

It is the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom of France, and at present one of the largest, most populous and flourishing Cities of Europe. The River Seine which passeth through it from East to West, is broad, but not deep enough to bring up Ships of Burden, whereof none come higher than Roan, and from whence the Goods are brought hither in Lighters: Its Stream is divided by two or three Islands, whereof that call'd la Cité above-mentioned is the chief, and is the Center, round which the Additions from time to time have been made of that great number of Houses and Palaces whereof Paris now consists. On the North-side lies that part call'd la Ville the Town; and on the South the University, with the Fauxbourg or Suburbs of S. Germaine, and S. Marcel. The Houses of Paris are mostly built of Stone and Brick, very high, and fill'd with People, every Floor often containing a Family, especially in the Old City, where the Streets are narrow, but those later built are spacious and neat, especially les Rues Richelieu, and S. Martin, which are very long, strait, and broad.

The whole City, University, and Suburbs of Paris make an Oval of three English Miles long, and two and an half broad, and consequently take up five and an half square Miles of Ground. Concerning the number of Houses and Inhabitants herein contained, Frenchmen talk very largely; but this Matter having been judiciously handled by the ingenious Sir William Petty, his Computation will be the best account we can give the Reader, which is as follows: He says, The number of Houses are, 23223, together with 32 Palaces, and 38 Colleges, in which do live 81280 Families, and allowing to each Family 6 Persons, the number will be 487680. To prove this Account, he argues from the number of Burials in Paris, which according to a reasonable Medium, are, 19887 per Annum, whereof 3506 in the Hotel-Dieu unneccessarily, which being deducted, the number of Burials of the Inhabitants, is communibus annis, 16381, and then allowing one of thirty to die yearly, the number of Souls in Paris will be 491430. The Medium of these two Accounts is 488055. Whereas in London the same Author proves the number of Inhabitants to be 695718, and the number of Houses 105315, and that London contains above 100 thousand Inhabitants more than Paris and Roan together. But to proceed,

The Places in Paris that most deserve a Stranger's Notice, are the Louvre, the Tuileries, the Church of Notre-Dame, the University, the Old-Palace, the Town-House, the Place-Royal, the Bastille, Pont-neuf, many stately Palaces of the Nobility, the Hotel-Dieu, and other Hospitals.

The King's Palace, nam'd the Louvre, is a noble and stately Pile of Building: It is one large Square with a Court in the middle, the Fronts of Stone finely adorned with Pillars and Carvings. It was first built by King Philip the Angust, A. D. 1214. and began to be rebuilt of larger Extent by K. Charles V. in the Year 1364. Francis I. began the Switzer's Hall and the South Porch, which his Son Henry II. finished, and built two Stories over it; he also added an Order of Corinthian Architecture to the inner Front, and adorn'd it with a noble Cornice and curious Carvings. King Henry IV. built a Gallery along by the side of the River quite to the Tuileries, which is very long, and esteem'd the finest in Europe: Under it is the Royal Printing-house, and the Lodgings of many curious Artists in Painting, Carving, Graving, &c. who have Pensions from the King. Lewis XIII. finished the Front to the West, and built a large Pavillon, in form of a Dome, in the middle, over the Gate, which is supported by two Ranks of very large Pillars of the Ionick Order; and also adorn'd the Architrave of the Front to the Court with fine Sculptures. The present King hath bestow'd great cost upon the East-Front; in the middle whereof is the chief Gate of the Palace. Here are forty Columns of the Corinthian Order detached, which sustain a large Terras, that is to be rail'd with a stately Balustre. The Building is not finished, nor the Lodgings furnished, no Body dwelling in it but some few Officers, except the French Academy, who have a Hall here to hold their Assemblies in. Behind the Louvre is a large piece of Ground design'd for a Garden; but the King never coming here, some Persons have been permitted to build upon it, so that at present it is full of Houses, which are to be pull'd down when the Building is finished, and the King fancies to Reside here.

Behind the Louvre at some distance, stands the Palace call'd les Tuileries, built by Queen Catherine de Medicis, A. D. 1654. and much improved by the present King. It is one Range of Building, with a Pavillon at each end, and a Dome in the middle; before it is a handsome large Space which is divided into three Courts; and behind are exceeding pleasant Gardens, the Walks whereof are every Evening fill'd with People of Fashion that come thither to take the Air. When the King lies at Paris, which is very seldom, he lodges in the Tuileries. These two Palaces are seated in the West-part of the Town by the River-side; the Garden of the Tuileries reaching quite beyond the Houfes, and is open to the Fields.

The Cathedral-Church of Notre-Dame or the Virgin Mary, stands near the middle of the City in the Island which thence hath its Name: It is a Majestick Venerable Building of the Gothick Order of Architecture. The Foundation was laid A. D. 522. by King Childerick; and the Building was afterwards much beautified and enlarged by King Robert and his Successors, till Philip the August finished it as it now appears. It is in the Form of a Cross, having a small Spire in the middle, and at the West end two large square Towers of 389 Steps high, flat at top, with Ballustres round, which make the Front very spacious and noble. Over the three West Gates is a Row of Niches, in which stand the Statues of 28 Kings of France, Predecessors to Philip. The length of this Church is accounted 66 Fathoms, its breadth 24, and its height 17 Fathoms. The Roof is supported by 120 great Pillars, and the whole Building adorn'd with the Ornaments usual to this Order of Architecture, besides several Statues, curious Paintings, rich Tapetries, Silver-Candlesticks, &c. that make the inside appear very Glorious. The Prelate of this See was formerly Suffragan to the Archbishop of Sens, till A. 1622. when Lewis XIII. by permission of the Pope, erected it into an Archbishoprick; and the present King hath added to it the Title of Duke and Peer, (A. 1674.) in favour of the present Archbishop.

The University of Paris was first founded (as 'tis said) by Charlemaign, A. D. 791, at the desire of Alcuin an Englishman, his Tutor, who was made the first Professor. It is situate on the South-side of the River, and hath been much encreas'd by Lewis VII. Philip the August, and several other Persons of lower Rank, particularly Robert Sorbon, who (in the time of St. Lewis, A. 1252.) founded the College called by his Name; which being decayed, was rebuilt by Cardinal Richelieu, and made a very beautiful Place. It is esteem'd the strictest College in Europe, the Degree of Doctor in it being only given to those who hold the Sorbonique Act, which is to answer all Disputants from Sun-ile to Sun-set. Wherefore the Title of Sorbon Doctor is of great Repute. The College of Navarre, founded by Jane Queen of Navarre, is also a very noble Building; and that of the four Nations, founded by Cardinal Mazarine, is very handsome, spacious, and well adorned. The Buildings of the other Colleges, near 30 in number, are not very stately. The Professors have settled Revenues, but the Colleges are not endowed, except with Privileges and Collation to several Benefices.

It will not be amiss to mention here the Academies for Arts, established in Paris by the Favour and Encouragement of the present King and his Predecessors. And first, the Academy Francoise, is a Society of ingenious Men, the most polite and curious Critics of the Nation; first began in the Year 1620. by Messres Godeau, Gombaud, Chapelain, Coward, and several more, who agreed to meet weekly at one of their Lodgings for Conversation; these being encouraged by Cardinal Richelieu, set themselves at work to correct and polish the French Tongue, and in 1635. the Academy was established by the King's Edict, and hath been much honour'd by the present King, who hath given them a Chamber in the Louvre to hold their Assemblies in. These ingenious Persons have very much improv'd the French Language, and publish'd a Dictionary of it; and several Members of the Society have published Books that have been very acceptable to the learned World. The number of them at present is forty. They give yearly two Golden Medals to the best Performers in Eloquence and Poetry.

The Royal Academy of Sciences, was established by Monseur Colbert, A. D. 1666, and is compos'd of the best Philosophers and Mathematicians in the Nation, for whose use the King built the Royal Observatory in the Fauxbourg St. Jacques, where they daily make Experiments, and labour in new Discoveries for the improvement of Knowledge.

The Royal Academy for Painting and Sculpture, was established by Lewis XIII. and that for Architecture, by the present King in the Year 1671.

But to pass on to the other remarkable Things in Paris. The Palace is the place where the Court of Parliament is held. It was at first the King's Palace, but was made the Seat of this Court by King Philip the Fair. The Hall is arch'd with Stone, and supported by Pillars: In it are many Shops for Tradesmen, and beyond it are several Chambers for the respective Courts,

The Hotel de Ville, or Guild-Hall, is a fair Structure; the old one being decayed, this was begun to be built A. D. 1533, but by reason of the Civil War, was not finished till 1610. It is built of Stone, the Front reasonably handsome, but somewhat Gothick; in the middle over the Door there is a Spire, and two Pavillions at the ends; within-side is a spacious Hall, and several Chambers.

The Palais Cardinal, or Palace Royal, as it is now called, is a handsome Building, compos'd of two square Courts and fine Gardens; the Apartments in it are beautiful and convenient. This Palace was built by Cardinal Richelieu, and at his Death bequeathed to the King: The Duke of Orleanse dwells in it, altho' he hath another very stately one that bears his Name, which was built by the Widow of Henry IV.

The Place Royal is a Noble large Square, surrounded with Piazas and very fine Houses.

Paris lying on both sides the Water, there is need of many Bridges, of which here are nine of Stone and two of Timber; that named Pont-neuf, or the New Bridge, is the most considerable, being the finest built and the longest; it is all of Stone, begun to be built in 1578, and finished in 1604, by King Henry IV. whose Statue on Horseback of curious Workmanship stands in the middle.

Pont au Change was built of Stone in 1629, and hath two Rows of Houses on it; this being near the Palace, hath the most Passengers of any. Pont-Mary hath Houses on it also. The other Bridges are less considerable.

The Hotel-Dieu is a large Hospital for poor sick People, whereof here are commonly no less than 4000, who are serv'd by the Nuns of St. Augustin: The Building is old, and not very fine, but the Revenues are very great. There are many other Hospitals; but that which makes the greatest Figure, and is most talk'd of is,

The Invalides, built by this King for the Reception and Maintenance of old crippled and disabled Soldiers. It is a very noble Building, exactly square, with fine Courts in the middle. It stands in the West end of the Fauxbourg St. Germain.

The Bastille is a Castle built in the Year 1360, for defence of the City, but at present serves for a Prison for State-Criminals. It stands at the East-end of the Town, in the Fauxbourg St. Antoine. There are also two smaller Castles, which were anciently Fortresses, and without doubt stood at the Limits of the Town, but are now in the middle of it, and serve to hold the Provost's and other Courts in. The

The Suburbs of Paris are large and well built; that of St. Germain hath been taken into the City, and enjoys the same Privileges.

For the Civil Government Paris hath a Magistrate call'd the Prevot des Merchants, not unlike our Lord-Mayor, and 4 Échevins or Aldermen, 26 Counsellors, 10 Serjants and under Officers; and is divided into 16 Wards. And for administering Justice, there is a Provost, 3 Lieutenants, and the Judge and Consul of Merchants.

In the City and Suburbs are 10 Collegiate and 44 Parochial Churches, 4 principal Abbeys, besides many other Religious Houses, 30 Hospitals, great number of publick Fountains, and 17 Gates.

This City hath undergone the Fate of most Great Ones: viz. hath been two or three times besieged, twice burn'd, and once much damaged by an Inundation of the Seine. Our King Henry V. took it, was crown'd here, and kept his Court at the Louvre in great State and Splendor, A. D. 1422. In the Civil War Paris took part with the Leaguers, and was therefore besieged in the Year 1589. by King Henry III. who there lost his Life, being murdered by Jacques Clement a Friar. The next Year it was block'd up by Henry IV. and reduc'd to extream Misery, and to that want of Victuals, that the People made Bread of dead Mens Bones; yet would they not yield, but held out till the Dukes of Pavia and Moyenne came to their Relief, and forced the King to raise the Siege.

Paris is situate in the Latitude of 48 Degrees 50 Minutes, and Longitude of 20 Degrees 15 Minutes, reckoning from Teneriffe; but, according to Sanfon, 23 Degrees, 30 Minutes; and is distant 130 English Miles from Calais to the South, 60 from Roan to the S. E. 300 from Brest to the E. 220 from Lyons to the N. W. 120 from Verdun on the River Meuse, and 230 from Strasbourg on the Rhine to the W. 180 from Triers, 155 from Luxemburg, and 140 from Namur to the S. W.

The most remarkable Place in the Neighbourhood is the Bois de Vincennes, situated at the very Gates of Paris, where the Citizens often walk to take the Air, and divert themselves with divers kinds of Sports and Exercises.

VERSAILLES is a small, but near Burrough, situate upon a rising Ground in the midst of a Champaign Country, fit for Hunting, and abounding with Game, at the distance of about 12 Miles from Paris to the W. Lewis XIII. built a small Castle here, to serve for a Hunting-Seat; but the present King fancying the Place, in the Year 1661. began to enlarge it, by the addition of several new Buildings, which he hath encreas'd from time to time, and hath been at prodigious Expence in adorning it and making the greatest variety of Water-Works, and most delightful Gardens, that probably are any where to be seen. This beautiful Palace deserves a more particular Description than we have room to make: what follows will be sufficient to give the Reader a general Idea of it.

The Passage to it is through four long Rows of tall Elm-trees, which make three Alleys; the middle one of twenty Fathoms, and the side ones of ten Fathoms wide; at the end of these, on each side, fronting the House, are the Stables, which for Symmetry and Convenience are thought the finest in Europe; in them are kept near five hundred Horses of the King's. Between this and the Court is a large void Space, from whence is a fair view of the whole, all the three Courts being open to the Front, and only divided by Iron Ballustras. The first Court is named the Place-Royal; it is very spacious, being eighty Fathoms square: In the Front is only a low Wall and Iron Ballustras, which are carried out in a Half-Moon, and on the Wings are a very handsome Range of Buildings, which are the Lodgings of some of the Nobility that attend the Court. From hence you pass through one large Gate (very finely adorn'd with Trophies in Iron-work gilt) in the middle of a large and high Ballustras of Iron, gilt, into the first or great Court of the Palace, which consists also of two Wings of Building, on each side of a large Court, but so much smaller than the Place-Royal, as that that does not hinder the full sight of this; in the middle is a very large Fountain: The Buildings are of Brick and Stone, very stately, and adorn'd with very fine Carvings, and Pillars of the Corinthian Order, which support Balconies at the top, that go quite round each Wing; on the Ballustras whereof stand several Statues of Stone, representing the four Elements; these are the Lodgings of the Officers of the Household: Behind them are square Courts and other Buildings for Offices. Next is the second or smaller Court of the Palace, which is also open to the Front; the Ground is raised three Steps, and paved with black and white Marble: This Court is still smaller than the former, for the same Reason; and here the Sight is terminated by the Building at the end of the Court, which with the two Wings make the Royal Apartment. These Buildings are very magnificent, without side as well as within: The Entrance is by three Doors of Iron, richly wrought and gilt: In the Wings are two very noble Stair-Cases that lead to the Lodgings, in which appear all the Pomp and Beauty that the most curious Sculptures and Paintings by the greatest Masters of the Age, together with excessive rich Furniture, can make: Behind this, and fronting the Garden, is a noble Range of Building, adorned with Statues and Carvings, and a Piazza of 100 Yards in length. The Gardens are extream delightful, and surpass all other for pleasant Walks and great number of Fountains, in which the Water is diversified a thousand ways, through a multitude of Marble and Copper Statues, that represent abundance of curious Devices, as the Triumphal Arch, the Water Mountain, the Theatre, the Pyramid, the Basin of Ceres, the Basin of Flora, the Basin of Apollo, the Basin of Saturn, the Basins of the Crown, Mermaid, Dragon, the Water-Bower, the Water-Alley, many of the Fables of Æsop represented by Figures, which spout Water; together with abundance more too long to mention. Besides these Fountains here is a very large Canal, in which Yachts and Gallies sail and row to and again. At the bottom of this Canal on one side stands a fine Summer-house called Trianon; and on the other side is the Menagerie, where are kept all the Orlandish Beasts of greatest Rarity. Every part of this House and Garden is perfectly beautiful, and gives satisfaction to the most curious Spectators.

St. Germain en Laye, is a very fair Town pleasantly seated on a Hill near the River Seine, and the Wood of Laye, at the distance of fifteen Miles from Paris to the West, and four from Poissy: It is adorned with two stately Palaces, the Old and the New, in which the French Kings have often resided: The Gardens and Water-works were formerly much celebrated, but since those of Versailles have been made, they are less regarded. In this Palace were born Henry II. Charles IX. and Lewis XIV. A Peace was concluded here between King Lewis XIV. the King of Sweden and the Elector of Brandenburgh on the 29th Day of June, 1679.

About a League from St. Germain, toward Paris, stands The Wood of Treason, le Bois de la Trahison, so called from a Plot there contrived by one Ganelon, against the House of Ardennes, the Peers of France, and the chief Generals of the Emperor Charlemagne, which was afterward put in execution at the Battle of Roncevaux near the Pyrenean Mountains. This Wood is divided by a large Road or High-way. There are also divers other considerable Towns not far from Paris, particularly those of Quel, S. Maur, S. Cloud, where the King hath another Palace, Mendon, Varvres, Conflans, Gonesse, Montmarie, &c. besides.

S. Dennis, Fanum Sancti Dionysii, a small Town watered by a Rivulet, called La Croc, which a little below falls into the Seine, and adorn'd with a most famous Abbey, founded by King Dagobert I. as also a stately Church, which the same Prince erected, A. C. 636. in Honour of St. Dennis, the Patron or Tutelar Saint of France, whose Body was interred therein. But this Church being in time fallen to decay, Abbot Suger caused it to be rebuilt in a larger Form, as it now appears in three Years and three Months time, under the Reign of Lewis VII. as it is recorded in the Acts of the said Suger. It was finished A. D. 1144. and hath been since very remarkable for its Treasure, and the sumptuous Tombs of the French Monarchs. The Town was formerly of larger extent then at present. It is a little way distant from the Seine to the East, and eight Miles from Paris to the North.

Montmorency, Monmorenciacum aut Mons Morentiacus, a small Town distant about 12 Miles from Paris to the North-West, stands on an Hill, and hath imparted its Name to a very pleasant and fruitful Valley; as also to an illustrious Family that founded the Church of St. Martin. Montmorency is the principal Barony of the Realm, and the first Territory dignified with this Title, which was heretofore conferr'd only on Princes, and whereon (as they say) above 600 Mannors in Fee sometime depended. Afterward King Henry II. erected it into a Dutchy, A. 1551. in favour of Anne de Montmorency Countess of France; and when this Family was extinct, Lewis XIII. bestowed the same Title on Henry of Bourbon, Prince of Conde, in 1633. This Town was burnt by the English in 1538.

BRIE-FRANCOIS, Bria Francica, lies between the Rivers Seine and Marne: It is a very fertile Country in Corn, Fruits, &c. The principal Towns are these, viz.

Lagny. } Rosoy.
Brie Comte Robert. } Ville-Neuve St. George.

Lagny, Latinicum, is a large Town situated on the River Marne, over which it hath a fair Stone-Bridge 17 Miles from Paris to the East, 4 from Gonnay sur Marne, and 12 from Meaux to the South-West. It enjoys the Title of a County: In it is a famous Monastery of Benedictine Monks, founded by St. Furst or Poussi a Scotch Gentleman, in the Eighth Century. This Town was ruin'd by the Normans in the Ninth Century, but Herbert of Vermandois repair'd it, caused the Church to be rebuilt, and was buried therein, A. C. 993. Many other Noblemen were likewise Benefactors to the same Abbey, and Joc Legate of the See of Rome, held a Council in it A. D. 1142.

Brie-Comte-Robert, Bria-Comitis-Robert, is a Town of small extent, built near the Brook Yerme, in a very Fruitful Country, 15 miles from Paris to the South-East, wherein is established a Court of Judicature depending on the Cassetelet of Paris. It is also supposed to have been the Place of Nativity of Pope Martin IV.

Rosoy, Rosetum, is seated upon the same Rivulet Terre above Brie-Comte-Robert, 20 miles from Meaux to the South, and somewhat more from Paris to the South-East.

Ville-Neuve S. George, Villa-Nova Sancti Georgii, is a small Burgh standing near the River Seine, 10 miles from Paris to the South, and about 3 from Corbeil.

HUREPOIS, Hurepesium, constitutes part of the Provothship and Vicounty of Paris, beginning at the Seine under the little Bridge, and extending it self along the West side of the River, between Beauce to the West, Brie to the East, and Gatinois to the South. The chief Towns are these. viz.

Melun, } La Ferte-Alois, Corbeil, } Fontaine-bleau, &c.

Melun, Melodunum, a very fair, large, and populous Town, is seated on the Seine, at the distance of 8 miles from Corbeil, 33 from Sens to the North-West, and 25 from Paris to the South-E. It is built on an Island, and on both sides of the River, after the manner of Paris, which gave occasion to the Proverb, Après Paris Melun. It is without doubt a place of much Antiquity, and was considerable in the time of Julius Cæsar, being mention'd in his Commentaries. It is well fortified with a Castle, encompassed with large Suburbs, and adorned with a great number of beautiful Churches, particularly the Collegiate dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the Parochial of St. Stephen, S. Aspar, and S. Ambrose, besides the Abbey of S. Peter and divers other Monasteries. Moreover it bears the Title of a County, and hath given its Name to an illustrious Family, from whence have sprung many Prelates and Officers of the Crown. The Normans sacked this Town in 845. the English Forces took it after a Siege of 4 or 5 Months in 1420. and it suffered much damage during the Civil Wars of France in the XVI Century, but hath since recover'd its former Splendor.

Corbeil, Corbelium, aut Corvolium, olim Josedum, stands also on the Banks of the Seine, where it receives the Zuine, or River of Etampes, being distant 7 miles from Melun, 15 from Fontaine-bleau to the North, and as many from Paris to the South. It was heretofore a Roman Colony, and took its name from Corvulo Governor of the Gauls. It was governed by its own Counts from the X. and XI. Centuries, (of whom one named Aimoin, founded the Church of S. Spire, and establish'd therein a College of 12 Canons in memory of the 12 Apostles) till it was united to the Crown in the time of Lewis the Gros, but hath still the Title of a County: Here is a fair Stone Bridge of nine Arches over the Seine.

Fontaine-bleau, Fons Bellaqueus, seu Fons Aquæ Pulchræ, is a very fair Town, distant about 3 miles from the Seine, 8 from Melun, and 30 from Paris to the South: Near this place is the Forest of Bieure, containing 26000 Acres of Ground, together with many Herds of Deer and all sorts of Game; in the midst of which large Wood of high Trees, stands the Royal Palace of Fontain-bleau, taking its name from the great number of Springs, of clear Water and Fountains, that appear on all sides. A Castle was first erected here by King Lewis VII. A. D. 1169. but Francis I. began begin to beautifie it with divers sorts of Ornaments, more especially a curious Library which was afterward transported to Paris, and his Successors continuing in the same Design, have since render'd it one of the magnificent Seats of Europe. About 3 Leagues from Fountain-bleau, is another stately Mansion-House or Palace, known by the Name of Fleury, which is remarkable for a large Canal of Spring-water, enclosed with Walls on both sides, a large Walk shaded with Trees, that seem to be joined together in an admirable Harbour, &c.

The Territory of G A T I N O I S, Vastinum, lies to the South of Hurepois bordering on Beauce. It derives its name from the Rocks and Sands which the Inhabitants of the Country call Gastines: Part of this Province belongs to the Government of the Orleanois; that part that belongs to this Government of the Isle of France, contains these principal Towns, viz.

Nemours, } Moret,
Dourdan, } Monthéri,
Courtenay, } Montargis.

Nemours, Nemofium, aut Nemoracum, is situate in a Plain on the River Loing, and defended with an old Castle, being distant 10 miles from Fountain-bleau, and 40 from Paris to the South. The most considerable publick Edifices are, the Priory of St. John, and the Abbey of Nefre Dame de la Foie, possessed by Nuns of the Cistercian Order. This Town was heretofore subject to the Jurisdiction of certain particular Lords, and afterward to that of its Counts; until at length, Charles VI. caused it to be enclosed with Walls, and erected the adjacent Territory into a Duchy, A. D. 1404.

Dourdan, Durdanum, aut Dardincour, is a small Town seated on the Frontiers of Beauce on the River Orge, 26 miles from Paris toward Orleans, and 28 from Nemours to the North-West. It was part of the Possessions of Hugh Capet, but being often pawn'd and sold, was at last bought by Lewis XIII. This Town was much infested during the Civil Wars, and taken by the Protestants in the years 1562 and 1567.

Courtenay, Curtiniacum and Corteniacum, stands on an Hill on the Banks of the Rivulet Clairy, 15 miles South-East from Nemours. This Town tho' of very small compass, hath imparted its Name to divers Princes, whose Actions are celebrated in the French History, and of whom some have been Emperors of Constantinople.

Montargis, Montargium, aut Mons Argi, is a very fair Town built at the Foot of a Hill, water'd with the River Loing, and fenced with an old Castle, which was re-built by Charles V. being distant 25 Leagues from Paris to the South towards Nevers, 12 miles from Nemours, and 30 West from Sens. It is annexed to the Demens of the Crown, and bears the Titles of a Bailliage, Election, and Provostship. It was built in the year 1522. and afterward re-built and enlarged.

M A N T O I S, Meduntanus Ager, is the West part of this Government, and extends from St. Germain to the Frontiers of Normandy, along the sides of the River Seine, and includes within its Territories these considerable Towns, viz.

Mante, } Meulan,
Poissy, } St. Germain en Laye,
Montfort l'Amaury, }

Mante, Medunta, is seated on the South side of the River Seine, (which is there covered with a Stone Bridge) near the Frontiers of Normandy; from whence it is distant, only six miles, and also 25 from Evreux to the East, and 30 from Paris to the North-West. In this Town died King Philip the II. surnamed the August.

Poissy, Pisciacum, is a small Town situated not far from the Confluence of the Oise and the Seine, at the distance of 15 miles from Paris to the North-West toward Rouen. It is famous for the Nativity of Lewis IX. King of France, and on the account of a Conference held between the Roman Catholics and Protestants, under Charles IX. Here are establish'd divers Religious Houses, and among others a Convent of Nuns of the Dominican Order, founded by Philip the fair, &c.

Montfort l'Amaury, Montfortium Amalrici, took the name of Amaury from that of its Lords, and stands on an Hill, the Foot whereof is water'd with the streams of a little River; 27 miles from Paris to the West toward Dreux, and 15 from Mante to the South. King Robert caused a Castle to be erected here, which is now half ruin'd, and enclosed the Town with Walls.

V E X I N - F R A N C O I S, Vexinum, aut Velcastinum Franciscum, is extended between the Rivers Oise and Depte, on the North of Mantois to the Confines of Normandy, including these Towns within its Jurisdiction.

Pontoise, } Chaumont,
Magny, }

Pontoise, Pontifara, seu Pons ad Oesiam, is situate on an Hill and the Banks of the Oise, between L'Isle Adam and the Confluence of this River, with that of the Seine, 20 miles from Paris to the North-West towards Rouen. It is a place of considerable Importance, and adorned with a fair Stone Bridge over the Oise, from whence its name is deriv'd.

Magny, Magniacum, stands on the confines of Normandy, in the midst between Paris and Rouen, at an equal distance of 34 miles from both these Cities.

Chaumont, Caluomontium, aut Calvus Mons, is a small Town between Beauvais to the South, and Mante to the North, being distant 12 miles from the first, and 20 from the last, and 16 from Pontoise to the North.

B E A U V O I S I S, Bellovacensis Ager, lies between the River Oise and the Frontiers of Normandy, to the North of Vexin Francois, containing these Towns, viz.

Beauvais Bish. } Gerberoy, Clermont, } Merlou.

Beauvais, Bellovacum, aut Casaromagus, is seated on the River Thevin, at the distance of 43 miles from Paris to the North, as many from Rouen to the East, 30 from Compeign, and 15 from the Borders of Picardy. It is a large and well fortified City and Episcopop See, under the Metropolitan of Rheims, the Bishop whereof is one of the twelve Ecclesiastical Peers of the Realm. It is honourably mentioned by Cæsar, who says that the People of this Territory were very powerful and withstood him the longest. This is called the Maiden City having been always faithful and not suffer'd it self to be taken. Our English Forces attempted to surprize it in 1433. but did not effect it. Nor did Charles the warlike Duke of Burgundy, prove more more successful, when he besieged it in 1472, being forced to raise the Siege 26 days after his Trenches were opened. However, violent Commotions often arose in it, on account of Religion, during the Civil Wars of France in the last Age. It is a place of good Trade, which consists in Stuffs, Cloths, Earthen Ware, &c. The Bishop was formerly sole Temporal as well as Spiritual Lord of the City and adjacent Country; but since 1539. a Bailwick and Prefidial have been establish'd here. However, the Bishop hath still great Power, and is temporal Lord of the Borough Gerberoy, and rich in great endowments.

Clermont, Cleromontium, or Clermont en Beauvoisis for distinction, is built on a rising ground, and the sides of the River Brecbes, 16 miles from Beauvais to the East, 14 from Compeigne to the West, and 10 from Senlis to the North. It hath been dignified with the Title of a County ever since the time of Robert of France, Son of St. Lewis and Count of Clermont, from whom the Royal House of Bourbon is deriv'd, Gerberoy, Gorboredum, stands on the Frontiers of Picardy 8 miles from Beauvais to the North-West. In the Reign of our Henry VI. A. D. 1435, the English lost a Battel near this Town. Merlou is a Borough seated on the River Teraine, or Therin, 4 or 5 miles from Clermont.

The Duchy of V A L O I S, Valesium, lies on the East of Beauvoisis, between that and Soissonois. In it are these Cities and Towns, viz.

Crespy.	La forte Milon.
Senlis Bish.	Pont Sainte Maixance.
Compeigne.	Villers Coterets, &c.

Crespy, Crepiacum, aut Crispeium, formerly a very considerable City, now a Town of a small compass, nevertheless the chief of the Country of Valois, and hath in it a Provostship and Castellany; it is distant 32 miles from Paris to the North-East, 15 from Meaux to the North, and 12 from Compeigne to the South. In this Town a memorable Treaty of Peace was concluded between the Emperor Charles V. and King Francis I. on the 18 day of September, 1544. The ancient Counts of Valois had the Title of Counts of Crespi also, and used to reside here in a Castle said to be built by King Dagobert, which is now almost ruin'd.

Senlis, Sylvanocinium, is situated in a very pleasant place on the Brook Nonnette, near the Forest of Rets, which gives occasion to its Latin Name, 25 miles from Paris to the North, 16 from Compeigne to the South, 5 from the River Oise, and 25 from Beauvais to the South-East. It is a considerable City, being the Capital of the County, or Bailiage of Senlis, and the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Rheims. St. Proculus converted the Inhabitants to the Christian Religion, and was the first Bishop of this Diocess. The Cathedral is dedicated to the Virgin Mary; here are also 7 Parochial and two Collegiate Churches. The City of Senlis was besieged by the Leaguers in 1579. but they were beaten thence, and a signal Battel fought on that occasion, between the Duke of Longueville, who commanded the King's Forces, and the Duke of Aumale, one of the Principal Heads of the League, wherein the latter lost 1500 Men.

Compeigne, Compendium, stands on the Banks of the River Oise, which a little above falls into the Aime, and near the Forest of Guise, at the distance of 16 miles from Senlis, and 40 from Paris to the North, and 30 from Beauvais to the East. It had a stately Castle, which was the Seat of several of the Kings of France; of these Charles II. furnished the Bald, Emperor, founded a famous Monastery, and repair'd and beautified the whole Town, and called it Carolopolis. It is still a considerable Town, and a place of good Trade, several Manufactures being made in it. The famous Maid of Orleans, Joan of Arcke, was taken Prisoner here by the English, when they besieged it in 1430.

Ferte-Milon, Firmitas Milonis, is water'd by the Rivulet Oure or Oureque, and stands between Meaux Soissons, and Senlis, 35 miles from Paris to the North-east, and 20 from Compeigne to the South-east. It was so called, as it were the Force or Fortrefs of Count Milon, who built it under the Reign of Lewis the Gros; afterwards it was possessed by Hugh the Great, the Son of King Henry I. Count of Vermandois, Valois, &c. who founded the Priory of Voulgis. It is a good Town, and hath large Suburbs and a strong Castle. It was very much impair'd during the Civil Wars, in the end of the XVI Century. A Provostship and Castellany is established here, from whence appeals lie to the Prefidial Court of Senlis.

SOISSONOIS, Sueffionensis Ager, lies between Valois and Laonnois, and hath these chief Towns, viz.

Soissons Bish. Braine. Velly.

Soissons, Sueffiones, five Sueffiones & Augusta Sueffonum, is a very fair, large and well fortified City seated on the River Aisne, at the distance of about 16 miles from the Frontiers of Picardy and Champagne, 22 from Compeigne to the East, 30 from Meaux to the North, and 50 from Paris to the North-east. In the time of the first Race of the French Kings, it was the Capital City of a Kingdom of the same Name; afterward it bore the Title of a County, and was annexed to the Government of Picardy as well as Laon, although they now depend on that of the Isle of France. It is at present the Seat of a Prefidial Court, and a Generality, as also the See of a Bishop, who is the first Suffragan to the Archbishop of Rheims, and in his Absence hath a right to crown the Kings of France. The Country hereabouts is very fruitful in Corn.

Braine, Brennacum aut Brana, is a small Town and Abby on the River Vesle, between Fines to the East, and Soissons to the West, about 10 miles from each, and 5 from the River Aisne to the South.

Velly stands on the Aisne 10 miles above Soissons, a small Town and not considerable.

L A O N N O I S, Laudunensis Ager, is extended between part of Champagne, Picardy, Beauvoisis and Soissonois, and is the North-east Border of this Government, including these principal Cities, Towns, &c. viz.

Laon Bish.	} Noyon Bish.
Lieffe.
	} Premontre, &c.

Laon, Laudnum, aut Laudinum Clavatum, is a large well fortified City, and an Episcopal See under the Metropolitain of Rheims; this Bishop is one of the ancient twelve Peets of the Realm, enjoys the Title of a Duke, and hath the right to carry the Sacred Vial la Sr. Ampoule, at the Coronation of the Kings of France. It was at first only a Cattle built at the top of an high Hill, and called Laudnum num, from a Name commonly attributed by the Gauls to all places of such Situation, but in time grew to be a pretty good Town, which King Clovis the Great enlarged and made a City, and St. Remigius or Remi of Reims erected the Bishoprick and founded a Cathedral Church, on which at present depend 84 Canons, of which four are dignitaries. This City is distant 18 miles from Soissons to the North, 35 from Compeign to the East, and 65 from Paris to the North-East.

Lieffe, Letitia, is a small Town on the Frontiers of Picardy and Champagne, about 8 miles from Laon, to the East. It is chiefly famous on the account of the Pilgrims that frequently resort hither from divers parts to pay their Devotions in a Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary; where even the Kings of France have used to pay their Devotions as soon as they came to the Crown, without which they believed they had not the Power to cure the King's Evil.

Noyon, Noviodunum, Noviomagus, aut Noviomum, is situated on the Rivulet Vorse, which a little below falls into the Oise, at the distance of 20 miles from Soissons to the North-west, 25 from Laon to the West, and 45 from Paris to the North. The Archbishoprick of Vermandois was translated hither A. C. 520. when Agusta Vermanduorum, or St. Quintin, the Metropolis of that Diocesis, was ruin'd by the Barbarians. Noyon is a well-built City adorned with fair Buildings and Magnificent Churches, the chief of which is the Cathedral, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, besides a great number of Fountains, and four Suburbs. This Bishop had Jurisdiction over all Flanders before Townay was erected into a See. He is still Count and Peer of France. It may not be amiss to note that the famous John Calvin was born here, A. 1509.

Chauny, Calniacum, stands on the Banks of the River Oise, about 6 miles from Noyon to the East. It is a Royal Town and a Castleany, although of a small compass. It was annexed to the Crown by Charles V. in 1378.

Premontre, Premonstratum, is a Village distant 8 miles from Laon to the West, about 16 from Noyon to the East, and 15 from Soissons to the North. It took its Name from a Famous Abby of Canons Regular of St. Augustin, founded there by St. Norbert, sometime Archbishop of Magdeburg.

The Isle of France, with the Soissonnois, Laonnois, Beauvaisis, &c. hath a Governor-General, a Governor of the City, Vicouany and Provostship of Paris, besides which there is a Grand Provost of Paris and the Isle of France, properly so called; 4 Lieutenant-Generals in Beauvaisis, and Vexin Francois, a Bailly of Valois, about 20 Governors of the King's Houses, and particular Governors of Beauvais, Compeign, Martli, Laon, Noyon, and Soissons, Villers, Senlis, Crespi en Valois, &c.

C H A P. VI.

BRETAGNE, Armorica aut Britannia Minor.

THE Province of Bretagne, or the lesser Britain, apparently took its modern Name from those People of Great Britain, who having escaped the fury of the Saxons, arriv'd on these Coasts, where they were courteously entertained by the Inhabitants, and incorporated with them into one Body. They still retain a different Language from the rest of France. This Country was heretofore called Armorica, i. e. ad mare sita, from its situation on the Seashoar, and afterward Lydaw, in the British Tongue in the same sense; as also Letavia in Latin, by the English Writers of the middle Age. It is bounded on the East by the Provinces of Anjou, Maine, and part of Normandy, advancing it self in form of a Peninsula to the West into the Ocean, with which it is encompassed on the three other sides. Its utmost extent from East to West, consists of about 170 English miles; that is to say, from Vitrey to the point of Conquet, and about 100 miles from North to South, viz. From St. Malo to the Borders of Poisgau, but in other Places it is not above 70 miles broad. It is situated between the 47th Degree, and almost the 49th of Latitude.

Julius Cæsar first made himself Master of this Province, and it remain'd under the Dominion of the Romans till Maximus having caused himself to be proclaimed Emperor in England, A. C. 382, granted to one of his Lieutenant-Generals named Conan Meridiac, the Title of King of Armorica or Bretagne, which Sovereignty continued to the time of Clovis and Chilperick, who oblig'd these Princes to be content with the stile of Counts. But they often revolted, until Digobert II. rendred them Tributary; and Charlemagne entirely subdued them A. 787. How ever they took up Arms against Lewis the Debonnaire and Charles the Bald, and their last King Solomon was slain in Battle. Afterwards the Country was Govern'd by divers Princes until the Year 1213, at which time Aix, the Heiress of Bretagne, Married Peter of Dreux Muecler, whose Successors to the number of Ten retained the Possession thereof under the title of a Duchy, until to the Year 1491, when Ann of Bretagne the only Daughter of Francis II. the last Duke, was espoused to King Charles VIII. and and afterwards to Lewis XII. who inseparably united this Duchy to the Crown of France.

The Soil of this Province yields Pasture, Hemp, Wood, Minerals, some Corn, but no Wine; and about Nantes great quantity of Salt is made. The Meadows feed abundance of Cattle, especially Horses, of which a very good Race are bred here. Hemp and Flax grows in great plenty, so that abundance of Canvas and Linnen is made here. The Forests are many and large, and contain great variety of Game. Between Chateau-Briant and Martignes, are found Mines of Iron and Lead, and in other places some of Copper and Tin. This Province is happy in Havens, having more good Sea-Ports than any other part of France, and many Islands all round it. The Inhabitants are good Fisher-men, which they are encouraged to by the great variety of delicate Fish daily taken on their Coasts; particularly Salmon, Herrings, Sardines, and a certain Fish of a most delicious taste, called Imperador, or Emperor at Marseille, and Gracienx Signieur, or Gracious Lord in Bretagne; besides Tunnies, Porpeffes, Dolphins, Sturgeon, and some others appropriated to the Royal Fishery. Travellers admire the Jewels of Amber at Belle-Iſle, the Aqueducts at Dol, the Vaults between Rieux and Redon, the Subterranean Torrent in the Forest of St. Aubin du Cormier, the ſingular Properties of the River Ardre, and the Lake of Grand-lieu near Nantes, from whence are taken many Toad-ftones, and Serpent-Tongues of extraordinary Vertue.

The moſt conſiderable Rivers of this Province are the Loire, the Vilaine, Rance, Blavet, Aufen, Trieux, Laitta, Oder, Arguenon and Coveſnon.

Bretagne is divided into nine Dioceſſes.

The Biſhoprick or Dioceſs of RENNES, Episcopatus Rbedonenſis, is ſituated on the Frontiers of Normandy, and the Province of Maine, and bounded on the North by the Biſhoprick of Dol. The chief Towns are theſe, viz.

Rennes Biſh. } Fougueres, Vitrey. } Antraim, &c.

Rennes, Rhedones aut Conduſte Rbedonum, ſtands on the River Vilaine, which here receives the Lille, and divides the Town into two parts, and at the diſtance of 54 miles from Nantes to the North, 40 from St. Malo to the South, and 30 from the Borders of the Province of Maine to the West, and 30 from the Borders of Normandy to the South. It is the Capital of Bretagne, and was heretofore the Place of Reſidence of the Counts or Earls of Bretagne, and was for ſome time the Seat of the Parliament of the whole Province, which was eſtabliſh'd there by King Henry II. but has been in this Age remov'd to Vannes. It is an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Tours. The Dioceſs contains 450 Parishes, beſides two notable Abbeys, viz. Of St. Magdalen and St. George, within the City, a College of Jeſuits, and divers other Houſes for Religious Perſons. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to St. Peter, beſides which there are ſeveral Parochial Churches. The Palace where the Parliament uſed to ſit, is a fair Building. The Clock of it is admired, as being one of the largest in France. This City is pleaſantly ſeated in a fruitful Country, being environ'd with Pastures and Foreſts, and hath a good Trade by means of the River.

Vitrey, Vitraum, Vitriacum, and Viſtoriacum, is a fair walled Town, bearing the Title of a Barony, and ſtands alſo on the Banks of the Vilaine, 24 Miles above Rennes to the East, and not above five from the Borders of Maine. The Proteſtants had formerly a conſiderable Church here.

Fougères, Fitricie, is ſeated on the River Coveſnon, near the Frontiers of Normandy and Maine, 15 Miles from Vitrey to the North, and near 30 from Rennes to the North-Eaſt. This Town hath given its Name to a Noble Family, and is noted for the fine Glaſs made in it. Raouel de Fougères, fortified it, and built the Caſtle.

The Biſhoprick of NANTES, Episcopatus Nannetenſis, lies to the South of Rennes, between the Frontiers of Anjou and Poitou, and the River Vilaine. The moſt conſiderable Towns are theſe, viz.

Guerande,

Nantes, Nannetes, aut Corbilibium, the Capital City of a County of the ſame Name, is ſeated on the Northern Bank of the River Loire, near the confluence of the River Ardre, about 30 Miles from the Sea to the East, 40 from Angers to the West, and 55 from Rennes to the South. It was the Seat of the later Dukes of Bretagne, and gave the Title of a Count to their eldeſt Sons. It is at preſent a handſome large City, well fortified, and hath a ſtrong Caſtle flanked with Towers and Half-Moons. It is the See of a Biſhop, who is Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Tours, and is a Councillor in the Parliament of Rennes. Here is a Univerſity, a Prefidial, Generality and Chamber of Accounts. The Public Buildings are the Cathedral dedicated to St. Peter, a fair ancient Structure, beautified with two high Towers: In it are to be ſeen the Tombs of ſeveral Dukes of Bretagne; the Collegiate Church of the Virgin Mary, and ſome Parochial ones; divers Monaſteries, the Town-Houſe built after the Modern Architecture; the Palace of the Chamber of Accounts; that of the Prefidial Court, with a beautiful Tower and Clock; and a ſtately Hopſital. This City is a great Mart for Trade; vaſt quantities of all ſorts of Merchandizes are brought in by the River Loire, which flows up to its Walls, and brings up very large Boats, and Ships of ſmall Burden: And from hence by the ſame River Foreign Goods are ſent to Anjou, Blois, Orleans, &c. and Native Commodities brought down; an excellent ſort of Brandy is exported hence to Foreign Countries. By reaſon of this convenience of Traffic, the City has from time to time been largely encreaſed, and there are now four Suburbs round it, which are well filled with Inhabitants. A famous Edict in favour of the Proteſtants was made here by King Henry IV. in the Year 1595, which was regiſtred in the Parliament of Paris, and confirmed and ſworn to by his Successor Lewis XIII. Notwithſtanding which the preſent King hath repealed it in the Year 1685, and ſeverely perſecuted the Proteſtants.

Ancenis, Anceniſſum, and Anderſum, was heretofore the chief Town of the Amnites, ſtands likewiſe near the Banks of Loire, and is diſtant 25 Miles from Angers to the West, and 18 from Nantes to the North-Eaſt. It was formerly defended with a Caſtle built by Aremburg, the Wife of a Breton Count, named Guerec, &c.

Chateau-Briant, Caſtrum Brientii, is a ſmall Town fenced with an old Cattle on the Frontiers of Anjou, about 30 Miles from Nantes to the North.

Guerande, Guerada, aut Aula Quiriaca, is between the Mouths of the Vilaine and Loire, 38 Miles below Nantes to the West, and is remarkable on account count of the adjacent Salt-pits, near the Port of Croisil.

Machecou, Machicolium, is the chief Town of a small County commonly called the Duchy of Retz, and seated on the South side of the Loire, about 10 Miles from it, 20 from Nantes to the South-West, 4 from the Frontiers of Poitou, and about 5 from the Coasts of the Ocean.

The Bishoprick or Diocess of St. MALO, Episcopatus Maclovienfis, is situated on the Northern Part of the Province near that of Dol, and includes these remarkable Towns, viz.

- St. Malo, Bishoprick. } Jocelin,
- Dinant, } Montfort.

St. Malo, Maclovi, or Macloviopolis, one of the chief Towns and Ports of the upper Bretagne, is seated on the Northern Coast, and built on a Rock in the Sea, call'd the Island of St. Aaron, and joined to the Continent by the means of a long Cauley, of not above 30 Fathoms broad, the entrance whereof is defended by a strong Castle, flanked with large Towers, and the Town surrounded with Walls, deep Ditches, and always guarded with a sufficient Garrison; besides which to the Sea it is secured by a shoal of Sand that encompasses it, and several Rocks and small Islands, that make a Haven of difficult access, inso-much that it is reputed one of the Keys of France. It is considerable for its Traffick and Strength, and the Skill of its Inhabitants in Maritime Affairs, by which means great numbers of Privateers are in time of War from hence fitted out, and much disturb the Trade of these Seas. It was founded on the Ruins of the ancient Alex, or Guid-Aleth, and derives its Name from that of its first Bishop Maclovius, or Macvus, and is distant 10 Miles from Dol to the North-West, 35 from Rennes, and 90 from Nantes to the North, and 200 Miles West from Paris. St. Malo was at first only an Abbey, until the Bishoprick of Quidalet was translated thither in the Year 1172. But it hath ever since retained the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Tours. The Cathedral dedicated to St. Vincent, is one of the most ancient of all France. Besides the Cathedral, there are many fair Monasteries, and some other publick Buildings of good Note.

Dinant, Dinantium, stands on the Banks of the River Rance, about 15 miles from St. Malo to the South. This Town in time past hath been well fortified, and hath conferr'd the Title of an Earl on the younger Sons of the Duke of Bretagne.

Jocelin is a small Town on the side of the River Oufte or Aust, near 40 Miles from Rennes to the West, and as many from St. Brioux to the South.

Montfort, a small Town on the River Melin, which falls into the Vilaine, stands 10 miles from Rennes to the West.

The Diocess of DOL, Episcopatus Dolensis, is of small extent and adjoins to that of St. Malo; it lies in the North-East Angle of Bretagne, and bounded by the Frontiers of Normandy and the Ocean.

The City of Dol, Dola, and Dolensis Urbs, is seated in a Marshy Plain, at the distance only of 6 Miles from the Coasts of the British Sea to the South, 10 from St. Malo to the South-East, and 30 from Rennes to the North. It takes up a very little space of Ground in compas, but is defended with a strong Fort. The Cathedral Church bears the Name of St. Sonson, who was the first Bishop of this Diocess; and some of his Successors have assum'd the Title of Metropolitans of the Province, which Preeminence nevertheless after a long Tryal at Law, was at length granted to the Archbishop of Tours.

The Bishoprick or Diocess of St. BRIEUX, Briacensis Episcopatus, lies on the West of St. Malo, between Treguier and Vannes, containing these Principal Towns, viz.

- St. Brioux, Bish. } Fagon.
- Pontrieux, } Lambale.
- Quintin, }

St. Brioux, Briocum, aut Fanum Sancti Brioci, is situated on the Gulph of Hilion, between the Rivers of Trieu and Arguenon, being distant 25 Miles from Treguier to the East, 35 from St. Malo to the West, and 55 from Rennes. It is well fortified, and hath a convenient Harbour on the Coasts of the British Sea. This City takes its Name from St. Brioux, one of its Prelates. The Episcopal See was first founded by Neomene Duke of Bretagne, in the time of King Charles II. surnamed the Bald, A. C. 144. and its Bishop is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Tours.

Pontrieux, is a good Town, seated on the River Trieu, from which it takes its Name, at the distance of about 10 Miles from the British Sea, and 20 from St. Brioux to the West.

Quintin, Quintinum, is a small Town, and stands about 10 Miles from S. Brioux to the South.

Lambale, Lambalium, was heretofore the Chief Town of the Arabiliates, an ancient People mention'd by Cesar (according to the Opinion of la Vigenere and others) and sometime belonged to the House of Clifson; it is distant only 10 or 12 Miles from the British Sea, 12 from S. Brioux to the East, and 45 from Rennes to the North-West. This place is especially famous on the account of the adjacent Pastures, wherein are fed many Herds of Cattle, and for its considerable Trade in Parchment, &c.

The Bishoprick of TREGUIER, Episcopatus Trecorensis, extends it self on the Northern Coasts of this Province, between S. Brioux and S. Pol de Leon, including these chief Towns, viz.

- Treguier, Bish. } Lannian,
- Morlaix, } Garlesquin.
- Guingamp, }

Treguier aut Lantriguet, Trecorea aut Treorium, olim Vorganium, is a very ancient City on the Northern Coasts of Bretagne, and hath been often exposed to the Incurfions of the Saxons, Danes and Normans. The Bishop is both Spiritual and Temporal Lord thereof, and assumes the Title of a Count. The Cathedral Church bears the Name of S. Tudgal, who was the first Prelate of this City. It hath a safe Harbour on the Coasts of the British Sea, and is distant 25 Miles from S. Brioux to the North-west, 10 from Pontrieux to the North, 30 from S. Pol de Leon to the East, and 80 from Rennes to the North-West.

Morlaix, Morleum aut Mons Relaxus, situate on the side of a Hill, between two Valleys, near the Sea-Coasts, on a River of the same Name, which a little below falls into a Bay called le Toveau: It is a very large, well-built, and populous wall'd Town; the River is deep, and receives Vessels of 100 Tuns, which come up into the Town; by the Convenience whereof it is a Place of good Trade, which consists in Flax, Canvas, Paper (made here in great quantity tity) Linnen-Cloth and other Commodities that are exported hence to England, Holland, and other parts. This hath so increased the number of the Inhabitants, that two Suburbs have been added to the Town, which are named Venice and S. Matthew. Here are many beautiful Buildings, among which the Palace called l' Hospital is one of the statelyst in the Province, and magnificent Churches, whereof that of the Virgin Mary is the most noted. On the top of the Hill stands the remainder of an old Castle, now almost ruin'd. Morlaix is distant 30 Miles from Treguier, to the South-West, 40 from Brieux to the West, and 12 from S. Pol de Leon to the South-East.

The Bishoprick or Diocesis of ST. POL DE LEON, Episcopatus S. Pauli Leonini, is bounded on the North and West by the Ocean; on the South by the Bishoprick of Quimper-Corentin, and on the East by that of Treguier. The Principal Towns are these, viz.

S. Pol de Leon , Bishp.	} Brest, } Portal, } The Isle of Ouessant, or } Ushant, &c.
Lefneven,
Lanerneau,

S. Paul, or Pol de Leon, or Leondoul, Leona & Fanum Sancti Pauli Leonini, aut etiam Stavioceus Portus, & Civitas Ossismorum, was a considerable Town even in the time of Julius Cæsar, who in his Commentaries makes mention of Ossinii, whose Capital City (according to Protolym) was Vorganicum, which is called Vorgium in the Roman Itinerary, and Ossinii in the Notitia Imperii; it hath been ruined long since, and of its ancient Diocesis have been formed these three of S. Pol de Leon, S. Brieux and Treguier. This City is situated on the Sea-coasts between Lantriguet or Treguier and Brest, and is distant about 30 miles from each, and 100 from Rennes to the West. It hath a safe Harbour, and is defended with a Fortres, wherein some of the Dukes of Bretagne have formerly resided. It is also at present an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Tours, and the Capital City of a small Territory called Leonnois; it hath been possessed by its own proper Princes, until about the year 1254, when John I. Duke of Bretagne purchased this Principality. Its first Bishop was named Paul, who died Anno 600, was canonized, and from him the City had its Name. The Chapter is composed of a Chanter, 3 Archdeacons, 16 Canons, 7 Prebendaries styled Vicars, &c. The Inhabitants speak the Low British Language more purely and elegantly than the other of the same Country.

Landerneau, stands on the Banks of the little River Elorne, which falls into the Bay of Brest; and is distant 24 miles from S. Pol de Leon to the South-West. It is noted for the Richness of the Soil of its Neighbouring Country.

Brest, Brivates Portus, olim Gescribale & Gesobrivata, is a famous Sea-Port Town, seated on the North side of a large commodious Bay or Harbour, which opens to the Ocean in the most extreme Western part of the Continent of France. The Entrance of this Harbour called the Goulet, is exceeding difficult by reason of certain Rocks, known by the Names of Minons, Filots, and Mingant, that lie under Water at high Tide, and is therefore the more secure Retreat for the French King's Ships of War, for which this is the only Port he has on this side the Mediterranean. Wherefore this Town is one of the Grand Magazines of the Admiralty of France; Toulon in the Mediterranean being the other; and in this Harbour the greatest number of the French Navy, as in that the Ships of greatest Burthen Winter, and are fitted out. The Naval Stores and Provisions for 70 Sail of Men of War are laid up in this Town, and Ships of 80 and 90 Guns are built here, which makes Brest a populous and rich Place. It is well fortified after the modern manner, with strong Walls and a Castle well furnished with Outworks and Batteries. It is distant 35 miles from S. Pol de Leon to the South-West, and 15 from the Promontory of Conquet.

Conquet, is a small Sea-Town, situate near the Southern Cape of the Bay of Brest, not considerable, and only mentioned because it gives name to the Road between it and the Islands of Belingnier, Molines, &c.

The Island of OUESSANT or USHANT, Ouxentius, Ouxantis, & Ouxentissena, called axantis by Pliny, and Ouxantissena by Antonius, lies at the distance of 30 Miles Westward from Brest, and is not above 20 Miles in compass; nevertheless it hath obtained the Title of a Marquitate. It is fortified with a Castle, and contains some rich Towns of Note.

The Bishoprick of QUIMPER-CORENTIN, is bounded on the N. by that of S. Pol de Leon, on the W. and S. by the Ocean, and by the Diocesis of Vannes to the E. and takes up the S. W. Corner of the Lower Bretagne, and contains these remarkable Towns, viz.

Quimper-Corentin , B.	} Douaouenes, } Chateaur-Lin, } Guireuc, &c.
Concorneau,
Quimperlay,

Quimper-Corentin, Corisopitum, olim Curiosotiva, is the Metropolis of a small Territory in the Lower Bretagne, named Cornouaille from the County of Cornwall in England, whence the City itself is also sometimes, tho' improperly called Cornouaille. Its ancient Name is Kemper or Quimper, whereto Corentin was added from that of its first Bishop, who is supposed to have been ordained by S. Martin of Tours, its Episcopal See being as yet subject to that Metropolitan. This City was heretofore possessed by its own Counts or Earls; it is of a large extent, well built, and very considerable for its Traffick, and situated on the Oder, into which a small River falls that surrounds the Town, and makes it a kind of an Island. The Oder is so deep, that Barks of a large size are convey'd at high Tide to the Port, at the confluence of the two Rivers, where stands the Suburbs term'd, The Duke's-Land, inhabited by many rich Merchants. The Cathedral is a stately Edifice, and of much Antiquity, adorn'd with two large Towers: There are also divers other Churches, and Monasteries, and the Bishops Palace, which is a very magnificent Piece of Building. This City stands about 12 Miles from the Southern Shoar of Bretagne, and 30 from Brest to the South, and from Rennes about 120 to the East.

Concarneau, Conquerneau, or Concorneau, is a well fortified Town and Castle on the Sea-coast, lying between Blavet and Penmark, 15 Miles from Quimper-Corentin to the South-East.

Quimperlay, Quimperleum, is a reasonable good Town seated at the confluence of the two little Rivers Isotta and Laitta, about 8 Miles from the Sea-coasts, and 30 from Quimper-Corentin to the East.

Douaouenes, a small Town about 10 Miles N. E. from Quimper-Corentin, gives name to a large Bay, adjoining to that of Brest.

The Bishoprick or Diocesis of VANNES, is bounded on the South by the Ocean, on the E. by the Diocesis of Nantes, on the N. by that of S. Brieux, and on the West by that of Quimper-Corentin. The chief Towns are these, viz.

Vannes, Bish.
Port Louis, or Blavet, } Auray, Hannelon. } Mislevoit, &c.
 and Bell-Isle.

Vannes, or Vennes, Venetia, aut Dariorigum Venetorum, the Capital City of the Lower Bretagne, stands on an incommodious Bay, being fill'd with little Islands, into which the Sea flows through a Canal named Montalbon, and is distant 55 miles from Rennes to the S. W. somewhat less from Nantes to the West, and 60 from Quimper-Corentin to the East. It is defended with an old Castle called l' Hermire, which was formerly a Palace of the Dukes of Bretagne. The Cathedral dedicated to St. Peter, hath a considerable Chapter, and divers other fair Churches contribute much to render it a splendid City, but the fury of the Civil Wars hath diminish'd part of its ancient Lustre.

Port Louis, or Blavet, Portus Ludovici aut Blavetium, is a small but well fortified Town on the Mouth of the River Blavet, that takes it rise near the Burgh or Village of Grace in the Diocess of S. Brioux, and dischargeth it self into the Sea at the Port of Blavet; which is a capacious and safe Harbour, and distant 26 Miles from Vannes to the W. and near 40 from Quimper-Corentin to the E.

Hannelon, Hannebonium, stands on the Banks of the same River Blavet, about 8 Miles from Blavet to the North, and 26 from Vannes to the W.

Bell-Isle, Calonesus, a considerable Island on the Southern Coasts of the Province of Bretagne, lies at the distance of about 3 or 4 Leagues from the Continent of France, and is almost encompassed with small Isles or Rocks. Its extent from W. to E. is about 10 Miles, and its greatest breadth about 5 Miles. It hath a fair Haven and some strong Forts over against Vannes and Auray. The whole Island is at present divided into 4 Parishes, and tho' of a small compass, yet affords much good Pasture-Ground for Cattle. It is also remarkable for its Salt-Pits, and on the account of the frequent Passage of Vessels along the adjacent Coasts, but especially because it is the usual Rendezvous of the French Fleet, when they put to Sea. Bell-Isle was heretofore possess'd by the Monks of the Abby of S. Croix of Quimper, till King Charles IX. erected it into a Marquisate, and bestow'd it on the Count of Raic, A. D. 1573. The Abby hath been also endow'd for some time with so plentiful a Revenue, that it was esteem'd a competent Preferment for Anthony of Bourbon, Base Brother to King Henry IV. to be created Lord Abbot thereof. The Principal Place bearing the name of the Town, is adorn'd with a very stately Citadel or Castle, called the Palace, and so well fenced of late with Ramparts and other Works, according to the modern Method of Fortification, that it seems to be almost impregnable.

The Governour-General of Bretagne hath under him two Lieutenants-General, whereof one hath the Inspection of all the Province except the County of Nantes, under whom are two Lieutenants. The other hath the care of that Country only. There are also particular Governours in these Places, viz. Nantes, Vannes, S. Malo, Dinant, Vitre, Brest, Quimper, Blavet, and Bell-Isle.

C H A P. VII.

L' ORLEANOIS, or the Government of Orleans.

THE Government of ORLEANOIS is one of the most fruitful and pleasant Countries of France, and its Jurisdiction is one of the largest extent, as comprehending fourteen or fifteen small Provinces, every one of which hath its particular Governour. This Governour takes its name from Orleans, its chief City, but Appeals lie from thence to the Parliament of Paris. It is extended from East to West, that is to say, from the Castle of Chinon in Nivernois as far as the Coasts of the Ocean, the space of about 270 miles; and 190 Miles from South to North, viz. from Moubrun in Angoumois to Nonancourt in Normandy; It is bounded on the North by the Isle of France and Normandy; on the East by Campaigne and Burgundy; on the South by Xaintonge, Perigort, la Marche, and Bourbonnois; and on the West by Bretagne and the Sea: and it lies from South to North between the 45th degree 40 minutes, and the 48th degree 50 Minutes of Latitude; as also from West to East, between the 14th degree 40 Minutes, to the 21 degree 40 Minutes of Longitude, which ought to be understood of its greatest length and breadth.

The Soil is extremely rich, plentifully bringing forth Corn, Fruits, Wine, and every thing necessary for the support of Humane Life, abounding likewise in Verdant Meadows, Arable and Woods. The great Forest of Orleans is especially remarkable, containing 70000 Acres of Land, and double that in the time of Francois I. The principal Rivers are the Loire, into which the Indre, the Cher, and the Vienne, enlarged with the Streams of the Creuse, discharge themselves between Montreueau and Langeft in Touraine: The Mayne in like manner being joined to the Sartes a little above, Angers falls into the same River Loire about a League below that City. The Aller also falls into the Loire a little below Nevers. Lastly, the Charante takes its rise in Angoumois, passeth through Xaintonge, and runs into the Sea over against the Island of Oleron.

ORLEANOIS, properly so call'd, lies between Berry, Gatinois, Beauce and Blaffois. The most considerable Towns of this Country are these, viz.

Orleans, Bish.	}	Stilly.
Beaugency,		Gergeau.
La Ferte Seneterre.		Pluviers, &c. or S. Aubin.

ORLEANS, Aurelia, Aurelianensis Urbs, olim Genabum, is one of the principal Cities of France; it is situate on the River Loire, on the side of a Hill, and in form of a Bow. It's a very ancient City, and by some said to have been built by the Druids; or according to others by the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, A. D. 163. who gave it the name. The Buildings are fair and beautiful, though old: The Fortifications are a Terras and strong Wall, with 40 Towers on it.

From the middle of the City there is a Bridge over the Loire, built of Stone upon 16 Arches, which leads into one of the Suburbs. On this Bridge stands a Statue of the Virgin Mary, and on her right, at some distance another of King Charles VII. and on her left one of the famous Virago's Joan d'Arc, all three of Copper. This City was the Capital of a separate Kingdom, in the first Ages of the French Monarchy: At present it bears the Title of a Duchy, which is appropriated to the second Sons of the Kings of France. It is also the See of a Bishop, who is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Paris, and adorn'd with a famous University, founded by King Philip the Fair.

The Cathedral is a venerable and sumptuous building; its Chapter consists of 59 Canons, and 12 Dignitaries: Besides the Cathedral, here are 4 Collegiate and 22 Parochial Churches. A Generality is establish'd here (to which 12 Elections, containing 1148 Parishes resort) and also a Bailiage and Presidial. The Country round it is very fruitful and pleasant, and the River furnishes them with the Commodities of Foreign Nations from Nantes, as well as the Product of their own from the more Southern Provinces. Orleans hath sustain'd divers Sieges; Arthur King of the Brits invest'd it A. D. 450. but it was reliev'd, and the Huns totally routed by Aetius the Roman General, assist'd by Meroveus the French King, and Theoderick the Goth. In the year 1423. our English Forces under the command of Thomas Muncure Earl of Salisbury besieged this City, and reduc'd it to great distress, but a certain Maid of 13 years old, call'd Joan of Arc, came to the King of France, and pretending her self sent from God, put on Man's Habit and Armour, and having got into Orleans, did so animate the besieg'd, that by their frequent Sallies, in which Joan was always the foremost, they forc'd the English to raise the Siege, having lost the Earl of Salisbury, the Lord Molines, the Lord Poynings, and many Soldiers. This Woman was for some time the Director of the French Armies, in which she had great success, till at length being taken by the English, she was burnt for a Witch. In the Civil War the Protestants made themselves Masters of this City; and being besieged by the Duke of Guise, he was treacherously slain by John Poltrot, Feb. 14 1563. and a Month after a Peace was concluded and the City surrendred: But in 1567. the Protestants again seiz'd it, and for a long time it was their Head Quarters. Orleans is seated, as hath been said, upon the River Loire, and is distant near 70 Miles from Paris to the South, 160 from Nantes to the East, 220 from Bordeaux to the North-East, 190 from Lyon to the North-West, 130 from the Head of the River Meuse to the West, 60 from Tours, and 30 from Blois to the East, 55 from Bourges to the North, and 70 from Sens to the West.

Sully, Sulliacum, & La Ferte-Seneterre, or S. Aubin, are two Towns of good Note, both bearing the Title of Duchies; the former is seated on the Loire, 28 miles above Orleans to the East, and the other 10 miles from the same City to the South.

Gergeau, or Gargeau, Gergotium, stands in like manner on the Banks of the Loire, 10 miles above Orleans to the East. Our English Forces gain'd this Town from the French, A. D. 1420. but John II. Duke of Alençon, retook it by Storm in the year ensuing.

BLASOIS, Blesensis Ager, is extended between Berry, Orleanois proper, whereof it is a part, Beauce, Perche, Vendomois, and Touraine, the chief Towns of this Country are,

Blois,	}	Mer,
Chateau Dun,		Remorentin.

Blois, Blesæ, & Blesensis Castrum, the chief Town of a Territory of the same name, is seated on the side of an Hill near the South Banks of the River Loire, over which is built a fair stone Bridge, at the distance of 30 Miles from Orleans to the West, and as many from Tours. It is honoured with the Title of a County, and beautified with a most magnificent Castle, nor long since repair'd by Gaston Duke of Orleans, which (by reason of the pleasantness of the Place, and wholesomeness of the Air) hath often afforded a Royal Seat to the Kings of France, and wherein one of them, viz. Lewis XII. was born. Besides that, it hath heretofore afforded Nurture to many young Princes of the Royal Family; nor to mention that the first Counts of Blois were descended from Hugh Capet. Moreover the spacious Park and adjacent Garden are much admir'd by Travellers; it may perhaps not be amiss to observe that divers Queens of France have died at Blois, particularly Ann the Wife of Charles VIII. and Lewis XII. A. D. 1514. Maude the Wife of Francis I. in 1524. and Catherine of Medicis the Wife of Henry II. in 1589. In the year 1562. this City being possessed by the Protestants, was taken and sack'd by the Kings Forces under the Duke of Guise. In 1576. the Assembly of the Estates of the Kingdom were convocok'd hither by King Henry III. to accommodate the Differences between the Hugonots and the Papists, but broke up in a little time without effecting it. Again, in the Year 1588. they met here upon occasion of the great Disorder the Kingdom was brought into by the Holy League, and the Duke of Guise, the Head of it was here slain in the Castle by the Kings command.

Chateau Dun, Castellodunum, called corruptly Chaudun, is a neat well built Town lesser, and the Capital of the small Country of Dunois. It hath an old Castle, and is distant 25 Miles from Blois to the North, and 20 from Vendome to the East; it is seated upon a small River, which ariseth about 20 Miles from hence, and bears the name of the Loire also, and falls into the great Stream at Angers.

Remorentin, or Remorentin, Remorentinum, Romorentinum, & Rivus Morentino, is a good Town, seated upon a little River, that a little below falls into the Cuer, and is distant 25 Miles from Blois to the South-East. Those Geographers that call this part the Lower Orleanois, make this Town the Capital of another Division named Sologne.

BEAUSSE or BEAUCÉ, Belsia, lies between the Isle of France, Perche, Blesois, and Orleanois; and its most remarkable Towns are, Chartres, Bish. } Gaillardon.

 Nogent-le-Roy. } Bonneval.
 Dreux. } Usperson.

Chartres, Carnutum, Carnutes, aut Autricum, the Metropolis of the Province of Beauvais, and of the Territory of Chartrain, is situated on a Hill, and on the banks of the River Eure, 45 miles from Paris to the South-west, and as many from Orleans to the North. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Paris. This City and its Territories were sometimes subject to its own Counts, but united to the Crown, in 1528. And Francis I. erected it into a Duchy in favour of Madam Renee of France, Dutchess of Ferrara. It is an ancient City, but fair and well-built; the Streets are narrow, but the publick Places are spacious, and the Houses neat; the Churches are magnificent, especially the Cathedral, which is remarkable for its beautiful Quire, Church under Ground, and two very fine Steeples; the Chapter is compos'd of 72 Canons, and 17 Dignitaries, within the Diocess are contain'd 30 Abbies, 257 Priors, and above 1300 Parishes. Rollo Duke of Normandy besieg'd the City of Chartres, A. D. 911, and in 1019, it was almost entirely consum'd by Fire. In 1568, the French Protestants in vain besieg'd it. It adher'd to the League Party, and stood out against Henry IV. who at length took it, and caus'd himself to be Crown'd therein, A. D. 1591.

Nogent-le-Roy, Nonigentum, seu Nogentum Regium, stands on the banks of the River Eure, where it first begins to be Navigable, 12 miles from Chartres to the North, and 8 from Dreux to the South. This Town about five Ages ago, was named Nogent l'Erembert, Nonigentum Erembertium, according to the report of the French Historiographer Du Chesne, and is remarkable for the Death of King Philip of Valois, which happen'd there on the 22d day of April, A. D. 1350.

Dreux, Decum, the chief Town of a County of the same name, is seated on the River, at the foot of a Hill, on which is erected a Castle, formerly well fortified, but now half ruin'd. It is a very ancient Town, and said to be built by Deus a King of the Gauls. It is distant about 20 miles from Chartres to the North, and 40 from Paris to the West. Robert the Son of Lewis the Gross, obtain'd the County of Dreux in 1137, and from him are descended the Counts of this Name, as also a branch of the Family of the Dukes of Bretagne. This place is famous for a bloody Battle fought near it, between the French Roman Cathelicks and Protestants, A. D. 1652.

P E R C H E, Pericus, is bounded on the North, by Normandy, on the West by Maine, on the South by Vendomis, and on the East by Beauce. It is usually divided into the Upper, or the County and the Lower or Perche Gouet, from the name of one of its ancient Lords. Its chief Towns are.

Nogent-le-Rotrou, Nonigentum Rotrudum, olim Novindum seu Neodunum, is situated on the River Huisne almost in the midst between Chartres to the East, and Mans to the West, about 33 miles from each. It is the principal Town of the upper Perche, and generally esteem'd the fairest throughout the whole Kingdom of France, and is very much enrich'd by divers sorts of Manufactures, particularly of Silks, Linnen-cloth and Leather. The Earl of Salisbury took this place during the Wars betwixt the English and the French in the XVth Century, and caus'd many of the Inhabitants to be Hang'd; but the French King Charles VII. recover'd it, A. D. 1449.

Mortaigne, Moritania, stands on a Hill and a Brook, which begins to form the River Huisne, or Huisne, about 8 miles from the Frontiers of Normandy, and 40 from Chartres to the West. It is a very pleasant Town, and adorn'd with divers fair Churches, a Castle, &c.

Timevais, Timevensis Pagus, is a Town on the Confines of Normandy, 30 miles from Nogent, bearing the title of a Principality.

LE MAINE, Ager Meduanus, hath Normandy for its Northern Bounds, Perche, Vendomis, and Beauce on the East, Bretagne on the West, and Anjou on the South. It is usually divided into the Upper and Lower, and contains these chief Towns, viz.

Mans, Bish. } La Ferte Bernard.

Mans, Cenomenum olim, ut & Vindinum, is situated on the Confluence of the Sarte and the Huisne, about 60 miles from Chartres to the East, 25 from the Confines of Normandy to the South, and 40 from Tours to the North. It is a very ancient City, but hath been much more considerable than it is at present: For Aimoin assures us, that under Charlemaigne it was one of the most flourishing of Gallia Belgica; since which time, the Incurfions of the Normans, the Wats of the Englishs, and the frequent Conflagrations it hath suffer'd, have so far defac'd its Beauty, that it hath often chang'd its Form. However, a Prebital Court is held therein, and it is as yet the See of a Prelate Suffragan to the Archbishop of Tours. The Cathedral Church was at first dedicated to the Virgin Mary, afterward to S. Grevaice, and at length to S. Julian, who was the first Bishop of this Diocess.

Meyenne, Maduna, is pleasantly seated on a River of the same name, 15 miles from the Frontiers of Normandy, and 35 from Mans to the North-west. This Town formerly bore the title of a Marquitate and was afterwards erected into a Duchy, and given to the Family of Guisé.

Laval, or Laval-Guion, Lavallium aut Vallis Guidonis, is situated on the River Meyenne, about 16 miles below Meyenne, and 15 from the Confines of Anjou, to the North. It appertains to the Noble Family of Trimouille, and is chiefly remarkable for its Manufacture of Linnen-cloth.

La Ferte-Bernard, Firmitas Bernardi, is a large Town, built on the side of the River Huisne, near the Frontiers of Perche. It is distant 25 miles from Mans to the East. A Court of Justice is held therein at certain times.

The Duchy of ANJOU borders on Maine to the North, Bretagne to the West, Poitou to the South, and Touraine to the East, including about 30 Leagues in length, and 20 in breadth. It affords vast quantities of excellent Wine, and Quarries of Slate, with which all the Houses are cover'd, and is water'd with 36 Rivers, the chief of which are the Loire, the Sarte, the Loire, the Meyenne, the Dive, the Vienne, the Touay, the Larion, the Eure, and the Guinate, besides so great a number of Lakes, Ponds, Brooks, and Springs, that some are of opinion, that the name of Anjou is deriv'd from Aignade, signifying Water. This Province was given by Charles the Bald to Robert of Saxony, A. D. 870, with the Title of Earl of Anjou, whole whose Son Eudes was King of France, and his Great Grandson Hugh Capet, began the third Race of those Monarchs. Hugh the Great, Father of Hugh Capet, gave it to Geoffry Grisponcke, A. D. 926, whose Grandson added to it the Province of Touraine by Conquest, and his Descendant Fouk III. obtained that of Maine: also by Marriage A. D. 1083. Which Fouk was Father to Geoffry the Husband of Maud, Daughter to our King Henry I. who contended with Stephen for the Crown of England, which her Son Henry II. enjoy'd, and added to it these Estates, which continued part of the Demefns of the English Crown till the time of King John, when Philip Augustus, the French King seiz'd it, A. D. 1202. And it is now an Appenage of the Second Son of France. It is usually divided into Upper and Lower, Angiers being the Capital of the former, and Saumur of the latter. The chief Towns are,

Angers , Bish.	}	Brissac .
Saumur ,		Craon .
La Fleche ,		Chateau-Gontier .
La Leude .		Pont de Ce .
		Beaufort .

Angers, Andegavum, olim Juliomagus, is seated very pleasantly and in a good Air, at the Confluence of the Rivers Mayne and Sarve, and the upper Stream of the Loire, being distant only one League from the great Stream of the Loire to the North, 25 miles from Saumur to the West, 40 from Nantes to the East, and 55 from Mans to the South-west. The greater part of the Town, properly called the City, is built on the side of a pleasant Hill, on which stands the Castle, built on a Rock, flanked with 18 large round Towers and a Half-moon, and encompassed with a broad-flat-bottom'd Ditch, cut out of the same Rock on the side of the River, from whence all necessary provisions are drawn up with Engines. The City is large, well-built and Populous, and hath a good Trade, which consists chiefly in White-wines, whereof the best in France are made in this Province. The Cathedral Dedicated to St. Maurice, is a Beautiful Building, and remarkable for its three high Steeples over the Gate, its Body supported without Pillars, and its exceeding rich Treasure. There are also 15 other Parochial Churches, three Abbies, viz. Those of St. Albin, St. Nicholas, St. Sergius, and a great number of Monasteries, Seminaries, &c. The Episcopal See depends on the Metropolitan of Tours. The Civil Government of the City is administr'd by the Mayor, and 24 Echevins or Aldermen. The University here was founded by Lewis II. Duke of Anjou, A. D. 1388. and is now in flourishing state, and contains divers Colleges, of which that of the Port du Fer and the Oratory are most noted.

Saumur, Salmurum, aut Salmurium, olim Truneum, is seated on the River Loire, over which it hath a long Stone-bridge, at the distance of 25 miles from Anjou to the East, 50 from Mans to the South, and 30 from Tours to the East. The situation of the place is very delightful, and on that account very much admir'd by Strangers. The Town is adorned with a stately Castle well fortified; the Church of Ardilliers, where in the Fathers of the Oratory officiate and have a College, is the most notable in the Town. Here was formerly a famous Protestant Academy, well fill'd with Students, not only of Natives, but also young Gentlemen out of England, Germany, and Sweden; but since the Persecution this hath been destroy'd.

La Fleche, Flexia, stands on the Banks of the upper stream of the Loire in the Upper Anjou, near the Confines of Maine, being distant 30 miles from Saumur to the North, 28 from Angers to the North-East, and about 25 from Mans to the South. In this Town is a magnificent College of Jesuits, founded in the year 1603, by King Henry IV. containing three Courts, and as many Rows of Appartments, capable of entertaining a Prince. Here is also a Castle, a Chapel whereof is interr'd the Heart of King Henry IV.

Brissac, Brissacum, is seated in a fertile Country near the Bridge of Ce over the Loire, about 12 miles from Angers to the South. It is a Town of small compass, nevertheless dignified with the Title of a Dutchy, erected in favour of Charles de Coffy Marshal of France. It is also adorn'd with a fair Castle, a spacious Park, a Pond extending almost a League in length, &c.

VENDOMOIS, a very small Country, lyes between Perche on the North, Maine on the West, Touraine on the South, and Blaisois on the East. It is a very small Province, not above 20 miles in Extent, and contains not many Towns, the chief are.

Vendosme, Montoire.

Vendosme, Vindocinum, is situate on the River Loire, 25 miles from Chateau-Dun to the South-west 20 from Blois, to the North-west, and 30 from Orleans to the West. It is defended with an Old Castle, and bears the Title of a Dutchy, whereof Charles of Bourbon, Grand-Father to Henry IV. was the first Duke. A College of the Fathers of the Oratory, and some other Religious Houses, are founded here.

Montoire, stands also on the Loire, about 12 miles below Vendosme, and is a good Town, but of no signal Note.

POICTOU, a large Province, is bounded on the East by Berry, Limousin, and Touraine; on the North by Anjou and Bretagne, on the West by the Ocean, and on the South by Angoumois and Xaintonge. It is usually divided into the Upper to the East, and the Lower to the West, and is a very fruitful Country, supplied also with plenty of Fish from the Neighbouring Sea, and Venison from the Inland Forests. It is also beset with many fair Towns, and Villages, the chief of which are these, viz.

Poitiers, Pictavinum, olim Limonum, one of the most ancient and largest Cities of the Kingdom, but not proportionably Opulent, there being Corn-fields and Meadows within the Walls. It is seated on a rising Ground between the River Clain, which falls into the Vienne, and another Rivulet that springs out of a large Pond, and is joynd to the former at the East-end of the Town, near the Gate of S. Lazarus, where stands an old Castle, together with some remains of an Amphitheatre, and other Roman Monuments. It is an Episcopal See, dependant on the Metropolitan of Bordeaux. Besides the Cathedral, suppos'd to be founded by St. Martial, and dedicated to St. Peter, there are 24 Parochial Churches, five Abbies, and a great number of other Monasteries. Here is also a University. Founded by King Charles VII. A. D. 1431. Poitiers is a Senechalcy subordinate to the Parliament of Paris, besides which Court, here is also a Prefidial and a Generality. The Civil Government is administr'd by a Mayor, 12 Elchevins or Aldermen, and 12 sworn Counsellors: The Mayor bears the Title of a Captain and Governor of Poitiers, and the Privilege of Nobility and many other Honours and Advantages are granted by the French Kings, to the Person that enjoys this dignity. The City is distant 28 miles from the River Loire to the South, 100 from Orleans to the South-west, 65 from Angers to the South-east, 90 from the Sea-coast to the East, 70 from Saintes to the North-east, and about 100 from Bourges to the West.

Lucan, or Luffen, Lucione, is a City of a very small Compass, and destitute of Walls, situated in a Marshy Ground, near the Confines of the Country of Aunis, at the distance of about six miles from the Ocean, 20 from Millerau, and 70 from Poitiers to the West. Pope John XXII. establish'd its Episcopal See, changing an Abbey of the Benedictine Order into a Cathedral, A. D. 1317. One Lucius is reported to have founded the Abbey and given name to the City.

Maillezais, Mailleacum, is a small City or Town, built on an Island form'd amidst the Marshes, by the Rivers Saive and Aufise, being distant 30 miles from Rocheb. to the North-East, and 50 from Poitiers to the South-west. It was heretofore the Place of Residence of the Counts of Boitou and Dukes of Guienne, but at present is not much inhabited by reason of the unwholomness of the Air. The Abbey of Maillezais, was also erected into an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Bourdeaux, by Pope John XXII. in the year 1317, but Innocent X. caus'd it to be suppress'd A. D. 1649. and translated it to Rocheb.

Lusignan, Lusignanum, stands on the Banks of the Vonne, near 20 miles from Poitiers to the South-west, on the Road to Rocheb. and Bourdeaux. This Town is more especially famous for the Valour of its Illustrious Lords, who were Kings of Cyprus, Jerusalem, and Armenia. The Castle of Lusignan, sometime esteem'd as Impregnable, was surpris'd by Mr. Troligni, for the French Protestants, A. 1569. But the Prince of Montpensier, retook it, after a Siege of eight Months, in 1574, and dismantled its Fortifications.

Chatelerault, a good Town on the River Vienne, about 20 miles from Poitiers to the North, and on the Road to Bois and Paris, hath the Title of a Dukedom, sometimes possess'd by the Hamiltons of Scotland, at present by Mademoiselle Montpensier the King's Aunt.

Richelieu, Richelium, aut Ricolocus, formerly a small Village; but this being the Place of Birth of that great Minister of State Cardinal Richelieu, he Rebuilt it and adorn'd it with a stately Palace and an Academy, and obtain'd it to be erected into a Dukedom and Peerage. It is seated on a little Rivulet that falls into the Vienne, and is distant 16 miles from Chatelerault to the West, and 28 from Poitiers to the North.

Loudun, is a considerable wall'd Town, and gives name to the Country about it: It hath a Castle, which with the Town, hath a particular Governor. Here is a Nunnery of Orseillines, famous not many years ago, for the Imposture the Nuns were guilty of, in pretending themselves Bewich'd by the Curate of the Parish, whom they barbarously caus'd to be Executed. This Town stands about 10 miles from Richelieu to the West, and 20 from Saumur to the South-East.

The small Country of AUNIS, Albenfis, Abnatenfis aut Alniensis Tractus, lies to the South of Poitou, and to the East of Saintonge proper, whereof it is a part, and bounded on the West by the Ocean, and the Islands of Re and Oleron: Its principal Towns are these, viz.

ROCHELLE, Rupella, olim Portus Santonum hath been always a very considerable Port and Mart-town; it is distant only two Leagues from the Island of Re, 4 from that of Oleron, 10 miles from the Confines of Poitou to the South, about 30 from Saintes to the North-West, and 70 from Poitiers to the South-West. This City, being the chief Seat of the Protestants, suffer'd much during the Civil Wars of France, and was often valiantly defended, and long possess'd by that Party, till at length Lewis XIII. after a long and famous Siege made himself Master of it in the year 1628, chiefly by the means of an admirable Rampart or Bank of Earth, which Cardinal Richelieu caus'd to be rais'd against it on the side of the Ocean: After it was taken, the King caus'd the Walls and Fortifications to be demolish'd, except only two Towers, which defend the Port. Afterward, in 1649, the Episcopal See of Maillezais was removed thither; the Island of Re, together with many other neighbouring Places, to the number of about 100 Towns and Villages, being taken from the D.ocels of Saintonge and added to this, as appears by the Consistorial Decree made on that occasion.

Rochefort, Rupifortium, hath a convenient Harbour at the Mouth of the River Charante, capable of receiving Men of War: It was at first only a small Village, but for the sake of its Port hath of late been wall'd round and fortified with strong Bastions and Ramparts, and some of the smaller of the King's Ships of War being laid up here, a Magazine is kept well stor'd with all sorts of Ammunition for their Service, and an Hospital built for infirm Sea-men. This Town is distant about 5 miles from the Sea-coasts, and 15 from Rocheb. to the South.

Brouage, Braogium, formerly call'd Jacquez Ville, Jacobipolis is a small Town and Port, very well fortified, and seated in a Marsh, near the Salt-works, being distant almost 3 Leagues from the Mouth of the Charante to the South, 8 from Rocheb., 4 from Royan, and 8 from Saintes, to the West.

ANGOUMOIS, lies on the South of Poitou, and is bounded on the West by Saintonge, on the South by Perigord, and on the East by Lymosin and La Marche, being extended 50 miles in length, and about 35 in breadth; The chief Towns in it are.

Angoulesme, Engolisma, aut Inculisma, olim Ratiastum, is seated on the top of a Hill, near the River Charante, about 50 miles from Poitiers to the S. 30 from Saintes to the E. and 40 from Limoges to the W. It is a very ancient City, adorn'd with the Titles of a Dutchy and Senechalcy, and hath a Prefidial and Election. It is also an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Bourdeaux; and is well fortified with a strong strong Castle and other Bulwarks, so that it is accessible only on one side. In the adjacent Fields is to be seen a Spring, from whence issueth a Torrent of Waters, as it were a River, &c.

Rocheboucaut, Rapae Ficaldi, & Rupe Fucaldum, is a small Town and Castle on the Rivulet of Tardovere, about 15 miles from Angouleme to the N. E. It bears the Title of a Dutchy, and hath imparted its name to one of the most ancient and noble Families of France, from whence have sprung divers Branches, &c.

Jarnac, Jarnacum & Jarniacum stands on the Banks of the Charante, almost in the midst between Angouleme to the E. and Saintes to the W. This little Town is famous for a memorable Battle fought between the Duke of Anjou, afterward King Henry III. and the Prince of Conde, on the 15th of May 1569, wherein the latter was slain.

TOUR AINE lyes on the North-East of Poitou, between Anjou, Blaisois, and Berry. It bears the Title of a Dutchy, and its extent is about 60 miles from N. to S. and 50 from E. to W. The fertility of its Soil, especially in Fruit, makes it be call'd the Garden of France. Many Rivers pass through it, as the Loire, the Cher, the Indre, the Vienne, &c. The most remarkable Towns of this Province are,

Tours, Archb. } Loches, Amboise, } Chinon, &c.

TOURS, Turonis, Turo & Turonica Urbs, olim Cesarodunum, is situate in a fruitful Country on the S. side of the River Loire, over which it hath a very beautiful long stone Bridge, at a little distance from the North side of the Cher. It is a large well built City, and the See of an Archbishop. The Publick Places, Streets, and Houles are fair, and the Cathedral, dedicated to St. Gratian its first Prelate, deserves well to be viewed by Travellers: The Church of St. Martin, together with some other Parochial ones, are stately Piles of Building. This City is a Place of very good Trade, and therefore rich and populous, the Silks manufactured here being sent into many foreign Parts. A Generality, and Presidial Courts are establish'd here. It is seated, as hath been said, on the River Loire, and is distant 30 miles from Vendosme to the S. 50 from Poitiers to the N. 55 from Angers to the E. 30 from Blois, and 60 from Orleans to the S. W.

Amboise, Ambacia, Ambasia & Ambaciensis Vicus, is seated also on the Loire, at the distance of 15 miles E. from Tours, and 20 from Blois to the S. W. This Town is likewise adorned with a fair Bridge over the Loire, and a large Castle built on an Hill, where the French Monarchs have often retired, and in which King Charles VIII. was born in the year 1470, and died in 1498.

Loches, Lochia and Locia, stands on the River Indre, about 20 miles from Amboise to the S. and 25 from Tours to the S. E. It is a good Town and hath a Castle, wherein King Charles VII. usually resided. Lewis XI. added divers Apartments to it, and caused a Tower to be built, wherein for a long while he kept the Cardinal de Balve Prisoner; and in the same Place Lewis XII. confin'd Lewis Sforza, who died there, and was buried in the Church of the Virgin Mary. A Royal Court depending on the Presidial of Tours is held here. The Territory adjacent was the Patrimony of the first Dukes of Anjou.

Chinon, Caino & Chinonium, formerly a Village, is at present a neat Town seated on the River Vienne, and hath a Gattle built on the top of a Hill, about 30 miles from Tours to the S. W. and 20 from Saumur to the E. Here is a Collegiate Church, dedicated to S. Mesme, the Canons whereof are immediately subject to the Pope. The French King Charles VII. retir'd to this Town, when our Kings Henry V. and VI. had possession of Paris; and it was here that Joan d'Arc, commonly call'd the Maid of Orleans, already mentioned, address'd her self to that King. Our King Henry II. died here A. D. 1189. And if it be worth mentioning, Francis Rabelais was born here.

BERRY, Bituricensis Provincia, bears the Title of a Dutchy, and is a Province of larger extent than those we have last mentioned, being 90 miles from N. to S. and 70 from E. to W. It is bounded on the W. by Touraine, on the N. by Orleanois and Gastinois, on the E. by the River Loire, and on the S. by La Marche. The River Cher passes through it, the Indre hath its Source in it, as have also many other smaller ones. The Soil is exceeding fertile, and the Inhabitants are noted Artificers in making a certain sort of thick Cloth, which is thence called Drap de Berry. Its ancient People, the Bituriges, were famous heretofore for their Conquests, and obstinate Resistance of the Romans. This Province was for some Ages subject to its own Count, but being bought and united to the Crown by King Philip, it hath often since been an Appenage of the Sons of France, as it is at present to the third Son of the Dauphinc. The most remarkable Towns here are,

Bourges, Archb. } S. Aignan,
Chateau-Roux, } Dun le Roi,
Iffoudan, } Sancerre,
Le Blanc, } Henrichmont, Argenton, } Valency, &c.

Bourges, Biturix, Bituriges & Biturice, aliàs Avaticum Biturigum, is situated about the middle of France, on the Rivers of Avon and Eure, or Yerre, at the distance of 80 miles from Tours to the E. 50 from Orleans to the S. 30 from Nevers to the W. and 60 from the Borders of La Marche to the N. It is a large City, dignified with the Titles of a Metropolitan See and Patriarchate, besides a famous University, a Bailiage, a Presidial Court, a Generality, &c. It is also a place of great Antiquity, for it is reputed to have been already founded in the XLVII Olympiad, and A. U. C. 164, about 590 years before the Nativity of Jesus Christ. Titus Livius assures us, that under the Reign of Tarquinius Priscus King of the Romans, the Monarchy of the Celte was fix'd in this Metropolis of Berry, whereof Ambigatus was then the Sovereign. Julius Cesar made himself Master of it A. U. C. 702. 52 years before the Christian Era, and of 40000 Inhabitants scarcely saved 800. the rest being put to the Sword. It was afterward the Capital City of the Aquitania prima, under Augustus. The Visigoths pillaged it in the fifth Century, and they were subdu'd by King Clovis; then it fell into the possession of Clodomir, and at length of Gontran King of Orleans: Cbilperic took it A. C. 583. and caused it to be almost entirely burnt: But it hath been since re-establish'd at several times, more especially under Charlemaigne, and it is now a well built and flourishing City. It was possessed by its own Counts till the time of Philip King of France, to whom Count Herpin sold it, with the rest of the County.

Chateau-Roux, Castrum Rufum aut Castrum Radulphinum, is a considerable Town, bearing the Title of a Dutchy, on the River Indre, about 30 miles from Bourges to the S. W. Its Castle was built by one Raoul, whence it is called Chateau-Raoul, and corruptly Chateau-Roux. Here are a Collegiate and four Parochial Churches, also a Park, appertaining to Monsieur the Prince. It is a place of good Trade, many sorts of Manufactures being made in it.

Bourges

Iffoudun, Exelodunum, Exoldunum, Exfoldunum, & alias Ernodurus, is water'd by the Rivulet of Thior or Thee, and is seated in the mid-way between Bourges and Chateau-Roux. It is fortified with a strong Castle, firm Walls and deep Ditches; and is remarkable for its Traffick in Wool and Kid's-leather Gloves. It is adorned with divers magnificent Structures, particularly the Royal Palace, the Court of Justice, the Church of St. Stephen, the Convent of Benedictines, &c. This Town was one of the twenty burnt by Cæsar in one Day.

Argenton, Argentomagus & Argentomagus, stands on the Confines of the Province of la Marche and the Banks of the Creuse, 40 miles from Bourges to the S. W. This Town hath for its defence a fair Castle, flank'd with 10 Towers, one whereof was built by the Emperor Heraclius, and on which is carved the Figure of an Ox with this Device of Cæsar; Veni, Vidi, Vici. The other Towns are less considerable.

NIVERNOIS, Ager Nivernensis, is extended along the East Banks of the Loire, between Burgundy, Bourbonnois, and Berry, for the space of about 50 miles from N. to S. and 35 from E. to W. including these principal Towns, viz.

Nevers, Bish.

Decise,

}} Donzi, }} Clamecy,
 }} Vizelay, &c.

Nevers, Nivernum, Nivernium & Nivernæ, olim Noviadunum Vadicascinum, is situated on the Loire, near its confluence with the Allier, and the Rivulet of Nievre, almost in the midst between Paris, to the N. and Lyons to the S. about 120 miles from both, as also 30 from Bourges to the E. and 20 from the Confines of Gastinois to the S. It was heretofore the Capital City of the Vadicasses, and Julius Cæsar thought fit to make choice of it for a Magazine for his Army. It bore the Title of a County under the first Race of the French Monarchs, and was erected into a Dutchy by Charles VII. in the year 1457. It is also the See of a Bishop Suffragan to the Archbishop of Sens, and the Seat of a Chamber of Accounts, together with a Bailliage under the Jurisdiction of the Presidial Court of S. Pierre le Moutier. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to S. Cyres. There are also 11 Parochial Churches, divers Religious Houses, and a stately Stone Bridge of 20 Arches, over the River Loire. Nevers is also famous on account of the great quantities of Glass, white Iron, and fine Earthen Ware there made. In this City died John Casimir King of Poland, on the 16th day of December, A. D. 1672.

La Charite, Charitas, took its name from the great Liberality which the Monks of Cluny exercised in times past toward poor People and Pilgrims; it is seated on the side of an Hill near the Loire, over which River here is a fair Stone Bridge, 15 miles below Nevers to the N. and 25 from Bourges to the E. It is adorn'd with a large Market-place, divers Churches and a very rich Priory of the Cluniack Order. This Town suffered much damage during the English Wars in France, and more in that of the French Protestants, by whom it was often taken and retaken in the years 1562, 1563, &c.

Decise, Decetia, is a small Town on the same River Loire, which with the Rivulet Airon, that falls into it at the East end of the Town, form a sort of an Island. Here is a good Castle belonging to the Duke of Nevers, and a fair Bridge over the River. This Town is distant 20 miles from Nevers to the South-East, and belongs to the Duke of Nevers.

GASTINOIS, Vastinum, & Vastiniensis Pagus, lies between Nivernois, Berry, Orleanois, Beauce, Ile of France, Champagne and Burgundy. It hath its name from the Rocks and sandy places in it, which the Inhabitants call Gastines. The extent of this Province is near 60 miles from N. to S. and 45 from E. to W. But part of it as we have said, belongs to the Government of the Ile of France, and was spoken of there; the other part hath these Towns of chief Note.

Montargis,
Eslampes,
S. Fargeau,

}} Gien, }} Chateau,
 }} Renard.

Montargis, Montargium, ant Mons Argi, is a neat Town, pleasantly situated at the Foot of a Hill, and the Banks of the River Loing, at the distance of 55 miles from Paris to the S. and 40 from Orleans to the E. It is fenced with an old Castle, that Charles V. caused to be repair'd, and which was besieged by the English Forces, A. D. 1426. The Town was burnt in 1528. and after rebuilt with greater magnificence.

Eslampes, Stampe, stands on the side of the Ivine, commonly called from thence the River Etampes, in a very fruitful Country, near the Confines of the Ile of France, 30 miles from Paris to the S. as many from Chartres to the E. and about 25 from Montargis to the N. W. It is beautified with a Collegiate Church and divers Monasteries, and enjoys the Title of a Dutchy, and belongs to the ancient Demefins of the Crown. King Robert founded a Castle here; and the Town was formerly fortified, but dismantled by King Henry IV. A. D. 1589.

Gien, Genabum, is a small Town on the Loire, over which River it hath a Stone-Bridge below the Canal of Briare. It stands 35 miles above Orleans to the E. and 28 from Montargis to the S.

The principal ISLANDS that lie over against Orleanois in general, more especially the County of Aunis, are these, viz.

Oleron,
Re or Oye,
Ile-dieu,

}} Nermoutier,
 }} Armor, &c.

OLERON, Uliarius, is an Island situated on the Coast of the Province of Sainonge, over against the mouth of the River Charante, about 4 Leagues from thence to the W. It is extended from N. to S. for the space of 15 miles, but is not above 4 or 5 miles in breadth, and between 30 and 40 in compass. The Soil is very fruitful, and produces good Corn; abundance of Rabbers are caught here.

On the Northern part of the Island is erected a very strong Fortrefs, called the Castle of Oleron, which is distant a League and a half from the mouth of the River Scure to the W. 3 from the Ile of Re to the S. and 6 from the City of Rocheb to the S. W.

The Island of Re, Rea, olim Reacus, lies before the Coasts of the County of Aunis, only 2 Leagues from thence, and 3 from Rocheb to the W. containing many Towns or Burghs; the chief of which are those of S. Martin and Oye, called the Iste, by reason of a Chanel, over which one must pass to enter into it. The most considerable Fort is that of la Parée, containing 4 Bastions, with half-Moons and other Outworks, which have been improved and increased since the late War begun. Here is a high Tower, on which Lights are kept a nights for the direction of Ships. The Cannon of this Fort commands the Land over against it, as well as the Sea all round it. This Island affords great quantities of Wine and Salt, especially the latter, for the making whereof, this is the chief place in the whole Kingdom.

ISLE-DIEU, Insula Dei, lies over against the Town of S. Giles, in the Province of Poitou, about 3 Leagues from the Coasts of that Province.

The Island of NERMOUÏE lies over against S. Urbain in Poitou, and is distant two large Leagues from the Continent: On it is founded a rich Convent, &c.

Though the Orleannois be call'd one of the Governments of France, yet it is divided among nine Governors General, independent of one another, viz. I. The Orleannois proper, Blaisois, Beauce, and Vendomois; under whom are three Lieutenant-Generals: Also a particular Governor of the City of Orleans. II. Poitou hath a Governor General, two Lieutenant-Generals, and two Seneschals, besides particular Governors in Poitiers, Loudun, and Niort. III. Anjou, a Governor General, and under him are one Lieutenant-General, one Seneschal, and particular Governors in Angers and Pont de Ce. IV. The Saumurois with its Dependances, Richelieu, and Marabeau is another Governor, which hath one Lieutenant-General. V. Touraine also hath a Governor General, a Lieutenant-General, two Bailiffs, and particular Governors of Tours and Amboise. VI. The Country of Aunis, Rochele, Brouage, in Saintoigne, the Isles of Re, Oleron, &c. have a Governor General, a Lieutenant-General, a Seneschal, and particular Governors of Rochele and Brouage. VII. The Provinces of Maine and Perche, have another Governor General, a Lieutenant-General, and a Seneschal. VIII. The Governor General of Berry, under whom arc a Lieutenant-General and a Seneschal. And lastly, the Nevernois hath a Governor, with a Lieutenant-General.

below Macon as far as Chateau Vilain in Champagne, and of 90 miles from East to West, viz. from beyond Auxonne to the Frontiers of Gatinos, lying between the 46th and 48th degree of Latitude, &c. This Province is very considerable on the account of its Largeness, Situation and Fertility, being commonly call'd, the Magazine of Corn, Wine, Hay, Wood, &c. affording also many Iron Mines, and Springs of Mineral Waters. And indeed, it contributes very much to the subsistence of the City of Paris, and almost entirely maintains that of Lyon. It is water'd with a great number of Rivers; the Seine takes its rise here, near a Village named Sainte Seine; the Saone passeth through the Eastern part, and receives into its Chanel the streams of the Debume, augmented with those of the Burfure, the Ouche, and the Tille, besides divers other lesser Rivulets and Brooks. On the Western the Loire divides Burgundy from Bourbonnois, and receives into it the Reconce, the Brevince, the Arroux, &c. The Yonne is there joined to the Coufni or Avalon, the Sexin or Serin, and the Armeson, into which flow the Brenne, the Oferain, and the Oxe, all which Rivers have their Source in this Province.

Aufconne ,

Dijon, Divio & Divionum, is seated on the Rivers Ouche, and Suzon, in the Diocesis of Langres, from which City it is distant 32 miles to the South, 85 from Sens, and 140 from Paris to the South-East, 105 from Lyons to the North, 80 from Nevers to the East, 45 from Bezancon, and 15 from the Saone to the West.

This

This Town is suppos'd to have been first founded about A. C. 220. It is of a large extent and well-built; the Walls are strong and surrounded with Towers and Bastions, and the Castle flanked with four large Towers and two Ravelins. The most considerable publick Buildings are, the Church of the Carthusians, adorn'd with magnificent Tombs of the Dukes, the Hall of Justice, the Royal Palace, and the Town-house, besides 16 other Churches, two Abbies and five Hospitals. The States of the Country are usually assembled here every three years. Besides the Court of Parliament held in this Town, here are a Chamber of Accounts, and a Presidial Court.

Beaune, Belna & Belnum, is seated on the small River Bourgeoise and other Brooks that run through the Town at the distance of 10 miles from the River Saone to the West, 20 from Dijon to the South, and 18 from Challon to the North, and lies on the Road betwixt these two Towns. The Antiquities of this place prove it to have been a Roman Work. It is well-built, the Seat of a Bailiage, and the Capital of a small Territory, thence call'd the Country of Beaune, which is very fruitful, especially in an excellent sort of Wine.

S. Jean de Laune, Fanum S. Joannis Laudonensis, aut Laudona, is a small Town on the Saone near the Abbey of Cisterciens, 15 miles from Dijon to the South East. It was formerly fortified, and is famous for repulsing the Efforts of the Imperial Army commanded by the formidable Galas, Charles Duke of Lorraine, the Marquis of Grana, and other Illustrious Generals, A. D. 1636.

Citeau, Cistercium aut Cisterium, is distant about six miles from S. Jean de Laune to the West, and 12 from Dijon to the South. 'Tis believed that this Village took its name from the great number of Cisterns which were dug there under ground, and hath acquired much reputation by its Abbey of Cistercian Monks, which Order was first instituted here; and this Abbey built, A. D. 1098. by Robert Abbot of Malesme, assisted by Otho I. Duke of Burgundy, Walter Bishop of Chalons, and Hugh Bishop of Lyons. It is a Branch of the Benedictine, and hath its name from this Town. The Monks quickly grew numerous, and the Order so powerful, that for a long time it had a great share in the Government of Europe, and hath produced four Popes, several Cardinals and Bishops, and a great number of Writers. The Abbot of this House is a Counsellor of the Parliament of Burgundy, and general of the whole Order, whereof are said to be near 3000 Convents and Nunneries in the World.

AUTUNNOIS, lies on the Frontiers of Nivernois, and these whereof are two principal Places, viz. Autun Bish. and Bourbon-Lancy.

Autun, Augustanum, olim Bibraicis, is situated on the River Arroune in the midst between Lyon to the South, and Sens to the North, 40 miles from Dijon to the South-West, and 50 from Nevers to the East. It is one of the most ancient Cities of the Kingdom, being said to have been founded by Simothus I. King of the Gauls. It was famous in the time of the Romans, and the Capital of the Republick of the Aedi or Hadui, which comprehended part of the Dutchy of Burgundy, the Countries of Bresse, Lionnois, Beaujolois, Dombes, Nivernois, &c. The Ruins found here of the Temple of Janus, now called Le Fanvoye or Feneroye, the Marebaut or Campus Martius, Mont-Dru or the Seat of the Druides, and Mont-Jou or the Hill of Jupiter, besides a great number of Statues, Columns, Pyramids, Aqueducts, Triumphal Arches, &c. do also sufficiently convince its ancient Grandeur. This City is divided into two parts, viz. the Upper Town cover'd by Mount Cenü, at the foot whereof stands a Castle, and the Lower, called Marebaut, which is water'd by the River Arroux, discharging it self into the Loire, and affording abundance of good Fish. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Lyons and the whole Diocess, divided into 24 Arch-Priesthoods or principal Cures, contains about 600 Parishes. The Cathedral dedicated to St. Lazarus, is a noble and venerable Structure; besides which, here are many other Churches, divers Abbies and Convents, particularly those of St. Martin, St. Andoche, and St. John. This City is also the Seat of a Bailiage.

Bourbon-Lancy, Borbonium Anselmum, is a very well built Town and Castle with a Bailiage, standing on the descent of one of those pleasant and fruitful Hills that surround its Territory, and is distant but two miles from the River Loire, which separates the Diocess of Autun from the Territories of Bourbonnois, and 25 from Autun to the South-west. It is a fair Town; the Castle is old, but the Walls are strong and surrounded with a Trench cut out of a Rock, insomuch that it could not be taken during the whole Civil Wars of France. The Mineral Waters of Bourbon were much commended even in the time of the Romans, and have been no less esteemed since the Reign of Henry III. who preferred them before all the others of his Kingdom.

CHAALONNOIS, Cabillonensis Ager, is extended along the Banks of the Saone in the midst of the Province and hath these chief Towns, viz.

Chaalons, Bish. Verdun, Belle-garde.

Chaalons, Cabillonum, is situated on the River Saone, at the distance of 20 miles from the frontiers of the County of Burgundy to the West, 25 from Autun to the East, 40 from Dijon to the South, and 65 from Lyons to the North. It is a very spacious City, the See of a Bishop Suffragan to the Archbishop of Lyons, as also a County and Bailiage, and a Place of great Antiquity, as appears from divers Statues, Vessels and Inscriptions found therein; nor to mention the remains of an Amphitheatre, and of many publick Edifices. The Romans were wont to keep store-houses of Corn for their Army at Chaalons; afterward the Emperors constituted it the general place of Rendezvous of their Forces, and the Kings of Burgundy took no less delight in its situation. However, it was ruin'd by Attila, and repaired within a little while after. The Suburbs of S. Lawrence, are shut up with two Bridges, viz. one of Stone and the other of Timber, on an Island made by the Saone; and the Citadel is flanked with four Royal Bastions, whereto some new Fortifications have been lately added. The City it self is divided into the Old and the New, the latter enclosing the other, which consists only of three large Streets, where is to be seen the Palace of the Bailiage, that of the Prince, the Cathedral of S. Vincent, and the Town-house, besides the Parochial Churches of S. George, S. Lawrence, and S. Mary, the Commandery of S. Antony, a stately College of Jesuits, &c. This City was taken by the French Protestants, A. D. 1562.

Verdun, Viridunum & Verodunum, is a small Town near the confluence of the Doux and the Saone, about 12 miles from Chaalons to the North East. There is another Town of this Name in Lorraine, the Capital of a Bailiage.

Belle-garde, Belloguardia stands on the Eastern Banks of the Saone, five Leagues from Chaalons to the North East, and was formerly called Seure, but the Name was changed when King Lewis XIII. erected it into a Dutchy in favour of Roger de S. Lari A. D. 1620. It was also well fortified for some time, but its Bulwarks are now dismantled.

The MOUNTAINOUS COUNTRY is the North Corner of Burgundy near the Spring-head of the Seine; its chief Towns are these, Chatillon sur Seine, Bar-sur-Seine, Aisei-le-duc.

Chatillon sur Seine, Castellæ ad Sequanam, is a fair Town and Abbey extended very far in length along the Banks of the Seine, about 40 miles from Dijon to the North-west, and 30 from Langres to the West. It is divided by the River into two parts, one whereof is call'd The Burgh, and the other Chaimont. Here are to be seen the Ruins of an old Castle; and this Town is the Seat of the Bailly of this Country.

Bar-sur-Seine, Barium super Sequanam, takes its Name in like manner from its situation on the Seine, near the Confines of Champagne, about 18 miles from Chatillon to the North, and 15 from Trois to the South. It is a little Town well-built, and stands in the midst of a fruitful Country.

AUXOIS, Alexiensis Tractus, bordering on the Frontiers of Nivernois, and includes these principal Towns, viz.

Seymour, Avalon, Avnay-le-Duc, &c.

Semur, Semurium, is a small Town on a Rivulet which dischargeth it self into that of Armançon, being distant 30 miles from Autun to the North, and as many from Dijon to the West.

Avalon, Avello, is seated in a Plain on the River Cosin, 30 miles from Auxerre to the South, and about 40 from Autun to the N. W. It is a small City, and hath a Castle and is the Seat of the Bailiage. Robert King of France took this Town by Famine after a Siege of three Months, A. D. 1003.

Avnay-le-duc, Arneum ducinum, is a very pleasant Town, near the Spring-head of the River Arroux, and one of the Seats of the Bailly of Auxois, being distant 35 miles from Avallon to the South-east, and 20 from Challon to the North-west.

AUXERROIS, lies between Champagne, Gatinois, Auxois, and Nivernois, and is the N. W. Corner of Burgundy. The Places of chiefest note are these, viz.

Auxerre, Bish. } Seignelay, Coutange, } Crevant, &c.

Auxerre, Antistodorum, is seated on the side of a Hill in a fruitful Country, and on the banks of the River Yonne, where it begins to be navigable, at the distance of 70 miles from Paris to the South, 30 from Sens, and 65 from Dijon to the West. It is a very ancient City, 'tis said Julian the Apostate refreshed his Army here for some time. A. C. 451, it was ruin'd by Attila, and King Robert took it from Landri Count of Nevers in 1005. Afterward it became subject to certain particular Counts, and at length was united to the Crown of France. It hath been long since erected into an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Sens, and its Cathedral bearing the Name of St. Stephen, is a very magnificent Structure, having a fair Quire, an exceeding high Tower. Here are also other fair Churches, a stone Bridge over the River, divers publick Fountains and large publick places. It is dignified with the Title of a County, Bailiage, and hath a Prefidial and Election from the South-east parts. It stands upon the great Road to Paris, and is therefore much frequented by Travellers.

The County of CHAROLOIS, Caroliensis Comitatus, is situated in the South part of Burgundy, between Bombomois and Masconnois. Its principal Towns are,

Charoles, Cap. } Toulon, Paroi-le-Monial, } Mont S. Vincent.

Charoles, Carolisæ, is seated on the Rivulet of Reconfe, 30 miles from Autun to the South, 20 from the River Loire to the East, and 20 from Mascon to the West. It is a very fair Town, beautified with a Collegiate Church and some Monasteries.

Toulou, or Toulou seu Arroux, Tullonium ad Arrofum, is a small Town through which runs the River Arroux, seated almost in the midway between Autun and Charoles, and 25 from Challon to the West.

BRIENNOIS, Briennensis Tractus lies between Charolois and Masconnois, near the Frontiers of Beaujolois, and doth not contain any Place of good Note, excepting Ancy-le-Duc & Semur Semurium, which stands on a Hill scarcely one League from the River Loire to the E. and on the Confines of Beaujalois.

MASCONNOIS, borders on the Southern part of the Dutchy of Burgundy toward Bresse, being about 30 Miles long and 24 broad. The chief Towns are these, viz.

Mascon, Bish. Tornus, Abb. Chigny, Abb.

Mascon, Matifcon aut Matifcona, is situated on the side of a little Hill on the Bank of the Saone, and near the Confines of the Province of Bresse, almost in the midst between Lyons to the South, and Chalons to the North, at the distance of about 30 Miles from each. It is a place of much Antiquity, an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Lyons; also a Bailiage and an Election. Here is a stately Bridge over the River Saone which leads to the Suburbs of S. Lawrence, where are two strong Towers. The Cathedral is dedicated to S. Vincent, besides which here is a Collegiate Church, the Canons whereof are all of noble Extraction, the Patochial Church of S. Stephen, many Religious Houses and a College of Jesuits. This City was often ruin'd by the Incurfions of the Huns, Burgundians and Franks, but hath been often repair'd by the munificence of divers Kings of France.

Tornus, or Tourus, Tivurtium & Trenorbium, is a large Town built on the Banks of the Saone about 15 Miles from Mascon to the North, and 18 from Chalons to the South. Albinus Cæsar was overcome by the Emperor Severus near this place; at present it is chiefly remarkable for its Famous Abbey.

Chuny or Chigny, is a Village seated on a small River called Grosne, 10 Miles from Mascon to the N.W. and 15 from Charoles to the E. It hath imparted its Name to the renowned Abbey of Chuniack Monks, which is the chief of the whole Order, and was instituted according to the Rule of S. Benedict, A. C. 910. by Bernon Abbot of Gigniack, by the Favour of William I. Duke of Aquitaine and Count of Auvergne.

BRESSE,

BRESSE, Sebustianus Ager, lies S. E. from Burgundy, and is bounded on the E. by Burgundy and Beaujolois, on the W. by the River Dain, which divides it from Bugey, on the N. by Chalenois, and on the S. by the River Rhofne, which divides it from Lyonnois and Dauphine, and is in-extent from North to South about 40 Miles, and from E. to W. 30 Miles. It is a fruitful Country, but by reason of some Lakes of standing Water in it, not very wholom in some Parts. It is divided into the Upper, being the parts about Bourg; and the Lower, lying towards the Lionnois. The chief Towns are,

Bourg, Cap.
Montlucl, a small Town on the S. borders of } the Province. }
Coligny, 15 Miles North } from Bourg.
Pont des Vaux, near the Saone, and 15 Miles from Coligny to the West.

Bourg, Burgus, aut Forum Selsavianorum, call'd for distinction Bourg en Bresse, is situate in a Marthy Ground on the Rivulet of Reissouffe, at the distance of 15 miles from Mafcon to the E. and 30 from Lyon to the N. being environ'd on the E. by Mount St. Claude and the Hills of Vignoble, and on the W. by a spacious Plain extended as far as the River Saone. This Town, together with the whole Province, hath been subject to the Dominion of the French Kings ever since the Year 1601. whereas before it belonged to the Duke of Savoy, who had built a strong Citadel in it in the Year 1569. which was demolished in 1611. However, it is as yet govern'd as it were in form of a Republick, the Administration of all Civil Affairs being committed to the care of two Syndicks or Sheriffs. Pope Leo X. erected an Episcopal See at Bourg A. 1515. which was suppressed the Year ensuing. It was also re-established in 1521. but Pope Paul III. thought fit to suppress it again by his Bull publish'd in 1534. This Town hath a Bailiage, a Court of Election and a Presidial.

BUGEY, Bugesti, Bugia, Bugia, lies between Bresse to the W. and Savoy to the E. from which it is separated by the River Rhofne, including these chief Towns, viz.

Bellay, Bish. } Seissel.
Lanieu. } S. Rambert, &c.

Bellay, Bellicum, stands upon a Hill about 2 Miles from the River Rhone, 36 from Bourg to the S. E. and 40 from Grenoble to the N. It is a City of but small compass, nevertheless dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Besincon. It was ruin'd by Fire in the Year 1385, but Amedes VIII. Duke of Savoy, caused it to be rebuilt and enclosed with Walls. The Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. John Baptiste, which had been before regular under the Rule of S. Augustin, was seculariz'd in 1579. The Bishop is both Spiritual and Temporal Lord of the City, which was resigned, together with the adjacent Territories, by the Savoyards to the French, A. D. 1601.

Seissel, Sessellum & Siffum, is a large Town where a Bridge of Boats is laid over the River Rhone, which divides it into two Parts, and there begins to be navigable. It stands on the foot of the Hills, and the very Frontiers of Savoy, being distant 20 Miles from Bellay to the North, and 15 from Anney in Savoy to the West.

The Bailiage of GEX, Gega aut Gaium, is a small Territory that lies between the County of Burgundy to the North, and the City of Geneva to the South; the Country of Vaud in Suisserland to the East, and Bugey to the West. But it doth not comprehend any very considerable place, except the Town of Gex, Genium, the Capital and Seat of the Bailiff, which was also granted by the Duke of Savoy to the French King, by the Peace concluded at Lions A. D. 1601.

The Principality of DOMBES, Dumbensis Principatus, is a small but very pleasant Country, lying South-west of Bresse, along the Banks of the Saone, between Mafconnois and Lyonnois, and contains 11 Castellanies, whereof that of Trevoux is the chief; the others are Beauvegard, Montmerle, Toiffey, Lans, Charamon, Cheteler, St. Trivier, Velleneuve, Ambrica, & Ligmieu.

Trevoux, Trivoltium, a small Town, but the Capital of this Principality and a Bailiage, is seated at the Foot of a Hill on the Banks of the River Saone, 10 Miles above Lyon to the North, and near 30 from Mafcon to the South.

The County of BURGUNDY, or the UPPER BURGUNDY, also call'd the FRANCHE COMTE, is the Country of the ancient Seguani, and part of the ancient Burgundia Cisjurana. It is bounded on the E. by Switzerland, on the S. by Bresse, Bugey, and the Bailiage of Gex, and on the N. by Lorraine, and on the W. by the Duchy of Burgundy and part of Champagne; and is extended from the 46th Deg. 10 Min. to the 48th Deg. including the Space of about 110 Miles; and from the 23d Deg. 15 Min. to the 25th Deg. of Longitude, which amounts to 72 Miles, from the Frontiers of the Bishoprick of Basil as far as beyond Gray. This Province affords abundance of Corn, VVine, Timber and Cattel, especially Horses. There are also a great number of Salt-pits, and many Quarries of black Marble, Jasper of divers colours, and very fair Alabaster, together with some Mines of Iron. The Principal Rivers are the Saone, the Doux, the Lougnon and the Loove, which are full of several sorts of Fish. Moreover, the Wines of Arbois, Poligny and Vesoul, are esteemed beyond those of the other Provinces of France.

This County was quietly possessed by the Kings of Spain, as Heirs of the Family of Burgundy, till the time of this present King of France, who in the Year 1668. by his Army made himself Master of it, but was obliged to surrender it the same Year by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle: Notwithstanding which, he again invaded and took it in the Year 1674. and forced the Spaniards to grant it to him in the following Peace of Nimeguen, as we have already elsewhere shewn; It is divided into three Parts.

I. The Bailiage of VESOUL or AMONT; or the Upper Bailiage of the County of Burgundy which is extended toward the Northern part of this Province, and comprehends these considerable Towns, viz.

Vesoul, } Lure, Abb.
Gray, } Mont-beliard County.

Vesoul, Vesulum, is seated on a small River that runs into the Saone, at the distance of 28 Miles from Besanson to the N. 20 from the Borders of Lorraine to the S. and 60 from Dijon to the North-east. This Town of late hath been often taken and restored, but was at length resigned to the French King by the Treaty of Nimeguen A. D. 1678.

Gray, Graium, and Graiicum, stands on the Banks

Banks of the Saone, 30 Miles from Vesoul to the S. W. It is a fair Town, tho' of small extent, and formerly well fortified with a Castle, &c. but it was taken by the French in 1668, and also in 1674, and not long after all its Bulwarks, together with the Fort, were intirely demolished.

Luze, Ludera, Luwensis Monast. a small Town and famous Monastery, whose Abbot was Lord of the Town, is seated on the River Lougnon, 18 Miles from Vesoul to the E.

Mont-beliard, Mons-belligardus, gives name to a County on the N. E. of the Franche Comte, and bounded on the N. with Lorraine, and on the E. by Suntgau: It was formerly part of Germany, and belong'd to the Dukes of Wirtemberg, but hath been made part of France by the present King. The Town is seated at the Foot of a Rock, on the top whereof stands the Castle, which was the Seat of a Count of the Family of Wirtemberg: It had besides a strong Citadel, now destroy'd. It is but a small place, having not above two or three Streets; and is water'd by the small River Hall, or Alaine, which a little below falls into the Doux. This Town is distant 37 miles from Vesoul to the E. 40 Miles from Besancon to the N. E. and 30 from Basil to the W. and not far from the Foot of Mount Vauge.

II. The middle Bailliage, or that of D O L E, Dolensis Tractus, lies in the midst of this Province, from the Frontiers of the Dutchy of Burgundy to those of Switzerland, containing these principal Towns, viz.

Besancon, Arch. } Ornans,
Dole, } Quingey.

BESANCON, Vesontio, Vesontium and Bisuntic, is a very ancient City, and the Capital of Franche Comte, the See of an Archbishop, the Seat of the Parliament, and a considerable University. It is seated on the River Doux, which almost encompasses it; and is defended with a good Citadel lately built. This City was formerly Imperial and Free, under the Protection of the Count of Burgundy, but exempted in the Year 1651, and given to the Spaniards, from whom it was taken by the French, and by the Treaty of Nimeguen granted to them with the rest of the County. It is distant 30 miles from Vesoul to the South, 45 from Dijen to the East, 30 from the Frontiers of Switzerland to the West, and 65 from Geneva to the North.

Dole, Dolr, is in like manner seated on the Doux, in a pleasant and Fertile Country, about 30 miles from Besancon to the S. W. and as many from Dijen to the N. E. It was the Capital of the Province, before Besancon obtain'd that Honour. Philip the Good Duke of Burgundy, founded a University here in the year 1426, which the Dutchess Margaret augmented in 1484, and it is now in a flourishing State, Here is a Chamber of Accounts and a Bailliage. This City was heretofore well fortified, but the present French King made himself Master of it in the Month of February 1668, and dismantled it before he restored it to the Spaniards, as he was forced to do by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle; by which means he the easier retook it in 1674, and hath ever since possessed it. The other Towns contain nothing very considerable.

III. The Bailliage of P O L I G N Y, or A U A L, or the Lower Bailliage of the County of Burgundy, is situated between Switzerland on the East, Bresse on the South, the Dutchy of Burgundy on the W. and the middle Bailliage, or that of Dole on the North. The chief Towns in it are,

Polygny,
Salins,
S. Claude, Abb.
Blaterans,

} Orgelet, } Arbois, } Nofroy, } Jougne.

Polygny, Policinium, Polenium, and Poliniacum, stands near a small River that runs into the Doux, and was formerly well fortified, and more considerable then at present. Its Suburbs are large, encompass'd with Gardens, Hills, and Forests, and the Wines made here are highly esteem'd. It is distant 20 miles from Dole to the S. E. 30 from Besancon, as many from the Frontiers of Switzerland, and 35 from Geneva to the N. W.

Salins, Saline, and Saliense Castrum, is pleasantly seated in a Valley between two Mountains, on the Rivulet of Fovica, at the distance of 12 miles from Polygny to the N. E. and 20 from Besancon to the S. taking its name from an admirable Spring of Salt-waters, whereof are made vast quantities of pure white Salt, that afford a large Revenue to the Prince. This Town is extended very far in length, and well fortified, its Walls being flanked with high Towers, besides two Castles that defend it on all sides, and the Citadel on the top of a steep Rock, rendering it almost impregnable. The Hall or Store-houfe, commonly call'd La Grand Saunerie, (wherein the Salt is boiled and preserved, and the Officers employ'd in this Operation have their Lodgings) is a stately Building.

S. Claude, Fanum S. Claudii, is a strong Hold on the Frontiers of Genève, and the Country of Gex, about 3 Leagues from the River Rhone, and 5 from Geneva to the West. It was formerly call'd St. Oyen de Joux, Fanum Sancti Eugendi; and is now chiefly remarkable for its famous Monastery, in which is preserved the Body of St. Claude, Archbishop of Besancon, in the VII Century, whose name is communicated to this Town and part of Mount Jura in the adjacent Territory.

On the East side of the Franche Comte, stands the ridge of Mountains, called Mont Jura, which extends from near Basil on the Rhine in the N. quite as far as the River Rhone, and the Province of Beugey in the S. being the whole length of this Country, and divides it from Switzerland; but in several places they bear different Names: At the South end it divides into two Branches, whereof one extends to the Rhesne, about 12 or 15 miles below Geneva, and is call'd the Credo; the other divides the Franche Comte from Beugey, and is nam'd Mont St. Claude from a little Town near it: About the Head of the River Doux, it is call'd Mont de Joux; in the Neighbourhood of Basil, Pierrepont, and Botzberg, and a little more Southward, Schaffinas, and by the Swissers Leerberg.

This Government is divided between two Governments- General, whereof one hath the Dutchy of Burgundy, Bresse, Beugey, Vaouancy, and Gex, under his Care: Subordinate to whom the Count d' Armagnac is hereditary Grand Seneschal, and under him are five Lieutenants Generals, twelve Bailiffs, and thirtieen Governors of Places, viz. of Dijen, Auxone, Cbalon, Bellegarde, Taland, Senour in Auxois, the Bridge of Maison, Aufan, Beaune, Bourbon, Lancy, Ayalon and Chatillon.

In the County of Burgundy, is a Governor General, and under him one Lieutenant-General, and eleven Govern-Governors of Places in these Towns, viz. Besancon, the Citadel of Besancon; also the Fort of St Stephen, and the Fort Grison, in the same City have different Governors; Dole, Salins, the two Forts of St. Andrew and Belim, the Castle of Foug, and Town of Pontarlier, the Castle of Blamont, and the Castle of Montbeliard.

The Burgundians, who gave name to this Country, were once a very powerful Nation, possessing not only this Duchy and County of Burgundy, but also Alsacia, Switzerland, Wallisland and Savoy, and afterwards Dauphine, Lionnois and Nivernois also; which great Tract of Country was divided by the Romans into Burgundy Trans, and Cis Jurana, with respect to Mount Jura. They were originally a Tribe of the Vandals, and came from the Parts about Mecklenburg and Pomerania, and like the rest of those Northern Nations, a rough unciviliz'd People, living in Tents clap'd up for their present occasions, which in their Language were call'd Burghs, and thence the Men Burgundians: Thus saith Agathias and other Historians. But Istorie derives their Name from Ornius, under which name they worshipp'd Hercules: But this, as all Etymologies, is very uncertain; the former seems much the more Natural, and is therefore generally followed. About the beginning of the fifth Century they received Christianity, and began to inhabit the Towns along the Banks of the Rhone, and by their valiant resistance of the Huns, obtained great reputation, and for that reason were call'd into Gaul by Stilico the Roman General to assist him against the Franks, and for their Service had the two Burgundies assign'd them; to which they afterward added Lionnois, Nivernois and Dauphine, and erected a Kingdom, which continued for 120 years in an uninterrupted Succession; at the end of which, Childebert and Clepaire, the French Kings of Paris and Soissons, defeated and slew Gundomar the last Burgundian King, by which that Kingdom being broken, the Eastern parts were seiz'd by others, and the Western made parts of the French Kingdoms, and remained so for some Ages, till at length Lewis the Godly, Son of Charles the Great, in the Partition that he made of the Kingdom Charlemaign left him (already mentioned) erected Burgundy again into a Kingdom; the chief Seat whereof being Arles it was sometimes call'd the Kingdom of Arles. In this state it continued for near 200 years, till the Death of Rodolpb III. 1032, who leaving no Issue, bequeathed his Estate to Conrade the Emperor, who had married his Sister; or Niece, as others say: After which it was again divided among several Princes; this now call'd the Duchy of Burgundy, the Ancestors of Hugh Capet enjoy'd, and by his Son King Robert it was annex'd to the Crown; but by his Successor Henry I. given in appenage to his Brother Robert, whose Posterity continued Dukes of Burgundy till 1361. when Eudes IV. leaving only one Son, who died young, the Duchy was claimed by John King of France, Charles King of Navarre, and Edward Count of Barr, all three Descended from the Sisters of Eudes; of these John got the better, and gave it to his younger Son Philip, who by Marriage obtain'd also the Counties of Burgundy and Flanders, and his Successors added almost all the Netherlands; insomuch, that Philip the Good, and Charles the Warlike, the two last Kings of Burgundy, were as powerful Princes as any in Europe: But the latter being kill'd in his Wars against the Swissers A. 1476. and leaving no Male Issue, Lewis XI. seiz'd the Duchy as an Elcheat to the Crown; and it hath ever since been retained by the Kings of France; but the County of Burgundy with the other Estates of that Prince, descended to Mary Daughter of Charles, who marrying Maximilian of Austria, afterwards Emperor, brought the Netherlands into that Family, and Philip the Son of Mary and Maximilian, married Joan, Queen of Castile, and begat Charles V. who was Emperor of Germany, King of Spain and the Indies, Duke of Burgundy, and Lord of the Netherlands; as will be seen more particularly in our account of Belgium.

CHAP. IX.

The Government of LYONNOIS, Lugdunensis Provincia.

THE Government call'd LYONNOIS, comprehends the ancient Gallia Celtica, or at least the greatest part thereof, being bounded on the North by Berry, Nivernois and Burgundy; on the South by the Mountains of Cevennes, and the Country of Rouvergue; on the East by Bresse and Dauphine, and on the West by Quercy, Limousin, Angoumois and Poitou. It lies between the 44th degree 26 min. and the 46th degree 46 min. Latitude, in its greatest breadth from South to North, consisting of about 140 English miles, that is to say, from the Frontiers of Rouvergue to Dunle-roy, on the Frontiers of Berry; as also between the 19th degree, and 23d degree of Longitude. And in its greatest length from W. to E. includes the space of 180 miles, viz. from beyond the Town of Availle on the River Vienne near the Confines of Poitou, as far as Lions. The Soil here is not so fertile as in other parts, by reason of the many Mountains that rise up in some of its Parts. The principal Rivers are the Loire, the Rhone, the Saone, and the Allier.

In this Govern-ment are compriz'd six different Counties, viz.

{	Lionnois , Proper	Lyon , Archbith.
	Forets ,	Montbrison ,
	Beaujolois ,	Beaujeu ,
	Bourbonnois ,	Monlins ,
	Auvergne ,	Clermont ,
	Marche ,	Gueret .

LYONNOIS, properly so call'd, Lugdunensis Ager, is of but small extent, It lies along the Banks of the River Rhone and Saone, and is from North to South about 45 miles, and from East to West not above 12 or 15 miles, and is bounded by Dauphine; from whence it is separated by the Rhone and Bresse, and Beaujolois on the North, Forets on the West, and Vivarets on the South. The Country round about Lions produces more Grapes than Corn, and the rest is Fertile enough in both, and yields excellent Fruits. Its most considerable Towns are these, viz.

Lyon, Archbish. }
 S. Chaumont, }
 } Coindriev, } Anse,
 } Bresse.

LYONS, Lugdunum, is a large, populous and flourishing, and next Paris may be reckon'd the richest, largest, and most trading City of all France, except Rouen be preferred, which she claims; however it be, Lyons is very considerable on account of its great Traffick, which its convenient Situation on the Rivers Rhone and Saone, and on the Road to Italy doth much assist. It is the See of an Archbishop, who hath the Title of Primate of Gaul; also a Generaliry, Election, Seneschalcy, Presidial, and a particular Court for Merchants, call'd the Tribunal of Commerce, and hath also a Famous University, and an Exchange or Courfe of Money. The Origin of this City is much disputed; some Authors report it to have been built by one Lugudis a King of the Celts: Strabo makes Momor a Gaulish Prince its Founder, which is also disputed by others; and concerning its Name, there is the same difference, some deducing it from Lugdus abovementioned, and the old Gaulish Word Dunum, a Mountain or rising Ground, such a one being near it; others from an old Gaulish Word, imitating a Hill of Crows, from a lucky Omen of these Birds at its Foundation. There are many others too long and trivial to mention here. It is seated at the Foot of the Mountains on the Frontiers of the Provinces of Bresse and Dauphine, being separated from the latter only by the River Rhone, which passing by the City, hath a long Stone-Bridge over it, and a little below receives the Saone, over which in like manner are three fair Bridges. The Town is divided into two Parts, the Greater whereof lying between the Rhone and the Saone, is the Quarter of St. Nizier, and the lesser that of St. John. These two Quarters are sub-divided into 32 Wards, or Precincts, call'd Penouages, and every one of them hath its particular chief Sub-ordinate Officers. The City is likewise surrounded with very large Suburbs, and fenced with an old Castle built on an adjacent Rock, named Pierre-Seize, and it is adorn'd with many stately Edifices, among which the Guild-Hall or Town-houle is chiefly conspicuous, and esteem'd as a Master-piece of Architecture. Here are likewise to be seen the Remains of some ancient Roman Works, particularly of an Amphitheatre, divers Aqueducts, publick Baths, &c.

The City of Lyons having been burnt by Lightning in the time of Nero, A. C. 59 was re-built by the Liberality of that Emperor, according to Tacitus; which Conflagration is also mention'd by Seneca, in one of his Epistles to Lucilius. Afterwards Severus pillag'd and burnt it in 193, in Revenge, because the Inhabitants had entertained Allianus his Enemy. It also suffered often by the Incurfions of the Germans, Goths and Saracens. The Emperor Claudius was born in this City; and the Emperor Gratian slain in it by Andragathus, A. D. 383. And two General Councils were assembled here in the Years 1245 and 1274. Lyons is distant 120 miles from Paris to the S. E. 150 from the Banks of the Mediterranean Sea to the N. 250 from Bourdeaux to the E. 70 from Geneva to the S. W. 110 from Nevers to the S. E. 105 from Dijon to the South, and 40 from the Frontiers of Savoy to the West.

F O R E T Z, Forenfis Provincia, is usually divided into two Parts, viz. the Upper and Lower, bounded on the E. by Lyonnos, and Beaujolois, on the N. by Burgundy and Beurbonnois, on the S. by Valley, and Vi- waters, and on the W. by the Mountains of Auvergne, comprehending these principal Towns, viz.

Montbrison, }
 St. Etienne de Furens, }
 } Rouanne, } Feurs.

Montbrison, Montbrisonium, & Mont-Brufonis, is situated on the Rivulet of Vecize, at the distance of 6 miles from the River Loire, and 30 from Lyons to the W. 30 from the Borders of Bourgogne to the S. and 20 from the Borders of Velay. It was at first only a Castle, but encreased to a Town and enclosed with Walls in the year 1428. It is adorned with a Collegiate Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, divers Monasteries, a Court of Election and a Provostship.

St. Etienne, or St. Steven de Furens, Furnanium aut Fannum Sancti Stephani, is seated on the foot of a Hill on the Banks of the Brook Furens, about two Leagues from the River Loire to the E. and 20 from Montbrison to the S. E. The adjacent Country affords good store of Pit-coal, and the Waters of the Brook Furens are very proper for the tempering of Iron and Steel, which advantage hath induced the Inhabitants to make vast quantities of small Iron-ware, maintaining a very great Trade in these sorts of Merchandizes, which are transported by them into almost all the Countries of Europe. The Town of St. Stephen suffer'd much damage during the Civil Wars, and was twice taken by the Protestant Party, viz. in 1563. and 1570.

Roanne, or Rouanne, Rhodunna, is a large Town, but destitute of Walls, and founded on the Banks of the River Loire, where it begins to be capable of admitting small Boats at the distance of 20 miles from Montbrison to the N. The adjacent Country is call'd from thence Roannois, and was erected into a Duchy by King Charles IX. The Town it self being beautified with a fair College of Jesuits, and divers other Monasteries.

Feurs, Forum Segustanorum, the chief Town of the Upper Forets, from whence the whole Country takes its name, stands on the East-side of the Loire, near its Confluence with the Lignon, 10 miles N. E. from Montbrison, and 20 from Roanne to the South, and 20 from Lyon to the W.

B E A U J O L O I S, is extended from E. to W. from beyond the River Sone to the Loire, on the N. of Lyonnais, having the principality of Dombes, and part of Misconois on the E. Charolois on the N. and Forets on the VV. This Country affords abundance of Corn, VVine and Flax, and hath these considerable Towns, viz.

Beaujeu, Ville Franche, Belle-ville, &c.

Beaujeu, Banjoivium, Ballojoivium and Bellioivium, is a small Town together with a Castle, (on the Rivulet Ardiere,) which hath imparted its name to the Territory of Beaujolois, and the Lords of the ancient and Illustrious Family of Beaujeu; being distant 25 miles from Lyon to the N. and 5 or 6 from the River Sone. Over the Gate of the principal Church of this Burgh is to be seen a very old piece of VVork-manship in Basso-Relievo, representing a Roman Sacrifice of a Hog, a Sheep, and an Ox.

Ville-franche, Francopolis aut Villa Franca, is water'd by the Brook Morgon, which a little below falls into the Sone, and stands upon the Road in the Mid-way between Lyons and Beaujeu, 20 miles from Maison to the S. It is at present the chief Town of Beaujelois, and remarkable for its Collegiate Church, Academy cademy, Court of Election, Bailiage, and Granary of Salt.

B O U R B O N N O I S, Borbonensis Provincia, is divided into the Upper and Lower, and bounded on the E. by the River Loire, which divides it from the Duchy of Burgundy, on the W. by Berry, on the S. by Auvergne and Forets, and on the N. by Nivernois, and part of Berry. It is extended from W. to E. for the space of about 70 Miles, and 45 from S. to N. The ancient Inhabitants of Bourbonnois, who were a part of the Boii, sent many Colonies into Germany and Italy, under Ambigatul Prince of the Bituriges, and often maintain'd furious Wars against the Romans. This Province hath also acquired Reputation by its Lords, Barons, Counts and Dukes, from whom the present King of France is descended. The Mineral Waters of Bourbon have been mentioned in speaking of Bourbon-Lancy, in Burgundy. The most remarkable Towns of Bourbonnois are these, viz.

- Moulins,*
 - Bourbon l'Archambault,*
 - Monliffon,*
- } Vichy,
} S. Geran,
} Gannet.

Moulins, Moulinee, is seated near the River Allier, in a large fruitful Plain, at the distance of 140 miles from Paris, and 20 from Nevers to the S. about 50 from Clermont to the N. and 70 from Challon to the W. It is a Town of very large extent, and was formerly the usual Place of Residence of the Princes of Bourbon, who built the Castle, which hath often been the Royal Seat of the French Kings. This Town is also famous on the account of the singular Virtue of the Medicinal Waters, and the Inhabitants for their Skill in making divers sorts of Knives, &c. Moulins is usually divided into 4 Quarters, viz. The Old Town, the New, the Suburbs of the Carmelites, and those of the Allier. The most remarkable Buildings are the Collegiate Church and two Parochial ones, besides those of the Suburbs, together with divers Monasteries, a Generality and Presidial Courts, and another of Election, and a College of Jesuits. Among the Religious Houses, the chief is that of the Carthusians, and the Church belonging to the Nuns of the Visitation, wherein stands the sumptuous Tomb of Henry II. Duke of Montmorency, Marhal of France, &c.

Bourbon l' Archambault, Borbonium Archimbeldi, and Boia, is a small Town, which nevertheless hath given name to the whole Province of Bourbonnois, and is distant about twelve miles from Moulins.

A U V E R G N E, Alvernia, bearing the Title of a County, is bounded on the East by Forets, on the West by the Upper Limousin, Quercy, and Marche, on the North by Bourbonnois, and on the South by Cevennes and Rouergue; its utmost extent from South to N. consisting of about 80 miles, and 60 from W. to E. It is divided into the Upper and Lower Countries, the former to the S. being very Mountainous, among which one called the Mount of Cantal, is exceeding high, and the other to the N. extremely fruitful, especially in the Quarter of Limagne. This Province was formerly subject to its own Counts, but united to the Crown of France in 1204. by King Philip the August, to suppress the Rebellion of the last Count named Guy. The principal Towns are these,

In the Lower,

Clermont, B. Riom, Thiers.

In the Upper,

St. Flour, } Morat, Viscounty.
Orillac, } Salers.

Clermont, Claromons, Clarus-Mons, Claromontium, and formerly Arvernum, Arverna, and Augustonemetum, and by some affirmed to be the ancient Gergovia; it is a large well-built City, with the Title of a County, and the Metropolis of the whole Province, the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Bourges; also the Seat of a Court of Aides and a Presidial. It is situate upon a little Hill near the Mountain called the Puy de Domme, and is water'd by the Rivulet Tiretaine, which riseth in the Mountain, and falls into the Allier; and is distant 50 miles from Bourbon l' Archambaud to the South, and 75 from Lyon to the West.

Riom, Riomagum & Riomum, is seated on a rising ground about 7 or 8 miles from Clermont to the N. and is a fair well-built Town, the Churches being magnificent, the Houses beautiful, and the Monasteries fair, and adorned with Fountains and pleasant Walks, insomuch that this Town is term'd, The Garden of Limagne. It is the Capital of the Duchy of Auvergne, on which depend all the Fiefs and mean Fiefs of the Province, having been erected in favour of John Duke of Berry, the Son of King John, A. D. 1360.

Thiers or Thiern, Thigernum & Thiernum, is a small Town, built on a Hill near the River Dur, in the Frontiers of the Province of Forets, 20 miles from Clermont to the East, toward Lyon. The Inhabitants maintain a considerable Traffick in Knives, Sizzers, and other small Wares of the like Nature.

St. Flour, Judiciacus, alius Floriopolis, a City having the Dignity of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Bourges, is seated on the River Truyere, 40 miles South from Clermont, and somewhat more North-East from Rhodesz. It had its modern name from its Bishop S. Flour.

Orillac, Auriliacum, is a good Town seated among Mountains, on the Rivulet Jordan, which falls into the Lerre, about 20 miles distant from S. Flour to the W. and 30 from Rhodesz to the N.

The other Towns are less considerable.

L A M A R C H E, Marchia, the most Western, Country of the Government of Lyonnais, is so called as being a passage or thorow-fare into the Neighbouring Provinces. It is bounded on the North by Berry, on the South by Limousin, on the East by Auvergne, and on the West by Poitou. It is divided into two parts, viz. the Upper having Gueret for its chief Town, and depending on the Generality of Moulins: And the Lower which hath Dorat, and refers to the Generality of Limoges. The Lords of Luzignen were formerly Counts of Marche and Angouleme; but these two Counties were annexed to the Crown of France by King Philip the fair; afterward it served as an Inheritance to the younger Sons of the Royal Family, and at length after many Revolutions, was re-united to the Crown in 1531. The principal Towns of this Province are these.

In the Upper Marche,

Gueret, Aubusson, Grammont, Ab.

In the Lower,

Dorat, } } Maignac,
Belac, } } S. Jannic.

Gueret, Gueretum, Garañum & Varañum, is the Capital Town of the Province of Marche, situated near the Spring-head of the River Gartemp, hath a Seneschaley and a Prefidial, and is distant about 50 miles from Clermont to the West, 40 from Limoges to the East, and 30 from the Frontiers of Bourbon to the West.

Aubusson stands on the Frontiers of Auvergne, 20 miles from Gueret to the South-East. It is a very populous Town, and remarkable for its Manufacture of Tapistry. The large Towers of an old demolish'd Castle sufficiently shew the Grandeur of the former Lords of this Place, of whom was descended Peter d'Aubusson, the famous Grand Master of Rhodes.

Dorat, Oratorium, a small Town, nevertheless the Chief of the Lower Marche, stands on the small River Seve, which falls into the Gartemp, and is distant about 40 miles from Gueret to the West, not above 5 or 6 from the Frontiers of Poitou, and 25 from Limoges to the North.

Belac, Belacum is seated on the Brook Vincon in the Lower Marche, about two Leagues from Dorat, and hath a Court of Election under the Generality of Limoges, &c.

The rest of the Towns are not considerable enough to deserve a particular Description.

The Lionnois, Forez & Beaujolois hath a Governour-General, a Lieutenant-General, a Bailly and Seneschal of Lyons, a Bailly of S. Stephen in Forez, and another of Beaujolois. The Bourbonnois hath a Governour-General and a Lieutenant-General. Auvergne hath also a Governour-General, two Lieutenants General, and two Seneschals of Rion and Clermont; and Marche hath another Governour, a Lieutenant and two Seneschals of Gueret and Dorat.

CHAPTER X.

GUIENNE, Aquitania aut Aremorica.

THE Government of GUIENNE, which is dignified with the Title of a Duchy, was heretofore call'd the Kingdom of Aquitaine ab Aquis; that is to say, from the great number of Springs of hot Water found therein, and was then of larger extent than at present: That part of it which lies on the North-side of the Garonne is termed Guienne, and the other on the farther side of the same River to the South, bears the Name of Gascony.

The whole Country in General is bounded on the North by Poitou, Angoumois and Marche; on the East, by Auvergne and Languedoc, on the South by the Pyrenean Mountains, that separate it from Spain, and on the West by the Ocean; lying between the 42d Degree 25 Minutes, and 45th Degree of Latitude; as also between the 14th Degree 20 Minutes, and the 20th Degree and 50 minutes of Longitude: which extent comprehends the space of 230 English miles from South to North; that is to say from Vic de Sos on the Pyrenean Mountains to that of S. Jean de Angely on the Borders of Poitou, and about 250 miles from West to East, viz. from S. Jean de Luz, beyond Bayonne as far as beyond S. Genier in Rovergne, near Gevaudan.

The Air is gentle and every where very healthful, and the Soil fertile in Corn, Grapes and other Fruits, excepting in the Sandy Grounds on the Sea-coasts and the Pyrenean Mountains, where there are only Heaths and some Pastures. This Province is water'd with a great many considerable Rivers, viz. the Garonne or Gironde, the Lot, the Dordonne, the Adour, the Charente, &c. But the Garonne more especially facilitates the Traffick of the Inhabitants, which consists in Corn Wine, Oil, Prunes, Wool, &c.

Aquitaine, in the Roman Division of Gaul, by Augustus, was divided into the Prima and Secunda, and compriz'd all the Country between the Loire and the Pyrenes: Which was by Valentinian III. given to the Goths, as we have elsewhere already said: These were in time conquer'd by the French, and Aquitain made a part of their Kingdom, till Lewis the Godly made it a distinct one, and gave it to his Son Pepin; but Charles the Bald dispossest'd the Sons of Pepin, and bestow'd it on Arnulph of Burgundy, A. 844. whose Nephew William Earl of Auvergne, that succeeded him, bequeathed his Estates to Ebles III. Earl of Poitou, from whom descended Eleanor Wife of our King Henry II. in whose right he succeeded in the Duchy of Aquitain, and his Sons Richard and John successively enjoy'd it after him; but in the time of the latter it was seiz'd by the French King Lewis VIII. A. 1202. which causing great Wars between the two Nations, it was at length agreed between Henry III. King of England, and Lewis IX. King of France, That the English should quietly possess Guienne, bounded on the North by the River Charante, and on the South by the Pyrenean Mountains, and quit Normandy, Anjou, Touraine and Maine, which they before possess'd. And from this Time our Kings were stiled only Dukes of Guienne; which Dignity and Country they enjoyed till the time of Henry VI. in whose unfortunate Reign the English lost all their Possessions in France; Since when all Aquitain hath been part of the Kingdom of France.

Guienne and Gascoigne at present divided into 19 Provinces, viz.

side of the Haven of Bordeaux, where the Gironne falls into the Dardonne, and changeth its own name into that of Gironde, 10 Leagues from the Mouth of the same River Gironde, 20 miles from Bordeaux to the North, and 30 from Saintes. All Vessels that pass up to Bordeaux are obliged to leave their Guns in this Town. The adjacent Territory is call'd le Blaiguerz.

BAZADOIS, lies between Guienne proper on the North and West, the Landes or Sandy Grounds on the South, and Agenois on the East. It is a Country very fertile in Corn, Wine and Fruits, and comprehends these chief Towns, viz.

Bazes Bish. Casteljeloux. Nerac.

Bazes, Vasatum & Vazatum, olim Costum aut Cosio, is a small City seated in a Woody and Sandy Country, on a kind of a Rock, the foot of which is wash'd by the Brook of Lavaifane, about 10 miles from the Garonne to the South, 30 from Bordeaux to the South-east, and 35 from Condom to the North-west. It is an Episcopal See, depending on the Metropolitan of Auch, and the Cathedral Church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

AGENOIS, Aginensis Ager, borders on Armagnac to the South, Quercy to the East, Perigord to the North, and Bazadois to the West. It is the most fruitful Country of all Guienne, and furnishes several Provinces with Corn, Wine and Oil; the Province is very small, and hath not many Towns, the chief is Agen, Aginum, Agenum aut Aginum, was heretofore the Capital City of the Nitobriges, who were its Founders. It is a very large and populous City, an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Bordeaux; and hath a Seneschalcy and a Prefidial: And is situated near the River Garonne, where it receives the Gers, 60 miles from Bordeaux to the South-east, 50 from Thoulouse to the North-west, and 40 from Bazes to the East. This City had the Honour to be the Birth-place of that Prodigy of Learning, Joseph Scaliger.

QUERCY, Cadurcensis Tractus, is bounded on the South by Languedoc, on the East by Rouergue and Anvergne, on the North by Limousin, and on the West by Perigord and Agenois. Its utmost extent, from South to North, consists of about 90 miles, and 50 from West to East. It is divided into the Upper and Lower; the former call'd Causse, are the Valleys on the side of the River Lot. And the Lower or low Towns lye round about that of Aveiron. This Province was united to the Crown of France in the beginning of the Reign of Philip the Hardy, A. 1306. and contains these considerable Towns, Cabors, Bish. Moissac, Frigeac.

Cabors, Cadurcum, olim Divina Caducorum is built on a steep Rock, on which formerly stood a Citadel, and encompass'd in form of a Peninsula by the River Lot, over which it hath three Stone Bridges; and is distant 40 miles from Agen to the East, 30 from Limoges to the South, and 60 from Thoulouse to the North. It is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Alby, a Seneschalcy and Election. The Inhabitants make divers Manufactures, with which they maintain a reasonable good Commerce, by means of the River. The Cathedral bears the Name of S. Stephen, and was consecrated by S. Marrial. Here are also many other Churches and Monasteries, together with a Colledge.

Montauban, Mons Allanus, is a good City, well built

GUIENNE, properly so call'd, or BOURDELOIS, is bounded on the West by the Ocean, on the South by Gascony and Bazadois, on the East by Agenois, and on the North by the Mouth of the Garonne River, and Saintonge. This Country is fruitful in Grapes, whereof excellent Wine is made and transported from Bordeaux into Foreign Parts. The Towns of chief Note are these, viz.

Bordeaux, Archbish.
Libourne, } Blaye, } Losparre.

BOURDEAUX, Burdigala, is situated in a very fertile and well manur'd Country on the Banks of the River Garonne, at the distance of about 40 miles from the Coasts of the Ocean to the East, 60 from Saintes to the South, 110 from Limoges to the South-west, and as many from Thoulouse to the North-west, in the Latitude of 44 degrees 45 minutes. It is the Metropolis of the whole Government of Guienne, and indeed one of the most ancient, and fairest Cities of France, and a place of great Traffick, being resorted to by Merchants from divers parts of Europe. Its Haven is very capacious and safe, and is call'd le Port de la Lune, or the Port of the Moon, from its form, being like a Crescent: into which the Tide flows very high, and brings Ships of great Burthen up to the Key. The City it self in form resembleth a Bow, (whereof the River Garonne is the String) and is well built, the Palace, Town-house, Fair, Markets, Publick Fountains, the Key, and the Cathedral dedicated to S. Andrew, are well worth a Stranger's View; as also the Castle, lately well Fortified, and call'd la Chateau Trompette. About 18 miles below the City stands a stately Watch-Tower, call'd la Tour Cordouan, built by Lewis de Foix, a famous Engineer. This City is the See of an Archbishop, the Seat of a Parliament, a Court of Aides, Generality, Seneschalcy, an Exchange and a Mint. Also a most flourishing University, which King Charles VII. restor'd to its former Lustre, and Pope Eugenius IV. granted great Privileges to, which were augmented by Lewis XI. Richard II. King of England was born here, in the year, 1367.

Libourne, Liburnia, is a small Town, built near the Confluence of the River Dordonne and Ile, almost over-against Fronsac, about 20 miles from Bordeaux to the East, toward Periguenx.

Blaye, Blavis, Blacium or Blavutum, stands on the Frontiers of the Province of Saintonge, on the North built, all of Brick, the See of a Bishop, and the Seat of an Election, 30 miles from Cabors to the South, on the Road to Thoulouse: It is divided into the Old and New City, and hath a Suburb on the other side of the River Tarne, which is joynd to the Town by a fair Stone-bridge, rebuilt in the year 1667. by the care of M. Colbert, as appears by the Inscription upon it, Sanson places this City in Languedoc, on the Frontiers whereof it stands.

Figeac, Figeacum, is a small City, and hath also an Election. It is situate on the River Sale, 30 miles from Cabors to the East, and near the Borders of Auvergne.

ROVERGUE, Rutenensis Provincia, lyes on the South-east of Quercy and is bounded on the East by Cevennes, on the North by Auvergne, and on the South by Languedoc, being divided into three Parts, viz. the County, and the Upper and Lower Marche. It is extended from South to North for the space of 70 miles, and about the same from West to East. Its principal Cities and Towns are,

Rhodes Bishop. } Milhaud.
Vabres Bith. } Ville Franche.

Rhodes or Rodes, Ruteni, Rutena, & Segodunum Rutenorum, is situated near the River Averiou, at the distance of 55 miles from Cabors to the East, 40 from Alby to the North-east, 50 from S. Flour to the South, and about as many from the Mountains of Cevennes. It is a very ancient, large, and well fortified City, with the Title of a County, Seneschalcy, and an Episcopal See, subject to the Metropolitan of Bourges. The Cathedral is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. There are also many other Churches and Monasteries, besides a lately College of Jesuits. This City was sometime subject to its own Counts, who kept their Court in that part nam'd the Burgh, whilst the Bishops possessed the other under the name of the City. Afterwards it escheated to the House of Armagnac, and at length was annexed to the Demains of the Crown by King Henry IV. The Adjacent Country abounds in Mines of Copper, Azure and Arsenic: And not far from hence is the Mountains of Canjac, which burns when it Rains; as also a Cavern call'd Tindoul, which is 60 Paces wide and 200 deep, &c.

Vabres, Vabra is a small City, water'd with the Streams of the Rivulet Dourdun, at the Foot of the Mountains, being distant about 15 Miles from the Confines of Languedoc, and 25 Miles from Rhodes to the South. It was heretofore only an Abbey of Benedictine Monks in the Diocesis of Rhodes, until Pope John XXII. erected it into an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Bourges, A. D. 1317.

Milbau or Milaud, Milfeldum aut Amilbanum, the principal Town of the Upper Marche of Rouergue, stands on the Banks of the Tarna near the Frontiers of Languedoc, 20 Miles from Rhodes to the South-East. It was formerly a strong hold, but its Fortifications were dismantled in 1629.

Ville Franche, Villa Franca & Francoopolis, is a large well built Town on the River of Avoiou, and the chief of the Lower Marche, being distant 20 Miles from Rhodes to the West, and as many from Cabors to the East. It hath a Seneschalcy and a Presidial.

LIMOSIN, Limovicensis Provincia, is bounded on the East by Auvergne, on the North by la Marche, on the West by Angoumois and Perigord, and on the South by Quercy, extending it self from South-east to North-west, for the space of about 65 Miles, and 50 from West to East. The whole Country is generally cold and not very fruitful, scarcely affording any good Wine; however here grows some Wheat, much Rice, Barley and Chestnuts, of which last the Inhabitants often make Bread. The Principal Cities and Towns are,

Limoges Bith. } Brive,
Tulle Bishop. } Uzerche.

Limoges, Lemovicum, seu Augustoritum Lemovicum, is seated partly on the Top of a Hill and partly in a Valley, on the Bank of the River Vienne, at the distance of 120 miles from Orleans to the South, 60 from Poitiers to the South-East, 90 from Cabors to the North, 85 from Clermont to the West, and 110 from Bourdeaux to the North-East. It is a City of large extent, encompass'd with strong Walls and deep Ditches, having been founded (as some Authors alledge by a certain Gaulish Prince, who communicated his Name to it: Julius Caesar mentions it as a very populous Place, in his Time; and it is at present dignified with the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Bourges. The Cathedral bears the Name of S. Stephen, and S. Martial was its first Bishop. There are also three considerable Abbies, viz. those of S. Martial, S. Augustin, and S. Martin, together with divers other Convents for Religious Persons of both Sexes; a Presidial Court, a Generality and Seneschalcy. The City of Limoges was formerly subject to its own hereditary Vicounts, who were likewise Lords of the whole Province of Limosin; but it hath been taken at several times by the Goths, French and English? The Constable de Guisebin dispossessed the latter in the Year 1371. but Edward the Black Prince retook it soon after by Storm.

Tulle, Tuvelis, aut Tuella, is water'd by the Rivers Corsefe and the Soulane, about 37 Miles from Limoges to the South, and 55 from Cabors to the North. It was at first only a Town and Abbey of Benedictine Monks of S. Martin, which Pope John XXII. turned into a Cathedral, A. D. 1318. Arnold de S. Astier having been its last Abbot and first Bishop. These Prelates are Viscounts, and Lords of the City, where-in is also established a Presidial Court, another of Election, &c.

PERIGORD, Petricoricensis Provincia, lies between part of Quercy and Limosin on the East, Angoumois on the North, part of Xaintonge and Guienne Proper on the West, and Aginois on the South: Its utmost extent from South to North, consisting of about 55 miles, and from West to East 65 miles. This Province is divided into the Upper and Lower Parts, the former whereof, called the White, for reason of the Mountains along the Banks of the Dardogne and Verzere: And the other on the River Ille, is term'd the Black, on the account of its Woods. The most considerable Cities and Towns are.

Perigueux, Bith. } Bergerac, Sarlat, Bith. } Montignac.

Perigueux, Petrocorium, aliàs Petrocorii & Vesana, the Metropolis of the Upper Perigord, is seated on the River Ille, and distant 65 miles from Bourdeaux to the North-East, and 40 from Limoges to the South-West. This City is very Ancient, and hath been often laid waste by the Inroads of the barbarous Nations; and near its Walls King Pepin, surnamed the Short, gained a signal Victory over Gaiffer Duke of Aquitaine, A. 758. Its ancient Grandeur is evident from the Ruins of of a Temple of the Goddess Venus, and of an Amphitheatre, together with divers Inscriptions, and other magnificent Monuments of venerable Antiquity, that are found here. It is the See of a Bishop, and the Seat of the Seneschal of the Province.

Sarlat, Sarlatum, the Capital of the Lower Perigord, is situated as it were in an Island between the Rivers Dordome and Vezere, near the Confines of Quercy, 30 miles from Perigueux to the South East, and as many from Cabors to the North, it formerly belonged to the Dioceses of Perigueux, but it is now it self an Episcopal See, erected out of an Abbey by Pope John XXII. in the Year 1317. It is also a Place of considerable Strength, and sustain'd two Sieges during the Civil Wars.

SANTONGE or XANTONGE, Santonis, hath Angoumois and Perigord on the East, the Country of Aunis and Poitou on the North, the Ocean on the West, the Haven of Bordeaux and Guienne Proper on the South; comprehending from West to East the Space of about 80 Miles, and from South to North about 50 Miles: It is a fruitful Country, and yields Corn, Wine, Saffron, and Salt, whereof very good is made here. The Towns of chiefest note in this Province are,

Saintes, Bish. }
S. Jean d'Angeli, } Barbaicux, Brouage, } Aubeterre, &c.

Saintes or Xantes, Santonis, aut Mediolanum Santonum, is situated on the River Charante at the distance of 60 Miles from Bordeaux to the North, 30 from Rocheb. to the South East, 35 from Angouleme to the West, and about 20 from the Sea-coasts to the East. It is a large City, but not very well built. It is an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Bordeaux. The Cathedral is dedicated to St. Peter. Here are yet to be seen divers Aqueducts, an Amphitheatre, a Triumphal Arch over the Bridge of the Charante, a great number of Inscriptions, and other Monuments of the ancient Romans.

S. Jean d'Angely, Fanum Sancti Joannis Angeriaci, Angeriacum aut Engeriacum, is a fair Town on the River Buonne, about 5 or 6 Miles from the Frontiers of Poitou, and 15 from Saintes to the North. It was some time fortified by the French Protestants, but when Lewis XIII. took it he demolish'd its Fortifications.

The Provinces of GASCOIGNE.

ARMAGNAC, Armeniacensis Comitatus, is a County in Gascony, lying between Languadoc to the East Agenois to the North, Gascoigne and Bigorre to the West, and Comminge to the South. It is usually divided into Upper and Lower, and comprehends the ensuing Principal Towns, viz.

Auch, Archb. }
Lecloure, Bish. } Mirande, } Verdun.

AUCH or AUX, Auscii, Augusta Ausciorum, is seated on the River Giers, in a very fruitful Country, about 55 miles from Bazas to the South East, 35 from Agen to the South, and 40 from Toulouse to the West. This City is the See of an Archbishop, and the Cathedral one of the richest and most magnificent of the Kingdom, its Chapter consisting of 15 Dignitaries and 20 Canons, of whom five being Secular, are the Count of Armagnac, and the four Barons, of Montaut, Pardillan, Montesquion, and Ile. Moreover the Archbishop enjoys half the Lordship of the City, which is also adorn'd with many other Churches and Monasteries.

Leclour, Laclorium, a Bishop's See, stands on a Hill near the River Giers, 20 miles North from Aux, and 10 East from Condom.

Mirande, Miranda, is a small Town, and only considerable because it is the Capital of a County, call'd Astavae or Estrac, which takes up the Southern part of the Province of Armagnac. The Town stands on the River Boise, at the distance of 10 Miles from Auch to the South West. It was first founded under the Reign of King Phillip the Fair A. D. 1289.

Verdun, 30 miles East from Auch, and near the River Garonne, is the Capital of another small Country call'd Gavre.

CHALOSSE, Calossia, or GASCONY, properly so called, lies on the West of Armagnac, having Bazadois on the North, the Landes or Sandy Grounds on the West, and Bearn on the South. This Country although of small compass, is subdivided into many Territories, viz. those of Tursion, Marson, Gavardan, Neboufen, &c. The most considerable Towns are these viz.

Aire Bish. S. Sever.

AIRE, Adura, Atura, Aturum, & Aturus, olim Vico-Julius & Atufatum, is seated on the River Adour, 45 miles from Auch to the West, 60 from Bordeaux to the South, and 70 from Bayonne to the East. The Kings of the Visigoths were wont to keep their Courts in this City, and on the Bank of the River are still to be seen the Ruins of the Palace of Aloric: Since which, the City of Aire hath been often ruin'd by the Saracens, Normans, and other Nations, and suffer'd much damage during the late Civil Wars of France. It is an Episcopal See subject to the Metropolitan of Auch, and the Civil Government depends on the Courts of Judicature of Bazas, from whence Appeals lie to the Parliament of Bordeaux. The most remarkable publick Buildings are, the Abbey of St. Quiterne, and the Cathedral of the Virgin Mary. Two Arch-deaconries appertain to the Chapter, and the whole Diocesis is divided into six Arch-Priest-hoods.

S. Sever, Fanum, S. Severi, aut Severopolis, is a considerable Town at the foot of the Hills on the Banks of the River Adour, about 20 miles below Aire.

CONDOMIS, Condomensis Ager, is a small Territory lying between Armagnac on the South, Agenois on the East, and Bazadois on the North: Its chief Towns are, Condom, Bish. Mont de Marfan.

Condom, Condomum & Condomus, is seated on the River Blaise, and distant 20 miles from Auch to the North, 40 from Bazas to the South East, and 15 from Agen to the South. It is but a small City, however an Episcopal See, erected in the year 1327. by Pope John XII. who gave it to the Revenue of an Abbey of the Benedictine Order, which is now the Cathedral Church. Reimond Goulard the last Abbot, was the first Bishop of Condom, and the Canons were seculariz'd in 1549. Here are also many other Churches and Monasteries. This City was taken by Sebriel de Monmorency, chief of the Protestant Party, in 1569.

Mont de Marfan, Mons Martiani, stands on the banks of the River Midou, 46 miles from Condom to the the West, and 15 from Aire to the North toward Bordeaux. It is the chief Town of a Territory of the same name, and was built by Peter Count of Bis-gomme, A. D. 1141.

The LANDES or LANNES, Landaarum Traëtus, aut Lande Burdigalensis, is a sandy and barren Country, lyes West from Comdomois to the Seacoast between Bisques on the South, Guienne on the North, and the Ocean on the West, being divided into the Greater Landes between Bordeaux and Bayonne, and the Lesser between Bazès and Mont-Marçon; its principal Towns are these viz.

Dax, Bish. Albret, &c.

Dax or Dacq, Aque Agüste aut Tarbellice, is situated on the Adour, 40 miles below Aire, and 25 above Bayonne, about 70 miles South from Bordeaux. It is a fair well built City, and drives a good Trade by means of the River, (which falls into the Ocean but 30 miles below it) and its Neighbourhood to Spain. It hath a Castle for its defence, which is flank'd with many large round Towers, wherein a sufficient Garrison is maintained. It is also famous for its Baths of hot Water, that were much esteemed even in the time of the Romans. On which account it acquir'd the name of Aque, from whence also proceeded that of the whole Province of Aquitaine. This City is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Auch; and a Senechalcy.

Albret, Lebretum seu Lebreti Vicus & Abbretum, is built in the midst of a Forest of the same name, 40 miles from Dax to the North-east, 30 from Bordeaux to the South, and 25 from Bazès to the South-west. The Town and adjacent Country which it gives name to, was dignified with the Title of a Duchy by Henry II. King of France. From the noble Family of Albret were defended two Kings of Navarre.

The Country of LABOURD or BASQUE, borders on the Frontiers of Spain, lying between the Landes and the Pyrrhenian Mountains, having Bearn on the East, and the Sea on the West. The places of chief Note are, Bayonne, Bish. S. Jean de Luz.

Bayonne, Lapurdum, aut Bayona, is a large, rich and well fortified City, at the Mouth of the River Adour, near its confluence with the Nive; 15 miles from the Confines of Spain to the South, 25 from d'Acqs to the South-west, 100 from Bordeaux, and 390 from Paris. Some Authors are of opinion, That it was the Aque Tarbellice of the Romans; but it is certain, that its ancient name was Lapurdum, on which account its Episcopal See (which depends on the Metropolitan of Auch) was stiled, Episcopatus Lapurdensis, or of Labourd, until about the year 1150. when it began to be call'd Bayonnensis of Bayonne. Also the whole Territory lying between S. Sebastian and Fontarabia, was part of the Vicounty of Bayonne, and possessed by the Vicount, A. D. 1177. according to the Report of Roger Hovedon and Peter de Merca, who also with others, affirm, that the Country belong'd to the Diocesis of Bayonne, till the time of Philip II. King of Spain, who first obtained for it a Vicar-General during the Civil Wars of France, notwithstanding the Remonstrance of its proper Diocesan the Bishop of Bayonne. The City of Bayonne is one of the Keys of the Kingdom of France on the side of Spain; and hath a very capacious safe and deep Harbour, (a great number of Vessels passing even into the midst of the Town) and a strong Castle with a good Garrison. The Cathedral bearing the names of the Virgin Mary and S. Leo, is surrounded with many other Churches, and divers Monasteries. Not far from this City stands a high Mountain, from the top whereof one may take a prospect of the three Kingdoms of France, Spain, and Navarre, &c.

S. Jean de Luz, or Loizquine, Fanum S. Joannis Lucii & Luzium, is seated on the mouth of the Rivulet Urdacuris, not 10 miles from the Frontiers of Spain, and Fontarabia to the East, and about 100 from Bayon to the South-west. Near this Town in an Island made by the River Bidaïsson, which parts France and Spain, call'd The Isle of Conference, were celebrated the Matrimonial Solemnities between the present French King Lewis XIV. and Maria Theresia of Austria, Infanta of Spain, A. D. 1660.

The Lower NAVARRÉ, Navarra Inferior, is join'd to the Country of Labourd on the West, and that of Bearne on the East, and the Pyrenees on the S. It is a Mountainous and barren Country, and except Fruit which is delicate here, and some Pasturage, produces but little. In it are these Towns,

S. Palais, S. Jean de Pied de Port, &c.

S. Palais, Fanum Sancti Palatii, situated in the Territory of Mixe on the little River of Ridouze, 30 miles South-east from Bayonne, 8 from the Confines of Bearn to the West, and about 20 from the Pyrenean Mountains to the North. In this Town were held the Sovereign Courts of Justice, and Chancery for the whole Country before it was united to the Parliament of Pau, A. D. 1620.

S. Jean de Pied de Port, Fanum S. Joannis Pedeportuensis, olim Imum Pyrenseum, is a well fortified Town, built amidst the Mountains on the Banks of the River Nive at the distance scarcely of 3 miles from the Confines of the Upper Navarre and the Pyrenean Mountains, 20 from S. Palais to the South-west, and 30 from Bayonne to the South-east.

The Vicounty of SOULE is a small Territory extended along the side of the River Gave de Sison, between Bearn to the East, and the Lower Navarre on the West. It comprehends 50 Parishes and only one considerable Town, viz. That of Mauléon de Soule, which gave Birth to that Learned Prelate Henricus Spondanus, or Henry Sponde Bishop of Pamier &c.

BEARN, Benarnia, lying on the West of Basque, at the foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, is bounded on the East by the County of Bigorre, on the North by Gascoigne, on the West by the Provostship of Acqs, the Lower Navarre and the Vicounty of Soule, and on the South by the Mountains of Aragon and Renssal. Its utmost extent from South to North consists of about 50 miles. This Province is dignified with the Title of a Principality, and was at first possessed by its own Princes. Afterward it became subject to the Dominion of the Kings of Navarre, and was at length annexed to the Demains of the Crown under Henry IV. The chief are,

Pau, Oleron, Bish. L'Escar, Bish.

Pau, Palum, is seated on the River Gave de Pau, 30 miles from Aire to the South, as many from the Frontiers of Spain, 40 from S. Palais, and 60 from Bayonne to the East. It is a large Town, and the Seat of one of the Parliaments of France, and hath a Castle for for its defence, wherein on the 13th day of December, 1457. was born Henry IV. firnamed the Great, King of France and Navarre.

Oleron, Oloronenfis Urbs, Elorona & Iluro, stands on the foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, 12 miles from Pau to the West, 20 from the Frontiers of Navarre, and about as many from those of Aragon to the North. This City is the See of a Bishop subject to the Metropolitan of Auch. It was formerly destroy'd by the Normans, and rebuilt by Count Centullus, A. D. 1080. The Gave, a River, separates it from the Suburbs of St. Mary, in which stands the Cathedral Church and some other fair Buildings. The Protestants made themselves Masters thereof in the Civil War time, and Gerard le Roux or Roussel, was install'd Bishop, by Margaret Queen of Navarre.

Lescar or Lascir Lafearis, aut Lescar, derives its Name (says Peter de Marca) from the Winding reaches of the Brooks (called in the Basque Language Lafcourres) with which it is water'd: It is distant 4 or 5 miles from Pau to the East, and 12 from Oleron to the North, and is also an Episcopal See. This City was founded A. D. 1000, by the Duke of Gascony on the Ruins of the ancient Beneacnum, which had been utterly raz'd by the Normans in 845. In the Cathedral Church of the Virgin Mary were the Tombs of the Kings of Navarre, but they were demolished by the fury of the Civil Wars.

The County of BIGORRE, is bounded on the West by Bearn, on the East by Cominges and Conserans, on the North by Armaignac, and on the South by the Pyrenean Mountains. Its extent from South to North includes about 40 or 50 miles, and from West to East about 20 or 25. This Province is divided into three parts, viz. the Mountains, the Plain and the Territory of Ruffian. The Mountains is said to have Mines of Copper, &c. but they are not open. Eneco Arista possessed this Country A. C. 828 before the Kingdom of Navarre was founded, and after many Revolutions King Henry IV united it to the Crown of France. The Principal Towns, &c. of it are these, viz.

Tarbe , Bish.	} {	Lourde ,
Vic de Bigorie .		Campan .
} The Baths of Baretege .

Tarbe or Tarbes, Tarba, is seated on the Banks of the River Adour in a fertile Country, at the distance of 30 miles from Aux to the South-west, and 25 from Pau to the East. It is a well-built City, but hath only one Street, together with a Cattle called Bigorne, whence (de Marca says) the whole Province hath its name. The See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Auch, hath been long since establish'd here: as also, a Seneschal Court. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

COMMINGES, Convenensis Ager, lies between Languedoc on the East, Armaignac on the North, the County of Bigorre on the West, and Conserans, on the South. This Country was possessed by certain particular Counts, until it elcheared to the Crown of France: It is reasonable fruitful in Wine, Fruits and Pasturage. And is divided into the Upper or Cominges, and the Lower or Lombes. Wherein are contained these Towns of chiefest note, viz.

S. Bertrand de Cominge, Bish. Lombes Bish.

St. Bertrande de Cominges, Convenae aut Lugdunum Convenarum, & Lugdunum Aquitanica, is situated on a Hill near the Banks of the River Garonne and the Confines of Conserans, 16 miles from Aque Convenarum or Bugneres, according to the Itinerary of Antoninus, 50 miles from Toulouse, to the South-west, 40 from Auch to the South, and 30 from Tarbe to the South-east. The ancient City, of Convenae was raz'd by the French, A. C. 584. and another built out of its Ruins in 1100 by S. Bertrand, from whom its modern Name is deriv'd. It is an Episcopal See subject to the Metropolitan of Auch, and its Royal Court of Justice depends on the Parliament of Toulouse. The Bishop hath a Seat in the Assembly of the States of Languedoc.

Lombes, Lombaria & Lambarium, is a small City on the Rivulet of Save, distant 30 miles from S. Bertrand to the North; 20 from Auch to the South-east, 25 from Toulouse to the South-west. Its Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Toulouse, was erected out of an ancient Abbey of Augustin Monks, A. D. 1317. by Pope John XXII. who nominated one Arnold Roger of Cominges to be the first Bishop of this Diocess.

CONSERANS or COSERANS, is a Vi-county lying to the South of Cominges proper, between Languedoc and the Pyrenean Mountains. It was first possess'd (as it is generally believed) by Arnold of Spain, under the Title of a County, then pass'd into the Family of the Counts of Carcessone, and from thence was translated to the House of Navarre, &c.

S. Lizier of Conserans Conserani, aut Fanum S. Lizierii, the Capital of Conserans, is a small City seated on the River Salur, which about 10 miles from hence falls into the Garonne, and is distant 30 Miles from Toulouse to the South-W. 46 from Auch to the South-East, and 18 from S. Bertrand to the East. It is the See of a Bishop, and hath a Royal Court of Justice dependant on the Parliament of Toulouse. The City is divided into two Parts, viz. The City and the Town; the former, properly called Conserans, is adorned with a Cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and in the other, named S. Lizier, stands another Cathedral.

The PYRENEAN Mountains which serve as a Boundary between the two Kingdoms of Spain and France, begin near the Town of S. Jean de Luz on the Ocean, and continue Eastward quite cross the Isthmus that joins Spain to the Continent of Europe, as far as Perpignan on the Mediterranean; the highest of them is that named Mont-Carrige, between Roussillon and Catalonia, towards the County of Consent on which Snow lies unmeltd the greatest part of the Year.

Guienne hath a Governor-General, a Commandant, two Lieutenant-Generals, a Seneschal, and 12 particular Governors of Places. Saintonge and Angoumois have a Governor-General, a Lieutenant-General, two Seneschals, and three particular Governours of Places. Limosin hath a Governour-General, a Lieutenant-General, and a Seneschal. Perigord hath a Seneschal: And Quercy a Seneschal and Lieutenant-General.

CHAPTER XI.

LANGUEDOC, Occivania, aut Volcarum Regio.

THE Province of LANGUEDOC, including the Countries of Cevennes and Rouffillon, is bounded on the East by the River Rhone, which divides it from Provence and Dauphine; on the North by Lyonnois, Auvergne, Rouergue and Quercy; on the West by Armagnac and Cominges; and on the South by the Mediterranean Sea and the Pyrenean Mountains. It is situated between the 41 Deg. 50 Min. and the 44 Deg. 54 Min. of Latitude; and between the 18 Deg. 5 Min. and the 22 Deg. 40 Min. of Longitude. Its extent from South to North is about 120 miles, and from West to East, viz. from Rieux to Ville-Neuf-les-Avignon, 180 miles. In the Roman Division of Gaul, Languedoc went by the Name of the Gallia Narbonnensis, and in the declining of the Empire it was possessed by the Goths, who here founded the Kingdom of the Visigoths, which hath been extinct ever since the time of Charles Martel.

This Province is esteem'd the most Pleasant and Fruitful of any in the whole Kingdom of France, the Air being very Temperate and Healthful, and the Soil bringing forth abundance of Corn and excellent Fruits; its chief Commodities are Wine, Oil, Honey, Wax, Saffron, Silk and Salt. The Upper Languedoc affords good Pasture to many Herds of Oxen and Cows. Some Mines of rich Metals and Minerals are found here, and Quarries of Marble and Alabaster. Moreover all sorts of Fish are caught in the Rivers and on the Sea-coasts, and there are divers Springs of Mineral Waters very efficacious in curing Diseases.

But the Country of Cevennes hath not the same advantages, as being Mountainous, not so much cultivated, and less delightful in many places. However it affords Millet, Chefnuts, and some other Fruits. The principal Rivers are the Rhone, the Garonne, the Tarn, the Vistre, the Vidaule, the Barange, the Eraut, the Salazun, the Berre, the Pallas, the Agout, and the Aude, intermixing its Waters with those of the Frefquel, which is joined by a Canal with the lesser Lers, that runs into the Garonne. This is that famous Canal of Languedoc, which hath been lately cut with so vast Expence to make a Communication between the two Seas, viz. the Ocean and Mediterranean, and not yet altogether brought to Perfection. This Country, which hath been subject to a great number of Dukes, Vicounts, and divers other Lords, after many Revolutions, was united to the Crown by King John, A. D. 1361.

The States of Languedoc are very considerable, and their Assemblies are held every three Years by the three Orders, viz. the Clergy, the Nobles, and the third Estate; the First of these is composed of the three Archbishops; the Second of twenty two Barons taken out of every Diocess; and the Third of twenty two Consuls of the Capital Cities of every Diocess, &c. The whole Province of Languedoc is usually divided into the Upper to the West, and the Lower to the East, and those subdivided as in this Table.

TOULOUSAN, Tolosanus Ager, takes up the more Western part of the Upper Languedoc, along the Banks of the River Garonne, lying between Gascony on the West, Albigeois on the East, and the Country of Foix on the South. It comprehends these principal Cities and Towns, viz.

Toulouse, Archbish. Lavaur, Bish.

TOULOUSE, THOULOUSE, or TOLOSE Tolosa, is seated on the River Garonne, over which it hath a stately stone-Bridge, call'd Pont-neuf. It is distant 330 miles from Paris, 140 from Limoges, and 55 from Cabors to the South, 60 from the Pyrenees to the North, 150 from Bayon, and 40 from Auch to the East, 170 from the River Rhofne, and 100 from the Mediterranean to the West. It was heretofore the Seat of the ancient Tectosages, (who gain'd so many Conquests in Asia and Greece) and then a Roman Colony: In process of time it became the Metropolis of the Visigoths, afterward of Aquitain, and at length one of the most considerable Provinces, or Governments of France. Its Episcopal See which before depended on the Jurisdiction of the Arch-bishop of Narbonne, was erected into a Metropolitan by Pope John XXII. A. D. 1317. Toulouse is famous for its Traffick, and since a Communication hath been made between the Western Ocean and the Mediterranean, may justly be still'd the Mart of both Seas. The City is divided into Eight Parts, call'd Capitulares, to which a lesser Quarter nam'd the Burgh, on the other side of the Garonne, was added in the Year 1346. The Magnificent Cathedral of St. Stephen, is built on a spacious Ground-plot, adorn'd with a Fountain, over which is erected an Obelisk wrought with curious Workmanship. Another Church dedicated to St. Sernin or Saturnin, the first Bishop of Toulouse, is remarkable for its Treasury of Relicks, as also is that of the Jacobins for the Shrine of Thomas Aquinas. Here are also to be seen many Monuments of Antiquity, particularly a Capitol and an Amphitheatre, together with divers Aqueducts, old Temples, &c. The University of Toulouse, is reputed to be the Second of the Kingdom, and consists of several Colleges, among which that of Foix is the most illustrious; and indeed this place hath been long since the Seat of the Muses, on which account it is call'd Palladia, or the City of Pallas, by Martial, Ausonius, Aufonius, and Sidonius Appollinaris. The Town-House is a stately Pile of Building, and hath acquir'd the name of the Caitol; neither perhaps will it be improper to mention the Mills of the Bisale and Castle, every one of which hath 16 or 17 Mill-stones for the grinding of Corn, and a great number of Engines for the currying of Leather. A Sovereign Court of Parliament was began here in the time of King Philip the Fair, and established by Charles VII. Here is also a Seneschalcy and Generality. The City of Toulouse after divers Revolutions, remained long in the hands of its own Counts, till Philip the Hardy seiz'd on it, together with the whole County, A. D. 1271; and King John united it to the Crown in 1361.

About this City lye those spacious pleasant Fields, call'd by ancient Writers, Campi Catalunici, in which that famous Battle was fought by Arius the Roman General, assisted by the Franks, Burgundians and Goths, against Attilia King of the Huns, whom they utterly defeated and kill'd near 200 Thousand of the 500 Thousand ('tis said) he brought into the Field. Others place the Campi Catalunici about Chalons, in Champagne, tho' with less reason, this place agreeing best with the accounts given of them by the Ancients.

Lavaur, L'Avour, or La Vaur, Vaurum, aut Vaurium, stands on the Banks of the River Agour in the Upper Languedoc. and on the very Confines of Albigens, at the distance of 15 miles from Toulouse to the East. Isarnus Bishop of Toulouse, gave the Town of Lavaur, in the year 1093, to Florady Abbot of St. Pons de Tronches, on condition that he should found a Priory in it; where afterward in 1318, Pope John XXII. established an Episcopal See.

ALBIGEOIS, Albigensis Tractus, lyes between the Dioceses of Toulouse, Vabres, Lavaur and Rodez, being the Country of the ancient Helusieri, mentioned by Cesar. It is divided into two almost equal Parts by the River Tarn, and comprehends these chief Cities and Towns, viz.

Alby, Arch. Bish. Castres, Bish. Realmont.

ALBI, Albige, is situated on the River Tarn, in a very fertile Country, about 35 miles from Toulouse to the North-east, and 30 from Ville Franche, in Rouergue to the South. It's Bishop's See was formerly Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Bourges, but Pope Innocent XI. erected it into an Archbishoprick in the Year 1678. The Prelate of this City is also its Temporal Lord, and the King only maintains a Magistrate there, call'd the Viguier for holding the Royal Courts of Judicature. The Cathedral of St. Cicile hath one of the fairest Quires of France.

Castres, Castrum, aut Castrum Albiensium, is a fair City on the River Agour, distant 20 miles from Albi to the South, and 40 from Toulouse. Its Episcopal See was founded by Pope John XXII. in 1317, under the Metropolitan of Bourges, but it hath depended on that of Alby ever since the year 1678.

The Inhabitants of this Country have been famous in Ecclesiastical History, by the name of Albigenses, for their early dissention from the errors of the Church of Rome. They were a Branch of the Waldenses, who proceeded from Peter Waldo a rich Merchant of Lyons, a very Pious and Charitable Man, who touched with the sudden death of a Friend at a Feast, see himself seriously to contemplate upon Eternity, and study the Holy Scripture, which led him to the discovery of the Errors of the Roman Church: And being exceeding Charitable in relieving the wants of the Poor, and doing other good Offices that lay in his Power, obtain'd great Respect, and Attention when he argued against the Supremacy of the Pope, Adoration of Images, Invocation of Saints, &c. His Followers grew numerous, and were call'd in Derision by the Papists, The Poor men of Lyons, and afterwards Waldenses from this Waldo. The first mention of them in History is about the middle of the twelfth Century, when they began to be Persecuted by the Papists, and were forced to fly into Piedmont, where they incorporated with the Vaudi, (who were ancient Christians that had never been subject to the Pope's Authority) and were afterwards indifferently call'd Vaudois and Waldenses. Another part of them retiring into Languedoc, settled in this Province of Albigens, and encreas'd exceedingly. At first the Popes endeavoured to convert them by Preaching; to which purpose the Dominican order of Monks was instituted about the beginning of the thirteenth Century: But these not prevailing, and the Albigenses being grown strong by the Patronage of the Counts of Toulouse, whom they Converted, the Pope raised a Crusade against them, stirr'd up the Dukes of Austria against the Waldenses, and made our Simon Mountfort Earl of Leicester, Captain against the Albigenses, A. C. 1213, who with the Popes Legate, the Duke of Burgundy, and a great Army which was rais'd for (as they call'd it) this Holy War, were too strong for those poor People, took and plundered their Cities, and barbarously tormented and murdered their Persons, which caus'd them to fly into Provence and other Parts, and in time settled themselves at Merindol, Chabrires, and thereabouts; where in the year 1245, they were most barbarously massacred and cruelly tormented by the French Papists. Those that escap'd, sent to Zuinglius for Teachers, and incorporated with the Calvinists, who altogether in time grew very numerous and powerful, as we have already shewn in the account of the Religion of France.

LAURAGAIS, Lauracus and Lauriacensis Ager, taking its Name from the Town of Laureac, is extended between the Banks of the River Ariege and Agent. It is divided into two parts, viz. The Upper and Lower. The chief Cities whereof are, Castlenaudary, S. Papoul, Bish.

Castlenaudary, Castellum Arimorum, seu Cistolavium Arimacum, and Castellum Novum Arri, stands on a Hill on the Upper Lauragais, 20 miles from Castres to the South, and 30 from Toulouse to the South-east: A Seneschalcy Court and Presidial have been held in this Town ever since the Year 1553. The Mareschal de Schomberg gain'd a memorable Battle not far from hence, over the Duke of Orleans, in which the Count d'Moret was Slain, and the Duke Montmorency Wounded and taken Prisoner, A. D. 1632. The new Canal passes through this Town, and by reason of a steep Hill which would cause too precipitate a flux of Water, here are five several Locks with great Sluces one above another, and large Basins between each, whereby the Water is retained and the Navigation continued. These Sluces are Stupendous Works for Art and Strength.

S. Papoul, Fanum S. Papuli aut Papulepolis, is a small City on the foot of Mount Noire, near the Rivulets of Rotoure and Lampi, about a League distant from Castlenaudary, and 15 from Carcassonne, to the North-west. A certain Monastery was built here about the end of the VIIIth Century which Pope John XXII. changed into a Cathedral Church, allotting 43 Parishes for its Diocese, A. D. 1317.

The County of FOIX lies on the South-west of Languedoc, and is bounded on the South by the Pyrenean Mountains and Roussillon, on the West by Gascony, on the North by Toulousan and Lauragais, and on the East by Narbonne. It contains 16 Castellanies or small Governments, and many considerable Towns. It was subject to its own Counts, from whom descended Henry IV. King of France, and so it was added to the Crown, and made part of the Government of Languedoc. The chief Towns are,

Foix, } Pamiez, Bish.
Mirepoix, Bish. } Rieux, Bish.

Foix, Faxium, a small Town or Hamlet, formerly well fortified, hath given its name to the whole County, and to an illustrious Family; it is situated on the Brook Arige, and the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, from which it is distant 15 miles to the North, and 40 from Toulouse to the South, and is chiefly remarkable for its Abby, Assembly of the States, Seneschalcy, Treasury-Office for the Receipt of the King's Revenue, &c.

Mirepoix, Mirapincum seu Mirapisoë, is watered by the River Lors, and stands 10 miles from Foix to the East. This City once belonged to the Dioceses of Toulouse, but was erected into an Episcopal See under that Metropolitan, by Pope John XXII.

Pamiez, or Pumiers, Pamie, aut Apamie, stands on the River Arige, and is defended by the Castle of Fredeler, whence the City it self was formerly call'd Fredelus, and is distant 12 miles from Foix to the North, and 30 from Toulouse. Pope Boniface VIII. chang'd the Abby Church dedicated to S. Antonin, into a Cathedral, in the year 1296. And its Episcopal See hath been possessed by divers illustrious Prelates, particularly S. Lewis of Marseille, a Pope named Benedict XII. four Cardinals, the learned Henricus Spondanus, and others.

Rieux, Rivoi, and Rivene, is a City of small extent, and stands on the River Garonne, near the Confines of Gascony and Conserans, 25 miles from Toulouse to the South, and 30 from Foix to the North-west. Its Episcopal See suffragan to the Archbishop of Toulouse, was likewise established by Pope John XXII. and the Cathedral Church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The Abbey of Feuillans is in this Diocess; where are also those of Lozat, Caletz, Salanques, &c.

The County of ROUSSILLON, Ruscionensis Comitatus, and CONFLUENT, lies on the other side of the Pyrenean, bounded on the North by Languedoc, on the South by Catalonia, and on the East by the Mediterranean Sea; its extent from West East is about 60 miles, and 35 from South to North. This County was formerly part of Spain, but the French King Lewis XIII. took it, and it was granted to France by the Pyrenean Treaty, A. D. 1659. The most considerable Rivers are the Ter, the Tech, and the Egly; and the principal Towns are these, viz.

Perpignan, Bish. } Ville Franche de Con-
Elne, formerly Bish. } flant.

PERPIGNAN, Perpinianum, and Papirianum, is situated on the River Ter, and defended by a strong Castle, at the distance of 3 Leagues from the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea to the West, and 30 miles from Narbonne to the South. It was built in the year 1630. by Count Isnad, out of the Ruines of old Roussillon, as yet to be seen about half a League from thence, and at first belong'd to the Kings of Spain, till the French made themselves Masters of it, in 1642. ever since which time it hath remained in their possession. This City is adorned with an Univerfity founded by Peter King of Arragon, is dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Narbonne, and hath a very strong Cittadel for its defence.

Elne, Helena, olim Ililbaris, stands on a Hill near the Banks of the River Tech, at the distance only of one League from the Mediterranean, 10 miles from Perpignan to the South. It was an Episcopal See, but that was translated to Perpignan by Pope Clement VIII. A. D. 1604. The Town of Elne was subject to the King of Spain till 1640. at which time it fell into the hands of the French: A little below it are still to be seen the ruins of a Castle, wherein Constans the Son of the Emperor Constantine was slain, during the Comotions raised by the Tyrant Magnensius.

Ville-Franche de Conflent, Villa Franca Confluentum, the chief Town of the Territory call'd Conflent, which lies among the Mountains, is seated at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, about 25 miles from Perpignan to the S. W.

The Quarter of NARBONNE, Narbonnensis Tractus, lies between Louragais and the County of Foix, on the West, Roussillon on the South, the Sea and the Quarter of Besiers on the East, and Toulousan on the North. The principal Cities and Towns of this County, are these, viz.

Narbonne, Archb. } Alet, Bish.
Carcassonne, Bish. } St. Pons de Tormiers, Bish.

Narbonne, Narbo, Narbon, and Deucamnorum Colonia, is commodiously seated in a low Country on an Arm of the River Aude, commonly called la Robine, which was cut by the Romans, and serves to convey Barks laden with Merchandizes from the Mediterranean Sea, from which it is distant but 2 Leagues. It is a large well fortified City, and one of the most ancient of the Kingdom, for the Romans established their Colonies therein, as the Capital of one of their Divisions of Gaul, which from this City was called Gallia Narbonnensis; and it was the usual place of Residence of their Pro-consuls, who adorned it with a Capitol, and an Amphitheatre, together with divers Baths, Aqueducts, Municipal Schools, and granted great Priviledges to the City, in somuch that the Inhabitants in gratitude for these favours erected an Altar in honour of Augustus, as appears from an Inscription found here in the XVIth Century. The City of Narbonne hath been long since the See of an Archbishop, ever since the time of Constantine the Great, if we may give credit to some Writers, who also avers, that the Pro-consul Paulus Sergius, whom St. Paul had converted, was its first Apostle and Prelate. The Archbishop is President of the States of Languedoc. The Cathedral bears the name of S. Justus and S. Pastor, and is remarkable for its admirable Organs and curious Paintings, wherein are represented the raising of Lazarus from Dead, the last Judgment, &c. There are also 5 other Parochial Churches, the chief of which is the Collegiate Church of S. Paul, a Colledge of the Fathers of the Doctrine, and divers Monasteries for Religious Persons of both Sexes. This City belonged to its own Dukes and Lords, till Gaston de Foix exchange'd it with Lewis XIIth King of France, for other Lands in the year 1507. It is distant 80 miles from Toulouse to the East, 35 from Perpignan to the North, 100 from the River Rhodie to the West, and about 80 from Rodez to Rouvergne to the South.

Carcaffonne, Carcaffo, Carcaffio and Carcaffium, is situated on the Aude, in the midst between Perpignan and Thouloufe, 20 miles from Alet to the North, and 30 from Narbonne to the West. It is the Capital City of the Territory called from thence Carcaffez, or the Country of Carcaffonne, and is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Narbonne. It is divided into three parts, the Upper Town, the Lower where the Burch formerly stood, and the Castle Precinct, and is especially noted for its woollen Manufactures, &c.

Alet, Aleita, aut Eleita, stands in like manner on the Banks of the River Aude, at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, 20 miles from Carcaffonne to the South, 20 from Mirepoix to the East, and 25 from Perpignan to the North-West. This City together with the adjacent Country, was at first included within the Diocels of Narbonne, but was erected into an Episcopal Sec by Pope John XXII.

S. Pens de Terniers, Fanum S. Pontii T. meriarum, Tomeris, and Pontiopolis, was at first only an Abby of the Benedictine Order, founded A. C. 936. by Ruimond Count of Thouloufe, in honour of S. Pons, Bishop of Cimele, or Nice, and Martyr; afterward it grew up into a Town, and Pope John XII. established an Episcopal See there, in 1318, but the Monks were not seculariz'd until A. 1625. The Bill op is Lord of this small City, which stands amidst the Mountains, about 25 miles from Narbonne to the North, as many from Caffres to the East, and 25 from Alby to the South-west.

The Quarter of BESIERS, Bliterensis Traffus, is extended between that of Narbonne on the West, Rouvergue on the North, the Quarter of Nimes on the East, and the Sea on the South, comprehending these chief Cities and Towns, viz.

Besiers, Bish. } Lodeve, Bish.
Agde, Bish. } Pezenas.

Besiers, or Beziers, B'eria, Bliteria, aut Bliterensis Civitas, is a very ancient City seated upon a Hill, the Avenues whereof are of difficult access, near the small River Orb, which a little below falls into the Mediterranean. It was a considerable place in the time of the Romans, who built there two Temples in honour of Julius and Augustus; it was in a very flourishing state in the fourth Century, when the Goths took and ruined it: And when afterwards it had recovered itself, the Saracens pillaged it about the year 736. And to prevent its being again a Seat for those Infidels, Charles Martel quite destroy'd it. However, in time it was again rebuilt, and became flourishing and populous as it is. It was formerly a Vicounty under the Dukes of Septimania, but at length united to the Crown of France. This City is the See of a Bishop, hath still the Title of a Vicounty, Bailiage and Presidial, and is distant 2 Leagues from the Coast of the Medeterranean, 15 miles from Narbonne to the North-East, and 45 from Montpellier to the West.

Agde, Agatha, stands on the Bay of Lyons, a little above the Mouth of the River Erault, distant one League from the little Island Brescon to the North, 15 miles from Narbonne, and 12 from Besiers to the East, and about 40 from Montpellier to the West. This City is remarkable for its Trade, the beauty of its Buildings, and is an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Narbonne.

Lodeve, Luteva, aliis Glanum stands at the foot of the Mountains of Cevennes, on the Frontiers of Rouvergue, near the Rivulet of Lergue, which falls into the Erault, and is distant about 30 miles from Agde and Beziers to the North. It was dignified with an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Narbonne by the favour of Pope John XXII. And the Bish op is its Spiritual and Temporal Lord, having a right to determine all Causes, Criminal and Civil, except High Treason, and assumes the Title of Count of Montbrun, which is an adjacent Castle: 800 Gentlemen formerly held Tenures in Fee of these Prelates, and the Bishoprick on that account was stiled the Noble. This City was exposed to great Calamities during the Wars of the Goths and Albigens; the French Protestants surpriz'd it in the Year 1573. and it was re-taken by the Duke of Montmorency, A. D. 1583.

Pezenas, Pifcene, is a fair near Town, seated on a Hill, on the River Peune, near the Erault, 12 or 14 Miles North from Agde, and 20 South from Lodeve; in which the States of the Province commonly assemble.

The Quarter of NIMES, Nemusensis Traffus, lies between that of Besiers on the West, the Mediterranean Sea on the South, Provence on the East, and Cevennes on the North; and contains the ensuing considerable Cities and Towns, viz.

Nimes, Bish. } Aigues-Mortes,
Montpellier, Bish. } Lunel, Beaucaire, } Sommieres, &c.

Nimes, Nemausus, is most pleasantly seated, near the Spring-head of the River Vistve, as being surrounded on one side with Hills, on which grows abundance of Vines, and all sorts of Fruit-Trees, and on the other with a spacious fertile Plain. But it is more especially famous for its Antiquity, whereof as yet remain many illustrious Monuments: The chief of those is an Amphitheatre, built of Free-stone, of an extraordinary length and breadth, the out-side being adorn'd with Columns and their Cornices, on which are to be seen the Roman Eagles, and the Figures of Romulus and Remus sucking a Wolf, besides the Temple of Diana, without the Town; an admirable Spring, expatiating in form of a Pond, mentioned by Ausonius. And in this City was plac'd a Colony, which the Emperor Augustus brought out of Egypt, after the conquest of that Province, as appeareth from divers ancient Medals. Neither is its present Grandeur less considerable, for it is the Seat of a Bishoprick, subject to the Metropolitan of Narbonne, of a Seneschals Jurisdiction, called of Beaucaire and Nimes; of a Presidial Court; and of a University lately established. It is also a place of very good Trade, which consists chiefly in Woollen Stuffs made here. The City of Nismes was possessed by the Goths, till the time of Charles Martel; and by the Protestants during the Civil Wars of France: It is distant not above 10 miles from the River Rhone to the East, 30 from Montpellier to the North-East, and 30 from the Mediterranean to the North.

Montpellier, Mons-Pessalanus, Mont-Puffulus, & Mons Luellarum, the Capital City of the Lower Languedoc, the largest and most flourishing of all the Province except Thouloufe, is pleasantly seated on the top of a Hill, near the Rivulet of Lex, at the distance scarcely of one League from the Pool of Miguelonne, 2 from the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, and 60 miles from Narbonne to the East. The Episcopal See of Maguelonne, depending on the Metropolitan of Narbonne, was translated higher under the Popedom of Paul III. in the Year 1536. An University for the study of Physick, one of the most famous throughout Europe, was founded here (as they say) by the Disciples of Averroes and Avicenna, A. D. 1196. and re-establi'd in 1220. Besides a Law Academy, a Colledge of Jesuits, a Court of Aides, a Chamber of Aides, a Chamber of Accounts, a Generality and a Chamber of the Treasures of France, a Seneschals Court, a Presidial, a Chamber of the lesser Seal, and a Royal Court of ordinary Justice. This City is also adorn'd with divers stately Edifices, viz. The Hall of Justice or Sessions-house, the Churches of S. Peter and the Virgin Mary; and a strong Citadel flanked with four Royal Bastions: The King's Physick Garden, without the Town, and other Curiosities, that deserve well to be view'd by Travellers. The Inhabitants are employ'd in making of Treacle, Verdegrease, white Wax, Silk, and other sorts of Manufactures. James III. the Son of Sanchez, King of Majorca, sold the City of Montpellier to King Philip of Valois, A. D. 1349. for the Sum of 26000 Crowns of Gold. The French Protestants made themselves Masters of it in 1561. but Lewis XIII. took it from them after a vigorous Defence in 1622.

GEVAUDAN or GIVAUDAN, Gabalensis Ager, lyes on the North of Beziers, and hath Vivarais and Velay for its Eastern bounds; the Diocess of Lodeve on the South, Rouergue on the West, and the upper Auvergne on the North. This Country hath been some time possess'd by certain particular Counts, and is very fruitful, though encompass'd with Mountains. The chief City is, Mende, Mimatium, seu Mimate Gebalorum, is situated in a Valley, surrounded with the Mountains of Cevennes, near the Source of the River Lor, 70 miles North from Montpellier, 20 from the borders of Auvergne, and 50 from the River Rhone. Some Authors make this the ancient Auderitum or Gabalum; but the Village Favoux, 4 Leagues hence, seems rather to have been that, and that this grew out of its Ruins, having been at first only a Village or Hamlet. It is now a good City, the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Alby: The Bishop hath the Title of a Count, possesseth the Lordship of the Mannor together with the King, having also enjoy'd in time past a Privilege of Coining Money. This City is beautified with divers fair Churches, a stately Episcopal Palace, &c.

VIVARIS, Vivariensis Provincia, was the Country of the ancient Helvii, and is now part of Cevennes, lying between Languedoc proper on the South, Givaudan on the West, Forets and Velay on the North, and the River Rhone on the East. It is extended from North to South, the space of about 60 miles, and from East to West about 40 miles, being divided into two Parts, viz. The Upper and the Lower, and comprehending these Principal Cities and Towns, viz.

In the Upper

Viviers, Bish. Tournon, Aubenas.

In the Lower

Uzes, Bish. Pont S. Esprit.

Viviers, Vivario seu Vivarium, is seated on a Hill and the Banks of the River Rhone, over-against the Province of Dauphine, about 65 miles North from Montpellier, and 70 miles South from Lyons. It was at first only a Village, and in process of time grew up into a large City, out of the Ruins of Abis or Abbe Helviorum, which was destroy'd by Crocius King of the Germans; and that Episcopal See was remov'd thither about A. C. 430. The Bishop is styled Count of Viviers and Prince of Donsere, Chateau-Neuf, &c.

Uzes, Uetitia, is the Capital City of a Country, thence so called, and dignified with the Title of a Duchy, and an Episcopal See, depending on the Metropolitan of Narbonne. It is distant 12 miles from Nimes to the North, 30 from Viviers to the South, and 20 from Avignon to the West. On the Road between this City and that of Nimes is to be seen the stately Bridge of Guard, built over the River Gardam between two Mountains, that are thereby join'd together; and indeed its Structure is admirable, as consisting in three Stories of Arches one above another, the last of which was an Aqueduct.

Pont S. Esprit, a small City with a good Castle, and a Stone-Bridge over the Rhone, is seated on the borders of the Vivarais, and at the confluence of the Ardeche with the Rhone, 20 miles from Uzes to the North, and 15 from Viviers to the South.

VELAY, Velania, a small Country on the North-west of Vivarais, having Forets on the North, Auvergne on the West, and Givaudan on the South. It is divided into two parts by the Mountains of Mezeres, Pertuis and Meigal, all cover'd with Woods. The chief Town is Puy, or Puy en Velay, Podium, olim Vellanorum Urbs & Anicium, stands on a Mountain, near the River Loire, at the distance of 2 Leagues from the ancient Town of Rueffum, now the Village of S. Paulban, out of the Ruins whereof it took its rise, also 50 miles from Viviers to the North-west, 60 from Lyons to the South-west, and not above 10 from the borders of Auvergne. It is a fair, large, well-built City, and an Episcopal See, which depends immediately on that of Rome, not being subject to the Jurisdiction of any Metropolitan. The Cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient and Noble Pile of Building, but more especially famous for the concourse of Pilgrims and other devout Persons, frequently resorting thereto. Here are also divers Parochial Churches and a great number of Monasteries. The Bishop is Count of Velay, and formerly had a Privilege to Coin Money: He administers Justice together with the Kings Seneschal, who hath his Seat here.

Languedoc hath a Governour-General, and a Commander in chief for the King, who hath a Lieutenant General. Here are also 3 Lieutenant-Generals, 1 for the Upper Languedoc, who resides at Thoulouse. 2 for the Lower, residing at Montpellier: And 3 for Vivarais at Pont S. Esprit. There are also the Seneschal of Nimes, the Seneschal and Governour of Thoulouse and Albigeois, the Seneschal of the Country of Foix, Carcassonne, Besiers and Limoux. A Governour of the Country of Foix, 3 Bailiffs of Velay, Givaudan and Vivarais: and particular Governours in Montpellier, Nimes, Pont S. Esprit, Narbonne, Carcassonne, Fort of Brecon, Egde, du Puy, &c. And in Rouffillon a Governour-General. There is also a Lieutenant-General and particular Governours in Perpignan, and six other Places on the Frontiers.

PROVENCE, Provincia.

THIS Province, which bears the Title of a County, is bounded on the East by Piedmont and the River Var; on the South by the Mediterranean Sea, on the West by the River Rhone, that separates it from Languedoc, and on the North by Dauphine, being extended between the 42d Degree 30 Minutes, and the 44th Degree 6 Minutes of Latitude, as also between the 22d Degree 30 Minutes, and the 25th Degree 40 Minutes of Longitude, comprehending 180 English Miles from South to North, and 130 from West to East.

S. Maximin, } Barjols.

PROVENCE was the first part of Gaul that the Romans got footing in, and was therefore call'd the Province of the Romans. In the Division by Augustus, this was the Gallia Narbonensis secunda. It was afterwards possess'd by the Goths: And under the French it was part of the Kingdom of Arles or Burgundy. Afterwards cut off from that, and govern'd by its own Counts for about 400 Years, till the Year 1481, when Charles the last Earl of Provence bequeathed it to Lewis XI. King of France.

AIX, Aque-sextia, the Metropolis of Provence, is seated in a Plain at the foot of the Hill of S. Eutropius, and near the Rivulet of Arc, 20 miles from Marseille to the North, 50 from the Confines of Dauphine to the South, 80 from Montpellier, and about 40 from Arles to the East, and 50 from Nice to the West. It is a large, well-built and very ancient City, as deriving its Name from the Bagno's that were erected by Caius Sextus, who brought hither a Roman Colony. It was formerly the usual Place of Residence of the Counts of Provence, and at present the See of an Archbishop, being also honoured with a Parliament, a Chamber of Accounts, a Court of Aides, a Generality, a Treasury-Chamber, the principal Seat of the Grand Senechal of Provence, and that of the ordinary Judge, and another Magistrate appointed by the King, called the Viguier. This City was heretofore sacked by the Lombards, and afterwards by the Saracens; but it hath been since well repaired and much enlarged, so that it may be justly esteem'd as one of the Noblest of the Kingdom. The Cathedral bears the Name of S. Saviour, and is adorn'd with a high Tower, a Hexagon form: The Baptistry is an admirable Structure, being adorned with Pillars standing round about the Fons, which support a Dome over them; and the Chappel of Nostre Dame de Grace is extremely rich. Here are also two Parochial Churches, viz. of S. Magdalen and the Holy Ghost, several Monasteries, a College of Jesuits, &c.

The Air is somewhat cold in the Upper Provence by reason of the Mountains, but the Country affords Corn, Wine, Almonds, and Fruit, as also very good Pasture for Cattle, &c. In the Lower Provence, along the Sea-coasts it is hot, and hath little Winter, except when the North Winds blow. The Soil there is very fertile, and produces abundance of Corn, Grapes, Olives, Figs, Oranges, Limons, Citrons, Pomegranats, Apricocks, Plums, Almonds, Apples, Pears, &c. Divers sorts of excellent Fish are taken out of the Sea, especially Tunnies. The principal Rivers are the Rhone, the Durance, the Verdon, the Hubay, the Argens, the Var, the Arc, &c. It is a Maritime Province and hath these considerable Bays in the Mediterranean Sea, viz. Marseille, Toulon, Hyeres, Grimaud and Lerins.

Provence is usually divided into the Upper, Middle and Lower; however, its several Parts may be better distinguish'd by the Diocesses, as they are placed in the ensuing Table.

Provence divided into 18 Parts or Diocesses, viz.

The Diocess of RIEZ, Riensis Episcopatus, lies on the East of that of Aix, and hath these Towns, Riez, Bish. Valensole, Oreson.

Riez, Reii, Reii Apollinari & Regium, is situated in a fruitful Country on the Rivulet of Auverre, about 35 miles from Aix to the N.E. 45 from Toulon to the North, and as many from the Frontier of Dauphine to the South. It is a small City, but well-built, and hath been very considerable in the Time of the Romans, as appears from divers Inscriptions and other Monuments of Antiquity found here. The Bishop is also temporal Lord of the Mannor and Suffragan to the Archbishop of Aix.

The Diocess of SENEZ, Saniciensis Diocesis, lies

along the Banks of the Verdun, on the North-East of Riez. Its chief Towns are, Senex, Bish. Castelane, Colmars.

Senex, Sanitium aut Saueticum, is a City below the Mountains, of very small compass, not much inhabited, and now almost reduc'd to a Village nevertheless it retains the Title of an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Ambrun, although its Bishop generally resides at Castelane, a fair Town on the River Verdun, from whence it is distant 10 miles to the North, 20 from Riez to the N. E. and about 40 from Ambrun to the S. The Cathedral Church bears the Name of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary; and the Chapter, which had been formerly of the Augustin Order, was seculariz'd by Pope Innocent X.

Colmars, Colmartium, five Collis Martii, stands on the Banks of the Verdun, near the Alps and the Confines of the County of Nice, and 20 miles N. E. from Senex. It is a well fortified Town, but sustain'd much damage by a great fire, which happen'd there, A. D. 1672.

The Diocess of DIGNE lies on the North of Senex.

Digne, Bish. Collobriens.

Digne, Dinia, is seated at the Foot of the Mountains in the Upper Provence, on the River Bleone, which there receives a Brook of hot Waters, at the distance of 15 miles from Senex to the N. and 25 from the Frontiers of Dauphine to the S. It was heretofore the Capital City of the Sentii, and is at present the Seat of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Ambrun. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and the Chapter was sometime Regular of the Augustin Order.

The Diocess or Arch-bishoprick of ARLES, is the South-West corner of Provence, lying along the Seacoasts, and the Banks of the River Rhone, the chief Towns are,

Arles, Archb. Salon.

ARLES, Avelate & Avelatum, is situated on the Eastern Bank of the River Rhone, over which it hath a Bridge of Timber, 40 miles from Aix to the West, and as many from Montpellier, and in the mid-way between Avignon to the South and the Mediterranean Sea. The Romans established their sixth Colony in this City, and caused the General Assemblies of the six neighbouring Provinces to be held annually here. Many Marks of its ancient Grandeur have been discovered, as the Remains of an Amphitheatre, several Statues and Tombs, but especially a Roman Obelisk of Oriental Granate Stone (a piece much admired by the Curious.) It is 52 Foot high, and 7 Foot Diameter at the Base, and yet but one Stone. It hath been erected not many years since, and makes a very agreeable view to Travellers. This was the Capital of the Kingdom of Burgundy, and is at present a very fair and large City, dignified with a Metropolitan See, and a Royal Academy for Languages lately established. The Emperors at several times granted large Privileges to it; which though it hath been deprived of by its Princes, yet still hath a Territory of 30 Miles extent, depending on it; which is the Islands made by the three Branches of the Rhone, call'd Camargue; and the Crau or Campi Lapidei of Sirabo and Pliny, which is a large Country covered with Stones, and reaches from the Rhone to the Mer de Martigne, a small Bay between that and Marseilles.

Salon or Salon de Crau, Salona aut Salum, is the chief Town of the Crau abovementioned, and is situated 25 Miles from Arles to the East, about 20 from Aix to the West, and 5 or 6 from the Bay of Martignes to the North. This Town is adorn'd with an old Castle, a Collegiate Church and divers Monasteries, and was the place of the Nativity of the Famous Michael Neftradamus, who also died there in the year 1566.

The Diocess of MARSEILLE, lies along the Seacoasts, on the East of Arles, and hath these considerable Towns, viz.

Marseille, Bish. Aubagne.

Marseille, Massilia, is seated on a little Hill, and hath a very capacious and safe Harbour on the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, at the distance of 20 miles from Aix to the South, and 40 from Arles to the South-East. This City was built (as 'tis supposed) by the Phenicians, and flourished in the time of Julius Cesar; when it was govern'd in form of a Republick, and had a famous Academy much frequented by the young Gentlemen of France, and even of Rome it self. The Inhabitants acquir'd much Reputation in former times on the account of their Learning and Courteousness (according to the Testimony of Cicero) but now they excel chiefly in the Knowledge of Maritime Affairs; for the Capital Gallies of France are laid up here, and it is the usual place of Rendezvous of their Levantine Ships. The Port, which is defended on one side by a Fortress and the Abbey of S. Victor, is flanked on the other with a Wall above 1300 Paces long; its Mouth being shut up with a Chain lying at a certain distance on three Pillars of Stone, leaving a space open for the passage only of one large Vessel. The City it self at present enjoys great Privileges, and is one of the largest, fairest, and most populous of the Kingdom, especially since it hath been enlarg'd by the present King. So that its Citadels, new streets, publick Places, stately Edifices, magnificent Churches, Monasteries, Colledges, Seminaries, Hospitals, Courts of Judicature, Haven, Arsenal, Gallies, &c. are well worth a Strangers particular observation.

The Episcopal See of Marseille, formerly subject to the Metropolitan of Vienne, now depends on that of Arles. The Inhabitants heretofore often maintain'd Wars against the Gauls, Ligurians, Carthaginians, and divers other Nations, but their City was taken by Julius Cesar, afterward became a Prey to the Goths and other barbarous People, and was likewise surpriz'd by Alfonso King of Aragon, in the year 1423. However having been afterwards well repaired, it resisted the Forces of Charles of Bourbon, in 1524, and those of the Emperor Charles V. in 1536. It was for some time subject to the Jurisdiction of certain particular Viscounts, as also to that of the Counts of Provence, Anno 1243. and at length was united to the Crown of France, together with the whole Country, in 1481.

Aubagne, Aubanica, is a fair Town, wherein the Assemblies of the States of the Province are often convened. It is distant only 10 miles from Marseille to the East, and 15 from Aix to the South.

The Diocess of TOLON, Telonensis Diocesis, is likewise along the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea. The chief Towns are, Toulon, Bish. Hyerès.

TOULON, Telo, aut Telo Martius, Tolenium & Tolemium, is situated in a plain fruitful Country, and on a Bay which makes a very safe, large and commodious Harbour on the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea, at the distance of 30 miles East from Marseille by Land, 75 miles from Nice to the West, 90 from the Borders of Dauphine to the South, and 400 miles from Paris. It is a very fair, strong and well built City, being adorn'd with many stately Churches, Monasteries, and other publick Edifices. King Henry IV. fortified it with strong Walls, and built two large Moles, each whereof is 700 Paces long, enclosing almost the whole Port; near them is also erected an Arsenal furnished with all sorts of Naval Stores, whence the largest Ships of the Royal Fleet of France are usually fitted out. And for their Security the Fortifications have been much encreased by the present King.

Hyerès, Hierum, Aræ & Olbia, is a small Town on the Coasts, about 10 miles from Toulon to the East, and over against the Islands Srebades, to which it hath given their modern Name, on which account only this Town is mentioned, being not otherwise considerable.

The Diocess of FRÉJUS lies to the East of that of Toulon, and contains these chief Towns, &c. viz.

Fréjus, Bish. S. Tropez, &c.

Fréjus, Foro-Julium aut Forum Julii, is seated in a Valley amidst the Marthes near the Mouth of the River Argens, and distant only half a League from the Sea-coasts, 40 miles from Toulon to the North-East, and 60 from Aix to the East. This City was heretofore very considerable, and there yet remain divers Monuments of Antiquity. It hath also at present a capacious Harbour, and is dignified with an Episcopal Sea under the Metropolitan of Aix.

S. Tropez, Fanum S. Tropetis, is a small but strong Town on the South side of the Gulph of Grimant, and hath in like manner a large Haven, 5 Leagues from Fréjus to the South, and 35 miles from Toulon to the East.

The Diocess of GRASSE is situated on the Coasts to the North-East of Fréjus, comprehending these Towns, &c. viz.

Grasse, Bish. Antibes, Lanes, &c.

Grasse or Grace, Grassa is a very populous and rich City seated on a Hill 2 Leagues from the Sea, 20 Miles from Fréjus to the North, and 20 from Nice to the East. The Episcopal See of Antibes under the Metropolitan of Ambrun, was removed hither by Pope Innocent IV. by reason of the unwhollomness of the Air of that place, and the incursions of Pirates. Besides the Cathedral, there are divers other Churches, and a great number of Monasteries, &c.

Antibes, Antipolis seu Antipolis Julia Augusta, was formerly the Seat of a Prelate, and is at present well fortified with a Castle, and hath a convenient Harbour, about 3 Leagues from Nice to the West, and 20 miles from Fréjus to the North-East.

The Diocess of VENCE lies to the North-East of that of Grasse, and hath these Towns, &c. viz.

Vence, Bish. S. Paul, &c.

Vence, Vincium, Vintium, Vensensis Urbs & Vencium, is situated on the maritime Alps at the distance of 5 or 6 miles from the River Var, about 12 miles from Grasse to the North-East, and as many from Nice to the North-West. This City is very ancient, as having been a Roman Colony, but not large; and its Episcopal See depending on the Metropolitan of Ambrun, was formerly united to that of Grasse, but hath been separated from it. The Cathedral is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and St. Eusebius was its first Prelate. The Civil Jurisdiction of the City and Lordship of the Mannor, is divided between the Bishop and the Baron of Vence.

The Diocess of GLANDEVE is extended along the Banks of the River Var, to the North-West of Vence. Considerable Towns in it are, Glandeve, Bish. Entrevaux, &c.

Glandeve, Glandata, Glandate & Glanateve Capillatorum, stands near the Banks of the Var, and formerly bore the Title of a County, as also of an Episcopal Sea under the Metropolitan of Ambrun; but at present there remains only a Fortrefc erected on an Hill, the City it self being ruin'd: For about 800 years ago, the continual overflowing of the River obliged the Inhabitants to settle elsewhere, especially at the Town of Entrevaux, where the Bishop now resides. This City hath imparted its name to the Family of the Glandeves, one of the most illustrious of Provence, which in the X Century re-established the Bishoprick, after it had been abolished by the Saracens.

Entrevaux, Intervallium & Intervalles, is seated on the River Var, at the Foot of the Mountains, on the very Limits of the Dutchy of Savoie and County of Nice, at the distance only of one mile from the Ruins of the City of Glandeve, 16 from Vence to the N. W. and 30 from Digne to the E.

The Diocess of SISTERON, Segusteronensis Diocesis, lies to the North, and beyond Digne to the West. The chief Towns are, Sisteron, Bish. Forcalquier, County. Monosque.

Sisteron, Segustero, Segusteronorum Urbs, & Sistarica, is watered by the River Durance, which there receives the Brook Buech; and stands near the Borders of Dauphine, 50 miles North from Aix, and 45 North-West from Glandeve. It was formerly dignified with a Title of a County, and is still a large well-built City, and the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Aix. A Seneschal's Court hath been established here ever since the year 1635.

Forcalquier, Forcalquerium, olim Forum Neronis, the chief Town of a County of the same Name stands on a Hill, and the side of the Rivulet Laye, in the midst between Sisteron to the North-East, and Apr to the South-West, about 2 Leagues from the River Durance.

Monosque, Manusca, is a small but fair Town on the River Durance, subject to the Jurisdiction of the Knights of Malta, and distant 20 miles from Riez to the the W. 25 from Aix to the N. and about 12 from Forcalquier to the S.

The Diocesis of APT, Aptensis Diocesis, is situated on the Frontiers of the County of Venaissin, the chief City.

Apt, Apta, seu Apta Julia Vulgantium, is a small City situate on the River Coulon near the Mountains, at the distance of 25 miles from Aix to the North, as many from Avignon to the East, and 40 from Sisteron to the South-West. This City was anciently one of the largest and most illustrious of the Celta, and was the Capital of the Vulgentes in the time of the Romans. It was likewise enlarged by Julius Cæsar, who made it a Colony, and caused it to bear his own name. The most ancient Prelate of this Diocesis was S. Auspicius Murto, and the Bishop at present is the first Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Aix, and styled Prince of Apt, and his Predecessors have had a Privilege to coin Money. In the Cathedral of S. Anne, and the Church of the Cordeliers, are preserved a great number of Relicks. Westward from hence lies

The County of VENAISSIN, Vindascius aut Vindausensis Comitatus, which is bounded on the East by Provence, on the North by Dauphine, on the South by the River Durance, and on the West by the River Rhône, which divides it from Languedoc, being extended from South to North about 35 miles, and 30 from West to East. This Country took its Name (as 'tis believed) from Venesque, formerly its Capital City, and was granted by Joanna Queen of Naples and Countess of Provence, to Pope Clement VI. in 1348. since which time it hath been possessed by his Successors, together with the City of Avignon, comprehending an Archbishoprick, 3 Bishopricks, 4 Baronies, and 78 Towns and Villages; the chief whereof are these, viz.

Avignon, Arch. } Cavaillon, Bish.
Carpentras, Bish. } Vaison, Bish.

AVIGNON, Avenio, is situated on the River Rhône, over which stands a stone Bridge, now half ruin'd at the distance of 25 miles from S. Esprit to the South, 20 from Arles to the North, and 45 from Aix to the North-West. It is a large and flourishing City, a Place of good Trade, which consists chiefly in Silks manufactur'd here: Erected into a Metropolitan See under the Pontificate of Sixtus V. in the year 1475. having been before subject to that of Arles. It is also adorned with an University, and a Mint-house for the coining of Money with the Arms of the Popes, of whom seven successively resided for the space of 70 years; that is to say, from A. D. 1307, to 1377. viz. Clement V. John XXII. Clement VI. who purchased Avignon of Q. Joanna, Innocent VI. Urban V. and Gregory XI. who through the Persuasion of S. Catherine of Sienna, brought back the Papal See to Rome. Here are divers stately Palaces, and magnificent publick Buildings. The Walls are strong, the Churches stately, and the Avenues of the City very pleasant. The Canons of the Cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary, wear Scarlet Robes, and the Chaplains others of Violet Colour. As for the Civil Government, it is administered by Contuls, and their Assiters, who is as it were chief Justice of the City. The Viguier, an Officer like the Provoft of the Merchants of Paris, judges Causes that do not exceed the Value of four Ducats of Gold without Appeal. In greater Causes Appeals lie to the Vice-Legate, who commits the Affair to the Court of the Rota, where there are five Auditors; and from thence an Appeal lies to Rome.

Carpentras, Carpentoracte, is watered by the River Russe, and seated in a very fertile Country about 12 miles from Avignon to the North-East, as many from Vaison to the South, and somewhat more from Orange. It is an Episcopal See subject to Avignon. It grew up out of the Ruins of Vindausca or Venasque, and is now the capital City of the County of Venaissin in its Room. It is enclosed with strong Walls, and stands on the Foot of Mount Ventoux, which riseth up from thence 4 Leagues in height. In this City is established a Court of Justice, a Treasury-Office, &c.

Cavaillon, Cabellio aut Caballio, is a City of a sm a compais now seated in a Plain near the River Durance, although it formerly stood on an adjacent Hill, where its Ruins are as yet to be seen. The Prelate of Gavaillon is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Avignon, from whence it is distant 15 miles to the S. E. and 30 from Aix to the N. W.

Vaison, Vasio, Vaslon & Vassionensis Urbs, is built on the side of a Hill on the Banks of the River Louvese, at the distance of 12 miles from Carpentras to the North, as many from Orange to the East, and 24 from Avignon to the North-East. This City was heretofore more considerable than at present, having been ruin'd by the Goths, Vandals and Saracens. The Church of the Virgin Mary, reported to have been formerly the Cathedral, stands without the City on the Plain, and the other within the Walls, hath a Chapter of Canons, among whom are four Dignitaries. The Episcopal See of Vaison is subject to the Metropolitan of Avignon.

The Principality of ORANGE, Arauscanus Principatus, is enclosed within the Country of Venaissin on the East, and the River Rhône to the West, being extended for the space of 20 miles in length. This small Territory of right appertains to the illustrious House of Nassau, but was usurped by the present French King Levis XIV. on the Pretensions of the Family of Langueville, till by the late Treaty at Ryswick it was restored to his Majesty King William. It comprehends the Capital City of Orange, together with about 15 other Towns and Villages, the chief of which are these, viz.

Orange, Bish. } Fonquieres, Courciezon, } Bigoudas.

ORANGE, Arausio, is situated near the Rivulet of Egues, distant 3 or 4 miles from the River, Rhône to the East, 12 from S. Esprit to the South; and 15 from Avignon to the North. It is called Colonia Secundanonium by Pliny, in regard that the Triumvirs, caused the second Roman Legion to be brought hither. This City hath been much larger in time past than at present, as having suffer'd great damage by the Inroads of divers barbarous Nations: Of which former Grandeur, there are evident marks in the Remains of a Cirque, very artificially built, an Amphitheatre and a Triumphant Arch almost entire, which Caius Marius and Lucius Catulus had erected after the Victory obtained over the Cimbrians and Teutones, besides part of a large Tower, which some suppose to have been a Temple of Diana, and divers other remarkable Monuments of Antiquity. The Fortres which Maurice of Nas-

Orange Prince of Orange made so regular in the year 1622. stood on a Hill, and render'd this place one of the strongest Holds of Europe; but it was rais'd together with the other Fortifications in 1660. The City of Orange is the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Arles, and is also adorned with a University, which Raymond V. founded, A. D. 1265. and a Parliament established by William of Avalon, 1470. but the French King suppress'd the latter in 1687. and changed it into a Vigourie, under the Jurisdiction of the Parliament of Aix.

The Principality of Orange was convey'd by Marriage to John de Chalons of the Illustrious Family of Burgundy, who in the year 1475. became absolute Prince of Orange, and was succeeded in it by William, John, and Philibert his Descendants, the last of whom left an only Sister, married to Hony Earl of Nassaw, A. 1515. and had Issue Rene of Nassaw, who was Adopted by Philibert, and succeeded him in this Estate, from whom is descended his present Majesty of Great Britain.

The Island of MARTEGUES, or Martigues, Maritima Colonia, lies a little to the West of Marseille, and is dignified with the Title of a Principality, and called by some the Venice of France. It is divided into three Parts, viz. Jonquierys, L'Isle, and Forrieres, having a capacious and safe Harbour at the Mouth of the Gulph, named the Bay of Martigues, the Town being situate on the Lake of Berre, from whence divers deep Channels have been cut to make a Communication with the Sea at the distance of a large quarter of a League. Barks of the largest size pass through these Ditches, to the great advantage of Merchants; and the Towns are joined together by Bridges. The Inhabitants are very expert in sailing on the Mediterranean, and admirable Fishermen, for they take vast quantities of all sorts of Fish in certain Huts made for that purpose of Reeds, or Seaweed, and termed Bourdigours. This Town hath been possessed by different Lords, especially the Viscounts of Marseille, and Counts of Provence; but at length Frances of Lorrain Dutchess of Merceux, Estampes, and Pontbierre, as also Princess of Martigues, brought it to the House of Vendome, by her Marriage with Cesar Duke of Vendome, the Natural Son of King Henry IV. &c.

The Islands of STOCHAES, or of HYERES, are so called as lying over against the Town of this name, between the Gulph of Grimeur to the E. and Thoulon to the W. Among these there are three principal, viz. The Island of Levant, or of Titan, in Latin Hypæa, toward the East; that of Portocros in the midst; and that of Portquerolles to the West: Near to the former are also situated two other small Islands, viz. Ribaudon and Ribaudas, by the Ancients called Stritium and Phoenice on the Coasts between the Promontory or Cape of Hyeres to the North, and the Isle of Portocros to the South, besides those of Tele de Can, Langoustier, &c. In the time of Cassianus, these Islands were inhabited only by Monks; and there were some of the Cistercian Order under the Popedom of Innocent III.

The Islands of LERINS, Insule Lerinenses, are two in number, and lye over against Cannes near Antibes. The former called in Latin Lero, and commonly S. Margueret, from a Chappel dedicated to this Saint, is three quarters of a League long, and one broad, being defended with five Forts and a Citadel, lately fortified. The other of S. Honoratus Lorina, aut Planatia, is distant about two Leagues from Antibes to the South, and five from Fregus to the East, taking its name from that Saint, who founded a famous Monastery therein, A. C. 375. and was afterward ordained Archbishop of Arles. This Solitary Place hath been for many Ages the Seminary of the Prelates of Provence, and the neighbouring Churches, having brought forth 12 Archbishops, as many Bishops, 10 Abbots, four Monks reckon'd among the Confessors, and 105 Martyrs, together with a great number of other Illustrious Personages. The Spaniards surpriz'd these Islands in the Month of September, A. D. 1635. and cut down the Forest of Pine-Trees that afforded a delightful shade during the excessive heat of the Sun, and stood in rows, at the end whereof were certain Oratories in honour of Abbots and Monks, who had been canonized for Saints. But those Spanish Forces were entirely expell'd in the Month of May, 1637.

CHATEAU-D'IF, Castrum Iphijum, is a small Island or rather Rock, encompassed on all sides with the Sea, and defended by a strong Fortrefs, distant about a quarter of a League from Marseilles, where the very large Vessels ride at Anchor, that cannot sail into the Port for want of a sufficient depth of Water at its entrance. There are also some other Islands at the mouth of the River Rhone, but nothing very considerable is to be found in them,

The Governour-General of Provence hath under him one Lieutenant-General, three Grand Seneschals, of Aix, Marseille, and of Arles; and particular Governours in Thoulon, Marseilles, in the Island of Chateau-d'if. In the Islands of St. Margueret and Honoratus; in Antibe, &c.

CHAP. XIII.

DAUPHINE, Delphinatus.

THIS Province is bounded on the North by Bresse and Savoie, on the East by Piemont and the Alps, on the South by Provence, and on the West by the Rhone, which separates it from Lyonnois. It is situated between the 44 deg. and the 45 deg. 30 min. of Latitude; as also between the 22 deg. 40 min. and the 26 deg. of Longitude, comprehending from South to North in the broadest part, about 100 miles, but in other parts, not above half so much, and 103 from West to East.

Dauphine, was conquer'd by the Romans, under whom it was at first part of Narbonensis, and afterwards upon the Division of Gaul by Constantine, it compos'd the Viemensis. In the declension of the Roman Empire the Burgundians got possession of it, who were again beaten out by the French, and by them it was made part of the Kingdom of Arles; and at length became subject to the Emperors of Germany; but during the Differences between the Pope and the Emperor Henry IV. it was usurp'd by Guigne the Fat, Earl of Grisinanden, A. 1100. whole Successor gave it the name of Dauphine, either as some say, from the name of his Wife, or as others, from the Dolphin born in his Arms. In this Family the Sovereignty of this Province continued till the time of Imbert, or Humber II, Count Dauphin of Viennois, who having lost one Son in the Battle of Crecy, and unfortunately let fall his youngest out of a Window, whereof he died; perceiving also that Amedeo, Count of Savoie, his irreconcilable Enemy, insulted over his Calamity, fold his Country to Philip of Valois, King of France, for the Sum of 100000 Florins of Gold, on condition that the eldest Son of the French Monarchs should bear the Name of the Dauphine, and that his Arms should be quarter'd with those of Dauphine; which Contract was ratified at Bois de Vincennes, near Paris, on the 23d day of April, 1343. and Charles V. the Grandson of the said Philip was first stiled the Dauphine, in 1350; and the same Custom hath been ever since observed, and Dauphine continued part of the Kingdom of France.

Tho' this Province be full of Mountains and Hills, it is nevertheless very fruitful in Wheat, Rye, Oats, and Barley, affording also good Pastures for the feeding of all sorts of Cattle, and the Forests yield good store of Game, as Stags, Fallow-Deer, Roe-Bucks, wild Boars, wild Goats, and Hares, together with Partridges, Pheasants, Heathcocks, Plovers, &c. Some Mines of Iron, Lead, and other Metals are found here. In this Province are to be seen three notable Abbies, being the chief of so many different Orders, namely that of S. Antony, that of S. Ruf, and the great Charter-house, as also four Wonders, viz. The inaccessible Mountain, the Tower without Poison, the Pit of Saffnage, which foretells the Pleny or Dearth of the Year, by a quantity of Water found therein at certain times; and the Fountain or Quick-Spring near Grenoble, that appears covered with Flames and boiling up in great Bubbles, yet never hot: There is also a certain Hole or Cavern near Nions, from whence riseth up a Wind, which can scarcely be felt by those Persons that come near it, and yet blows violently when one stands at the distance of 20 or 30 paces. The Principal Rivers of Dauphine, are the Isere, which receives the Drac below Grenoble; the Durance that takes its rise and runs into Provence; the Drome, the Stream whereof is extremely rapid and dangerous; the Buelch, the Romance, the Dia, &c. The whole Province is usually divided into the Upper to the East, and the Lower to the West, which are again subdivided according to the following Table.

Dauphin divided into 2 Parts.	The Upper in 6.	{ Graisivauden . Diois . The Baronies. Gapencois . Amburnois . Brianconnois .	} Grenoble , Bish. Die , Bish. Buy . Gap , Bish. Amburn , Arch-bish. Briancon .

GRAISIVAUDAN, Gratiopolitanus Ager, is a Valley which was heretofore inhabited by the Tricollores, and lies between the Rivers Isere and Drac, bounded on the North by Savoie, properly so called, on the East by the Valley of Maurienne and Brianconnois, on the South by Gapencois, and on the West by Diois and Vennois. The places of Note, are these, viz.

Grenoble, Bish. La Grande Chartreuse.

Grenoble, Gratiopolis, olim Accusio and Cular, is situated on the Confluence of Isere and Drac, and on the foot of the Mountains, being distant 55 miles from Lyons to the South-east, about 80 from Geneva to the South, 110 from Aix, and 60 from the Frontiers of Languedoc to the North, and 40 from the River Rhone to the East. Maximian who was sent into France by Dioclesian, fortified this Place; and being afterward enlarged by the Emperor Gratian, it took the name of Gratiopolis, which in time melted into that of Grenoble. It is a large well-built City, and adorn'd with divers fair Churches. The Episcopal See depends on the Metropolitan of Vienne, and its most ancient Bishop was S. Dominus, who assisted in the Council of Aquitain, A. C. 381. His Successors at present assume the Title of Princes of Grenoble, by reason of the Donations which the Lords of the Country have made to them at several times. King Lewis XI. erected the Dolphinal Council of this Province into a Parliament, in the year 1453; Moreover a University was formerly established here, but Valence now enjoys that Honour at present: Besides the Parliament above-mentioned, mentioned, here is a Chamber of Accompts, a Treasury-Office, a Court of Generality, and a Bailiage. The Grand Charter-house, chief of the Carthusian Order, stands three Leagues from this City on one side; and the boiling Spring is at the like distance on the other.

DIOIS, lies on the South of Grafsaudan between Valentinois on the West, Provence on the South, and Gapencois on the East. The chief City DIE, Dia, Dea Vocontiorum, aut Dea Augusta of the Ancients, is seated on the foot of the Mountains and the Banks of the Rivulet Drome, at the distance of 30 miles from Grenoble to the South, 26 from Valence to the East, and 40 from Gap to the West. It was formerly a considerable City with the Title of an Earldom, and had five fine Churches, and a good Citadel, but through the Wars of the Lombards formerly, and the Civil Wars lately, they have been almost destroyed; however it is still the See of a Billop.

The BARONIES or Baronia, lie on the Frontiers of Provence; whereof the chief Towns are,

Le Buys, Nions.

Buys or Buyz, Buxium, is a small Town standing upon the River Louvezze, on the Frontiers of Provence, 30 miles from Dye to the South.

Nions, Neomagus, stands on the Frontiers of Provence and the side of the River Eyzues, about 28 miles from Dye to the South, five or six from the Frontiers of Provence, and 20 from the River Rhone to the East. It had a Castle, but it is destroy'd, and the Town is not very considerable.

GAPENCOIS, is extended toward the River Isere, between Grafsaudan on the North, Diois on the West, and Ambrunois on the East, comprehending the chief Town Gap, Vapincum, Vapingum, & Vapinquum, is a large City and well fortified with a strong Citadel, besides the Fort of Puymore, very near it on a rising Ground, scarcely two Leagues from the River Isere, 35 miles from Dye, and 65 from the Rhone to the East, not above 10 from the Frontiers of Provence, and 45 from Grenoble to the South-east. Its Episcopal See depends on the Metropolitan of Aix. The Cathedral Church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The Bishop assumes the Title of a Count, and bears in his Coat of Arms a Sword and Cross in Pail. The City of Gap hath been often Taken and Recovered by the Popish and Protestant Parties during the Civil Wars of France.

AMBRUNOIS, is bounded on the North by Brianconnois, on the West by Gapencois, on the East by Piemont, and on the South by part of Piemont and Provence. The chief City

AMBRUN or EMBRUN, Ebrodunum, & Eborudunum, is seated on a steep Rock in the Confines of Provence, near the River Durance and the Mountains, 15 miles from Gap to the East, 20 from Briancon, and 30 from the Frontiers of Savoy to the West, 55 from Grenoble, and 110 from Lyon to the South-east. It is a City of small compass, nevertheless well fortified and honour'd with the Title of a Metropolitan See and a Bailiage, the Archbishop sharing its Jurisdiction with the King. The Judges of the Bailiage are alternative. This City was honour'd with great Priviledges by the Romans; for some time subject to the Counts of Forcalquier, and hath since sustained many Revolutions. The Protestants took it in 1533, and found vast wealth there. In the late War, viz. A. 1692, the Duke of Savoy besieged, and in 10 days took it: But quitted it soon after.

BRIANCONNOIS, lyes near the Spring-head of the River Durance, between Piedmont on the East, the Valley of Mauricme in Savoy on the North, Grafsaudan on the West, and Ambrunois on the South.

The chief Towns are { Briancon,
 Perouse,
 Chateau-Dauphine.

Briancon, Brigantium, is remarkable for its situation on the highest Ground (as it is supposed) of Europe, being the side of a steep Rock, on which stands a Castle near the Alps, almost in the midt between Susa, a Town of Piedmont and Ambrun, at the distance of eight leagues from the former, and seven from the other. It gives name to this Country, and is the Seat of a Bailiage. A little below this City two Brooks intermix, one of which springs out of Mount Genevre, and is called Dure, the other comes from the Valley of Meneriver and Chantemerle, and is named Ance. These two Rivulers are the Sources of the River Durance, and form its Name. About two Leagues from this Town there is a Passage cut through the middle of a Rock, which as it was a stupenduous Labour, gives occasion to many Conjectures concerning the performance of it. Some impute it to Julius, others to Hannibal, &c.

Perouse, Perusa, stands on the River Cluso, and defended by a Fortrefs, near the Frontiers of Piedmont. This Town hath impos'd its Name on the adjacent Valley, and formerly belonged to the Duke of Savoy, but was granted to the French by Treaty A. 1631.

Chateau-Dauphin, Castrum Delphini, is a Town built at the foot of the Alps, on the very Confines of Piedmont, 30 miles from Ambrun to the West. It formerly bore the name of Eusebio, Fanum S. Eusebii, and constituted a part of the Marquitate of Saluces, but was granted to the French Kings, in 1375. Which finishes our Account of the Upper or Eastern part of Dauphine; what remains are the three small Provinces that lye in the West on the River Rhone.

VIENNOIS, Viennensis Traclus, is the North-west part of Dauphine, and lying between the Rivers Rhone and Isere, was anciently call'd the Island of the Allobroges; it is bounded on the East by Grafsaudan, on the South by Valentinois, on the West by the Rhone, which divides it from Bugey. This County was sometime govern'd by its own Princes, under the name of Dauphins of Viennois, but came to the Crown of France with the rest of Dauphine. The chief City

VIENNE, Vienna aut Vienna Allobrogum, is situated at the Foot of a Mountain, on the River Rhone, which there receives the Gere, at the distance of 40 miles from Grenoble to the West, 20 from Lyon to the South, and 35 from Valence to the North. It hath been a very large and famous City, but at present is not above the fourth Part of its former extent, and and both its ancient Fortresses, nam'd Pijet and Bastees, are now destroy'd. It was founded (as it is generally believ'd) by the Allobroges, and afterward became a Colony of the Romans, who adorn'd it with a Palace, and Amphitheatre, and divers other magnificent Works, the Ruins whereof are still to be seen. After the Decay of their Empire, this City was sometime the Capital of the Kingdom of Burgundy, and the Place of Residence of those Princes; and since hath been subject to many Masters, and suffer'd much by the Wars. However it is the See of an Archbishop, who hath the Title of the Grand Primate of the Primates of France and (as they say) S. Crescens, the Disciple of S. Paul, was its first Prelate. The Cathedral of S. Maurice is a stately Pile of Building, as also are some other Churches and publick Edifices. The Inhabitants are very expert in making divers sorts of Manufactures, particularly Plates of Iron and Steel, Paper, &c. by means of certain Mills and Engines upon the River Gere.

VALENTINOIS, lies between Viennois on the North, the River Rhone on the West, Tricastin on the South, and Diois on the East. This Country at present bears the Title of a Dutchy, and was granted, together with Diois, to Charles VII. then only Dauphin of France by Lewis of Poitou, its last Count or Earl, on the 22d of June, 1419. The Principal Towns arc, Valence, Bish. Montelimar.

Valence, Valentia, is seated on the River Rhone, a little below its confluence with the Isere, over-against the Province of Vivarais, about 30 miles from Vienne to the South, 60 from Avignon to the North, 25 from Die to the West, and 40 from Grenoble to the South-west. It is a Place of great antiquity, having been some time a Roman Colony; and is at present a fair reasonable large and well-built City, divided into the City and Town, defended by a strong Citadel, and dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Vienne, the Bishop bearing the Title of a Count. The Cathedral Church of S. Apollinaris, one of its Prelates was at first dedicated to St. Stephen. There is also another Collegiate Church, and the Abbey of S. Ruf the chief of that Order, together with a great number of other Monasteries and Convents; besides a famous University, in which are four Professors of the Civil and Canon Law: It was first founded by King Lewis XI. A. D. 1452. and afterward that of Grenoble was incorporated into it under the Reign of Charles IX. Here is also a Presidial Court.

Montelimar, Amarorum Mons, Mons Ademari, seu Montilium Adomari, a Town formerly well fortified, and sustained divers Sieges during the Civil War; stands on a Hill at the distance of half a League from the River Rhone, 25 miles from Valence.

TRICASTIN, Tricastinus Ager, is extended between Valentinois on the North, and the County of Avignon on the South. The chief City whereof is

S. Paul-Trois-Châteaux, Augusta Tricastinorum & Fanum S. Pauli Tricastinorum, olim Senomagus, aut Neomagus, the Capital City of the small Territory of Tricastin, took its modern Name from S. Paul one of its Prelates, and is situated on a rising Ground in the Confines of Provence, scarcely one League from the River Rhone, 12 miles from Montelimar to the South, and as many from Orange to the North. Its Episcopal See was formerly subject to the Metropolitan of Vienne, but now depends on that of Aries, and the Bishop is also stiled a Count, sharing the Civil Jurisdiction with the King; so that the respective Judges keep their Courts alternately in the Bailiages. The Protestant Party made themselves Masters of this City during the Civil Wars, and retain'd it in their Power near 50 years.

Dauphine hath a Governour-General, a Lieutenant-General, a Seneschal, and a Commandant in the Province, three Bailiffs and particular Governours in Grenoble, Vienne, Ambrun, Valence, Montelimar, the Castle of Briancon, Pignerol, &c.

CHAP. XIV.

LORRAINE, Lotheringia.

BESIDES the 12 Principal Provinces or Governments of France, already described, there are other Provinces and Towns lying on the Frontiers of Italy, Germany and Flanders, made subject to, and reckon'd part of this Kingdom; an account whereof is given in the Description of every particular Country where they are situated, excepting Lorraine, which although it be not compriz'd within the aforesaid 12 large Governments, nevertheless constituted a Portion of that Country which is commonly called France, till by the late Treaty of Ryswick it was restored to the present Duke.

The Dutchy of LORRAINE and BAR is bound on the North by Luxemburg and the Palatinate, on the East by Alsatia, on the South by the County of Burgundy, and on the West by Champagne, being extended from the 48th Degree to the 49th Degree 50

Minutes of Latitude, and from the 23d Degree to the 25th Degree 50 Minutes of Longitude; extending from North to South 100 miles, and about the same from East to West. The whole Country is divided into three principal Parts, viz.

Lorraine divided into 3 Parts, viz. { The Dutchy of Lorraine, properly so called, in 3 Bailiages, viz. } The Bailiage of Nancy, Chief Town, Idem. } The Bail of Vange, Mirecourt. } The Bailiage of Vandrevange, Idem.

The Dutchy of Bar-le-duc.

Three Bishopricks not properly within Lorraine. } Bishopricks of Mets, } Bishopricks of Toul, } Bishopricks of Verdun. } The

The Bailliage of NANCY, lies in the midst of the Province of Lorraine, and comprehends these considerable Towns, &c. viz.

Nancy, S. Nicolas, Marsel.

NANCY, Nanceium, the Capital City of Lorraine, is situated in the midst of the Province, near the River Meurte, 155 miles directly East from Paris, and 20 from the River Meuse, 45 from the Borders of Alsace, and 60 from Strasburgh to the West, 30 from Metz to the South, and 50 from the Confines of Franche Comte to the North. It is divided into the Upper or Old Town, wherein stands the Duke's Palace and Magazine, and the Lower and New Town, which is of larger extent, and contains many very fine Buildings, taken into the City in 1587, having been before only a Suburbs. It is also adorned with divers Churches and Monasteries, a College of Jesuits and 3 Gates. A Chamber of Accounts and a Seneschal's Court. This Town, or rather this City, hath been often taken, and sustained many Sieges, for Charles the last Duke of Burgundy, took it in 1475, from René Duke of Lorraine; who regained it the next year: At which Charles being enraged, immediately besieged it, but lost both his Life and the Battle on the 5th day of January following. Nancy was extremely well fortified in 1587. during the Civil Wars: Nevertheless Lewis XIII. made himself Master of it in 1633. and its Fortifications were destroyed by the present French King in 1661: But they have been since repaired with great advantage, and now by the Treaty are to be demolished.

S. Nicolas, Fanum S. Nicolai, is a Burrough very pleasantly seated on the River Meurte, two Leagues above Nancy to the South, and famous for the Concourse of People resorting thither to pay their Devotions at the Shrine of S. Nicolas, sometime Bishop of Myra in Lycia, who vigorously opposed the Errors of Arius, and assisted in the General Council of Nice, A. C. 325.

Vaudemont, Vadanus Mons & Valdemontium, stands on a Hill between the Meuse and Moselle, 26 miles from Nancy to the South. It is a small Town, nevertheless dignified with the Title of a Principality, and fenced with a strong Castle, &c.

Marsal, Marsalium, is a small bur well fortified Town, built on the Banks of the Brook Selle, amidst the Marishes, at the distance of about 20 miles from Nancy to the East.

The Bailliage of VAUGE, is extended on the South side of the Province of Lorraine, and comprehends these Principal Towns, viz.

Mirecourt, Cap. Remiremont, Fontenay.

Mirecourt, Mirecurtium, a small Town, but the chief of the Bailliage; is situated near Mount Vauge, from whence the Bailliage hath its Name, on the Rivulet of Maiden, which falls into the Moselle at Chaligny: It is distant 25 miles from Nancy to the South, about as many from Toul, and 15 from the Confines of Champagne to the East.

Remiremont, Romaricus Mons, Romarici Mons, & Romaricum Castrum, olim Avendi Castrum, is situated on the River Moselle, at the Foot of Mount Vauge, and remarkable on the account of a famous Abby of Nuns there. It is distant only one League from the Frontiers of the Franche-Comte, and 30 from Mirecourt, and 50 from Nancy to the South-east.

Fontenay or Vontenay, Fontenecum, a small Village, seated on the Frontiers of the Franche-Comte, about 25 miles South from Mirecourt; famous on account of a fierce Battle fought near it, with a very great Slaughter on all sides, between the Emperor Lotharius, Lewis King of Germany, and Charles the Bald, King of France, all three Brothers, A. C. 841.

The Bailliage of VAUDREVANGE, Bellu-viatus Valdesfingie, takes up the North-east part of Lorraine, and contains these Places of chief note, viz.

- Sarre-Louis, } Dieuse,
- Vaudrevange, } Saralbe,
- Sirk, } Putlange, &c.

Sarre-Louis, Saravum Ludovici, is a very strong Fortress, lately built on the River Sarre, about 2 or 3 miles above Vaudrevange, and so called in honour of the present French King Lewis XIV. who built it, and established therein a Presidial Court of a large Jurisdiction. It is distant 12 Leagues from Triers, 4 from Sarbruck, and 7 from Hamburg, &c.

Vaudrevange, Velderlinga, the Chief Town of the Bailliage of the same Name, is likewise seated on the Sarre, 30 miles from Metz to the North-east, as many from Thionville, and somewhat more from Deux-Ponts. It was almost ruin'd during the last German War, but hath been since well repaired.

Sirk or Sircgues, Sirca & Sericum, is watered with the Streams of the River Moselle, and defended by a strong Fort, built near it on a Hill, and the very borders of the Duchy of Luxemburg, about 20 miles from Metz to the North, 15 from Triers, and as many from Luxemburg to the East. This Town hath been in the Possession of the French King ever since the year 1643.

The Duchy of BAR or BARRAIS, Barentis Ducatus, is extended on both sides of the River Meuse, from the Country of Burgundy to the Duchy of Luxemburg, between Lorraine and Champaign. This Country is divided into 6 Bailliages, viz.

- The Bailliage of Bar-le-duc, } The Bailliage of S. Michel or Miché.
- The Bailliage of Grand-Receus, } The Bailliage of Pont-a-Mousson.
- The Bailliage of Bis-signe or de-la-Mothe, } The Bailliage of Argonne, or Clermont, &c.

Bar-le-Duc, Barrodocum, stands on a rising Ground, near the Banks of the River Ornain, and hath a strong Castle for its Defence, at the distance of about 40 miles from Nancy to the West, and 5 or 6 from the Borders of Champagne: This Town being the Capital of the Duchy of Bar, is fair and well-built, and is subject to the Duke of Lorraine.

S. Michel, Fanum S. Michaelis, is situated on the East side of the River Meuse, almost in the midst between Toul to the South, and Verdun to the North, and 20 miles from Bar-le-duc to the East. It hath been for some time a very considerable Town, and is at present the Seat of a Parliament of Barrois. It was taken by Lewis XIII. in the month of June, A. D. 1632, and afterward resigned to the Duke

Duke of Lorraine by the Treaty of Livardin, nevertheless the same French King made himself Master of it a second time in 1633, when the Inhabitants revolted against his Garrison, but were at length constrained to surrender on discretion, but now with the rest of the Dutchy restored to the Duke.

Pont-a-Mousson, Muffipontum, is seated on both sides of the River Moselle, near the Ruins of the Castle of Mousson, from whence it took its Name, at the distance of 17 or 18 miles from Nancy to the North, toward Mets, and almost as many from S. Michael to the East. It is a very fair Town, but destitute of Walls, dignified with the Title of a Marquisate, and adorn'd with two Abbies, divers stately Churches; and a University founded in the year 1573, by Charles Cardinal of Lorraine, who gave it to the Jesuits for the Teaching of Divinity, Philosophy, and the Learned Languages: Afterward the Duke of Lorraine establish'd certain Professors of Law and Physick, and Pope Gregory XIII. added a Seminary for the Scotch Nation.

The THREE BISHOPRICKS, Tres Episcopatus, form, as it were, an equilateral Triangle in the Northern and Western part of Lorraine: The chief Cities

METS, Metce & Metensis Urbs, olim Divodurum & Mediomatrices, is seated on the confluence of the Rivers Seille and Moselle, in a very fruitful Country at the distance of 30 miles from Nancy to the North, 20 from Thionville to the South, 30 from Verdun to the East, and 150 East from Paris. It was heretofore the Metropolis of the ancient People named Mediomatrices, as also afterward of the Kingdom of Austrasia, under the first Race of the French Monarchs; and is at present the Capital City of the Country of Messin, dignified with an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Trier. The Bishop is styled Prince of the Empire, and the Cathedral dedicated to S. Stephen, is an ancient and noble Pile of Building, wherein are to be seen many Curiosities, particularly a Font, made of one entire piece of Porphyry, 10 foot long.

The whole Diocess is divided into 4 Archdeacons, comprehending 623 Parishes, whereof 16 are included within the Walls of Mets. There are also 7 Abbies for Nuns, divers other Religious Houses, a College of Jesuits, &c. This City had been for a long time Imperial and Free, until it was taken in 1552 by the Constable of Montmorency, General under the French King Henry II. who caused it to be fortified with a Citadel and other Bulwarks; by which it was made so strong, that the Emperor Charles V. having invest'd it in the same year, was compell'd to raise the Siege. This City was the Seat of a Bailiage, and of a Court of Parliament, established by Lewis XIII.

TOUL, Tullum, aut Tullum Leucorum, is seated on the River Moselle, in a fertile Soil, as are all the Towns of this Province, at the distance of 30 miles from Mets to the South, 12 from Nancy to the West, and 27 from Bar-le-duc to the East. It was constituted an Imperial and Free City by the Emperor Henry I. but fell into the Possession of the French Kings in 1552. It is the Capital of the Country of the same Name, the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Triers, and the Seat of a Bailiwick: Its Diocess is very large, and contains a great number of Abbies, &c.

VERDUN, Verodunum & Virodunum, is a very ancient City, and one of the largest of Lorraine, is seated upon the River Meuse, which there dividing its Stream, forms divers small Islands, which do not a little contribute to its Advantage: It is fortified with a Citadel and other Regular Works, and honour'd with an Episcopal See, depending on the Metropolitan of Triers. The Cathedral Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, hath a considerable Chapter, from whence have proceeded divers illustrious Prelates, who are usually stiled Counts of Verdun, and Princes of the Sacred Empire. This City hath been also formerly Imperial and Free, but was taken by the French, together with some others, under Henry II. A. D. 1552, and is at present the Capital of a Bailiage.

THE Low Countries: Or, Netherlands.

Of the NETHERLANDS in general.

THE ancient Name of these Countries was Belgium, whether from the old Dutch word Balgen to Fight, or from the City Belgium, which some say was Baray in Hainault, others Beau- vais in Picardy, is left undecided; severai Writers pleading hard for both. It was also reckon'd part of Germany, and call'd Inferior, for the same reason as now Low Countries and Netherlands, viz. from their low situation situation: And indeed so very low are the Maritime Provinces, that the Grounds are in many places even lower than the Surface of the Neighbouring Sea, which the Inhabitants confine and secure their Lands from, by Arong Banks, made with great Labour and Ingenuity and maintained at as great Expence. It was also called Flanders, because that Province formerly was the Great Mart of Europe, and resorted to by all Nations for Traffick; and therefore because all these Provinces were subject to the same Lord, the particular name of this chief One, was, by Strangers, made to intimate the Whole; and for the same reason, since the Erection of the Republick of the Confederate Provinces, Holland being the principal of them, its name serves to denote, in general, the Countries of the Confederate States.

Its ancient Bounds were very large, for not only all the present Netherlands, but the parts of France next them, as Picardy, Champaign &c. and (according to some Authors) Lorrain, Berg, Juliers, Cleeve, together with the Bishopricks of Mentz, Cologne, and Triers, were all included in the general name of Belgium. The present Limits are the British Ocean on the North, the same Ocean and Picardy on the West, the rest of Picardy with Champaign and Lorrain on the South, and the Bishoprick of Triers, the Duchies of Juliers and Cleeve, the Bishoprick of Münster and the County of Emden or East Frizeland on the East: The whole Country, according to Guicciardini, is one Thousand Italian miles in Circumference.

It is situated between the 49 Deg. 20. Min. and the 53 Deg. 30 Min. of Latitude, and between the 20 Deg. and 24 Deg. 30 Min. of Longitude.

The chief RIVERS are these, 1. The Rhine, which rises in the Country of the Grisons, and after it hath passed through Germany, entereth into these Countries at Schenkenchans on the Borders of Gelderland; at which place it is divided into two Channels, whereof that which retains its name runs by Arnhem and Wageningen in Guelderland, and Rheenen in Utrecht to Dufter de Wyck, where it meets and mixes with the Leck, a small Chanel only that runs toward Utrecht, bearing the name of the Rhine, which passing on from Utrecht runs by Warden and Leyden, not far from which last place it is lost in the Sandhills, which choak up the mouth whereby it formerly run into the Sea. 2. The Leck, which receives the Waters of the Rhine at Dufter de Wyck, runs by Culenborch, Viannen, Schoonhoven, and at the Village Crimpen falls into the Meruwe, which falls into the Maes not far above Rotterdam. 3. The Waal, which is the other Branch of the Rhine, beginning at Schenkenchans, flows by Nimeguen, Tiel, and Bommel, to Worcum, where it is joyn'd with the Maes, and passing by Gorcum receives the Lingre, and takes the name of Meruwe, otherwise called the new Maes, which passing by Dort receives the Leck above mentioned, and the smaller Issel, and flows in a broad Stream to Rotterdam, where it loses all other names and is called the Maes. 4. The Maes, called also Mose and Menſe, rises in Mount Vogesus in Burgundy, and passing by Verdun and Charleville, flows to Namur, where it receives the Sambre; thence passes by Liege, Maestricht, Venlo, and Grave, to Worcum, mixes with the Waal as above-said, and both together run to Dort, where the Stream is divided and makes an Island; but are again united a little below Vlaerdigen, and falls into the Ocean at the Briel. 5. The Scheldt, called in French l'Escaut, hath its source in Picardy and runs by Cambrai, La- lenciennes and Oudenarde, to Ghent, whence it runneth Eastward it passes by Oudenarde, and at Ryplmonde receives the Demer, besides many other smaller Rivers in its passage, and then flows Northward to Antwerp, where it makes a very capacious Harbour; and a few leagues below divides it self into two large Branches, one whereof called the Wester Scheldt or the Hout, passes betwixt Flanders and Zealand, and falls into the Sea at Flushing; the other is called Ooster Scheldt, and runs out of the main Stream at Souvroiet, passing by Bergen op Zoom, and between Tolen and South Beveland, and thence by the Shoar of the Island Schouwen falls into the Sea with a violent Current. 6. The Issel, from whence the Province lying beyond it is called Overissel, springs in Wissphasia, and running through Zupphen passes to Doesburgh, where it is exceedingly augmented by a Chanel cut from the Rhine, by the order of Drusus Nero, and thence in a great Stream flows by Deventer to Campen, parting the Provinces of Gelderland and Overissel, and falls into the Zuyder Sea.

There is another small River nam'd the Issel, which comes out of the Leck near Viannen, and running towards Rotterdam falls into the Maes. Many other Rivers water these Countries, as the Sambre, Lys, Aa, Demer, Scarp, Nethe, Dele, Sinne, Dendre, Roor, &c. the course whereof the Reader will discover in the following description of the Country.

There can be very little said of the MOUNTAINS of these Countries; for except some few rising Grounds in those parts lying towards Germany, there is no Hill to be seen: On the contrary, all those Provinces towards the Sea lie so very low, that large parts of them have been many times overflow'd by the Eruptions of the Sea, notwithstanding the strong Banks that the Inhabitants maintain almost all along the Coasts of Groningen, Friesland, North Holland, Zealand, &c.

These Countries were formerly very desolate, and for want of Cultivating, the Grounds were either turn'd to Marhes or over-run with FOREST; of which last that of Ardome is mentioned by Cesar as the largest in Belgium, and was indeed of vast Extent; for, according to Cluverius, it reached from Coblenz in the Bishoprick of Trier, as far as the farthest Borders of Artois, which is 220 miles; and in breadth, to the Sea-shore and the River Waal, near 150 miles. There are still large Remains of it on the Borders of Luxemburgh, and in the Bishoprick of Liege, as also about Mentz, Triers, Wormes, &c. Many other large Forests are found here, as the Forests and Woods of Soigny and Meerdale in Brabant; Niep in Flanders; Podberg, Faigne, Mormaut, and S. Anand in Haynault; with many others which are mentioned by Guicciardini to be very large, but have been retrench'd since his time by the consumption of the Wood for Fuel, and the Industry of the Inhabitants in Cultivating the Land.

The AIR is reckon'd wholesome enough, but is subject to very thick Fogs in Winter, through the moistness of the Country, which would be very Noxious if it were not for the dry Easterly Winds which blowing off a long Continent for two or three Months every Year, clear the Air, and cause very sharp Frosts during the Months of January, February, and March, by which means the Ports, Rivers, and Canals, are almost always shut up with Ice during those Months.

The SOIL is generally Fertile; but because different in the several parts, the Reader is refer'd to the particular Accounts of the Productions of each of each Province, in the following Description of them.

The COMMODITIES of these Countries are their Manufactures; for their Productions are very few: Of these, from the Spanish Netherlands comes Linnen-Cloth, Tapetries, Worsted-Stuffs, Chamlets, Wrought-Silks, Lace, &c. and from Holland (besides most of the same Manufactures) they export all sorts of East-India Goods, Fish, and the Commodities of Germany, as Renish Wines, &c.

Concerning the INHABITANTS, Cæsar, in the beginning of his Comenatries, says, — Horum omnium fortissimi sunt Belgæ, &c. "That they were the most Valiant of all the Gauls, partly because they were far distant and unacquainted with the Civility of the Roman Provinces, and very little visited by Merchants, who import such things as serve to effeminate the minds of Men; but chiefly, because by their Neighbourhood to the Germans, they were at continual Wars with them. Many other Authors speak of the Martial Temper of these People, which their long and obstinate War with the Spaniards in the last Age, is a sufficient proof of. But their Industry is more conspicuous by the vast Traffick they have for many Ages past maintain'd with all Nations of Europe, and more remote parts of the World: Their Ingenuity hath also appear'd in the Invention of many useful Arts; such as the making of Tapettry, call'd Arras, from that City where it was invented; the making of Cloth and Worsted-Stuffs, which we learn'd of the Flemings; and the Perfection, if not Invention, of the Mariner's Compass, is by many Authors attributed to them: Many other ingenious and curious Arts acknowledge the Netherlands for their Inventors; to omit that of Printing, which Hærclem puts in a good Claim to, but is oppos'd in it by Mentz in Germany. But notwithstanding these Inventions and the Ingenuity of many particular Men among them, it must be allow'd in general, That they are Industrious rather than Ingenious. They will persevere and plod on in a Road through many Difficulties, but their Apprehensions are dull, and they are not easily perswaded to leave their old way, tho' a new one be apparently more convenient. They are much addicted to Drunkenness, but are not very delicate in their Food. Their Habits and Houles are exceeding Neat and Cleanly, especially the later, to Superstition.

The Dutch TONGUE is a Dialect of the German, but with many French and Latin words intermix'd: It is a harsh, clownish and unpleasant Speech; and hath nothing that can recommend it to Strangers. In the French Flanders, Hainault and Luxemburg, the French Language is generally understood, and that call'd Walloon, which is a corruption of French with Dutch, is usually spoken there. Persons of the best Rank all over the Netherlands, understand and speak French, as do also many of the common People.

The RELIGION of these Countries in general was that of the Roman Church, before the Reformation, which prevailing here, the King of Spain, about the year 1566. set up the Inquisition, and gave Orders for the punishing, even to Death, all those whom the Church of Rome declar'd Hereticks, which gave great discontent to the People, and was the first occasion of the Disturbance and bloody War, which ended in the total alienation of seven of the Provinces. At present the Romish Religion only is profess'd in the Spanish Provinces; and in Holland that of Calvin is predominant, but with Toleration of all others.

The convenient situation of Flanders in the mid-way between France, Spain and Portugal on one side, and Denmark, Sweedan and the Hanse Towns on the other, together with Germany behind and England before it, may be esteem'd the chief reason of the vast TRADE that was some Ages since establish'd there; which was so great, that this Province might be accounted the grand Market-place of Europe: For in its City of Bruges the Merchants of all Nations had their Factories, and great Magazines to lodge the native products of their respective Countries, which they here sold and exchange'd for those of other places. Of these Houles or Colleges there were no less than 17 belonging to these several Nations, viz. England, Scotland, France, Castile, Portugal, Navarre, Aragon, Catalonia, Biscay, the Hanse Towns, the Cities of Venice, Florence, Genoa, Lucca, Milan, &c. In which State the Trade continued at Bruges for many years, till about 1480. it began to decline and remove to Antwerp, partly because the Port of Slus and the River from thence, was narrow and inconvenient; and partly because of a War that disturb'd the Country hereabouts; whereas on the contrary the River Schelde, which leads to Antwerp, was large and commodious, and many Gentlemen upon occasion of the Wars between the King of France and the Emperor Charles V. having quitted the Villages and smaller Towns, retir'd with their Effects to Antwerp, built fine Houles there, and by their constant Residence, very much improv'd that City; but chiefly, because at Antwerp in 1503. the Portuguese fixed their Staple for the Spices and other Commodities of the East-Indies, which they brought from their new Conquest of Calicut; These and other Causes, drew the Merchants thither, and made it a Place of the greatest Trade of Europe, of which the Reader will find a more particular Account in our description of that City. But it lasted not there above 50 years; for the Civil War causing great Disorders, Antwerp was twice Plunder'd, and almost quite burnt down; and the Dutch Common-wealth, being Masters of Zeeoland, were able to stop the Passage of the Schelde, and impose what Duties they pleas'd upon the Ships passing to Antwerp, by which they made them put into their Ports; and besides the English and Dutch having found the way to the East-Indies, supplanted the Portuguese, and furnish'd Europe with the Commodities of those Countries: By all which means the Current of Trade was quite alter'd, and translated to London and Amsterdam, which are, at present, the two great Empories of Europe. And the Traffick of Flanders is now not considerable, except for their own Manufactures, which we have already mention'd.

Of the ancient State of the Netherlands is General.

THE greatest part of Belgium was Conquered by the Romans, and that part of it that lyes toward Gaul, continu'd under their Subjection till the declination of that Empire; after which the Franks were Masters of it, and in the French Monarchy it was part of their Kingdom of Metz or Austrasia. The Division of it into so many States, is deriv'd from the Earls of Ardenne, the Origine of whom was from the Sons of Clodion King of France, who being kept out of the Succession to that Kingdom, by Meroveus (as we have already shewn in our Account of the Kings of France) were forc'd, for their Safety to betake themselves to the most defensible places of the Forest of Ardenne, and the Countries on the Banks of the Mosselle, where they founded the two great Earldoms from thence denominated. That of Mosselle belongs to Germany, and therefore shall not be treated on here: This of Ardenne comprehended part of Flanders and Brabant, all Hainault, Namur, Limburg and Luxemburg, together with the Dukedom of Bouillon, (formerly a very large Country, containing the Bishoprick of Liege, &c.) These large Estates continu'd peaceably under the Earls of Ardenne for some time, till being grown powerful and great, they became the Envy of their Neighbours, and were therefore set upon by Dagobert King of Metz, and Son to Clotair II. King of France, who in Battel overcame and slew Brinnalpb Earl of Ardenne, and seized his Country, giving only Hainault to Albert his Son: Dagobert succeeding his Father in the Kingdom of France, A. 628. gave away part of this Country; but the grols of it still bore the Title, and remain'd for a long time a very considerable Estate.

About 940. Luxemburg and Limburg were parted off, and given to two of the younger Sons of Ricvine Earl of Ardenne, and about 980 Namur was erected into an Earldom. The rest was afterwards carried into the House of Lorrain by a Marriage, and remain'd there for a long time. Thus we have shewn the Origine of the Earldoms of Hainault and Namur, and the Dutchies of Luxemburg and Limburg.

Part of Brabant, as we have said, was included in the Earldom of Ardenne; the other part, being that toward the Sea, was very much infested, and even almost depopulated by the Depredations of the Danes and Normans; wherefore, to guard the Coast and protect the Inhabitants, a certain Officer was appointed, call'd Lord Warden of the Marches; which Title they continu'd till Utilo, Nephew of Aldiagerius, King of the Boiarians, having shewn great Courage against those Pirates, was honour'd with the Title of Lord Marquis of Antwerp, whose Descendant Ansegisus, was Mayor of the Palace in France, and made Duke of Brabant, and his great Grandson Pepin obtaining the Crown of France, this Dutchy was made a Province of that Kingdom, and afterwards a Member of the Kingdom of Lorrain. About 980. the Cities and Territories of Brussels, Lovain, Antwerp and Nivelle, were taken out of it and made a new Estate, with the Title of The Marquisate of the Holy Empire, by the Emperor Otlo II. and bestowed upon his Aunt, whose Granddaughter Gerburg succeeding her, convey'd it by Marriage to Lambert Son of Rejner Earl of Hainault, who had the Title of Earl of Lovain, and was succeeded in it by his Family, of whom Godfrey VII. Earl of Lovain Conquer'd the rest of the Country, and was created Duke of Brabant.

Flanders was a wild, waste Country, the Sea-coasts infested by the Danish Pirates, and the other parts but meanly Cultivated, till it was Conquer'd by the French Kings, who, soon after the Establishment of the Monarchy, appointed a certain Officer with the Title of Forester of Flanders, to suppress the Robbers that infested the woody Paris and Sea-Coasts, and by Government and Protection civilize the People and encourage them to Industry. This Office continued for several Descents, and was at length changed into the Title of a Count or Earl, about the year 864. by Charles the Bald, Emperor, and King of France, in favour of Baldwin the seventh Forester, who had Married his Sister.

Artois was included in the Earldom of Flanders till 1234. when Robert the Grandson of Philip Augustus, King of France, and Husband to Isabel Daughter to Baldwin VIII. Earl of Flanders, was made Earl of it.

Guelderland was part of the French Kingdom of Austrasia, and with that became part of the Empire of Germany; and, as such, was govern'd by certain Guardians or Protectors, (first instituted in the Reign of Charles the Bald) of whom Otbo of Nassaw was the first free Prince, and created Earl by the Emperor Henry V. A. D. 1079. whose Descendant Rainold II. was in 1339. made Duke of Guelderland.

Zutphen was a separate Earldom for many years, till united to Guelderland by the Marriage of Sophia, Daughter of Wickman the last Earl, to Otbo of Nassaw above-mention'd.

Holland and Zealand, a rude unpeopl'd Country, being much disturb'd by the Norman Pyracies, was first made an Earldom by the Emperor Lewis II. about the year 863. and given to Thierry, in whose Line the Succession continu'd till the Death of John, about the year 1300. who leaving no Issue, was succeeded by John of Avesnes Earl of Hainault, Son of Aleide, the Daughter of Florence IV. Earl of Holland.

Friesland is but part of the Country of the ancient Frisii, some part of Utrech and Overissel, as well as East-Friesland in Germany, being inhabited by those People, who were Govern'd by their own Kings, till the Emperor Charlemaign Conquer'd them; and this part, now one of the Provinces, became part of the Dutchy of Guelderland, and afterwards a distinct Barony.

Overissel and Groninghen, was part of the Episcopal Sec of Utrech, first Founded by Dagobert King of France, in favour of Willibald an English-man, the Converter of these parts to Christianity, whose Successors were Temporal as well as Spiritual Lords, for 900 years, and were very powerful Princes, but often attack'd by the Earls of Holland and Dukes of Guelderland; which last got from them the Lordship of Groninghen, and in the end to distressed Henry Bishop of Utrech, that by reason of that and civil Dissentions, he chose to surrender his Temporalities to the Emperor Charles V. A. D. 1527. who divided it into the two Provinces of Utrech and Overissel.

How these Provinces became United in the House of Burgundy, will be seen by this Table.

A R T O I S, Robert II. Earl, left Issue one Daughter named Maud, who was Married to

F L A N D E R S, Lewis de Malaine Earl, Married H A I N A U L T, John de Avesnes, Earl, Married Aleid, Heiress of the Earl of Holland.

L I M-

The Family of Burgundy.

Orbeline Earl of Burgundy, who in that Right succeeded in the Earldom, A. 1302.

Margaret the Heiress of Burgundy and Artois, 1361.

Margaret Daughter of Lewis de la Malaine, Earl of Flanders, Artois and Burgundy, Married to Philip the Hardy, Son of John King of France, made also Duke of Burgundy, A. 1363.

John without Fear, his Son, A. 1404.

Anthony

LIMBURG, Adolph Heir to Henry last Duke, sold it to Henry Duke of Brabant, A. 1293.

BRABANT, the Marquisate of the Empire or Territory of Antwerp and Lordship of Maclain, together with the Duchy of Limburg, being fallen into this House, upon the Death of Philip II. with our Issue, descended to Philip the Good, 1430.

LUXEMBURG, Elizabeth the Niece of Sigismund the last Duke, having no Issue, sold this Duchy to Philip the Good.

NAMUR, John VI. sold it to Philip the Good, who was also next Heir to Theodorick, Successor to John, who died without Issue, about 1430.

GUELDERLAND, with ZUTPHEN and GRONINGEN, Arnold the Duke, being inhumanly treated by his Son, sold his Estates to Charles the Warlike; notwithstanding which, his Son Adolph got possession of them after the death of Charles the Warlike, A. 1473. and left them to his Son Charles, who maintain'd long War with the Duke of Burgundy to defend his Right, but was at length forced to surrender it to Charles V. to be enjoy'd by him after his decease, which happen'd 1538. and Charles accordingly succeeded.

UTRECHT with OVERYSEL, Henry of Bavaria being distressed through War with the Duke of Guelderland and Rebellion of his own Subjects, surrendered his Temporalities to Charles V. A. 1527. which was confirm'd by the Pope and the Estates of the Country.

Anthony the Proud, his Son, A. 1404. also made Duke of Brabant by his Mother.

Philip the Good, their Brother, succeeded John in 1419. and Anthony 1430. and was, in his time, Duke and Earl of Burgundy, Duke of Brabant, Limburg and Luxemburg, Marquis of the Holy Empire, and Earl of Flanders, Hainault, Holland, Zeeland, Artois and Namur.

Charles the Warlike, his Son, succeeded Anno 1467. and added the Duchy of Guelderland and Zutphen. He was killed in War against the Switzers, 1475. leaving Issue.

Mary Heir to Charles, married Maximilian of Austria, Son of the Emperor Frederick III. and afterwards Emperor himself, succeeded Anno 1482. by Philip their Son, who married Jean the Daughter and Heir of Ferdinand and Isabel King and Queen, and first Monarchs of all Spain.

Charles, the Son of Philip and Joan, succeeded in the Estates of Burgundy in the Right of his Father, A. 1506. to which he added Overysel and Utrecht; and in the Kingdom of Spain in the Right of his Mother, A. 1516. and was also elected Emperor, being the 5th of that Name, A. D. 1519.

Charles V. made these Countries a Circle of the Empire, and resign'd them, with the Kingdom of Spain, A. 1558. to his Son

Philip, IV of Burgundy and II of Spain, in whose time happen'd the defection of the eleven Provinces, whereof an Account shall be given when we come to speak of those Estates.

1599. Philip III. surrendered these Countries to his Daughter

Isabella Clara Eugenia, married to Albert Arch-duke of Austria, after whose death, A. 1621. succeeded Philip IV. King of Spain; whose Successors will be seen in our Description of Spain.

The present State of the Spanish Netherlands:

The supreme Lord, as hath been said, is the King of Spain, who governs them by a Substitute with the Title of Governour General of the Netherlands, at present enjoy'd by the Elector of Bavaria, which, by reason of his Relation to that Crown, his Son being then presumptive Heir to it, (but since dead) was in the year 1692. made Hereditary to him.

The Governour General is assisted by three Councils, viz.

The Council of State; wherein the most weighty Affairs, as Peace and War, Leagues and Alliances, treating with Foreign Ambassadors, &c. are transacted.

The Privy Council; which judges Matters of Right brought before it by Appeal from the other Courts of Judicature; makes Laws and Edicts, determines the Bounds of Provinces, the Right of Lordship, &c. And

The Council of Finances; which hath the Care and Management of the Royal Revenues and all Taxes, and supervising the Accounts of the Receivers. To this Council also belongs the Care of the Fortifications, the adjusting and proportioning the Charge of a War, &c.

But the levying Money and enacting of new Laws belong to the Convention of the Estates, which is compos'd of the Nobility, principal Clergy and Deputies of the Chief Cities; who, being called by the Governour General, assemble at Brussels, not in one Body, but by Provinces, (the several Provinces retaining still most of the Particular Privileges they anciently enjoy'd) where the Prince's desires are propos'd to them, in an obliging and endearing manner; (the Spaniard having by fatal Experience found his Error in treating these People with Severity) and if they appear unwilling to Grant what he Demands, the most winning Arguments, with all the power of Rhetorick, are used in his Behalf; which is the more necessary because every City hath a negative Voice, and the dissenting but of one of them spoils the Law.

The settl'd Revenue of the Crown consists in Customs and Imposts, which, by reason of the great Loss of Trade, and the Encroachments of the King of France upon the Country, do not, by much, answer the Charge of the Government; but the King is oblig'd to send continual Supplies from Spain.

For maintaining the Peace and taking care of the Armies, &c. there is a Governour in every Province appointed by the King, subordinate to the Governour General.

And for administering of Justice, each Province hath a Provost or Balliff; and over all there is a Grand Provost, who hath great Power in Criminal Matters.

The Bishopricks of the Netherlands, besides those already mention'd under the Archbishoprick of Cambray in the Account of France, are only these, viz.

The Archbishoprick of Maclain, with the Bishopricks of Antwerp, Gawnt, Bruges, Ypres, Ru-remond and Bois le Duc.

And formerly, the Bishoprick of Utrecht, with the Bishopricks of Haerlem, Deventer, Groningen, Lewarden and Middleburg; which being subject to the States-General, have been suppress'd.

The Accounts in Flanders are kept in Pounds, Schellings, and Groots; 12 Groots make a Schelling, 20 Schellings a Pound Flemish.

The common Coins are, the Negentmanneck, which is the eighth part of a Stuyver. An Oortke, the fourth part of a Stuyver.

The Stuyver; the Schelling 6 Stuyvers; the Guilder 20 Stuyvers.

The Patacon is two Guilders, and the half Patacon one Guilder.

The Silver-Crown 2 Guilders and 10 Stuyvers. the Rix-Dollar something more.

The Ducatoon 3 Guilders or something more.

The Ten Spanish Provinces are,

The Duchy of BRABANT ,	Bruxels , Cap.
The Duchy of LOUXEMBURG ,	Luxemburg .
The County of ARTOIS ,	Arras , Bish.
The County of FLANDERS ,	Gaunt , Bish.
The County of HAINAULT ,	Mons .
The County of CAMBRESIS ,	Cambray , Arch.
The Marquifate of the S. Empire ,	Antwerp , Bish.
The Lordship of MALINES ,	Malines , Arch.
The County of NAMUR ,	Namur , Bish.
The Duchy of LIMBURG ,	Limburg .

To which may be added, The Country of LIEGE.

The King of France hath at several times conquer'd a great part of these Provinces, which by several Treaties of Peace have been granted to him, whereof we have already given an account in speaking of the Dominions of that King, in the general Account of France.

CHAP. I.

The County or Province of ARTOIS, Artesia, Arthesia, or Adartesia.

THE Province of Artois is bounded on the North by that of Flanders, on the South by Picardy, on the East by the Territories of Cambresis, and on the West by those of Boulen, extending it self from North-west to South-east about 60 miles, and 23 from North to South. This is the Country of those ancient People call'd Atrebatas by Cæsar, and is at present entirely subject to the French. Within its Limits are 850 Towns and 9 Castellanies, together with a great number of rich Abbays and Monasteries. It bringeth forth much Corn, abounds in Pastures, and is water'd with divers Rivers; the chief whereof are, the Lys, the Scarp, and the Aa. Artois was at first subdued by the Romans, and then by the French; under the second Race of whose Monarchs it obtained certain particular Governours or Earls, who in process of time render'd themselves proprietary Lords thereof; until, at length, after divers Revolutions, the French made an absolute Conquest of this Province, to whom it was granted by the 35th Article of the Pyrenean Treaty of Peace, A. D. 1659.

The most considerable Towns, Villages, &c. are these, viz.	}	Arras , Bish.	Aire , Pr.
		S. Omer , Bish.	Therouane , ruin'd.
		Bapaume ,	Leis ,
		Heslin ,	Avesne le Comte ,
		Bethune ,	S. Paul ,
		S. Venant ,	Mont S. Eloy , Ab.

ARRAS, Atrebatum aut Nemetocerna, & Nemetactum, is seated on the River Scarp, at the distance of 30 miles from Amiens to the N. and 30 from Tournay to the S. W. 47 from Dunkirk to the S. and 18 from Cambray to the W. It is a very ancient and large City, defended by a strong Castle, and very good Bulwarks, Trenches, and other Fortifications. It is divided into two parts, call'd the City and the Town, separated formerly by a Wall. The former is the smaller, but best built; in it stands the Cathedral (a beautiful Building, dedicated to the Virgin Mary) wherein are kept some famous Relicks, particularly a Candle pretended to be dropt down from Heaven, and some Manna show'd down on S. Jerome. The Town hath fair broad Streets, a spacious Market-place and stately Churches; and is inhabited by wealthy Traders and Artificers, who make Sayes and Tapestry Hangings, especially the latter, which Art was invented here, and therefore take their Name from this City. Arras is the See of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Metropolitan of Cambray, who is accounted Lord of the City, as the Secular Prince is of the Town. It was taken by the French Troops under the Command of the Marshals de Chaume, Chatillon and la Melleray, on the 10th day of August, A. D. 1640. and hath ever since remained in their Possession. The Spaniards, to regain so important a Place, laid Siege to it, but were repulsed with great Loss, on the 25th of August, 1654.

S. Omer, Fanum S. Audomari, aut Audomaropolis, stands on the River Aa in the Country of the ancient Morini, and is also an Episcopal See; the Bishop whereof hath been a Suffragan to the Archbishop of Cambray ever since the year 1559. when it succeeded the demolish'd City of Terouanne in this Dignity; from the Ruines of which it is distant 3 Leagues to the North, 20 miles from Boulen to the East, 20 from Dunkirk to the South, and 32 from Arras to the North-west. S. Omer, Bishop of Terouanne, founded a Monastery here, A. C. 660. whether People resorting, Buildings round it were erected, which in time increased to a good Town: And A. 880. Tongues, Abbot of S. Berin, began to enclose it with Walls, which were afterward finished by Baldwin II. furnam'd the Bald, Earl of Flanders, in 902. Not far from hence is to be seen a large Lake, in which there are divers floating Islands, which are removed by Poles and Cords, and inhabited by certain Families that never depart out of these Islands, and refuse to contract Alliance with any but those of their own Tribe; In one of these Islands stands a Monastery of the Order der of S. Bernard, and a Church. S. Omer is large and the People rich, by means of their Trade. An English Seminary of Jesuits is establish'd here; from whence our Nation hath been infested with Disturbers of the publick Peace. This City is fortified both by Nature and Art, as being environ'd on one Side with the River and Marthes, and on the other with an Hill or rising Ground, defended by a strong Cattle, divers Battions and very deep Trenches: However, the Duke of Orleans made himself Matter thereof, after having Defeated the Spanish Forces at the Battel of Cassal, on the 23d of April, 1677. And it was yield'd up to the French King by the Peace concluded at Nimeguen in the Year ensuing, Aire or Arion, Aira, is situate on the River Lys, 10 miles from S. Omer to the South-East, and about 24 from Arras to the North-West; and is a very strong well fortified Town; having, besides the Walls, Battions, Half-Moons, Horn Works, Redoubts, Counter-scarps and Ditches; a Morais, which environs it on three sides, and on the side that is accessible, a Fortres call'd Fort S. James, which hath 5 Battions, 2 Half-Moons, and a deep Trench. But notwithstanding its Strength, this Town was taken by the French in 1641. and quickly after retaken by the Spaniards: And in the year 1676. the French again took it, and have ever since possessed it.

In the midway between S. Omer and Aire, are the Ruins of the once considerable City of Terouame, which was famous on account of the Siege thereof by our King Henry VIII. in Perfon, in the year, 1513. at which the Emperor Maximilian assisted, and wore the English Badge (S. George's Cross) as a Soldier under King Henry. At this Siege, the French attempting to put Provisions into the Town, were beaten by the English with great Slaught, and by reason of the haste wherewith the French fled away 'twas call'd the Battel of Spurs; intimating, That those were the chief Weapons they us'd. Quickly after the City was taken, but dismantled and quieted: Which the French afterwards repairing, it was again taken by the Emperor Charles V. and utterly demolish'd, in the year 1553. and is at present a small Village only,

Bethune Bethunia, a fortified Town, and the Capital of a County, stands on the River Briette, 12 miles from Aire to the East: An excellent fort of Cheefe is made here, and sold into all the Neighbouring Countries. It is a Place of Trade, and hath two annual Fairs.

Bapaume, Bapama, another small fortified Town, stands near the Confines of Picardy and Cambrey, about 15 miles from Arras to the South-east.

Hesdin, on the River Canche, being incommodiously seated for Defense, was demolish'd by the Emperor Charles, and Hesdin-Fort built a little above upon the same River Canche, where the Ternois falls into it; which was well fortified, and made one of the strongest Towns in these Countries: But was, however, taken by the French in 1639. It is situated near the Confines of Picardy, 20 miles South from Aire, and about 10 West from S. Paul.

S. Paul, Poliniensis Pagus, a small Town, the Capital of a County, formerly subject to its own Lords, is seated near the Head of the small River Ternois, about 10 miles from Hesdin-Fort to the East, 15 from Arras to the West, and as many from Aire to the South.

C H A P. II.

The County or Earldom of FLANDERS, called Vlaenderen in Flemish; Comitatus Flandriæ.

THIS is the first and most considerable County or Earldom of the Low-Countries, and takes its Name from Flandrina the Wife of Liderick II. Prince of Buc, and Grand Forester of Flanders, who govern'd it according to the Orders of the Emperors Charlemaign and Lewis the Debonnaire. Others derive it from that of Flambert, the Nephew of Clodion King of France, who, having married Belisinda, the Daughter of Golauens King of the Rubbenians, expelled the Romans out of Gallia Belgica. This Province is bounded on the North by the German Ocean, and the Mouth of the River Scheld, call'd the Hont, by which it is separated from Zeland; on the South by Artois and Hainaut, on the East by part of Hainaut and Brabant, and on the West by the Ocean and part of Artois. It is extended from North to South for the space of about 60 miles, and 75 from East to West, which must be understood of its largest Dimensions. It is a very fruitful Country, especially that part towards the Sea, which is excellent Pasturage for the great number of Horse bought up in the neighbouring Countries and fed here. The rest of the Country affords store of Corn and Fruit. Within its Bounds are comprehended 28 or 30 walled Towns: many other Towns very remarkable, and 1154 Villages, besides 48 Abbies and a vast number of Pories, Colleges and Monasteries; insomuch that the Spanish Noblemen, who accompanied Philip II. when he took a Progress into these Countries, declar'd, That Flanders was only one continued City. Here are included 5 Vicounties, which are Gaune, Ypres, Furnes, Winoxberg and Haeriebeck; 3 Principalities, namely those of Steenhusen, Gaue and Espiney; 5 Ports, formerly very considerable, viz. Graveling, Dunkirk, Newport, Ostend and Sluce; and 32 Castellannies. The whole Province is commonly divided into 3 Parts: 1. Flanders Flemish, where the Vulgar Language of the Country is spoken, and is stretcht forth from the Northern Sea to the River Lys: 2. Gallican, where the French Tongue is chiefly predominant, lying to the South of the Flemish, and to the North of Cambresis, having the Scheld to the East and the Lys to the West: 3. Imperial Flanders, situated between the Scheld to the Dender, comprehending the County of Alost, together with a few Offices or Districts, which were heretofore possessed by the Emperor. There is also another Division of the same Territories, viz. into Flanders Teutonick, Walloon, Imperial and Dutch: The first of these is extended between the Sea and the River Lys: The second betwixt the Lys and the Scheld: The third between the two others: And the fourth to the North of the two former. But at present present the County of Flanders is divided, with respect only to the Sovereign Princes who are possessors thereof; so that it is usually distinguish'd into the French, Spanish and Dutch Quarters, according to the ensuing Table.

FRENCH FLANDERS.

L'ISLE or RTSSEL, Insula & Lila, so call'd by reason of its situation amidst divers Marshes, which have been drained by the Industry of the Inhabitants, is seated on the River Deulle, at the distance of 25 miles from Arras to the North, 30 from Newport to the South-west, 12 from Tournay to the West, 16 from Douay to the North, and 12 from the Confines of Artois. Baldwin IV. call'd the Bearded, Earl of Flanders, founded this City, A. D. 1007. and his Successor, Baldwin V. furnam'd of Liste, caused it to be encompass'd with Walls. It hath been often raken and sack'd during the Wars of the Low Countries, but is at present extremely well Fortified according to the modern Method, and hath a Citadel flanked with 5 Royal Bastions, besides many Half-moons and other Our-works, rais'd for its Defence; the Ditches are also double and fill'd with the Waters of the Deulle. It is a large City and very considerable on account of its Trade, which consists chiefly in Silk Manufactures; and for the convenience of transporting their Goods, a Canal is cut to the River Lys; and it is the usual place of Residence of the Governor of French Flanders. It was taken by the Army of the present French King, Lewis XIV. in the Year 1667. and hath ever since remain'd in his Possession, having been resign'd to him by the Peace of Aix la Chappelle, A. D. 1668.

Tournay or Dornick, Tornacum, the Capital City of a small Country in Gallican Flanders, call'd Tournaisis, is seated in the midst of pleasant and fruitful Meadows, on the Banks of the Scheld, at the distance of 30 miles from Cambray to the North, 30 from Gaine to the South, and 11 from Liste to the East, lying almost in the midst between Douay and Oudenarde, as also between Valencienmes and Courtray. It is a very considerable City, being large, well-built, a place of good Trade, and very populous. It is divided into 10 Parishes, the Churches whereof are stately, and the Cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary, magnificent. The Buildings in general are very handiome; and here are reckon'd 72 Companies of Traders. It is an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Cambray, and is well fortified with Walls, Ditches and regular Out-works, besides the Castle, which was built by our King Henry VIII, by whom this City was taken, but restor'd to the French upon Conditions, A. D. 1518. Afterwards the Emperor Charles V. dispossels'd them in 1521. But the present French King regain'd it from the Spaniards in 1667. and it was granted to him by the Treaty of Aix la Chappelle.

Ypres, Ypres, Ipra, hath its name from the small River Yperlee, on which it stands, at the distance of 23 miles from Liste to the North-west, and is a rich well-traded City, the Capital of a Territory of large extent, call'd the Castellany of Ypres, which is a very fertile Country. The Trade consists in Silks, wrought Silks, &c. Several Fairs are held here, especially one in Lent, which is very profitable to the Inhabitants. The Buildings are fair and good, but the Fronts of the Houses are of Timber. The public Buildings are the Cathedral dedicated to S. Martin, several other Churches, many Convents, a large Hall or Repository for the Wool, and the Market-place very spacious and handiome. This City is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Malines, is honour'd with the Title of a Viscounty, and is reckon'd the third of the four that constitute the third Eitate of Flanders. It was taken by the French in 1678. and yielded to them at the Treaty of Nimeguen.

Menene is a small Town upon the Lys about 5 or 6 miles above Courtray, with a Ditch and other Fortifications to resist a sudden Surprise.

Armentiers stands also upon the Lys, 12 miles above Meneane, and 8 from Liste to the West: It is a Town of good Trade and considerable Strength; notwithstanding which, it hath been often taken and re-taken, and is at present in the hands of the French, having been granted to them at the Treaty of Aix la Chappelle.

Warwyck, Warneton, and Commene, the Birth-place of the famous Philip de Comines are all three seated upon the Lys, between Menene and Armentiers, and all subject to the French.

Orchies, an ancient tho' small Town, is situated 12 miles South-east from Liste, 10 from Tournay to the South-west, and as many from Douay to the North-east, and water'd with a small Rivulet, which 3 miles below falls into the Scarpe.

S. Amand, formerly a place of good Strength, but now dismantl'd by the French, is seated on the River Scarpe, 7 or 8 miles from Orchies to the East, and 10 from Tournay to the South. It is noted for a famous Abby in it, dedicated to the Saint that gives name to the Town, and formerly for a fine Forest adjoining, of the same name also, which was cut down in 1676. by order of the French King.

Douay, Duacum, is seated also on the Scarpe, on the Frontiers of Artois, 16 miles from S. Amand to the West, and as many from Liste to the South. It is a very considerable Town, on account of its large Extent, Trade and Strength. Its chief Trade is in making and vending Worsted Camlets, which are brought by all the neighbouring People, especially at the Annual Fair in September. Here is a famous Seminary for English Roman Catholicks, first Founded in 1569. by Philip II. Afterwards removed to Rheims in France, but stayed there only 20 years, in which time they Publish'd an English Version of the Bible. The French Took this Town in 1667: and have ever since possess'd it. It is well Fortified, and hath a Fort upon the Scarpe a Canon shot below the Town, which is situated among Marshes, and by Sluces can drown the Country all round.

English

These are all the places of any Note in the East part of French Flanders. The most considerable of the West part are, Winoxberg, Cassel, Furnes, Graveling, Mardyke and Dunkirk.

Winoxbergen, or Berg Saint Winox, Berga, or Mons Sancti Winoici, is seated about 18 miles West from Ypres, and 14 East from Graveling, as also Eight or Nine from Dunkirk to the South; it is the Capital of a Castellany, or large Territory, which is very Fruitful and feeds great Herds of Cattle. The Town hath its name from a Monastery erected on a Hill, in Honour of S. Winox an English-man. Woollen Cloth is made here; but its Trade was formerly much more considerable than at present.

Cassel, or Mont Cassel, Castellum, and Castellum Morinorum, stands upon the top of a high Hill, at the distance of 10 or 11 miles South from Winoxburg, and 15 West from Ypres: It is an ancient Town, and hath a considerable Jurisdiction, subordinate to that of Ypres. It was formerly a place of good Strength but having been several times Taken and almost Ruin'd, it is now not considerable. The French took it in 1677. and have ever since held it. Near this place, in the year 1677. was fought a very bloody Battle, between the Dutch Army, commanded by the Prince of Orange, and the French, commanded by the Duke of Orleans, wherein the latter obtained the Victory.

Furnes, or Vuerne, Vurna, is a neat pleasant Town, seated within two Leagues of the Sea, at the distance of about 10 miles from Dunkirk to the East, and 5 from Newport to the West, 20 from Cassel to the North, and about 10 from Winoxberg to the North-east. This Town hath a Territory call'd an Ambacht belonging to it, which is exceeding Fertile. It is dignified with the Title of a Vicinity, and is a place of Trade, which consists in Linen Manufactures, &c. It was taken by the French in 1667. and granted to them by the Peace of Aix la Chapelle, and since better Fortified. In the year 1692 our English Forces took it, but the next Winter the French re-gain'd it.

Graveling, or Graveline, Gravelinga and Gravelina, is one of the Sea-ports of Flanders, and seated at the mouth of the River Aa, which parts France from Flanders, in the mid-way between Calais and Dunkirk, 16 miles North-west from Cassel, and 12 West from Winoxberg. This being a Frontier of Flanders from France, was Fortified by Charles V. in 1528. and is at present very strong, as well by reason of its situation among low Grounds and Dikes, as by the strong and regular Out-works built all round it. It is but a small Town, ill Built, and thinly Inhabited, and at present subject to the French, being taken by them in 1658. and yielded up at the Pyrenean Treaty.

Between Graveling and Dunkirk, about 4 miles from the latter, stands what is left of the Fort of Mardycke, formerly a very strong place, but in the year 1645 dismantled, and in 1652 quite destroyed; so that there remains now only a small wooden Fort, with some few Guns on it.

Dunkirk Dunquerque, is situated on the Shoar of the German Ocean, at the distance only of 20 miles from Calais, and 12 from Graveling to the East, 15 from Newport, and 28 from Ostend to the West, 35 from Tournay to the West, 34 from Bruges to the South-west. It takes its name from the Sands, call'd in Flemish Dynen, that are ranged along the Sea-coasts and on which a large Church, term'd Kirk by those People, is erected; the high Tower thereof appearing very far off to the Mariners as they sail on the Down. It is a good large Town well built, with neat large Streets, and very Populous: It is one of the five Ports of Flanders, and was therefore a place of good Trade in the flourishing time of this Country: Afterwards in the War-time it became a Retreat of Pirates and Robbers, who infested the Seas, and very much disturbed Trade: The Emperor Charles V. first Fortified it; which the French Demolish'd when they Took and Sack'd the Town in 1538. The Spaniards Re-took it 1581. and here a great part of the Fleet, design'd to invade England in 1588. was Equipp'd by the Prince of Parma, but by the Vigilance of the Dutch Fleet, which lay before the Harbour, where kept in and could not join the rest of their Fleet; which much facilitated their Overthrow. It was afterwards taken and re-taken by the French and Spaniard, before 1658. when it was finally taken by the joint Forces of England and France, and put into the hands of the English, in whose Possession it remain'd till 1662. when it was deliver'd to the French by (Charles II. upon certain Conditions to us unknown) who have ever since held it, and have very much improv'd it, by enlarging the Town, and building exceeding strong Fortifications, &c. wherein they have bestow'd prodigious Expence; having besides the building strong Walls and Ravelins, Half-moons and Counter-scarps, and a Citadel regularly Fortified: I say, besides these, the French King hath dug a large Basin within the Town, capable of receiving 150 Ships of Burden, and cut a Canal through the Splinter-lands out into the Sea, which is secur'd by a Mole or Gallery on each side, that are carried out into the Sea a mile in length, on which are Forts with Cannon planted on them, and on one side a strong Fort, call'd the Rice-bank, well secur'd with an hundred Pieces of Cannon that command the Port; a Work of vast Labour, Art and Expence, by which he intended to make it a Port for his Ships of War, but was disappointed of his design; for the Sands do so choke up the Harbour, notwithstanding the Mole, that with all the advantage of the highest Tides, they cannot bring in a Ship of 70 Guns, without Un-lading her.

Spanish FLANDERS:

G A U N T or G H E N T Gande, Gandavum, is water'd with divers Rivers and Channels, which divide the Town and the adjacent Country into many Islands, being seated almost at an equal distance of 30 miles North from Tournay, East from Ostend, South from Middleburg, and West from Malines, as also 26 from Antwerp and 28 from Brussels. It is the Capital City of the Province of Flanders, and one of the largest Cities of Europe, being 9 or 10 miles in compass; but then Corn-fields and Meadows are included within the Walls. It was built (as it is reported) by Julius Caesar, in a place extremely advantageous for Traffick, on the account of its situation at the confluence of four large Rivers, viz. of the Scheld, which flows hither from the Province of Hainault, the Lys, which runs from that of Artois, the Lien, which proceeds from the Port of Schuyt, and the Moere, which took its rise near the four Offices, call'd Ambassets. Within the precincts of Gaunt are inclosed 26 small Isles, form'd by the Waters of the Canals and Rivers, and as many large Bridges, under which pass Barks of good Burden, and a great number of smaller Bridges. The Churches, which are seven in number, are fair and well built; the Cathedral especially is very stately, and has a Tower of 400 Steps high. The Castle or Prince's Palace, is said to contain 300 Chambers, in one of which the Emperor Charles V. was Born. The other publick Buildings are; the Town-house, a high Tower call'd Be fort, (in which hangs a great Bell, call'd Roland, that weighs 11000 pound weight, many Monasteries, and several Hospitals. The private Houses are fair and well-built, and the Streets clean and neat. This City hath a good Trade in Cloths, Stuffs and wrought Silks, made here in great quantities. It is much reſorted to from the neighbouring Places on account of the Provincial Council of Flanders, which was establish'd by John Duke of Burgundy, A. D. 1409. and still held in this City. It is also an Episcopal See subject to the Metropolitan of Mecklin, and is fortified with a Citadel built in 1540. by the Emperor Charles V. a Counterſcarp, deep Ditches, Ramparts, and many other Out-works. However, the French King, Lewis XIV. took it after a Siege of 9 days, on the 9th of March, 1678. but was oblig'd to restore it to the Spaniards at the Peace of Nimeguen.

At the distance of 4 leagues from hence to the North stands a strong Fortreis, call'd by the Inhabitants, Ytras van Ghendt. It was erected by the Spaniards, and taken by the Hollanders, A. D. 1644. by whom it hath been strongly fortified; and made almost impregnable. Between Gaunt and Bruges there is a Canal which was cut at great Expence by the Marquis Spirola, when he was Governour of the Netherlands, for conveying Goods and Passengers to and from each City; and is call'd by the Inhabitants De nieuwe Vaert, and by Strangers The Canal of Bruges.

BRUGES, Brugæ, so call'd from the multitude of its Bridges, is seated on the Canal of Reye, which is here divided into many navigable Rivulets, running through divers quarters of the Town, and afterwards re-uniting in the same Canal that passeth as far as Sluys. But because that Port is in the Hands of the Hollanders, about 40 years ago the Inhabitants made another, which flows to Ostend, and is so deep that Ships of two or three hundred Tuns are brought up to Bruges, which thereby maintains a very good Traffick, but small in comparison of what it hath been: For before the Wars in Flanders, it was the greatest Mart in Europe; Merchants from all Paris resided here, and had Magazines for the Goods of every Country, which were here Barter'd and Sold; of these Merchants there were no less than 17 Companies, all which remov'd to Antwerp about the year 1500. by reason of the Wars and Disturbances hereabouts, except the English, who, upon the loss of Calis, remov'd the Staple for Wool hither in 1558. where it remain'd for a long time, to the great Advantage of the Town. Bruges is esteem'd the second City of Flanders; it is large, well-built, and reasonably populous; The Form of it is round, and the Circumference about 4 miles; there are six principal Streets, which begin at the six chief Gates, and center at the Market place. The publick Buildings are sumptuous, the Houses neat, and the Streets strait and large. Their Trade consists in Spanish Wool, and the Manufactures of the Town, Fustians and other Stuffs, Cloth, Tapistry, &c. This City is an Episcopal See; under the Archbishop of Malines: The Cathedral is dedicated to S. Donat, besides which there are seven Parishes, and two Collegiate Churches, three principal Abbies, and a great number of Religious Houses. The other publick Buildings are, the Castle, the Town-house, and the Water-houle of very ingenious Structure. Bruges stands in the North part of Flanders, at the distance of 10 miles from the Sea, somewhat more from Ostend to the East, and as many from Sluys to the South-west, as also 20 from Gaunt to the North-east.

Ostende is a small Town, and one of the five Ports of Flanders; it is situate about 10 miles West from Bruges, 9 from Newport to the North, and at the mouth of the small River Guele, in the midst of a moorish Ground, and divers Channels and Dikes. It was at first only a small Village, but by reason of its convenient situation, it was wall'd round and fortified; by the Strength whereof and the advantageous Situation, the Hollanders, with the assistance of an English Garrison, sustain'd a Siege three Years and three Months, viz. from the 5th of July, 1601. to the 22d of September, 1504. when it was taken by Ambrosio Spirola, and surrender'd to Albert Arch-Duke of Austria. The Spaniards lost 78124 Soldiers of their Army, and in counting the Officers, together with those that were slain in the Town, the number slain in this Siege is suppos'd to amount to 15000 Men. Since when it hath been possess'd by the Spaniards, and is at present exactly and regularly fortified, and one of the strongest Places in the Netherlands. The Houses are well built, handſome and uniform, and the Streets clean and neat. The Haven is safe, large, well defended by Forts, and deep enough to receive Ships of great Burden.

Newport, Novus Portus, heretofore call'd Sandhoft, that is to say, the Head of the Sands, hath in like manner a safe Harbour, altho' scarcely capable, even at the high Tides, of receiving Vessels of any great Burden. It is seated near the Mouth of the River Iperlee, which falling into the Sea, makes a long and secure Haven, at the distance of 15 miles from Dunkirk to the N. E. 9 from Ostend to the S. W. 18 from Ipres to the North, and 38 from Gaunt to the West. It is a place of good Strength, being well fortified with Walls and several Forts. The Buildings are neat, but low and of Timber: The Inhabitants are maintained by Fishing. From hence the English Pacquet Boat goes weekly to Dover. This Town being invest'd by the Hollanders in the year, 1600. under the Command of Maurice Prince of Orange, assist'd by some English Troops commanded by Sir Francis Vere, the Arch-duke Albert of Austria, then Governour of the Netherlands, came to its Relief with a great Army; whence ensued a notable Battle, fought on the adjoining Sand-hills, wherein Prince Maurice obtained a very signal Victory, and the Arch-duke was oblig'd to escape by Flight: In which Action the English bore the greatest part.

Oudenard, Aidenarda, is seated on the River Scheld, which divides it into two parts: It is a place of good Wealth by means of the Trade, especially in its own Manufactures, Tapistry and Fine Linnen. It is Capital of a Castellany, which contains 33 Villa-and a place of good Strength, being fortified with a Castle call'd Pamele, join'd to the Town by a Bridge over the River, strong Walls and regular Outworks: but is commanded by a high Hill on the side towards Alost, which takes away from its otherwise advantageous situation. In 1484. this Town was taken by Stratagem by Philip of Cleves Lord of Ravestein; surpriz'd by Blomart in 1567. besieg'd and taken by the Prince of Parma in 1582. and by the French in 1658. but being restored to the Spaniards by the Pyrenean Treaty, they again took it in 1667. and had it yielded to them at the Peace of Aix la Chappelle: But they were oblig'd to restore it by the Treaty of Nimeguen, and it hath ever since been in the Hands of the Spaniard. It stands 13 miles from Ghent to the South. 17 from Tournay to the North, and 14 from Courtray to the East.

Courtray, or Cortryck, Corteviacum, Cortracum, is a very good well-traded Town, seated on the River Lys, 14 miles North from Lisle, and as many East from Ypres. The Inhabitants are excellent Artists in Diapering of Linnen: It was several times taken by the French and Spaniards before 1667. when the French finally took it, and had it granted to them at the Treaty of Aix la Chappelle. It hath a strong Citadel and other Fortifications, which have been much improv'd by the French, and is at present a place of great Importance.

Alost or Aelst is seated on the River Dender, near the Confines of Hainalt, 13 miles from Ghent to the South-east, as many from Oudenard to the East, and makes almost an exact Triangle with those 2 places. It is reckon'd the Capital of Imperial Flanders, and of a County formerly subject to its own Lords. It was taken by the Spaniards in 1576. and by the Duke of Anjou in 1582. after which, it came into the Hands of the English, who sold it to the Duke of Parma. In 1667. the French took it, and destroy'd its Fortifications before they restor'd it.

The Territories of this Town are large, being besides the County of Alost, the County of Waes and the four Offices of Hulst, Axel, Bouchout and Asternede, which comprehend above 150 Villages and four Cities.

Dendermond, seated on the River Dender, where it falls into the Schelde (whence the Town hath its name) 6 or 7 miles North from Alost, and 12 East from Ghent, is a good Town, and considerable for its Manufacture of Fustians and other Stuffs. It is fortified, and was strong enough to resist the Assaults of the French in 1667.

Ninove is seated in the Territory of Alost, at the distance of about 3 miles from it to the South, and 12 from Oudenard to the East. It is a small Town, and not considerable.

Deynse is seated on the Lys, 8 miles from Ghent to the South-west, and 12 from Oudenard to the North West; it is but a small Town, however the Capital of a Territory in the Castellany of Courtray, and subject to the Spaniards: As is also Harlebec near Courtray, a small Town, and the Capital of another small Territory.

Dixmude or Dixmuyde, is seated on the River Yperlee, 20 miles North-west from Courtray; and 10 South-east from Newport; it is a place of some Trade, and hath an Annual Fair in July. It is but small and not very well fortified. Our English Forces took possession of it in 1692. but the French took it soon after, and have since quitted it.

DUTCH FLANDERS.

SLUYS or SLUCE, Sluys, Clausu's, another of the Ports of Flanders, is seated in the North part of this Province, about 9 or 10 miles beyond Bruges, 16 from Middleburg in Zeeland to the South, 18 from Ostend to the North-east, and 20 from Ghent to the N. W: It belongs to the States of Holland, and is one of their strongest Frontiers. It hath the largest Haven of all the five, being capable of receiving 500 Ships of Burthen at a time, and was once a place of great Trade and Wealth. This Town having been first, as Bruges and Antwerp were afterwards, the chief Mart of these Countries; at present it is but poor, and thinly inhabited, but extremely well fortified, and hath a good Garrison.

Ostburg and Ysendrick, small Towns near Suys, are both guarded by small Forts.

Philippine is a pretty strong Fort, seated about 15 miles East from Suys, and 5 or 6 North from the Sas van Gann.

Axel, the Capital of one of the four Offices, is seated about 6 miles East from Philippine, and 12 North from Ghent. It was surpriz'd by Prince Maurice, assisted by our Sir Philip Sydney, in 1586. and is a place of good Strength.

Hulst, the Capital of another of the Offices, stands about 6 miles East from Axel, and in the midst of the Country of Waes. It is a place of good Trade, and tolerably well fortified.

These Towns, together with the Hont or Wester Schelde, which is an Arm of the Sea, make a secure Frontier toward Zeeland:

CHAP. III.

The Dutchy of BRABANT, Brabantia.

THIS Country lies in form of an Island encompass'd round about with Rivers, having the Maes to the East and North, the Demer to the South, and the Scheld to the West, together with the Sea on the side of Breda and Bergen op Zoom; that is to say, it is bounded on the North by Holland, and part of the Dutchy of Guelderland; on the East by part of the same Dutchy, and the Bishoprick of Liege; on the South by Hainalt and the County of Nannur; and on the West by Flanders and part of Zeeland. Its extent from South to North consists of about 70 miles; from West to East, in its broadest part, near as many. The Air is exceeding temperate, and the Soil no less fruitful; besides the Rivers Scheld, Maes, Dile, Demer, Aa, Isher, Domel, the greater and lesser Nepbre, and the Mert, wherewith it is water'd, many Lakes, Marshes and Pools are found in its Territories: 26 walled and fortified Towns are also comprehended therein, not to mention a great number of others of lesser consequence.

In Brabant are compriz'd the Marquisate of the Holy Empire, the Capital City whereof is Antwerp, the Lordship of Malines, the Duchy of Arschot, the Marquisate of Berguer, the Earl-dom of Ostreten, the State of Masstricht, formerly of Liege, and 19 Baronies. In fine, the whole Province may be thus divided into four parts, viz.

BRUSSELS or BRUXELS, is the Capital City not only of Brabant but of all the Spanish Netherlands; the place of Residence of the Dukes of Burgundy anciently, and now of the Governor of the Spanish Netherlands. It is the richest and most populous City of these Countries, and tho' not so large as Gaunt and Louvain, is however much more considerable. It is situated in a most pleasant Country on the Banks of the small River Sinne, which is join'd to the Scheld by a Channel six leagues in length, cut with great Labour and the Expence of 500 thousand Crowns by Charles V. and his Son Philip, and finish'd in 1560. by which the Commerce of the Inhabitants with several places, especially Antwerp, was much advanc'd.

This City in general is very well built, the Streets large, handfom and convenient, and secured by double Walls of Brick, and a Ditch quite round the Town. The publick Buildings are, the Palace, which is seated upon a Hill in the upper Town, and is a magnificent and stately Structure, and so large that several Crown'd Heads were at one time Lodged and Entertain'd in it, viz Charles V. and his Son Philip King of Spain, Maximilian King of Bohemia and his Queen, the Queens of France and Hungary, and an African King. Adjoining to this Palace is a pleasant Park, well stor'd with Deer, also fine Gardens, Water-works, Groto's and pleasant Walks. The Senate-house, a noble Building with a high Tower, whereon stands a large Statue, of S. Michael in Brals, and the Church of S. Gudula, which hath 2 Towers of five hundred Steps high. Several other of the Buildings of Brussels deserve particular Descriptions, especially the Gallery which repeats an Echo 15 times, the magnificent Palaces of divers Noble Men, the Royal Stable which holds 120 Horses, together with the Hospitals and Religious Houses; but for these the Reader must consult Blaeu, Guicciardin, &c. being too long to be inserted here. The private Citizens Houses are very fine, and are particularly pleasant by means of the Gardens they are almost all furnished with, which they are extravagantly curious in Cultivating, Flowers being excessively valued here. The whole City is divided into the Upper and Lower, whereof the latter is the more pleasant, and adorn'd with artificial Fountains and Canals, with many fair Bridges. The Residence of the Court, and the pleasantness of the place, makes almost all the Gentry of these Countries dwell here, which very much encreases the Trade of the Town. Here also is kept the Court of Chancery for Brabant, the Assembly of the States of these Provinces, and the Treasury for War. Brussels is distant 64 miles from Newport and 28 from Ghent to the East, 55 from the River Maes to the West, 25 miles from Antwerp to the South, and as many from the River Sambre to the North. A little way from Brussels to the S. begins the pleasant Wood of Soignes, which extends very far.

Nivelle, about 12 or 14 miles South from Brussels, is a good wall'd Town, formerly well fortified, and enjoys great Privileges: Great quantities of very fine Linnen Cloth is made here; the Church of Gertrude is a fair Building, and the Convent of 42 Nuns, all of noble Extraction, is considerable.

Vitvoorden, seated upon the River Sinne about 6 miles North from Brussels, is a wall'd Town, and by its situation reasonably strong: Here is an old Castle, wherein formerly Prisoners of Quality were kept, and also the Records of greatest concern belonging to the Dutchy of Brabant.

Senef, a small Village, 2 miles South of Nivelle, and near the Borders of Hainault, not at all considerable, but for a memorable Battle fought there in the month of August, 1674. between the Confederate Forces commanded by the Prince of Orange, his present Majesty of Great Britain, and the French commanded by the Prince of Cowde.

LOUVAIN or LOEVEN, Louvanium, is a City of a very large Extent, its Walls being 6 miles in compas, but include many Meadows, Corn-fields, Vine-yards and Gardens, besides the Houses of the Inhabitants. It is seated in a pleasant Country, upon the Banks of the River Dyle, at the distance of 15 miles from Brussels to the East, and 15 from Meeblin, forming a Triangel with those two Cities; as also 26 miles South from Antwerp, and 24 North from Namur. The private Buildings here are but ordinary. The publick ones are, The Stadt-house or Guild-hall, which is a very handfom stately Pile, and The Castle, which is seated on a high Hill, in the midst of Vine-yards and Gardens, and in a very wholfom Air, which, together with the noble Prospect it affords, make it almost pleasant Seat, and therefore heretofore frequently made the place of Residence of the Dukes and their Children, and particularly the Emperor Charles V. was brought up here. These, as also the Churches, Religious Houses and Hospitals, are worth a Stranger's View. But that which Louvain is chiefly noted for, is the University, which was founded, as some say, in the year, 926. but not confirm'd till 1425. when John IV. Duke of Brabant, endowed it. At present it is in a very flourishing State, and Golnitz says, exceeds Cologne for number of Students and neatness of Building: It hath 45 Colleges and a vast number of Students, over whom the Rector is chief Governor, and hath great Honour and Respect paid him, even by the highest Magistrate of the Town. In this City are 11 Market-houses, 4 publick Fountains, 12 principal Streets, and above 100 small ones. The Walls are strongly built, and upon 'em are several Towers, whereof one is very fine, and was built by the Citizens in 1364. who design'd six more, but by reason of the great Expence were deterr'd; wherefore this hath got the name of Verloren Kest, or Lost Expence. The Weaving Trade was formerly very great in this City, inso much, that about the year, 1530. there are said to have been 4000 Weaver's Shops, and in each 30 or 40 Men at Work. And of the exceeding populousness of this place, Lipsius gives us a notable Instance, viz, That when the Bell rung at 11 a Clock at Noon for the the Workmen to leave off, the Women in great haste snatch'd their Children out of the Street, lest they should be bore down by the great Crowd. But at present the Trade is not very considerable, some Manufactures of Linens and Stuffs is the chief of it; which, together with the Entertainment of the Students, afford the Inhabitants a good Support.

Arscho, seated on the River Demer, 10 miles North from Louvain, is a good large wall'd Town, dignified with the Title of a Dukedom by the Emperor Charles V. and hath a small Territory depending on it.

Sichem stands about 4 miles from Arscho to the East: It is a small wall'd Town, but not very strong; however, made a notable Resistance when attack'd by the Prince of Parma in the time of the Low-Country War.

Diest or Diestheim, is a large neat Town, and of good Trade for several Manufactures, especially of Cloth, stands on the River Demer, 3 miles from Sichem to the East. It giveth the Title of a Barrony to the Prince of Orange, and hath a large Territory its dependant. It is also wall'd and reasonably strong. As is also Halem, seated on the River Velpse, hardly 3 miles East from Diest, which tho' a small Town enjoys large Privileges granted to it at several times.

Leue, stands about 6 miles South from Halem upon the River Geet; is a small Town, but being near the Borders of Liege it is well fortified: It enjoys large Privileges, and the Inhabitants make great profit by a sort of Beer they brew, which is esteem'd and much bought by the neighbouring Towns. Here is a great Priory of the Order of S. Austin, whose Prior is one of the Noblemen of the Province.

Tienen or Tilmont, is seated on the River Geet, 6 miles West from Leue, and 8 East from Louvain, and was formerly a very large and well-traded City enjoying great Dignity and Privileges; but having suffer'd by the Wars, was much decay'd before the French destroy'd it in 1675. so that at present it is not considerable.

Landen, though small, is reckon'd among the ancientest Towns of the Province; it is distant about 3 miles from Tienen to the East, and as many from Leue to the South. Near this Town a Battle was fought on the 29th of July, 1693. between the Confederate Forces under the Command of his Majesty of Great Britain, and the French commanded by the Marechal de Luxembourg.

Hannuye, a small wall'd Town, the Capital of a Mayorie or small Jurisdiction, is seated in a pleasant and rich Country, 5 miles South from Landen.

Judoigne or Geldenake, a wall'd Town, larger than Hannuye, and the Capital of a Mayorie also, stands upon the River Geet, in a very pleasant Country, 7 miles West from Hannuye, and about 14 South-east from Louvain, and hath an old Castle, wherein some of the Brabantine Princes have been nurs'd.

Gembours or Gibbu, is a good wall'd Town, the Capital of a County, and seated on a steep Hill, environ'd with Precipices, near the small River Lorn, which 6 miles below falls into the Sambre, and is distant 20 miles from Hannuye to the East, and 15 from Nivelle to the West. Here is a famous Monastery of Benedictines, whose Abbot is Lord of the Town. Near this place was fought a notable Battle, in the year 1578. between the King of Spain's Army and that of the States General, wherein the former obtain'd a very advantageous Victory.

ANTWERP, Antwerpia, Andovercun, in Flemish Antwerpen, in High-Dutch Anwert, in French Anvers, is advantageously situated on the Banks of the Schelde, at the distance of about 60 miles from the Ocean, 26 from Bruxels to the North, 26 from Gant to the East, and about 30 from Flackeren, one of the Islands of Zeeland, to the South. Its Name (to omit the Fabulous Stories of some Authors) is derived from Werwe a Bank or Wharf, as seated aen bet Werwe, on the Bank of the River. It is the Capital of the Marquissate of the Holy Empire, the See of a Prelate, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Mechlin, and a very large, rich and well fortified City, enclosing within its compals 200 Streets, 22 publick Places, a great number of fair Houses, and many stately Churches. Among these the Cathedral, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is more especially remarkable: It is in length above 500 foot, and 246 in breadth; within this noble Fabrick are contain'd 66 Chappels, enrich'd with Marble Columns and Statues, all different and adorn'd with most curious Paintings, as is also the Body of the Church, into which the Entry is through three large Doors of Marble gilt. The Steeple is made very beautiful by its curious Carvings: In it hang 6 or 8 very large Bells, the biggest whereof hath the name of Charles, from the Emperor; these, together with near 30 more, make the most melodious Chimes in the World: the Tower is reckon'd 425 foot high, besides the Cross at top, of 16 more. The Jesuits Church is extremely magnificent, being paved with Marble, and the Roofs, (which are curiously painted) supported with 56 Pillars of the same, and the Walls all lined with rich Stone, so that nothing is to be seen in the inside but Marble, Jasp, Porphyry and Gold, or excellent Paintings drawn by the accurate Hand of the famous Rubens. In this City are also remarkable, the Stadthuys or Senate-house, which having been destroy'd by Fire, was magnificently rebuilt about the year 1576. and hath 4 several rows of Apartments: The House of the Oosterling, or Merchants of the Baltick Sea: The Exchange Exchange, which is a noble Building, 180 foot long and 140 broad, with covered Walks all round, the Roof whereof is supported by 43 Marble-pillars: And the Citadel or Castle, which is a very strong and regular Fortification, built by the Duke d'Alva, in 1567. It is a Pentagon, or hath five Bastions, together with Ravelines and other Out-works, and is reckon'd among the best Fortifications of Europe.

The River Schelde being found a convenient Haven, was much resorted to by Merchant-ships from all Nations; and therefore upon the Disturbances and Wars in Flanders, the Trade of Buges and other places thereabouts removed to Antwerp, which increased to that degree, that in its most flourishing State (about the years 1556. to 68) there were often seen to lye in the River 2500 Ships together, and 3 or 400 Vessels have frequently come up in one Tide; also 200 Waggon's came in every day, laden with Passengers from the neighbouring Countries, and near 1000 every Week with Germans, French and other Foreigners; and 10000 Country Carts were continually employed in carrying Goods to and from the City. By this means the number of the Houses and Inhabitants grew exceeding great. Guiccardin tells us, That Antwerp contain'd 13500 Houses, and the number of the People was reckon'd no less than 200000. But this Grandeur quickly declin'd, and is now extremely diminish'd; for the Wars reaching this place also, Antwerp was sack'd, and 700 of its Inhabitants kill'd by the mutinous Spaniards in the year 1576. and afterwards taken by the Prince of Parma, after a remarkable Siege of no less than 12 Months duration. These Calamities, together with the growing power of the United Netherlands, who, by the possession of Zeeland, were able to stop the Passage of the Schelde, and oblige the Ships to come into their Ports, did quite break the Trade of Antwerp; which removing to London and Amsterdam, hath left this City empty of Inhabitants; and though it be still as populous and rich as many others in the Netherlands, it is by no means comparable to what it has been. The Houses are all of Brick and uniform, and the Streets large and neat, many particular Houses very stately, and the publick Buildings magnificent. The City is built in form of a Bow on the East side of the Schelde, which is near 400 yards broad, and 22 foot deep at the lowest Tide, so that Vessels of the greatest Burden can come up and unlade upon the Keyes, which lye all a long before 8 of the 13 Gates. From the River there are 8 Canals that run through the Town, which are deep enough for Vessels of good Burden to come up; and over these Canals there are 74 Bridges. In fine, Antwerp is to beautilful a place, that being compar'd to Florence, it hath had the Preference by these that have seen both.

About 10 miles from Antwerp to the North, and as many from Bergen op Zoom, stands the strong Fortre's of Souwerick.

MECHLIN, or Malines, Mecblinia seated on the River Dile, is the Metropolis of the Lordship of the same name, reckon'd one of the XVII Provinces, though of but small extent, being not above 3 Leagues from West to East, and one and an half from South to North. It is the Seat of an Archbishop, whom Pope Paul IV. establish'd there, A. D. 1559. and dignified with the Title of Primate of the Low Countries. The Grand Royal Council instituted by Charles Duke of Burgundy in 1473. is held here, as is also the Sovereign Court of all the Spanish Netherlands, establish'd in the year 1502. The City stands in the midst of the Province of Brabant, between Antwerp, Bruxels and Loovain, almost at the equal distance of 13 miles from each of them. It was formerly subject to the Dominion of its proper Lords, until the year 1335. when it became Free. Afterward it fell into the possession of the House of Burgundy, and at length clicheated to that of Austria, in 1477. The Inhabitants were freed from paying Taxes, for the signal Services they performed to Charles the Hardy, Earl of Flanders, at the Siege of Nuis on the Rhine. It is a large City and very well built, and is even so neat as to have obtained the Epithete of Fair. It is also a strong Place, having, besides the Fortifications, a natural Security by the flatness of the Country round about, which by that means is easily laid under Water. The Trade of this Town is pretty considerable, consisting in Linnen, Lace, Tanning, Casting great Guns, &c. The Tide flows up beyond the Town, by which means Boats come up from Antwerp, and the Commodities of this City are Exported. Weavers were formerly very numerous here, but upon a Riot by them committed, were deprived of their Privileges, by which the Trade decayed. The Cathedral Church of S. Rumbald is a beautiful Building, and hath a very high Tower; besides which, here are 7 other Churches belonging to the 7 Parishes that the City is divided into. The Monastery of the Franciscans is a curious and stately Building; and the Nunnery of S. Clara is very fine. A Magazine is kept here that was formerly exceeding well furnish'd. Some particular Companies of the Traders of this City enjoy great Privileges, especially the Tanners, who are very numerous. Other things, of Mechlin may deserve a Traveller's Observation, whereof we cannot spare room for a particular Description.

Lire, or Liere, is a neat and pleasant Town, seated on the River Nethe, 7 or 8 miles from Mechlin to the North, and 20 from Antwerp to the South-east; it is a good large place, and strongly fortified. The Collegiate Church of S. Gummans, is a magnificent Building, and the Market-place is remarkable for its largeness, and the curious Buildings that surround the Religious Houses, especially that of the Carthusians, are very fine. This Town is inhabited by People of Quality, and rich Merchants retired from Business.

Herentals stands 10 miles East from Lire on the River Nethe also; it is a wall'd Town, and the Capital of a Mayoric.

DUTCH BRABANT.

BOIS-LE-DUC, or BOLDUC, Biscum Ducis, aut Sylva Ducis, call'd by the Inhabitants, S. Hertogenbosch, and by abbreviation, the Bosch, is the Capital City of the Dutch Brabant, and the Seat of its supreme Court of Justice, standing on the Banks of the River Dromele, which having there receiv'd into its Chanel the Waters of the Ande, and then those of the Diese, falls into the Maes about 2 Leagues from thence, at the Place where the Island of Bomel is form'd. It is distant only 5 miles from the River Maes, or Mose, as also from the Confines of Holland and Guelderland, near 30 miles from Antwerp to the North-east, 54 miles from Masstricht to the North, about 40 from the River Rhine, and 20 from the Grave to the W. The Name thereof was taken from a certain Wood, where the Dukes of Brabant were wont heretofore to divert themselves by Hunting; which, being cut down by Duke Henry to facilitate facilitate the March of his Army against the Guelderslanders, in the year 1172. this City was built in its place by Duke Geffry, and wall'd round by Henry his Son, in 1196. Pope Paul IV. erected an Episcopal See, and Franciscus Sornius was the first Bishop; but when Bois-le-duc was taken by the Hollanders in 1629. these Prelates were oblig'd to remove their Station to Goldoip. It is a good large Town and well Fortified, having strong Walls, wherein are 7 large Bastions, a deep Ditch, with Ravelins, Counter-scarp and other excellent Fortifications, and is seated upon a Hill amidst Marshes, which are easily laid under Water, and thereby the Town made Inaccessible, but by artificial Causeys; which too are all commanded by Forts, so that 'tis in a manner Impregnable. This being an important Fronteir, the Hollanders take care always to keep a good Garrison in it. It is a place of pretty good Trade for its Manufactures of Woollen, and Linen Cloth, Knives, and other Steel-ware, &c. The Church of S. John which was the Cathedral, is a sumptuous Building. The Market-place, seated at the meeting of 10 Streets, the chief of the Town, is surrounded with very good Buildings: several Canals run through the Town, which bring in Vessels of good Burthen; over these are 51 Stone-Bridges, besides others of Wood. In the defection of the Netherlands, the Bosch took part with the Confederates, and in 1579. embrac'd the Union of Utrecht, but was afterwards Taken by the Prince of Parma, and remained under the Spaniard till 1629. when the Prince of Orange Re-took it, after a very difficult Siege. In 1672 it was invested by the French, but they marched off the next Month without Taking it.

BREDA, Breda, stands in a marshy Ground (which is often overflow'd) on the banks of the River Merch, in Dutch Brabant, at the distance of 30 miles from Antwerp to the N. 8 South from Getruydenburg. 24 from Bois-le-duc to the West, and 22 from Bergen-op-zoom to the East. It is considerably large, populous and well-built, and is one of the strongest Places of the Low Countries. It is dignified with the Title of a Barony, comprehending 17 Villages under its Jurisdiction, which in the year 1212 belonged to Geffry Lord of Bergues, but defended to the House of Nassaw, in 1404. by the Marriage of Mary, the Daughter and Heir of Philip Lord of Leck and Baron of Breda, with Egbert Earl of Nassaw, in whose Descendants it hath ever since continued, except in the time that the Spaniards were Masters of it, viz. from 1581. when it was Surpriz'd by the help of the Roman Catholics in the Town, to the year 1590. when it was regain'd by a notable Stratagem; for a Boat seemingly laden with Turf for Fuel, but indeed with Armed Men, pass'd into the Castle undiscov'rd, and forced the Garrison to surrender. And again, from 1625. when the Marquis Spinola took it, after a long Siege and Blockade, till 1637. when Frederick Prince of Orange recover'd it. The Soil of the adjacent Country is very fertile in Corn, Pasture and Copses. An Academy for Education of Youth is held here under 4 Professors, establish'd by Prince Frederick abovemention'd. The Prince of Orange hath a Palace and Castle in the Town, where a Treaty was held, and a Peace concluded between King Charles II. and the States General. A. D. 1667.

Bergen-op-zoom, Berga ad Romam. aut Bercizoma; by Guiciardin said to have its name from the little River running by it, which he names Zoom, but Blaeu contradicts, and says, the River hath no such name, except from the Town; and that the Town is call'd Bergen from the Hill on which it stands, and op-zoom, on the Scam, because seated on the edge of the Province. It is conveniently situated between Brabant, Flanders, Holland and Zealand, within half a League of a Branch of the Oester Schelde, 18 miles from Antwerp to the North, 20 from Breda to the West, and, as many from Middleburg to the East. It had the Title of a Marquillate given by the Emperor Charles V. and was formerly a Place of good Trade, till eclips'd by Antwerp: For convenience of its Trade a Canal was cut through to the Hort, or Wester Schelde. The Country about it is very low and marshy, by which the Town is much secured, as well as by very strong and well contriv'd Fortifications, which the Dutch have built round it, with Forts upon the Channel, and other convenient places. The Buildings are fair, the Church of S. Lambert and the Marquis's Palace especially. Here are 3 spacious Market-places, and a large Hospital for the Sick, which was formerly a Nunnery. This Town was subject to its own Lords, from 1212. till 1567. when it was delivered into the hands of the Hollanders; from whom the Prince of Parma endeavour'd to recover it in 1588. But they defended themselves so courageously, that he was forced to raise the Siege. Again, in 1622. Spinola Belieg'd it, but had no better Fortune; for after 70 nor 80 days furiously attacking it, he was glad to leave it, upon the approach of the Dutch Forces under Prince Maurice.

Grave, Gravia, termed Graeff by the Inhabitants, is situated on the South-side of the Mees, the Waters whereof fill the large Trenches that environ the Bulworks, in a Plain on the Frontiers of Guelderland, at the distance of 18 miles from Bois-le-duc to the East, 7 from Nimuen to the South, and about 50 from Maastricht to the North. It is a small Town, but very neat and pleasant, and esteem'd the strongest and easiest to be defended of any in the Netherlands. It is the Capital of the small Earldom of Cureck, which belongs to the Prince of Orange, as doth the Town it self. The Country about it is Meadow, and affords Pasture to a good Body of Horse that are always kept here: The Town is exceeding well fortified with Ravelins, Counter-scarp, Palisado, and a very strong Horn-work, and besides, secured by the River on one side, and a Morass on another. It was taken in 1586 by the Prince of Parma, and recover'd in 1602 by Prince Maurice. In 1672 the French took it, and upon their being forced to quit Holland, had made this their grand Magazine, and therefore defended it for a long time when it was besieg'd by the Prince of Orange his present Majesty, to whom, however, they were obliged to Surrender it, with all the Artillery and Ammunition, on the 28th of September, 1674.

These four Towns make a very strong Frontier on this side to the Dominions of the States General.

Ravenstein, a neat but not large Town, is seated on the River Mees, about 5 or 6 miles below the Grave, and 16 North-east from the Bosch; it is defended by a strong Castle, and hath a Jurisdiction of 4 miles broad, and extended about 12 miles South from the Mees, towards Helment, the Capital of the Country call'd Poel-land: It is a good walled Town, seated on the little River Aa, that falls into the Mees a little beyond the Bosch, and is distant 17 miles from the Grave to the South.

Eindhoven, a good wall'd Town also, and the Capital of the Country call'd Kempen Land, stands upon the River Donnel, 10 miles West from Helment, and 14 South from the Bosch.

Maastricht, tho' seated in the middle almost of the Bishoprick of Liege, is reckon'd part of this Province of Brabant, because formerly that Duke had one part, as the Bishop of Liege had the other part of the Jurisdiction of it; but since 1633, it hath belonged to the States General. It stands on the River Maes, at a Place where was always a Ferry or Passage, which the word Trebt in Dutch signifies; it is call'd in Latin, Trajectum ad Mosam & Trajectus inferior, to distinguish it from Utrecht. It stands on the West-side of the River, but hath a fair Suburb nam'd the Wack, on the other side, which is join'd to the City by a beautiful Stone-bridge of 9 Arches. The old Buildings are but ordinary; but those built since the Hollanders have had the Town are of Brick and very fair, particularly the Stadt-houle: The Streets are large, and Houses cover'd with Slate. Here are 3 Dutch Churches, and one for the English and French; that of S. Servatius was formerly a Collegiate, and had the honour to have the Duke of Brabant always one of its Canons: It was also a Cathedral, built in honour of that Saint, who planted the Christian Faith here, was the first Bishop, and died A. C. 395, from whom a Succession of 20 Bishops ruled in this City; but upon the Martyrdom of S. Lambert, the See was translated to Liege in the year 713. The City is large, being reckon'd 4 English miles in circuit, but not very populous. It is very strongly fortified, having, besides a good Wall and Trench, many Out-works of modern Form, well contriv'd to oppose the Advantages Besiegers may have by the nature of the Earth, convenient for Mines and Trenches, and by a Hill a little distant, that would command the Town if the Bastion to the South-east were not built very high. At the top of that Hill stands an old Castle, and in the Bowels of it is a Quarry of Stone, of which vast quantities are transported to other Countries. This City descended with Brabant to the King of Spain, but in the War-time taking part with the States, it was Besieged by the Prince of Parma in 1579, and though they made a very vigorous defence, were forced to submit, and continued under the Spaniard till 1633. when the Prince of Orange besieged and took it; and in the succeeding Peace of Munster, it was yielded to the Hollanders. In 1672. the French besieged and took it: They far down before it on the 11th of June, the King of France himself, with the Dukes of Orleans and Montmouth, commanding the large Army that attacked it with great Fury, till the end of that Month; at which time the Burgers mutinying, and the Garrison being much weakned, the Governor was forced to Capitulate; and on the 2d of July the Town was surrendered, and continued under the French till by the Peace of Nimeguen it was restored to the States General, who still possess it.

On the South-east of Dutch Brabant lyes the County of Horn, which is a Territory of about 20 miles extent, bounded on the East by the River Maes, on the North-west by Peel-land in Brabant, and on the South-west by the Bishoprick of Liege: It was formerly subject to its own Earls of the Family of Montmorency, of whom Philip and Florent were eminent for their Zeal in opposing the Tyranny of the Duke d' Alva, and assisting the Prince of Orange in asserting the Liberty of their Country; but had both the misfortune to lose their Lives, by the practices of d' Alva.

Horn, that gives Name to the County, is a small Town with a Castle, seated near the Maes, 24 miles South-east from Helmont, 25 North from Maesrichts, and 4 or 5 West from Ruremond.

Weert, the Chief Town, stands 12 miles West from Horn, 16 South from Helmont, and 25 North from Maesrichts.

CHAP. IV.

The County or Earldom of HAINAULT, Hannonia.

THIS Province derives its name from the River, Haine, which passeth through the midst of it called also Hainow and Henegow by the Germans, and is bounded on the North by Brabant, and part of Flanders, on the South by Cambresis, Picardy and Champagne, on the East by part of Brabant and the County of Namur, and on the West by the River Schelde, that separates it from Artois and part of Flanders. It is extended from North to South about 50 miles, and about the same from East to West. The Air is exceeding temperate and healthful, and the Soil fertile and water'd with the Schelde, Sambre, Haine, Dender, and divers other Rivers. Here are also found many Lakes and Ponds, Woods, some Mines of Iron and Lead, and Quarries of Marble and Touchstone.

Within this Province are comprised 24 Wall'd Towns, 950 Burroughs or Villages, and several Castles; also 3 Principalities, 10 Earldoms, 12 Peerages, 22 Baronies, and 26 Abbies, not to mention divers hereditary Offices appertaining to that Prince's Court, viz. Those of a Marshal, Seneschal, grand Hunter, Chamberlain, &c. The French at present possess the greater part of Hainault, and the rest remains under the Dominion of the Spaniards, as it is shewn in the ensuing Table.

Valentines, Valenciana, aut Valencena, is situated on the Confines of the Country of Ostrevant, on the River Schelde, which there receives the Rouel that divides it into two parts, and by several Channels passes through most of its Streets; distant 15 miles from Tournay to the South, and lying also in the middle between Mons to the West, and Cambray to the North-east. It was founded (as is generally believ'd) by the Roman Emperor Valentinian, and is at present a very large, fair and rich Town strongly Fortified. The Church of our Lady is an ancient but stately Building, having Pillars of Marble and Porphyry to support its Arches of Stone. The Church of S. Peter is very curiously Carved, as is also the Front of the Town-house adjoining. The Hospital for the maintaining and educating of poor Orphans, is well-endow'd. Over the Scheld are built 10 Bridges, on which stand many fair and large Houses. The Trade of the Town consists in Linnen-Cloth, Mohairs and Tabbies, to which is now added the Staple for French Wines. It was Besieged by the French King in the year, 1677. and taken by Storm; but upon the Inhabitants agreeing to pay 400 thousand Crowns for the building of a Citadel, it escaped being Sacked. It was granted to the French at the Treaty of Nimeguen, and hath been ever since possessed by them.

Bouchain, a small but strong Town, seated on the River Scheld, 10 miles above Valenciennes, and near as many from Cambray to the North; is of service for the Communication of those two Places in time of War, and therefore Besieg'd by the French in 1676, to whom it was surrender'd after one Assault, tho' an Army was marching to its Relief.

Quefnoy, tho' a small Town, hath a good Trade for its Manufacture of Linnens and Stuffs, and is reasonably well fortified. It stands about 15 miles from Bouchain to the East.

Landrecy is a very strong Town, seated on the Sambre, near the Borders of Cambray, and not above 6 miles from the Frontiers of Picardy, about 10 from Quefnoy, and 20 from Valenciennes to the South-East. It was formerly subject to the Duke of Arschob, under whom it held out against a long and furious Siege by the Emperor Charles V. in 1543. and the year following was surrender'd to him, together with Avesnes, a small Town 8 or 9 miles East from Landrecy. All these 3 were taken by the French and granted to them by the Pyrenean Peace in 1659.

Maubeuge stands upon the Sambre, in the mid-way between Avesnes and Mons, about 12 m. from each and is a Place of good Trade for Wollen Cloth.

Bavay, call'd Bavay Walon, to distinguish it from Bavay in Picardy, stands 8 miles West from Maubeuge, and 6 North-east from Quefnoy. It is thought by some to have been formerly a great City, nam'd Belgium, from whence the Country had its Name, but is at present but a small Place. These were both granted to the French by the Nimeguen Treaty.

Conde, or Condet, a small Town with a Castle, stands upon the Schelde, about 15 miles North-west from Bavay.

Marienburg, founded by Mary of Austria, Queen of Hungary, and Governess of the Low Countries, in 1542. and fortified with a very strong Wall and good Out-works, stands on the Borders of the Bishoprick of Leige, about 6 miles from the River Maes to the West, 10 from the Frontiers of Picardy to the North, and 30 from Landrecies to the East.

Philipville stands about 4 miles North from Marienburg, and is reckon'd part of the Province of Hainault. It was built soon after Marienburg, and nam'd from Philip II. King of Spain, who fortified it with five Royal Bastions, and other strong Works, these two making a Frontier against France on that side; but they have been both taken by that King, and granted to him by the Pyrenean Treaty.

Spanish HAINAULT.

MONS, Montel, and Montes Hanonise, the Capital City of Hainault, call'd Bergben in Flemish, is seated on an Hill of easie Ascent, near the Banks of the River Trill, which a little below falls into the Haine, almost in the midst between Namur to the East, and Doway to the West, at the distance of 35 miles from both, as also 16 from Valenciennes to the North-east, 26 from Bruxels to the South-west, and 20 from Tournay to the South-east. It is a large City and well fortified, with a Stone-Wall, firm Ramparts, 3 large Trenches and an old Castle. The Buildings are beautiful, the Streets large, and the Market-place spacious: The publick Edifices are also very magnificent, and among others the Palace wherein is convened the general Council of the Province; the Religious Houses, of which the College of Canonesses, Founded by S. Gualtrude Princess of Lorraine, is more especially remarkable; the whole Society consists only of Ladies of great Quality and high Birth, who are obliged to assist at Mass in the Morning, clothed in the Habit of Nuns, but have liberty to wear sumptuous Apparel in the Afternoon, and even to spend the rest of the day in Dancing, and Singing; and other Exercises of a free Conversation; and are also permitted to abandon the Abby, or to marry, whensoever they please. The Earls of Hainault had formerly the Title of Earls of Mons, and with the possession of the County receiv'd the Investiture of the Dignity of an Abbot, and other Perquisites holden in Fee of the Church, from the hands of the Lady Abbess of the said College. Mons is a Place of good Trade for divers Commodities, especially Wollen Stuffs, whereof they make great quantities. It was surpriz'd in 1572. by Count Lewis of Nassaw by a Stratagem; for 12 Soldiers in Habit of Merchants, obtaining leave to have the Gates opened for them earlier than ordinary, kill'd the Porter, and let in the Count with the Soldiers he brought for that purpose, who took possession of the Town without Opposition: But the same year the Duke d' Alva Besieg'd and recover'd it; from which time it quietly remained under the Spaniard, till 1678. that the French invested and had much distress'd it; when the Prince of Orange, his present Majesty, came to its Relief, and gain'd a signal Victory over the Duke of Luxemburg, upon which the Peace was immediately concluded. In the late War, viz. the 8th of April 1691. the French took this Town, but it was restored at the Peace.

Aeth, a small Town seated on the River Dender, 14 miles North from Mons, as many South from Oudenard, and about 20 South-west from Brussels, is a Place of good Trade for Linnen, and by reason of its situation near the Borders of these three Provinces of Hainault, Flanders, and Brabant, hath been at several times well fortified, especially by the French, after they had taken it in 1667; for being granted to them by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, Vauban was set to work, and great Cost was bestow'd in strengthening this most advanc'd Frontier; but they were oblig'd to restore it at the Peace of Nimeguen, it was again taken by the French in 1697. but restor'd at the Peace the same Year.

Lessen, or Lessines, is a small Wall'd Town, seated also on the Dendre, about 4 miles North from Aeth.

Engbien, or Anguion, stands about 3 miles West from Aeth, and hath had the Title of a Duchy.

Halle is seated on the very Borders of this Province, within 8 miles South of Brussels, and near 20 from Mons to the North. It stands in a very pleasant Country, and is water'd by the River Siene. It is not large nor very well built, and is chiefly noted for the famous Chappel of the Virginia Mary, whose Statue in it is cover'd with Gold, and is much resorted to by multitudes of Volatices, who annually make rich Offerings to it. It is Wall'd, but not being strong enough to endure a Siege, was quitred to the French in April, 1690. but since they left it, it hath been made stronger, and well Garilon'd for the security of Brussels.

Brairie le Comte, on the Frontiers of Brabant, about 3 miles South from Halle;

Soigny, about 3 or 4 miles South-west from it; and Roeles, or Reux, 4 miles from Soigny to the South, are all 3 Wall'd Towns.

On the Borders of Hainault, and Frontiers of Brabant, about 3 miles North-east from Soigny, as many South-west from Halle, and about the like distance from Enghein to the East, stands the Village of Steenkirck upon the Rivulet Senneque; a small place and not at all considerable, but for a Battle fought near it on the 24th of July, 1692. between the Confederates and the French.

Binche, stands upon a little Branch of the Haine,

7 or 8 miles South-east from Mons; it was formerly a populous Place, and made a Seat of Pleasure by Mary Queen of Hungary, when she was Governess of these Countries, who had a fine Palace here; but it hath suffer'd much by the Wars, particularly in 1544. it was burnt by the French: And since that the French took it; but finding they must part with it, demolish'd the Fortifications before they surrender'd it, according to the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, in 1668.

S. Gbislain stands about 3 miles West from Mons, it is also a wall'd Town, but not remarkably strong. As is also Beaumont, which stands 12 miles South from Binche, and 10 East from Mabeuge. It is a pleasant Town seated upon a Hill, as its name implies, and was anciently an Earldom belonging to the second Son of the Earl of Hainault. It was taken by the French, and granted to them by the Treaty in 1684. as was also Chimay, 14 miles South from it.

CHAPTER V.

The County of CAMBRESIS, Cameracensis Ager.

THIS small Country is bounded on the North and East by the Province of Hainault, on the West by that of Artois, and on the South by Picardy, including about 18 miles from North to South, and 25 from East to West, and is extremely fertile. Here was concluded a Treaty of Peace at Chateau-Cambresis, in the year 1559. between Philip II. King of Spain, and Henry II. King of France, which was very disadvantageous to the later, 198 considerable places being resign'd up for S. Quentin, Ham and Chatelet; however the present French King Lewis XIV. hath found means to get Possession of the whole Country, as well as of Cambrai, its Capital City; which were granted to him by the Treaty of Nimeguen.

The chief Towns { Cambrai, Arch-bish. and Cap.
are these, viz. { Chateau Cambresis.
 { Creveccœur,

CAMBRAÏ, Cameracum, is seated on the River Scheld, on the Confines of Artois, at the distance of 15 miles from Doway to the South; 20 from Arras to the East, as many from Perone to the North, 16 from Valenciennes, and 60 from Brussels to the South. It was heretofore an Episcopal See (subject to the Archbishop of Rheims); but at length erected into a Metropolitan by Pope Paul IV. A. D. 1559. It was also some time an Imperial and Free City under the protection of the Count of Alost; but being afterward seiz'd by the Emperor Charles V. and fortified with two Citadels, it fell into the hands of the Spaniard, and was united to the Earldom of Hainault. At length it was storm'd by the Forces of the present French King, on the 18th day of April, 1667. and surrender'd to him by the Articles of the Treaty of Nimeguen, in the year ensuing.

CHAPTER VI.

The Dutchy of LUXEMBURG, Luxemburgensis Ducatus.

THIS Province is seated in the Lower Germany, and is bounded on the North by part of the Bishoprick of Liege and the Dutchy of Limburg, on the South by Lorraine, on the East by the River Moselle and the Archbishoprick of Triers, and on the West by the River Maese, that parts it from Champaign and Namur. Its utmost extent from South to North consists of about 70 miles, and from East to West, 60 miles. It is by Geographers divided into two Parts, whereof that to the North call'd Famenne is a fertile Soil, yielding store of Corn and some Wine; the other towards France and the Maes, call'd Ardenne, is Wooddy and less Fruitful, but abounds with Venison and Game of all sorts. Here are also some Mountains, in which are found Mines of Iron. The chief Rivers are the Moselle, Else, Sernay, and the Ourte. In the extent of this Dutchy are contain'd 20 large Wall'd Towns, and about 1200. Villages. The ancient Earls and Dukes of Luxemburg were Princes of great Honour and Interest; of these Henry II. obtained the Imperial Dignity; in 1208. John his Son enjoy'd the Crown of Bohemia; Charles the Son of John and Wenceslaus the Son of Charles, were successively Emperors: And finally Sigismund was Emperor, King of Hungary and Bohemia, as well as Duke of Luxemburg, about the year 1400. Elizabeth the Niece and Successor of Sigismund, having no Issue, sold this Dutchy to Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, and so it came to the King of Spain, from whom all the Southern part of it has been wrested by the King of France, and Retained till the Peace of Ryswick, by which he was oblig'd to surrender the wholly Dutchy, and the County of Chiny. This Province is observ'd to have more Gentry and Nobility than any of the rest of these Countries. The chief Cities and Towns in it are,

Luxemburg,

Luxemburg, Cap.	Toix.	Rode Macheren.
Theonville.	La Ferte.	Konings Mueleren.
Montmedy.	Astenay.	Sirick.
Damwillers.	Morville.	Mastieres.
Durby.	Viande.	Neufchatel.
La Roche en Ardenne.	Eichternach.	Vitron.
S. Vit.	Bastogne.

LUXEMBURG, Luciburgum, aut Luxemburgum, is seated partly on a Rocky Hill, which is almost furrounded by the little River Astiz, or Else, and partly on a Plain at the Bottom of the Hill, at the distance of 45 miles from the River Maes to the East, 12 from the Moselle to the West, 70 South-east from Namur, 62 South from Liege, 22 West from Triers, and about 16 or 17 from the Frontiers of Lorrain. It is the old Town that stands in the Plain, which being commanded by the Hill, caused the building the new Town there, in which the Buildings are reasonably fair, and many of the Houses of Stone. It is a very strong Place; for on one side the Hill it's very steep and surrounded by the River, which is a good Defence; and on the other it is Fortified with strong Bastions, Counter-guards, Half-moons, Ravelins and Ditches, besides two covered Ways and several Redoubts. Notwithstanding which, the French took it the 4th of June, 1684. after a Siege of 26 days, and had it granted to them, together with its Dependences, in the succeeding Truce concluded the same Year, but was restored to the King of Spain in 1698. in pursuance of the Treaty of Rijswick.

Theonville or Diedenboven, Theonvilla, aut Theonifvilla, stands on the Western Bank of the River Moselle, 15 miles South from Luxemburg; it is a good Town, and of old well fortified by the Emperor Charles the Great; but the French having taken it in 1558. when it was restored to the Spaniards, they added to its Fortifications six Bulwarks, four large Horn-works and other Strengths: However, the French found means to take it again, and had it granted to them by the Pyrenean Treaty; as was also.

Montmedy, a good strong fortified Town, seated on a Hill near the River Cher, 34 miles from Theonville to the West, and about 10 from the River Maes to the East.

Damwillers, which stands 12 miles South from Montmedy, and though a Town of good Strength, was several times Taken by the French, viz. in 1542. 1552. and 1637. and granted to them by the Pyrenean Treaty; but afterwards, by that of Aix la Chapelle, it was dismantled.

Arlon, is seated on the River Semy, 13 miles from Luxemburg to the West. It was a neat and handsome Town, but hath suffer'd much in the Wars.

Neufchatel, or the New Castle, standing about 14 miles from Arlon to the West, was formerly a Place of great Strength and Beauty, but now not so considerable.

Bastogne, stands 20 miles North from Arlon, and was heretofore a vast Market for Corn and Cattel.

Echternach stands near the Frontiers of Treves, and 25 miles East from Arlon. It is a small Town and not very considerable.

Vianden is seated upon the small River Ourt, 14 miles from Echternach to the N. W. It is an ancient Earldom, belonging to the Illustrious Family of Orange.

S. Vit, 18 miles North from Vianden, is a neat handsome Town, giving Title to an Earldom, and enjoying a Jurisdiction over several Villages.

Roche en Ardenne, is seated on the River Ourt, 26 miles from S. Vit to the West, and 12 from Bastogne to the North. It is a pretty little Town with the Title of an Earldom also, and hath a Territory of several miles extent.

Durby is another small Town, seated on the same River Ourt, 10 miles North from Roche, and likewise hath the Title of an Earldom.

CHAP. VII.

The Earldom of NAMUR, Namurensis Comitatus.

THIS County is bounded on the N. by Brabant, on the West by Hainault, on the S. by part of Hainault and of Luxemburg, and on the E. by part of Luxemburg and the Bishopricks of Liege. It is extended from W. to E. for the space of about 30 miles, and from N. to S. about 24 miles. There are found in it divers Mines of Iron and Lead, also many Quarries of Marble, and a sort of Stone call'd Houle, that serves for Fuel. In this Province are reckoned up 6 or 7 considerable Towns, together with 180 Burghs or Villages, and some fair Abbies, viz.

Namur, Bish. Cap.	Bovines.	Florennes.
Charlemont.	Walcourt.	Charleroy.
Tille-chateau.	Bonaf, Ab.	Mal-Roy.

NAMUR, Namurcum, the Capital City of the Province, is seated at the confluence of the Sambre and the Maes, between 2 small Hills, at the distance of 24 miles from Louvain to the South, 30 from Bruxels to the South-east, 30 above Liege to the West, 18 from Huy, and 35 from Mons to the East. Pope Paul IV. establish'd therein an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Cambray, and the Church of S. Albin, was erected into a Cathedral in the year 1569. The Town is beautified with many other stately Churches, Monasteries and publick Edifices built of Stone. The greatest part of the City lies on the North-side the Sambre, and therein stands the Town-house, the Market-place and several Churches, but the chief Parochial Church stands on the other side, as doth the Castle: A fair Stone Bridge over the Sambre joins these 2 parts, and from the latter is a Bridge also of Stone over the Maes. The Fortifications are very strong, having, besides the Wall and Ditches, Ravelins and Countercarps well built and contriv'd according to the modern manner; notwithstanding which, the French took it on the 3d of July, 1692. But the Contederates regained it after a long and vigorous Siege, under the Conduct of His Majesty King William in the year 1695.

Bovines or Boignes, Bovina, Boviniacum aut Bovinum, is situated on the West-side of the Maes below Dinant, and 10 miles beyond Namur to the South. This little Town was encompass'd with Walls in the year 1173. by the Order of Henry, surnam'd the Blind, Earl of Namur, being a País between Luxemburg and Namur; it suffer'd much by the Wars at several times, and was finally taken by the French in 1676. without making the least Resistance.

Charlemont, Carolomontium, stands on the top of an high Hill, the foot whereof is water'd by the River Maes being distant 18. miles from Namur to the South. It is a strong place, and was fortified with divers regular Works, A. D. 1555. by the Emperor Charles V. to whom it was granted by a certain Bishop of Liege, and united to the Earldom of Namur.

Walcourt or Valecourt standing 20 miles South-west from Namur, is a small Town, and not considerable, except for the Battel fought near it in the year, 1689. between the French and Confederate Armies.

Charleroy, Carolo-Regium, a strong Fortress, is seated on an Hill near the Sambre on the Frontiers of Hai- nault, almost in the midst between Namur and Mons, at the distance of 14 miles from the first, and 20 from the latter; as also 24 from Bruxels to the South. The Town was built A. D. 1666. near a small Village named Charney, by the Marquís of Castel-Rodrigo, on purpose to hinder the Inroads of the French Garrisons betwixt the Sambre and the Maes, and was call'd Charleroy in honour of Charles II. the present King of Spain: However, it was taken by them in the Year ensuing, and resign'd to their King Lewis XIV. by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle, on the 2d day of May, 1668. after which they employ'd great Diligence and Cost in repairing the Fortifications and adding new ones, whereby they made it exceeding strong, but were however oblig'd to restore it to the King of Spain at the Conclusion of the Peace of Nimeguen; but again in the late War they besieg'd it with a very numerous Army, and after 27 days Resistance the Garrison was fain to surrender on the 1st of October; 1693. But it is now restor'd to the King of Spain in pursuance of the Treaty at Ryswick

C H A P. VIII.

The Dutchy of LIMBURG, Limburgensis Ducatus.

THIS Dutchy hath that of Zuliers for its Bounds on the North and East, the Bishoprick of Liege on the West, and a small part of Luxemburg on the South. It is extended from South to North for the space of 30 miles, and about 25 from West to East. The Country brings forth good store of Wheat and Barly, and other Corn, also very good Pasture and several Medicinal Herbs. Here are also many Mines of Iron and Lead, and Pits of Coal.

The chief Towns are } Limburg, Cap.
 } Dalem, belonging to the Hollanders.
 } Rolduc.
 } Franquemont or Valkenberg.

LIMBURG, Limburgum, is advantageously situated on the Frontiers of the Bishoprick of Liege, near the Banks of the River Wesdo, being distant 20 miles from Liege to the East, 20 from Maastricht, about 45 from the River Rhine to the West, and as many from the Messelle to the North. It is but a small Town, having only one Street, and that but ordinarily built; but is considerable on account of its situation on the edge of a high Rock, which, together with the Wall, Trench, and other Fortifications, made it exceeding strong. It was taken by the Hollanders in the year 1633. but the Spaniards recover'd it within a little while after; and in 1675. was besieged by the French, whom the Garrison very courageously resisted, but were forced however to surrender, and by them it was dismantled before they restor'd it at the Treaty of Nimeguen.

Dalem, Daleum, is a small Town with a Castle, water'd by a Rivulet that dischargeth it self into the Maes, and is distant 10 miles from Liege to the South east, and 15 from Limburg to the North-west. It formerly enjoy'd the Title of an Earldom under its proper Counts or Earls, and had very large Territories within its Jurisdiction. But Henry II. Duke of Brabant surpriz'd this Town, and united it to his Dominions. Afterward it depended on the Dutchy of Limburg, and at present is possess'd by the Hollanders, altho' the French took it from them in the year 1672. and ruin'd the Castle, together with the other Fortifications, before they could be made to abandon the place.

Rolduc or 's Hertogen raldt, is seated on the Borders of the Dutchy of Zuliers, about 12 miles East from Valkenberg, and 24 from Maastricht. It is a neat little Town, and hath an old Castle for its defence.

Valkenberg, call'd by the French Fauguement, is a large and neat Town belonging to the Dutch, seated on the River Genfe at the distance of 10 miles from Dalem to the North, as many from Maastricht to the East; it was well fortified, and had a strong Castle before the French took it in 1672. who added to its Works and made it much stronger; however, the Dutch retook it soon after, and have since demolish'd the Fortifications.

C H A P. IX.

The Bishoprick of LIEGE, Leodiensis Ditio.

THO' the Diocese of Liege be part of the Empire, and of the Circle of Westphalia; yet because of its situation in the midst of some of those Provinces, that are always reckon'd part of the Netherlands, some Geographers have plac'd its Description here, whose Example we shall follow.

This Country is bounded on the North by Brabant, on the West by part of Brabant and the County of Namur, on the South by the Duchy of Luxemburg, and on the East by those of Limburg and Juliers. Its Extent from South to North consists of about 70 miles, from West to East 25 miles; but in some parts it stretches out in a narrow Tract near 60 miles. The Air is temperate and healthful, and the Soil fertile, bringing forth abundance of Grains, Fruits, Cattle and Venison. It also affords divers Mines of Iron and Lead, together with Quarries of Marble; but more especially great quantities of Brimstone and Vitriol. The Bishop is Lord of all these Territories, and a Prince of the Empire, bearing also the Title of Duke of Bouillon, Marquiss of Franchimont, and Earl of Looz and Habayn, which are particular Lordships in this Country. In the Bishoprick of Liege are compriz'd 53 Baronies, a great number of Abbies, 24 walled Towns, and above 1500 Villages. The most considerable whereof are.

LIEGE, Leodium, aut Leodicum, call'd Luyck by the Inhabitants, and Lutyck by the Germans, is seated on the West-side of the Maes in a pleasant Valley water'd with the Rivers Vese, Ute and Ambliar, that discharge themselves into the Maes a little before it enters into the Town, at the distance of 50 miles East from Brussels, 65 from Cologne to the West, and 12 from Maesricht to the South. It is an Imperial and Free City under the Protection of its proper Bishop, whose See was first establish'd at Tongres, then translated to Maesricht, and at last remov'd hither about the year 713, by St. Hubert the Successor of St. Lambert Martyr, before which it was a small Village only, but afterwards encreas'd daily, and in 1007. Bishop Nogger caus'd it to be Wall'd, and at present it is a large and beautiful City; the Streets are spacious and well built; the River Maes runs through the Town in two Arms, and many smaller Streams, which, together with the Legie and the three Rivulets of Ute, Vese and Ambliar (that take their Rise in the Forest of Ardenne and fall into the Maes; here) Water almost every Street, and have many stately Bridges over them. The publick Buildings are very magnificent, the chief whereof are the Bishop's Palace and 8. Collegiate Churches, together with a great number of Abbies and other Religious Houses, besides the Cathedral Church dedicated to S. Lambert which is famous for its Chapter, as being one of the most renowned in Christendom, consisting of Princes, Cardinals and Persons of the highest Quality; neither is any one admitted therein, unless he be descended of a noble Family, or hath merited this favour on the Account of his profound Learning. In S. William's Convent without the Gate, lies buried the famous English Traveller Sir John Mandevil. Here is an University, formerly exceeding famous, for the Persons of great Quality Students in it. Many King's Sons, besides Dukes and Lords, were frequently found here; nay, in 1131. there were no less than 23 Kings Sons resident in this University at one time, as Meibomius relates. The City is fortified with a Citadel, Bulwarks and several Outworks, and is judg'd to be about four miles in compass. Besides the Churches above-mention'd, there are many others, even to the number of an hundred in all; which, as also the Convents, are all so stately and well built, that this City is judg'd to outvie any in Germany. Among the Religious Houses there is a College of English Jesuits. In the year 1648. Charles Duke of Burgandy took and sack'd this City, and put the Inhabitants to the Sword, of whom, 'tis said, no less than 100 thousand were destroy'd by him. The French surpriz'd it in 1675. and demolish'd the Citadel, which hath been since repair'd, and new Fortifications added, especially in the year, 1693. upon Apprehensions of the French Designs against them.

Tongres, Tungri, aut Aduaticæ Tongorum, a very ancient Town, built on the Banks of the little River Zecker, 10 miles from Liege to the North west, and as many from Maesricht to the West. It was anciently, even so early as the time of the Romans, a very considerable City, of whose Temples and other Buildings there still remain some Monuments. S. Maternus, who is said to have been S. Peter's Disciple, planted Christianity here, and erected an Episcopal See. After which it grew so large, that when Attila the Hun sack'd it, he destroy'd an hundred Churches. Of later days it hath not been so very Eminent; for its See was translated to Maesricht, and thence to Liege, as hath been already said, whereby it declin'd, and is at present a good Town only. The French took possession of it in 1762. but quitted it when they had taken Maesricht.

Huy or Hoey, Huam, Huyum aut Huyonium, was heretofore a famous and potent City call'd Beneſactum, but being afterward often ruin'd by the Incursions of the Barbarians, it lost both its Lordship and Name. It stands in the District of Condrotz, at the distance of 15 miles from Liege to the South-west towards Namur on the East-side of the Maes, where the Brook Huy, from whence the Town takes its Name, runs into this River, that divides the Town into two parts, and over which is erected a fair Stone-bridge now half demolish'd. It is defended with a very strong Castle, which was founded on a high Hill by Eberard Cardinal of March and Bishop of Liege. The Country adjoining was, for some time, govern'd by certain particular Earls, until they resign'd their Right to the Bishop of Liege. There are many Iron Mines in the Neighbourhood, whence the Inhabitants of Huy have their chief Employment. The Town was taken by the French Forces, A. D. 1675. and its Fortifications were destroyed in the ensuing Year; but it being afterward restor'd to the Bishop of Liege, he caus'd the Works to be repair'd with much diligence, and render'd it a Place of tolerable Strength. However, the French took it in 1693. but the Confederates recover'd it the next year.

Dinant, Dinantium, Dinantium aut Dionantium, is seated on the East-side of the Maes in the Confines of the County of Namur; from the Capital City whereof it is distant 12 miles to the South, as also 7 from Charlemont to the North, half a League from Bourvines, and 36 miles from Liege to the South-west. This Town is fortified with a strong Castle built on a rock, cut almost on all sides, but hath been often taken and regain'd during the Wars. The French made themselves Masters of it in 1675. and raz'd the Citadel, but afterwards rebuilt it, and maintained a Garrison in the place, till by the Treaty of Reswick they were oblig'd to restore it to the Prince of Liege.

Buillon or Bulboigne, is seated on the River Semois, 30 miles South from Dinant, not above 8 or 10 from the Borders of Champaign, about 16 East from the River Maes, and 40 West from Luxemburg. It is well guarded with a strong Castle, and with its small Territory adjoining gives the Title of Duke to the Bishop of Liege, which was also claim'd and assum'd by the Barons of Sedan. Of this place was that famous Godfrey Duke, who was so celebrated through all Nations for his Courage and Bravery in the Conquest of Jerusalem, whereof he was the first Christian King.

Franchimont, formerly a considerable City, before Charles Duke of Burgundy destroy'd it; at present it is a good large Village only, and stands on the River Theu 16 miles from Liege and 8 South-west from Limburg. This Town, with the adjacent Territory, gives the Title of a Marquis to the Bishop of Liege.

About 5 or 6 miles South from Franchimont, in a Valley encompass'd with Hills and high Mountains, stands the little Wall'd Town named

Spa or Spaw, much resorted to for the famous Medicinal Waters that spring in and near the Town. Of these there are four several Springs; the strongest is that called Geronster, which rises in a Wood on the South-side of the Town: Two other call'd Sauvenir and Tomelet, rise on the other side the Town; but the chiefest of all is that nam'd Pohunt, which springs in the Town, and is beautified with a handsome Stone-work over it, built by the Bishop of Liege, who is Lord of the Town. From this last Fountain vast quantities of the Water is yearly sent out to all parts of Europe, besides what is drunk here. These Springs have procur'd the Town a general Protection, so that in the hottest Wars it has always escap'd untouch'd.

Borch-loen or Loots, the chief Town of the Land of Loon, formerly govern'd by its own Lords, who had the Title of Counts of Diofstein, is seated 12 miles from Liege to the North-west; in it stands a famous Collegiate Church dedicated to S. Adulphus.

S. Truyen, nam'd from a Monastery of Benedictines, dedicated to S. Trudo, call'd also by corruption S. Tran and Centron, is a good wall'd Town, distant 5 miles from Borch-loen to the West, and about 3 from Landen and Leeuwe in Brabant.

Bilsen, a small Town, near which stands a Nunnery of Ladies of Quality, who do not vow perpetual Chastity, but are allow'd to leave their Cells and ma'y; it is 6 miles distant from Maestricht to the West.

Hasselt, a well built and populous Town, is seated on the River Demer 8 miles from Bilsen, wherein the Bishop of Liege hath a noble Palace.

Maesyeck, stands on the Maes, 18 miles North from Maestricht.

Of the United Netherlands.

CHAP. X.

OF the Situation, Soil, Rivers, ancient State and History of these Provinces to the Time of their Subjection to the King of Spain, an Account hath been already given, in speaking of the Netherlands in general: What remains, is to give the Reader some Idea of the Rise and Establishment of this Republick, known by the Name of The States General of the United Netherlands, before we proceed to the Description of the Country. In order to which it is necessary to begin with the first occasions of their Defection from Spain, which were as follow.

The People of these Countries enjoyed large Privileges under the ancient Princes, who were content always to maintain 'em to them, because the smallness of their respective Dominions, made their greatest Strength consist in the Affections of their Subjects: But when, afterwards, all these Provinces became subject to one Prince, who had also large Dominions elsewhere, the People were treated with less Indulgence. Charles V. was the first of these, who, as he was King of Spain, and Emperor of Germany, as well as Duke of Burgundy, had different Interests from his Predecessors, and being engaged in a War with France, brought Foreign Forces from his other Dominions into the Netherlands, notwithstanding the Laws to the contrary; but being a Native of this Country, of a gentle and generous Nature, residing long in it, and using the Native Nobility in the Government, he was generally belov'd, and his Actions gave no disgust.

But his Son Philip, being born in Spain, was of the Humour of that Nation, very Aultere, and had also so much Affection for his Country-men, that he conferr'd upon them all the Offices of Honour and Authority in these Countries, to the great displeasure of the Flemish Nobility; and himself also resided in Spain, governing these States by a Deputy; continu'd the Foreign Forces on foot, though the War were at an end; and which most of all disquieted the People, declar'd himself very zealous for the Romish Religion; and therefore the Edicts against Luther, that had been made in his Father's time; but by the Indulgence of Charles, had not been executed here, Philip revives, and commands to be strictly executed; which was very grievous, because the number of the Protestant Party was large.

In the year 1550. the Dutchess of Parma, the King's Sister, was made Governess of the Netherlands; she was a Person of great Wisdom and Goodness; but the chief Minister Cardinal Grandvill, whom the King appointed to assist her, was of an intolerable proud and cruel Nature, and though of an obscure mean Birth, so insolent to the Nobility, that what with that, and his cruel Prosecution by the Inquisition, which was now set on foot for the suppression of Protestantism, he became universally odious, and the Nobility refus'd to assist at the Councils while he sat at the Head of them: Wherefore the good Dutchess prevail'd upon the King to remove him, and moderate the Edicts about Religion.

But the Inquisition was soon after reviv'd, and notwithstanding the Dutchess's good Offices, the King commands all Heretics to be put to Death, and many were Executed accordingly; which created Horror and Rage in the Minds of the People, and caused them to break out in open Mutinies, to oppose the Executions, and release the Prisoners that were condemn'd for Religion. Also several of the Nobility confederated together against the Inquisition; and a great number, headed by the Lord of Brederoede, boldly Petition'd the Governess for abolishing it: To which she gave a calm Answer, and representing the Matter kindly to the King, prevail'd upon him to grant their Request; but the Favour being long delay'd, the People were dissatisfied, and at length broke out into open Rebellion, and committed many outrageous Actions; but were soon pacified by the Dutchess, and the publick Peace once more restor'd. But the King was still resolv'd to suppress this Heresie, (as he call'd it) and punish these mutinous Subjects; and therefore sent his Favourite the Duke of Alva, in the year 1567. into the Netherlands, with an Army of 10000 Spanish and Italian Soldiers, to assist the Dutchess in the execution of his Commands: Upon whose arrival, the People were in general so discontented, that great numbers of the Richer sort retir'd out of the Provinces; and the Dutchess foreseeing the Evils that were approaching, desir'd leave of the King to resign the Government; which was soon granted, and that Charge, with greater power than usual, conferr'd on the Duke of Alva: Who immediately set himself to work to quell the Disorders, but by a different method than what had been used by the prudent Dutchess; for whereas she by mildness had pacified the People and brought them to Reason, he resolv'd by Rigor to force them to submit: And first of all, without regard to the Laws of the Land, he erected a new Court of Judicature, for Trying those that had been concerned in the late Insurrections; and many were condemn'd and executed thereupon. The Inquisition was set to work anew, and executed with greater Rigor than before; and many other things transacted that were contrary to the Liberties of the People, the Privileges of the Towns, and the known Laws of the Country: Which though the Nobility and People were exceedingly incens'd at, the Governor was not at all concern'd, but resolv'd to pursue his own Methods, and break the Strength of the discontented Party; which he thought he could not effectually do, without cutting off their Heads; the chief whereof were the Prince of Orange, Count Egmont, and Count Horn.

The Prince of Orange was a Person of great Interest, by the large Possessions he was Master of; and by reason of his great Wisdom and Goodness, was belov'd by all, as he had particularly been by the Emperor Charles V. who made him Governor of Holland.

Count Egmont was a great Soldier, and had enjoy'd the highest Places of Honour and Trust in Flanders, and was also exceedingly belov'd by the People; as was likewise Count Horn, who had a large Estate in Brabant.

These three the Duke of Alva was resolv'd to take off; and accordingly the two latter were seized and imprisoned, and after some Months time Tried and Executed for being accessory to the late Insurrection, though they had been highly instrumental in suppressing it; but the Prince of Orange, having in time retir'd into Germany, sav'd his Life, though with the loss of his Estate, for that was seized as forfeited to the King. These Arbitrary and cruel Proceedings of Alva enraged the People to the highest degree, and made them resolve Revenge; and in order to it, great numbers flock to the Prince of Orange as their Head, who with them, and such other Forces as he could raise, invaded the Provinces. But the Spanish Army was too powerful, so that the Prince was forced to return without effecting any thing. And Alva, glorying in his good Fortune, insolently caused his own Statue to be erected, with two Figures, representing the Estates of the Low Countries, under his Feet; and demanded of the States larger Supplies for the Army than they could grant: Who petition the King thereupon, but without Redress; and persisting in their Refusal, d'Alva publishes an Edict without their Consent, for Levying the Money he demanded; and upon the People's refusing to pay it, caus'd the Soldiers to take it by force, and commanded those to be hang'd upon the Sign-posts that had refused to pay; but was interrupted in his career by the arrival of News from Holland, That the Briel was seized by the Gueses: These were the Protestants, to whom the Papists had given that Name in Contempt, and who, to avoid the Rigor of the Inquisition, and d'Alva's Government, had fled, some into the Woods and Fastnesses, and others to Sea, where they lived upon Spoil, &c. These being grown strong by the additions of some of the remains of the Prince of Orange's Army, landed in Holland, and seized the Briel; which was follow'd by the Revolt of most of the Towns of Holland and Zealand; and the Prince of Orange coming soon after out of Germany with new Forces, became so formidable, that the King found it absolutely necessary to remove the Duke of Alva, whose violent Proceedings had rais'd such a Spirit of Hatred, not only of him, but of the whole Spanish Interest, that without very prudent and cautious management, there was little hopes of ever bringing these Provinces to Obedience. After d'Alva's departure, Requises had the Government for a little time; but he dying, the Administration fell of course to the Council, till a new Governor came. Don John of Austria was appointed to succeed; but before he could arrive, the People grew mutinous, and oblig'd the Council to assemble the States: Who being met at Ghent in the year 1576. agreed upon the Act, call'd The Pacification of Ghent; the substance whereof was, That all Foreign Soldiers be expell'd, the ancient Forms of Government restor'd, and matters of Religion refer'd to the States of each Province: But the Foreigners refus'd to depart, and were therefore declared Rebels; in revenge whereof they plunder'd several Towns, particularly Antwerp. And when Don John arriv'd, the Estates refused to admit him till he had confirm'd the Pacification of Ghent; but he shortly after renounced it, and seizing the Castle of Namur, gave new occasions for a Breach: And immediately both Parties prepared for War. The Provinces call the Prince of Orange to Brussels, and make him Protector of Brabant; and the Spaniards draw their Armies together in Namur and Luxemburg; but Don John dying suddenly, and a new Party being risen among the Confederates, little was done till the Union of Utrecht.

The UNION of UTRECHT, from which the Original of this Common-wealth must be dated, was a firm Alliance agreed upon in the year 1579. by the Seven Northern Provinces of the Netherlands, and Signed at the City of Utrecht: By which they united themselves, so as never to be divided, reserving however to each Province, all its former Rights, Laws and Customs. All the Provinces bound themselves to assist one another against all Enemies whatsoever, to carry on all Wars, and maintain all Frontier Towns at their united Expence; and by a joint Council of the Representatives of all the Provinces, transact all Affairs relating to the Union.

But this new-erected State found it self too weak to resist the valiant Duke of Parma, the Successor of Don John; who, tho' when he came to the Government, had only the Provinces of Namur and Luxemburg, free from the Confederacy, yet by his own Conduct and Valour, and the Strength of the Army he got together, was powerful enough in a little time to reduce the Confederates to such extreme distress, that in the Term of Poor and Distressed States, they implored the Assistance of our Queen Elizabeth, offering her the Sovereignty of their State, if she would afford them Protection. The Queen refused the Dominion, but lent them Money and Soldiers, in the year 1585, upon the Security of the Briel, Flushing and Rammekins, which they put into her Hands: And in 1587. sent over more Forces under the Earl of Leicester, whom the States swore Obedience to, and admitted as their Governor: But his Government lasted not long, for some differences arising between him and the States, the Queen recall'd him, but continu'd her former Assistance to the Dutch; who after Leicester's departure, chose Prince Maurice, Son to the late Prince William of Orange (who was Assassinated at Deft by a Spaniard) for their Governor, who proved one of the greatest Captains of the Age, in wise Conduct, admiral Discipline, and excellent manner of Fortifying; which with the Diverfion that Queen Elizabeth gave the Spaniards in her famous War with them, did restore the Affairs of this State, that the valiant Duke of Parma dying, King Philip found it necessary to think of Peace; which the States were very little solicitous of: For not only were their Forces under Prince Maurice successful enough, but their Subjects had found the way to the East-Indies, and began to supplant the Portugues, and make Holland the European Staple for the Commodities of those Countries; and were powerful enough at Sea to threaten the Spanish Plate Fleets and West-Indian Dominions; so that while the Spaniard, by the management of the Arch-Duke Albert, now Governor of the Netherlands, carried on the War at great Expence, in hopes of making the States ask a Peace, he found that the underhand Overtures he made them were but coldly receiv'd, and that they refus'd to grant a Cessation of Arms, or to be treated with upon any other Terms than as a FREE STATE, which he was at last forced to comply with: And,

In the year 1609. a Truce was concluded for 12 Years; by which the Provinces were declared Free, both Parties allowed the full enjoyment of all that they then possessed, and free Commerce established betwixt them,

And thus this War of 48 years continuance ended with the total Alienation of 7 Provinces from the Spanish Dominions, and the Erection of a State, which though it rose from such poor beginning, and struggl'd with the most Potent Prince of Europe, has grown to be one of the most Powerful, Rich, Well-Planted and Populous of Europe.

Of the Government of the United Netherlands in general, and of Holland in particular.

THE Supreme Authority is the Assembly of the Representatives of the Seven Provinces, call'd, The Assembly of the States General; which consists of several Voices, one for each Province, to whom belongs the power of making War or Peace, receiving and dispatching of Ambassadors, taking care of Frontier Towns, and assigning the Sums to be Levied for the Defence and Service of the Union. Assistant to these, there are the Council of State, and the Council of the Admiralty. The first is composed of 12 Persons; (whereof Guelderland sends 2, Holland 3, Zealand 2, Utrecht 2, Friesland 1, Overijssel 1, and Groningen 1) who previously deliberate, the Matters to be brought before the States General, form the state of Expence for the succeeding year, and propose the ways of Levying it, &c. Assistant to this Council is the Chamber of Accounts, composed of two Deputies from each Province, who audit the publick Accounts, and dispose the Finances. The Council of the Admiralty, when the States order the fitting out a Fleet, have the care of it, and the ordering of all Marine Affairs; Sub-ordinate to which are the five Colleges in Holland, Zealand, and Friezland, who execute the Orders they receive from this Council.

The Resolutions of the States General, when they concern Peace or War, Foreign Alliances, or raising Money, are never made but by the Agreement of every Province; nor must the Provinces conclude without the Agreement of every City; so that when such a matter comes before the States, they separate, each Member returning to his respective Province, where in the Assembly of every Provincial State the Matter is propos'd, with which the Deputies return to their Principals the Cities, for their consent; which makes the Resolutions very tedious and liable to interruption, by the Interest an opposite Party may make in any one of the Cities; which hath sometimes happen'd, particularly in the case of the Relief of Luxemburg, when the City of Amsterdam Dissenting, hinder'd the raising the 16000 Men propos'd to save that Place, which was, for want of this Relief, taken by the French in 1634.

By which, the Reader will see, That though the States General represent the Sovereignty, the Power is diffus'd, and reits indeed in the several Cities that send Deputies to the States of the Province; for every Province is a distinct State, as are also all the Cities, in matters that concern themselves only. As a Specimen of the whole, we shall instance the City of Amsterdam, and the Province of Holland.

The Sovereignty of Amsterdam is lodged in the Council or Senate, which is compos'd of 36 Persons, who serve for Life, and upon the death of one, the rest chuse another of the Burghers to supply his Place. This Council chuses the Magistrates and Officers, and the Deputy which represents the City in the Provincial State; (so that the People have no share in Elections) and also make Laws for the Government of the City, and Levy the Taxes for the publick Service of the City in particular, and its Quota for the Union in General: By its Magistrates (which are Burgomasters equal to our Lord Mayor, Schepens, or Judges, and Schout, or Sheriff) the City executes an independent Government, judges all Causes Civil and Criminal, and inflicts Punishments, even to Death, without the Cognizance of any other Power whatsoever. The like Authority is found in all the Cities, but with some little variation, not needful here to be mention'd.

The Provincial State of Holland is compos'd of the Deputies of the Nobility, and the Cities, which make Nineteen Voices, whereof the Nobles have One, and these Cities, viz. Dort, Harlem, Delft, Leyden, Amsterdam, Goude, Rotterdam, Gorcum, Scheidam, Schonebooren, Briel, Alcmaer, Horn, Enchuyssen, Edam, Monickdam, Medenblick and Purmeren, One a piece, which make the other Eighteen Voices; which, as we have already said, must all concur in the making of any new Alliance, declaring War and making Peace, &c. These assemble at the Hague, as do also the States General and the Council of State.

The States of the other Provinces are much the same, only that the Nobility in some of them being more numerous, have a greater share; and in Utrecht the Deputies of the Clergy have Session; and in Friezland and Groninghen, besides the Towns, the Lands divided into Bailiages, send Deputies to the States.

The Prince of Orange is the Person that represents the Dignity of this State, by his splendid Court, publick Guards, &c. He is Captain General and Lord High Admiral, and thereby disposes of all Military and Marine Commands. He is Stadtholder of five of the seven Provinces; (for Prince Cassimer of Nassaw, is Stadtholder of Friezland and Groninghen) and hath the Nomination of Magistrates of the Cities out of a double number presented to him: He pardons the Penalties of Crimes, and hath Session in the Council of State; and though he doth not sit in the Assembly of States General, yet do they not resolve any important Matter without his Advice. He hath also great influence in several of the Provincial States, by the large portion of Lands he is Owner of, whereby he hath many Voices in Electing the Deputies of the Nobles. He is exceeding Rich, as well by the vast Patrimonial Estate descended to him from his Ancestors, among which are many Sovereign Principalities and Lordships, as by the large Revenues belonging to his several Charges and Commands. All which are at present possess'd by his most Excellent Majesty William King of Great Britain, &c. Whose Ancestors that have enjoyed the same Dignity in this State, are these, viz.

I. William of Nassaw, Prince of Orange, who was Governor of Holland and Zealand, under Charles V. and Philip II. and by his excellent Wisdom, Goodness and Courage, acquir'd the greatest Esteem and Authority imaginable among the People; and was therefore the Person to whom they applied themselves for Relief from the Oppressions of the Duke of Alva, &c. As we have already shewn. He was Assassinated at Delft in Holland by a Spanish Soldier, in the year 1584.

II. Maurice of Nassaw, Prince of Orange, and Son of William, by whose wise Conduct the Confederacy, (which he found Poor and Distressed) was raised to a very powerful State, and acknowledged Free by the King of Spain. He died A. D. 1625. and was Succeeded by his half-Brother.

III. Henry Frederick, a Prince of great Valour, Prudence and Fortune: He died in the year 1647.

IV. William his Son Succeeded, who Married the Princess Mary, eldest Daughter to King Charles I. of England, and died A. 1650. without Issue born, leaving his Princess then with Child of His present Majesty; which gave the Luwestein Faction an opportunity to endeavour to suppress the Authority and Office of Stadtholder, and which they did keep vacant till 1674. when the People having suffer'd a thousand Miseries by the hands of the barbarous French, forced the Magistrates to retract that Instrument they had Sworn to, and fondly call'd a Perpetual Edict, whereby the Office of Stadtholder was to be for ever suppress'd: I say, the People impatient of the Evils they indur'd for want of a Valiant Captain to Head their Armies, oblig'd the Magistrates to restore the Prince to the Dignity of his Ancestors.

V. William Henry of Nassaw, Prince of Orange, Son to William and Mary abovemention'd, was Born November 6. 1650. eight days after his Father's Death; liv'd privately till the year 1674. when he was

was restored to the Stadtholdership of Holland, Zealand, Guelderland and Zutphen, Utrecht and Overysse, which by the States of each of those Provinces was confirmed to him and his Heirs for ever. In 1677.

he Married Mary our Lare Queen of Blessed Memory; and in 1688. Succeeded in the Throne of England, and is at present King of Great Britain, France and Ireland.

CHAP. XI.

The Province of HOLLAND and West FRIZELAND, Hollandia & Westfrisia.

THE first Inhabitants of this Province of Holland, were the Batavi, a Branch of the Nation of the Catti, a People of Germany; but how far their Territory extended, is Disputed. It is said in general in ancient Authors, that Batavia was included between the Maes and the Rhine; but whether it be to be understood of the old Channel of the Rhine which passeth by Utrecht and Leyden, or the Channel of Drusus, which turn'd a great part of that River into the Iffel, is the question in Dispute. If the latter, not only this Province, but those of Utrecht and Gelderland, must have belonged to them. But however it be, all Parties grant, that at least all the South part of Holland, as far as Leyden, together with the Betuwe, (now part of Geldre) Nimeguen the chief City thereof being by some said to have been their Metropolis, was the Seat of the ancient and famous Nation of the Batavians, so often mention'd by Tacitus and other ancient Writers. As for the Northern part, there is good reason to believe that it was formerly contiguous with Frizeland, or at least Inhabited by that Nation.

The modern name of Holland was undoubtedly given it by the Danes; who very much infesting these Coasts with their Pyracies in the IXth. Century, had this Province, with the Islands lying South of it, given them by Lotharius the third, Son of Lewis the Godly, (to whose share this part of the Empire of his Grandfather Charlemagne was allotted) and by them named Zealand and Holland, from the two parts of, their own Country so denominated. 'Tis true, some Etymologists will have it, that the name of Holland was given it q. d. Hollow-land, from the lowness of the Country: But since the Story of the Danes planting themselves here is undisputed, the former account is much the more rational.

The Original of its Earldom is already mention'd in the general account before the description of the Spanish Netherlands, together with its falling into the Family of Burgundy, and by Succession to the King of Spain; and of its Revolt from him we have been just speaking; as also of its present State.

The present Bounds of this Province (including West Frizeland, or North Holland, which in all publick Acts is mention'd apart) are the German Ocean on the West, the Zuyderzee on the North, the same Sea with the Province of Utrecht and the Betuwe on the East, and Brabant and Zealand on the South. It is seated between the 51st. deg. 40 min. and 53 d.

deg. of Latitude, and 23. deg. 10. min. 24th. deg. 20 min. Long. containing in its utmost extent, from North to South, 80 English miles, and from East to West about 25. but in some places above 40. The Soil is low and marshy; but by the Industry of the Inhabitants in draining out the Water by their artificial Channels, it is made to yield very good Pasture, and some Corn; but chiefly the former, for Food to their vast Herds of Kine, from which they receive the almost sole product of the Country, Butter and Cheese. The Air is thick and moist, by the Fogs arising out of the vast number of Channels and Lakes all over the Country, which make the Inhabitants in many parts of it very subject to Agues, which would be yet much worse if it were not purg'd by the Easterly Winds, which coming over the long dry Continent of Germany, purifie the Air, and cause sharp Frosts during the Months of January and February, by which the Earth is dried, and the Vermine, which the moistness of the Land produces in great quantities, destroyed. The whole Province is divided into two great Parts, North and South; which are again Subdivided thus. viz.

AMSTERDAM, Amstelodamum, the chief City not only of Holland, but of all the United Netherlands, is seated on a small River named Amstel, that runs through the Town and falls into an Arm of the Sea, call'd the Z, (and by abbreviation of the Dutch Article Het, 't) which makes a large Haven, wherein continually lye vast numbers of Merchants Ships. The City is distant about 30 miles from Rotterdam to the North, 20 from Horn, and 30 from Medenblick to the South, 12 from Harlem, and 15 from the Sea-shoar to the East, and about 25 from Vrecht to the North-west. It is but of modern Structure, being not mention'd in History before the year, 1299. nor then, but as a small Fisher-town only. De Wit hath publish'd Maps of its several Conditions, whereof the first shews it in the Year 1342, a small Town on the East side only of Amstel, with one Street in the middle, and 5 or 6 cross ones; which before 1400. was encreas'd to as much more on the other side the River; by 1482. it was again encreas'd on both sides and surrounded with strong Walls; in 1585. being grown populous, and beginning to be the chief Seat of Trade of this new erected State, it was much enlarged, as it was again in 1612. And again a fifth time in the year 1656. a very large space of Ground (great part whereof is not yet built) was taken in and the Walls built anew of Brick and the Gates of Stone, with a large Ditch all round; which new Addition hath made it a large Semi-circle, deriv'd from the River Z. It is an exceeding populous, rich and well-traded City, very well built and very neatly kept; the Streets are very large with Canals of Water in them, over which are a very great number of Stone-bridges. The Houses are all built of Brick or Stone, in good repair, and very beautiful, especially those in the newest part of the Town, where the Streets called the Heer, Konings and Kesfers Grachten, or Lords, Kings and Emperors Channels, are fill'd with magnificent Houses, many of them of Free-stone, adorn'd with Columns and Chapters according to the Corinthian Architecture. The principal publick Buildings are the Old, the New, the Western and the Southern Churches, the Stadhuys, the Exchange, the Hospitals, the Magazine of the Navy, that of the East-India Company's Shipping, and the Sluces: All which we cannot omit giving as particular a description of as our room will admit. 1. The old Church is a Majestick Building of Stone according to the Gothick Order, with a fair Steeple of great height; the Church was begun to be Built in 1360. but the Steeple not finished till 1566. 2. The New Church, so call'd in distinction from the former, was founded about the year 1414. but being burnt in 1645, was repaired, and is at present a handfom Structure; a Tower was designed to it of exceeding Height, and a Foundation laid accordingly upon 6334 Piles driven into the Ground for that purpose, which was not however found strong enough, for the Building is not carried up above 30 or 40 foot: In the Painted Windows of this Church is represented the Liberality of this City to the Emperor Maximilian, in presenting him with a large sum of Money when he needed it, and his Generosity in bestowing an Imperial Crown for a Crest to its Arms. Also in this Church is to be seen the sumptuous Monument of Admiral de Ruyter, who was killed at Messina; a Schreen before the Chancel of cast Brass, which being kept bright, looks very beautifully; and an Organ (supported by rich Marble Pillars) of extraordinary Workmanship for its number of Pipes and Melodious imitation of Humane Voices. 3. The Western Church is a handfom Pile, and hath a beautiful Tower with a large Imperial Crown of Copper on the top of it, which is reckon'd 260 foot from the Ground. 4. The South Church hath also a handfom Steeple of 237 foot high. The other Churches are less remarkable. 5. The Stadhuys, or Guild-Hall, is a very magnificent Structure, all of Free-stone, adorn'd with Pillasters, Chapters, Cornishes and Carvings, according to the Corinthian Architecture; it is a square Building of 282 foot broad, 235 foot deep, and 116 foot high; of which height, the Ground-rooms which are the Offices belonging to the Bank, and the Prisons, with some smaller Offices) take up about 20 foot, and the first and second Stories about 30 foot each; and over the middle of the Front, (which is somewhat more advanced than the rest of the Work) above the Cornish, rises a Bevel, the Face whereof is of Marble with a Basso Relievo of curious Carving, and on the top and each side of it stands three very large Statues of Brass, and just behind a handfom Tower, (being a Pavillion supported by Pillars) wherein hang a great number of Bells that compose very musical Chimes: The back Face hath also another Bevel with Basso Relievo, on the Top whereof stands a very large brazen Statue of Atlas, with a Globe of Copper on his Back. Within the House, the Gallery and Door-cases of the Offices are adorn'd with ingenious Carvings in Marble, and the Chambers with Marble Floors and curious Paintings on the Ceilings and Chimney-peices: In this House the Senate of the City hold their Assemblies, the Burgomasters meet, Causes as well Criminal as Civil are Try'd, the great Bank is kept, and in general all publick Business transacted. This Building was begun in the year 1648, but not finished in many years; indeed not yet entirely, for the Cielings of the Gallery are design'd to be painted, and the Walls faced with Marble. 6. The Exchange is a handfom Structure of Brick, with Pillars of Stone all along the Walks, built after the model of our old Royal Exchange before the Fire, and is at least as Large. 7. The Hospitals here are many and large; above 3000 poor Children are constantly maintain'd with Lodging, Diet, and Cloaths, taught to Read and Write at the publick Charge, in the Almoesniers-buys, Wveys-buys, and Diaconis-buys, three large Hospitals, so call'd; besides which, there is a large House, wherein above 300. decrepid old Women are lodg'd and fed; these are all of modern Foundation, and maintained partly by the voluntary Charities collected by the Deacons, and partly by certain little Taxes, such as a Penny upon every Person that passes through the Gate after Candle-light, half the Mony received at the Play-house, &c. and the rest supplied out of the publick Revenue; But another Hospital, call'd the old Man's Houfe, wherein 150 old Men and Women are maintained, was formerly a Monastery, the Rents whereof are assign'd for its support: In this Houfe a poor Traveller may have Lodging and Diet for three days gratis. Here is also an Hospital for the Sick, another for Madmen, another for Fools, and a Pest-houfe.

The Magazine is a handfom large Building of Brick, standing on the Water-side, in the North-east part of the Town; it is three Angles of a Square, in the middle whereof is a Yard for building Ships of War, the Front is 220. and the Wings 200 foot long. In the several Chambers of it are laid up the Rigging of the Men of War belonging to this City, with Stores of Cordage, Arms, &c. all kept in very good order: This Magazine was built in 1655. Not far Eastward from hence is another stately Magazine belonging to the East-India Company; it is one Range of Brick Building, behind which is a large Yard with Docks for building Ships, and Shops of Anchor-Smiths, and all other Artifts belonging to Ship-building, particularly a very long Rope-yard: This Houfe serves to lay up their Stores of Shipping, and also for Ware-houfes for those Goods that they have not room for in their other Ware-houfes; which with their Houfe stands in the middle of the City.

The Sluces are Works of prodigious Expence and Art, and worth a Traveller's notice. Formerly the City was frequently damaged by the overflowing of the Water, which, upon the blowing of a North-east Wind, was driven out of the Zuyder Zee and 't'Y with that violence into the Canals in the Streets, that the Water overflowing, not only run into their Cellars, but even rose to the first Floor of those Houfes that stood in the lower parts of the Town; to prevent which, the Magistrates, not many yeares since caused these Sluces to be made at the mouth of every one of the four Channels that open to the 't'Y: These are strong solid Brick-works of 10 or 12 foot thick, rais'd from the bottom of the River to the Surface of the Ground, and built cross the Channels, leaving only convenient places for the passage of Ships, which are again shut up with very Strong Flood-gates, able at all times to resist the force of the Water, and secure the Inhabitants from its injuring them. Here are other publick Buildings worth a Stranger's View, such as the Rasp-houfe, where Rogues are Imprison'd and kept to hard Labour, as raising Brazil-wood, &c. for 3, 4, 7, 10 yeares, or their whole Lives, according to the heinousness of the Crime; the Spin-houfe, where Whores are kept in like manner to Spinning &c. the East and West-India Company's Houfes; the Jews Synagogue, a noble Building indeed; the beautiful Stone bridge cross the Amstel, where it enters the Town; and the Walls all round the Town, which are exceeding neat, and well built with Brick, and secure the City from a Surprise, as the marshiness of the Soil all round does from a formal Siege: The Gates, which are 5 in number, are all built of Stone, and in the Bridge from each of them over the Ditch are 2 Draw-bridges and a Watch-houfe, wherein, as well as in the Gates, continual Watch is kept by Soldiers maintain'd for that purpose, besides every night a company of the Train Bands of the City. And for their security from the Water-side, there are two rows of Pails all along before the Town, with narrow Gaps only at convenient places, for the passage of Ships, which are every night shut up by a Boom laid cross and lock'd: The Wealth and Trade of this City is exceeding great, the number of Shipping lying before the Pails in the Winter-time, when their East-land and other Fleets are in, is not to be computed, their Masts seeming like a great Forest, so thick they stand. The Ground here is Sand, which the Water soaks through, and not only hinders from making the Cellars deep, but also obliges the Builders to drive a great number of Piles into the Ground, before they can lay the Foundations of the Houfes. Here is no fresh Water, but what they have in Cisterns when it Rains; for though the Amstel be good Water, the 't'Y is a branch of the Sea, and mixing with it makes it brackish for several miles above the Town.

The Supream Authority in the City is lodg'd in the Senate, which consists of 36 Persons chosen originally by the People, but at present by themselves, and continue for Life. These chuse the four Burgomasters, who are the chief Magistrates; and the nine Schepens, who are the Judges of Civil and Criminal Causes; and the Scour or Sheriff, who hath the care of bringing Criminals to Justice, and executing the Law. But it is necessary to note, That the Senate have not the absolute choice of the Schepens, for they return a double number to the Stadtholder, who chuses those of them he pleases. The Burgomasters keep the Keys of the Treasury of the City, and of the great Bank lodg'd here and kept in the Cellars under the Stadthuys, which without doubt is a vast Mass of Treasure, but whether so great as it's Credit, is not to be known, since none are permitted to see it; nor hath there ever been but once an occasion to try its Strength, viz. in 1673. when the French having overrun their Country, some People distrust'd the safety of their Money and call'd it out of the Bank, which the Treasurers readily paying, gave satisfaction to the rest, and it hath still remain'd there, tho transfer'd every day from one to another by Bills and Accounts, without ever telling the Money or any own desiring to see it. The compass of Amsterdam within the Walls, is reckon'd about 6 miles, but a large part of it is yet un-built; the number of Houfes is about 25, or as some affirm 28000. The number of Inhabitants may be guess'd at by the Burials, which in the year 1685, were 6245. according to the publick Account set up in the Stadthuys. Amsterdam is seated in the Latitude of 52 deg. 28 min. Longit. 24. 2.

HARLEM, Harlemum, stands about 10 miles West from Amsterdam, not above 4 East from the Sea, about 20 North from Leiden, and as many South from Alcmar; it is a large, populous and pleasant City; the Buildings are all of Brick, neat, convenient, and in good repair, the Streets large and even, and in some of them are Canals as at Amsterdam. It is a place of good Trade, which consists in Thread and Tape, Linnen-Cloth and wrought Silks; also Bleaching of Linnen, for which the Water is to fit, that most of the Inhabitants of Amsterdam and other neighbouring places, bring their Linnen here to be Wash'd, being curious in its whiteness. This City was made a Bishop's See in 1559. but that Dignity was soon after suppress'd. The Cathedral was Dedicated to S. Bavo, but is now only call'd the great Church; it is a strong, spacious and beautiful Building. The Stadthuys is a handfom old Structure, as is the Shambles or Flesh-market. The Walls are strong and the Ditch broad, but the Town is commanded by the Neighbouring Sand-hills. The Art of PRINTING is said to have been invented here by one Lawrence Coster, who walking in the neighbouring Wood for his diversion, fell to whittling little Sticks, and at length form'd a Letter upon one of 'em, which pressing upon his Hand first, and afterwards with Ink upon Paper, found it made a legible Impression; which accidental hint, being an ingenious Man, he improv'd and had brought the Art to some perfection, when a Roguish Servant that he employ'd in it, stole his Implements and run away to Mentz, where he set up for the Inventor. They of Mentz deny this, and affirm, That a Citizen of theirs, John Faust by name, was the sole Inventor. The Harlemers have many great and learned Men on their side in this Dispute; however, the first printed Books extant having been publish'd at Mentz, carries over many to the other Party: But wherelover it was Invented, this ingenious Art appeared first in the World about the year 1430. or 1440. The Harlemers brag also of great Exploits done by their Townsmen who went to the Holy War with Godfrey of Bolloigne, particularly the cutting of the Chains that shut up the Haven of the City Damiata in Aegypt, which (according to the Tradition among them) was perform'd by great Saws fasten'd to the Keels of their Ships; in memory whereof the Boys yearly carry little Ships about the Streets; to which purpose they lay also are the three Ships that hang up in the great Church. The Siege of this City by the Spaniards in the year 1573. was very remarkable, for it continued 7 Months; during which time the Assaults were as violent, and the Resistance as obstinate as has been known, and the Defendants were reduc'd to such a Necessity, that they eat Grass, Leather, and such vile things for their Subsistence. They still shew a mark in the great Church where a Cannon Bullet lodg'd.

Just whitour the Walls there is a pleasant Wood, wherein the Citizens divert themselves; and a little to the Southward, a great Lake call'd the Harlemmer Meer, which begins near Amsterdam, and reaches almost as far as Leyden. From the small River Sparen which runs through the Town, a Channel was cut in the year 1657. to Leyden, whereby the Passage between these Cities hath been much facilitated.

LEDEN, Lugdunum Bataavorum, also Leyda, is esteem'd the pleasantest City in Holland; the Buildings being beautiful, the Streets large, the Channels commodious, but chiefly the rows of fine tall Trees in every Street, render them exceedingly agreeable; but then, for want of a good Current of Water, the Canals are apt to stink in Summer. This is an ancient City, and tho' formerly but small, hath by several Enlargements been made to exceed any in Holland, except Amsterdam and Rotterdam. The principal public Buildings, are, the Church of S. Peter, a handsome Pile, and had formerly a very high Tower, but it fell down in the year 1512. The Churches of S. Panoratius and S. Mary; and the new Church, of circular Form and very beautiful; the Hospitals of S. Katherine and S. Elizabeth, as also those of S. James and S. Barbara, for the Entertainment of decrepid aged and sick People, which are well endow'd and carefully kept. Here is also a large Hospital for the maintenance of poor Orphans, whereof there are reckon'd to be no less than 700 in it. The Town-house is a noble large Structure. The Burg, a noble piece of Antiquity, said to have been built by the Romans, for the Defence of the Town, but stands now in the middle of it, and an Ornament only; it is a strong Fortification built of Stone in a round form, very high, the Ascent to it being of 50 Steps, and the Wall about it 21 foot high. In the year 1575 the Prince and States founded an University here, which is become the most famous of these Countries. The Schools is an ancient Building, handsome enough, but not exceeding beautiful; adjoining to it is the Physick-Garden, which is well stor'd with rare Plants; near the Garden stands a Gallery in which are kept many Curiosities of Nature; also in the Theatre of Anatomy are to be seen many such Rarities, besides Skeletons and Dissections. The Professors have annual Stipends, and make a good profit by their Pupils; but the Students have no Endowments, except some Privileges. They are very numerous, and are a great advantage to the Town; Here is also a large Trade maintained by the making of Woollen-Cloaths. The small branch of the Rhine, which retains its name, passes through this City, and is the chief Channel in it. Leyden was Besieg'd by the Spaniards in 1574. and very well defended by the Citizens for five Months, at the end of which it was reliev'd. It is fortified with good Walls besides Ramparts, Bulwarks and large Ditches, and stands at the distance of 20 miles from Harlem to the South, 22 from Amsterdam to the South-west, 15 from Rotterdam to the North, and 27 from Utrecht to the West.

The HAGUE, call'd in Dutch, 'Gravenbague, (that is, The Grove of the Earl) in Latin Hage Comitiss, is seated about 8 or 9 miles from Leyden to the South-west, about 6 from Delft to the North-east, 14 from Rotterdam to the North-west, and not above 2 miles from the little Sea-Town Schievling. It glories in being the principal Village of Europe, for it is not wall'd, tho' otherwise in all respects a City; being govern'd by its own Magistrates, and enjoying all the other Privileges, except sending Deputies to the States, as any City in Holland does. It is the Seat of the Princes, and the assemblies of the States General, of the Provincial States of Holland, and of the Council of State; as also of the supreme Courts of Judicature; and is in general the place where all the public Affairs of the Common-wealth are transacted; where all the Foreign Ministers receive their Audience, and commonly reside: All which causes a continual Concourse of People from all Parts, and very much enriches the Town, which is a neat built place: The Streets are large and adorn'd with Trees; the Houses are all of Brick and very handsome; those that stand near the Court, and in that part of the Town toward the Wood, are very stately, and Inhabited by Persons of Quality. The Palace, containing the Prince's Lodgings, the Chambers of the States General and Provincial, Council of State, &c. is a handsome Building, making two Angles of a Square, in the middle whereof stands a fair large Hall, not unlike that of Westminster in form, and in respect to the Shops in it all round, as also for the Standards taken from the Enemies, hanging up in it, but far short of it in largeness, being not so big as the Guild-hall of London. Adjoining to the Court stands a very noble House of Stone, built by Prince Maurice of Nassau, and bears his Name: The whole Court is Moted round, and Guards continually kept at every Gate: On the North-side is a large square Pond call'd the Viver, and on the West the Court opens to a large Plain, that is surrounded with fine Houses. The Town is large and very populous. The great Church is a stately old Building. That of a round Figure, without any Pillars, is a neat beautiful Structure, and not of many years standing: The Town-house is built of Stone, but old and not very remarkable.

The Situation of this Town is very pleasant; for on one side lye lovely Meadows; and on the other a large and pleasant Wood, in the middle whereof stands a House of Pleasure of the Prince's, having having behind it very beautiful Gardens, and in it, besides the stately Lodgings, a very large dancing Room with a high Roof, rising into a Cupola, and at the top of it a Lanthorn, in which is a Gallery for Musick: The Walls and Cielings all round adorned with Paintings of the best Masters, representing the Actions of Henry Fredrick (the Father of his present Majesty) by whose Widow this House was built. On the North-side of the Town lies a Walk, paved all the way with Bricks, and shaded by Lime-Trees, planted on each side for 2 miles in length, which leads to the little Village Schievling; from whence his late Majesty King Charles took Shipping to his Glorious and Happy Reftauration.

About 12 or 14 miles South from the Hague stands Houfflaerdike, where is a stately Palace of the Prince's, adorn'd with very fine Gardens; to which he often retired, when the Affairs of the State did not require his presence at the Hague. And in the midway between the Hague and Delft stands the Village of Ryfwick, and near it the Palace of His Majesty which has been render'd Famous, by being the Place of Treaty of the late Happy and Glorious Peace. It was some time call'd Newburgh boufe, because a Duke of Newburgh laid the Foundation; but his Highness Fredrick-Henry, Prince of Orange, built it. It is a handfom Structure, and adorn'd with good Gardens.

DELFT, Delfhi or Delfium, is pleasantly seated among Meadows, at the distance of 5 or 6 miles from the Hague to the South-east, and about 8 from Rotterdam to the North-west, and is a very neat and well-built City, the streets large and even, with Canals and Trees, as have most of the Cities of Holland: It is a silent Town, and inhabited by wealthy Merchants that have retired from Business. The Trade of the Place is chiefly for a sort of Earthen Ware, in imitation of China: They had formerly a great Trade in Brewing, as also in Weaving Cloth; but that is remov'd. This City being one of the Chambers of the East-India Company, the fine Goods of those Countries, especially Porcellane or China Earthen Ware, is a main Trade of the Inhabitants. The Old and the New Churches are large and fair Buildings; in the latter is to be seen a noble Monument, erected to the Memory of William I. Prince of Orange, who was barbarously assassinated in this City. The Stadthouse is a handfom Building. Here is kept the Arsenal of the State, which undoubtedly is well stor'd with all War-like Necessaries: The Magazine of Powder belonging to it accidentally blew up in 1654. and destroy'd a great part of the Town; besides which, it had been almost totally consumed by Fire in 1536. so that the present Buildings are but of late Structure: It is a good large City, wall'd and moated, and well inhabited.

ROTTERDAM, Rotterdamum, may be reckon'd the second City of Holland for Trade, tho' it be but the seventh in the Convention of the States: It is seated on the North-side of the River Maes (which is there very broad, and makes a good Haven) at the distance of about 7 Leagues from the Sea, and 5 from the Bril to the East, 8 miles from Delft to the South-east, about 30 from Amsterdam to the South, near as from Utrecht to the South-west, and about 15 from Dort to the West. It is a large, exceeding Populous and well-traded City: The convenience of the Haven is very extraordinary, for by the Canals that run through the Streets, Ships of great Burden can come in and unlade at the Merchants Doors; which, with certain Privileges they enjoy here, hath made it very much encrease, even within 20 or 30 years past. The number of English Ships that use this City is much greater than those that come to Amsterdam, this Port being exceedingly more convenient for them than that: An Exchange is held here, where every day the Merchants meet; the Structure of it is but ordinary, and doth not deserve a Description; but the great Church, dedicated to S. Lawrence, is a stately Building, and hath a high Tower, wherein hang very melodious Chimes; the Stadthouse is a tall Structure of Stone, and the great Stone-bridge in the Market-place is very spacious and neat; on it stands a stately Statue of Brales, of the Famous Desid. Erasmus, a Native of that City, and near the great Church is still to be seen the Houle wherein he was born, with his Picture, and an Inscription in Latin, Spanish and Dutch, over the Door, intimating so much. The Houses here are of Brick, but seem older than those of the other Towns we have named; the Streets are also broad and well paved, but by reason of the multiplicity of Business (for every Canal is full of Ships) cannot be so neatly kept as at Amsterdam, (where the Ships lye without the Town) and other places, where less Business is transacted.

The Bril is a neat City, well built, reasonably populous, and of some Trade; it is seated on an Island, nam'd The Land of Voorn, and hath a convenient Haven at the Mouth of the Maes, about 5 leagues below Rotterdam, and 30 leagues from Harwich in England, whence the Packquet-boat uses to come weekly hither; but the Port of Helvoet being found more convenient, they come not hither now. The Buildings here likewise are of Brick, and tho' old are very neat, and the Streets large handfom, especially the great one: The great Church is of Stone, and hath a large Tower which is a good Landmark to Sailers. The Walls are strong, and made very pleasant by Rows of Trees planted on them. This was one of the Cautionary Towns pawn'd to Queen Elizabeth, for the Assistance she gave the Dutch against Spain, and was kept by an English Garrison till King James I. restor'd it, 30 years after.

Helvoet Sluce, is a small Sea-Town, with a very convenient Haven, seated on the South-side of the same Island, and not above 3 miles distant from the Bril. The Town is not at all considerable, except for the weekly Arrival of the English Packquet boat, and that His present Majesty let Sail from hence, to his happy Expedition into England, in the year 1688.

Not above a League Southward of the Land of Voorn, lies the small Island Goree, so nam'd from goed and Reed, which signifie a good Haven for ships; its chief Town, of the same Name, was formerly a place of great Trade, but is now not at all considerable.

Eastward from Goree lies the Island of Overflacke, or Overlackee, which is of much larger extent than that of Gree, being about 15 miles long and 5 miles broad; and hath on it many Villages and good Towns, the chief of which is named Somersdyck.

DORT, or Dordrecht, Dordrecht, is a very ancient City, and the first in Dignity of those that compose the States of Holland; also the Capital of a small Country round it, call'd the Bailiwick of Dort, and by some South Holland, is seated upon the River Merwede (which, as we have said, falls into the Maes) at the distance of 15 or 16 miles from Rotterdam to the South-east, about 20 from Breda to the North, and 40 from Amsterdam to the South. It is strongly situated, being an Island between the Meruwe and Maes on the North, and a large Lake call'd the Bies-Bos on the South and East. The City is large and populous, the Houses of Brick and very high, and the Streets broad and very neat: The chief Church hath a high Steeple, from whence that of Breda may be seen, Our English Merchants enjoy great Privileges here, as being our Staple for Cloth: This City is also the Staple for Rhenish Wines, whereof the Merchants have very great Stocks; as also of Corn, Wood and other Commodities, brought down the Rhine and the Maes. Dort boasts of being a Maiden Town, and never taken by any Enemy, tho' often besieg'd, particularly by the Duke of Brabant, in 1304. whom they repulled and forced to return home. It hath long enjoyed the Privilege of coining Money. The City is also noted for the famous Synod held in it, in the year 1619. for Reconciling the Points of Religion then in Debate between the Arminians and Calvinists: The Room wherein it was held is still shewn, with the Seats in it, as they then stood.

This Bailiwick of Dort was made an Island in the Year, 1421. at what time a Tempest drove the Waters up the Maes and the Merumes, with that Violence that it overflow'd the Banks, and swallowed a great Tract of Land that lay between Dort and Brabant, with seventy two Villages and one hundred thousand Persons.

Geertruydenberg, so named from a certain Saint Gertrude, who died in 664. is a very strong fortified Town, on the Frontiers of Holland towards Brabant, esteem'd of that Consequence formerly, that the Emils of Holland used to be bound by Oath to keep it, as the Dukes of Brabant were to recover it, since the Year 1213. that the former took it. The supream Jurisdiction of it was conferr'd upon Prince Maurice, by the States, in 1611. since when it hath been part of the Patrimony of the illustrious House of Orange. It is seated on the South Side of the Lake call'd Bies Bos, where the River Dong falls into it; which, tho' narrow above, is here so increased, that it will receive Ships of good Burden; and is distant 12 miles from Dort to the South-east, 10 from Breda to the North, and here 20 from the Bosch to the West. This Town is very strongly fortified, and hath also the Advantageous situation common in this Country, viz. very low and marshy Grounds round it; notwithstanding which, it was taken by the States, in 1573. and by the Spaniards in 1583. and in 1595. retaken by Prince Maurice, and ever since been possess'd by the States General. About 15 miles Westward from hence stands

Klundert or Clundert, a strong Fortification belonging to the Prince of Orange since 1583. It was formerly call'd the Nieurwaert, and the Branch of the Roo Vaert was a good Road for Ships. Five miles from hence stands Willemstadt, a strong but small Town, built in 1583. by Order of William Prince of Orange, from whom it had its Name, and on whom the Lordship of it was conferr'd by the States. It is seated upon the Water nam'd the Roo Vaert, that parts the Island, call'd in general the Land van Voorn, from the Continent, and serves to secure the Trade between Holland and Zealand: It is defended by a Wall with seven Bastions and a double Ditch, besides other Fortifications.

Heusden is another well-fortified Frontier of Hol- land; it stands on a Stream, that running out of the Maes torins a little Island call'd the Hemerder Waert, at the distance of 12 miles from Geertruydenberg to the East, and about 7 or 8 from the Bosch to the North-west. It is an ancient Town, and was subject to its own Lords for 500 years, by whom sold to the Duke of Brabant, who gave it to the Earl of Holland; but being afterwards claim'd by others, gave occasion to grievous Wars. A lamentable accident happen'd here in the Year 1680. for the Magazine of Powder blew up in the Night-time, suppos'd to have been fir'd by Lightning, and destroyed great part of the Castle and the neighbouring Street, inatter'd the whole Town, and kill'd near two hundred People.

Crevecoeur, a little Town strongly fortified, stands upon the Maes, 5 miles from Heusden to the East, and not above 3 from the Bosch, and at the most extreme East-part of Holland.

The Bosch or Bolduc, Breda, and Bergen of Zoom, belongs to the States, but being all seated in Brabant are already describ'd in our Account of that Province.

Louvesteine Castle is seated on the most Western part of the Bomeer Waert, at the confluence of the Wael and the Maes, and distance of 8 or 9 miles from Heusden to the N. W. It is a strong Place, but chiefly remarkable on the account of the Faction against the Prince of Orange (his present Majesty of Great-Britain) who about 30 or 40 years ago using to assemble in it, gave occasion to the whole Party's being commonly call'd by its Name.

Worcum, an ancient and strong fortified Town, is seated on the South-side of the Wael, just over against Louvesteine, being parted from it by the Maes, which falls into the Wael betwixt them: It was sometime subject to the Duke of Cleeve, afterwards to the Earl of Hoorne, and in the year 1600. sold to the States by the Widow of the last Count; who was beheaded at Brussels by the Duke d' Alva.

Gorcum is seated at the mouth of the Ling, and on the North-side of the Wael, not above 3 miles from Worcum, and about 15 East from Dort. It is a neat well-built Town and very strong, as well by reason of its situation as strong Fortifications; and is also a Place of Wealth, having a good Trade by Corn, Cheese, Butter, &c. brought down the Ling to other Places, and by the Inhabitants carried to their Market: The Church hath a high Tower, from whence may be seen 22 wall'd Towns, besides a great number of Villages. The Town is reasonably large, and hath a Senate and Majesty of its own.

Vianen is a wall'd Town, formerly subject to its own Lords, seated on the South-side of the River Leek, near the Borders of the Province of Utrecht, about 8 miles North from Gorcum, and as many South from Utrecht: It is pleasantly seated and a very neat Town, and hath a Castle and a stately high Tower.

Schoonhoven, so call'd for its fine Gardens, Schoon in Dutch signifying Fair or Clean, and Hof a Garden-House, stands on the North-side of the Leek, about 12 miles West from Vianen, and 15 East from Rotterdam; it was so strong, that it was able to repel the French, who endeavour'd to take it in 1672. since when it hath been also better fortified. It is a very pleasant Town, and hath an old Castle, built in 1312.

Just over against it stands Newport, formerly a rich and populous Town, but now not considerable.

Goude, corruptly call'd Ter Gou, is a fair large City, the sixth in Dignity of those that compose the States of Holland, and seated on the small River Gouwe and the Iffel, which about 10 miles below falls into the Maes, at the distance of about 12 miles from Schoonhoven to the North-West, as many from Rotterdam to the North-East, and 24 from Amsterdam to the South. It was founded in 1272, but suffer'd much by Fire about a hundred years after, and by Wars in 1420. and again totally consumed by Fire in 1438. but being rebuilt, is now an exceeding neat Place, and more than ordinary clean, by means of the Flux of the Tide up the Iffel into the Channels in the Streets, which carry away all their Ordure. The Houses are of Brick, and thó old are very neat; the Market-place is very spacious, on it stands the Stadhuis, and near it the great Church; which being burnt by Lightning in 1552. hath been at vast Expence repaired, and is now a very stately Building; it is especially remarkable for its painted Glaz-Windows, which are thought to exceed any others in being. This City enjoys a healthful Air, thó it be seated upon a moorish Ground, and the Country about is so low, that it may be easily overflow'd by opening their Sluices: Besides which, it is secur'd by Walls and a broad Ditch, and therefore reckon'd a very strong Post and a Security to that side of the Country.

Naerden, a small City, but very strongly fortified, is seated near the Zuyder-zee, 22 miles from Goude to the North-East, 15 from Utrecht to the North, and about 12 from Amsterdam to the East. It stands in low marshy Grounds, and hath of long time been a considerable Post; in 1431. it was taken by the People of Utrecht: But in the same year, the Nardeners not only regain'd their City, but obtain'd so sign a Victory over their Enemies, that with the Booty they gain'd, a Tower was erected to commemorate it. In 1572. Frederick of Toledo, the Spanish General, in revenge for their having submitted to the Prince of Orange, summoned all the Inhabitants into the Market-place, and caus'd his Soldiers to cut them in pieces, and burnt down the Town: Which barbarous Action increas'd the Hatred of the Hollanders to the Spaniards, and made them hold out their Towns the more vigorously afterwards. It was taken by the French in 1672. and regain'd in 1673. And it being a place of great Consequence, as serving to secure Amsterdam, the States have lately bestow'd great Cost in Fortifying it, the old Walls being pulled down, and new ones built of Brick, together with Ravelins, Half-Moons, Counterscarps, double Ditches. &c. so that it is now a regular Fortification, and as strong as any. This Town stood formerly more Northward, but was swallow'd up by the Encroachment of the Zuyder-zee, whereof some Remains are still to be seen at Low-water.

Muyden, a small wall'd Town, seated upon the Vecht, where it falls into the Zuyder-zee, in the Midway between Naerden and Amsterdam, was made a strong Post in the late War, when the French were at Utrecht; as was also Wesep, another small Town on the Vecht, about 2 or 3 miles distant from Muyden to the South.

And now having Travell'd round, and brought the Reader back to Amsterdam, we must proceed to North-Holland or Waterland, which is divided from Amstelland by the 't I, Te or Ya, call'd a River, but may be more properly esteem'd a Branch of the Zuyder-zee or South-Sea, from which it begins at the Pampus, about 3 miles West from Muyden, in a Channel of about half a mile broad; which breadth it continues to Amsterdam, but grows soon after twice so broad, and receives the Saen, out of North-Holland and the Spoeren from Haerlem, and then passes Northward to Beverwick, &c.

North-Holland in general is commonly understood by the Name of West-Friesland, though but one part of it, viz. that to the North East (wherein stand Horn, Enchusen and Madenlick) being the ancient Frisia Occidentalis. In this Country stand 7 of the 18 Cities that have Voices in the Provincial State, viz. Those three new mention'd, and Munickdam, Edam, Purmerent and Aelkmaer.

Munickdam, so named from the small River Monick that passes through it, is seated on a small Bay of the Zuyder-zee, about 8 miles North from Amsterdam, and 3 South from Edam. It is a small Town of some Antiquity, and defended but by a Rampart, and in some places by a Wall.

Saenredam, or Sardam, seated on the T; at the Mouth of the small River Saen, about 7 miles North-West from Amsterdam, thó but a Village, deserves mentioning rather than some of their Cities, being so remarkable for Ship-building, that 'tis commonly said of this Town, the Shipwrights in it will undertake to build so many Ships of War in a year as there are days in it. By this Trade the place is much enrich'd and encreas'd. The old Town stands below the Dam of the River, whence it hath its Name: To which hath been since added a long row of Buildings on both sides the River beyond the Dam, which is call'd the New-Town, out of which Ships are haul'd over the Dam upon Rowlers.

Edam or Tedam, is seated at a little distance from the Zuyder-zee, to which it has a Channel or Haven, 3 miles from Munickdam to the North, and 10 from Horn to the South. It is a small Town, but is noted for Building of Ships, and making excellent Cheese.

Purmerent, a good neat Town, fortified with a Rampart and Ditch, is seated about 5 miles from Edam to the West, and 12 from Amsterdam to the North, formerly belonging to the Lords of Egmond, who sold it to the States in the year 1590.

The Land between Edam and Purmerent was formerly a great Lake, but by the Industry and Skill of the Inhabitants it was Drain'd, and is at present a fruitful and pleasant Country, bearing still the name of Purmer: And Southward from Purmerent lies the Beemster, a great Lake also before the year 1612. when after four years Labour and vast Expence (the Banks by which the Water that was thrown out by their Mills having been broken, the Water returned, after the Work was half done) it was made dry Land, and is now so planted with Gardens, Orchards, Rows of Trees and fertile Enclosures, that Sir William Temple says, it is the pleasantest Summer Landship he ever saw. Its extent contains 7090 Acres, besides the Highways, and the Dikes that surround and cross it in several Places. Of the like nature are the Wormer, which lies South of it, the Schermer and the Heer Huygen Waert, to the West of the Beemster, as is also the Zype in the most North part of this Province; which last is defended from the Sea by a vast Mole, built of great Beams of Timber driven into the Ground, and the Distances fill'd with Stones.

Alcmaer, is seated a little beyond the Schermer, at the distance of 13 miles from Purmerent to the North-West. and about 20 from Haerlem to the North. The Buildings are beautiful, and the Streets even and neat, the Houses generally furnished with Gardens, and the Town surrounded with Meadows; and at the end of the Town stands a very pleasant Grove, or Wood of Trees, planted in regular order; all which make this Place esteem'd one of the pleasantest in these Countries. The Inhabitants are enriched by the great quantity of Butter and Cheese they receive from the vast Herds of Kine fed in the Neighbouring Pastures. It is wall'd round, and was strong enough to resist the Spaniards, who endeavour'd to take it in the Netherland War.

Hoorne, is a good large, pleasant and rich City, with a convenient Port on the Zuyder zee, at the distance of 15 miles from Alemar to the East, 20 from Amsterdam, and 10 from Edam to the North; it is surrounded with broad Dykes for its Security, large Pasture Grounds for its Profit, and fine Gardens and Walks for its Pleasure. The Trade of this Place consists chiefly in Butter and Cheese, whereof they export great quantities into Spain, Portugal, and other parts, especially at their annual Fair in the Mouth of May.

Enchuyfen, is seated also on the Zuyder-zee, in the most Eastern part of the Peninsle of West-Friesland, at the distance of 10 miles from Hoorne to the North-East, and as many from Medenblick to the South East, as also 30 miles from Aomaer to the East. It is a fair, neat and large City, with a spacious Port, from whence great Fleets yearly sail to the Baltick and other parts, by which, as also by their Herring-Fishing, building of Ships, and refining of Salt from Britany in France, the Inhabitants are much Enriched. The Buildings are mostly of Brick, for being formerly of Wood they suffered much by Fire, whereof of late years no Wooden Houses have been erected. The Steeple of the great Church is remarkably high, considering the Moorishness of the Soil whereon the City stands, which is thereby secur'd, as well as by the Ramparts and other strong Fortifications about it.

Medenblick or Medemblick, is one of the most ancient Cities of North-Holland, and formerly the Metropolis of it, but Enchuyfen hath out-strip'd it in Grandeur, for this is but a small City. It is seated on the Zuyder zee, in the North-West part of West-Friesland, 10 miles from Enchuyfen to the North-West, as many from Hoorne to the North, and about 25 from Alemaer to the East. It hath a very large and commodious Haven, and a Castle of very ancient Structure. The Banks are here more strong and large than any in this Country, for there being nothing to break the Sea quite from der Schelling and Flieland Islands to this Shoar, the Waters beat violently upon it when the Northerly Winds blow. The Country about affords good Pasturage. Medenblick had formerly a Territory depending on it, govern'd by an Officer call'd Dyck-grave.

Cross the Mouth of the Zuyder-zee lye a row of Islands, the first of which named the Texel or Tessel, is disjoined from the North Cape of North-Holland, but by a very narrow Channel; nor are the Distances between the rest much larger. The three named, Texel, Flieland, and der Schelling, are reckon'd part of North-Holland.

Texel, is a small Island of not above 4 or 5 miles extent, but very fruitful, affording especially good Pasturage; it is defend'd from the fury of the Ocean partly by the Sand-hills, and partly by strong Banks. Here is a large fair Town, besides many Villages; and a strong Fort to command the Passage into the Zuyder-zee.

Flieland or Vlieland, lies North-West from the Texel; it is about 10 miles long, but very narrow: It hath only two Villages, and is not considerable, but for abundance of Mules taken there.

Schelling, lies next to Flieland, and is longer and broader than that. Here are five Villages, the chief whereof containing near 1000 Houses was burnt, together with above 100 Sail of Merchant Ships, by our English Fleet under the Command of Sir Robert Holmes, on the 7th of August, 1666.

These Islands, together with some Banks of Sand, break the Assaults of the Ocean, and make two good Harbours denominated from the two first.

Southward from the Texel, and in the midway between that and Medenblick, lies another small Island call'd the Wierings, which hath several good Villages, and a rich and fertile Soil.

Sir William Temple is of opinion, That the Zuyder-zee hath been made by some great Inundation, there being no mention made of it in ancient Authors; and the great Shoals of flat Sands that are spread almost all over it, and the Row of Islands that lie like the broken Remains of a continued Coast, together with the name of West-Friesland, do give good reason to believe, that the outward part, at least, was anciently a continued Country from North-Holland to Friesland.

C H A P. XII.

Z E A L A N D, Zealandia.

Z E A L A N D, so call'd from its situation in the Sea, or as others say, so nam'd by the Danes, (who formerly us'd to infect these Coasts) in memory of their principal Island of the same Name, is seated between Holland on the North, Flanders on the South, Brabant on the East, and the German Sea on the West. It is compos'd of several Islands, which are usually divided into two Districts, call'd the Boester, [or the Eastern] Schelde, and the Bewester [or Western] Schelde, from the two different Channels by which that River falls into the Sea. Which Division is Political and made for the more easie Government of them, each District having one grand Magistrate in the nature of a Juiticiary, with large Power to punish Vagabonds and Criminals out of the Jurisdiction of the Cities; but this Jurisdiction hath been much restrain'd, and therefore this Division less regarded: And Geographers now only mention the Islands as they are situate beyond the Ooster-Schelde, or between that and the Western.

Those beyond, or North of the Ooster-Schelde, are Schouwen, Duyveland, Tolen and Oreland. Goree, and Overslackee (already mention'd in Holland) were formerly reckon'd part of Zealand.

Those between the Ooster and the Westen Schelde are Walcheren, North-Beveland, South-Beveland, and Wolferdyke.

These Islands were formerly subject to the same Earls with Holland, (but with the enjoyment of their own proper Laws and Customs) and with that fell to the House of Burgundy, and afterwards associated with the other Provinces in the Union of Utrecht (as we have already shewn) and have ever since been a considerable part of the Territories of the States General; for by reason of the situation of Zealand, the Inhabitants are much enriched by Fishery and Navigation; They Trade into all Foreign Parts, especially the West-Indies and France. They have few or no Manufacturies, but have an excellent way of boiling and purifying the Salt they fetch from France.

The Land here lies extream low, so that they are forced to be at great expence in maintaining the Banks to keep out the Sea. But then the Soil is fertile and produces very good Wheat and excellent Pasture; also Maddar for Dying; and Colewort, the Seed whereof yields them good Profit. The Air is not so wholesome as in the neighbouring Countries, for by reason of the noisom Fogs and Vapours arising from many Pools of standing Waters and the neighbouring Sea, it dispoles to Agues and Fevers, and other such Dileases.

The extent of Zealand is not easie to be computed, because of the intervening Waters, but reckoning Water and all, from the most Northern Banks of Schouwen to the Southern Shore of Zuyd Beveland, is about 20 miles, and from the most Eastern part of Walcheren to the Town of Tolen, near 30 miles. In this Province are 8 Wall'd Towns and 102 Vielages; the chief whereof are these, viz.

- In Walcheren the chief Island of Zealand, situate the most South-West: For Trade, Wealth, number of Inhabitants, and splendor of its Cities and Villages, much surpassing all the rest.
 - Middleburg, Cap.
 - Vlissingen.
 - Armmuyden.
 - Ter Vere.
 - In Schouwen, situate North-East from Walcheren,
 - Zirzee.
 - Browers-haven.
 - Bommene.
 - In Duyveland, situate on the West-part of the lame Continent with Schouwen, and divided from that by a small River only.
 - Oostduyveland.
 - In Tolen, situate South from Duyveland, and North-East from South-Beveland.
 - Tolen.
 - In North-Beveland, situate South from Schouwen, and East from Walcheren.
 - Cats.
 - In South-Beveland, situate between Walcheren to the South-East, Flanders to the North, Brabant to the West, and Tolen, North-Beveland and Wolfordyck to the North
 - Tergoes.
 - Romerswall.
 - In Wulferfchick a small Island, situate between the 2 Bevelands.
 - Osterlant and 2 or 3 other Villages.
- MIDDLEBURG, the Capital City of Zealand, is situate in the Island of Walcheren, at the distance of 40 miles from Rotterdam to the South-West, 42 from Breda to the West, and 25 from Bruges to the North-East, in the Latitude of 51 deg. 35 min. and Long. of 22 deg. 50 min. and is a large well-built and populous City, the Streets large and neat, and the publick Buildings stately especially the Stadtbuysse, which is adorn'd with curious Statues. The Churches, whereof here, are about twenty, are very fine; the highest Tower is exceeding costly and beautiful. Its Haven hath been made very convenient by a great Channel cut from a little Arm of the Sea, that running out at Armmuyden makes a little Island, and falls in again at Rammekins, from the middle of which Branch this Channel is derived and made to bring up Ships into the Streets of the Town, by which means the City hath been exceedingly enrich'd by Trade, especially by the Staple of French, Spanish and Portugal Wines sett'd here. In the new Ereccion of Bishopricks which King Philip II. attempted, this City was made one, and the Abbey of St. Nicholas the Seat, but it was soon alter'd and made the Place of Assembly of the States of this Province, the College of its Admiralty, its Mint, and other publick Offices, Middleburg is strongly fortified with a good Wall, large and deep Ditches, and a Counterscarp.

Armmuyden, so call'd from the small River Arme that runs from hence to Middleburg, is at present but a small Wall'd Town, seated about 3 miles from Middleburg to the East, at the Mouth of that little Arm of the Sea above-mention'd, which afforded it formerly an extraordinary good Haven, and the Town was exceedingly enrich'd by the many Merchant-Ships that frequented it: But the Sands have so choked it up, that for many years past Ships cannot enter, and therefore the Trade is now quite decayed, and the present subsistence of the Inhabitants, is by the Boiling and Purifying Salt. It was formerly a Lordship, but in the last Century, purchas'd by the City of Middleburg, and is now a Dependent on that.

Rammekins, call'd in Dutch Zeburg, is a strong Fort, seated at the Mouth of the Harbour of Middleburg, at the distance of about 3 miles from that City to the South-East, and as many from Flusfing to the East. The Creek whereon it stands is a secure Retreat for Shipping; and to the Land side it is surrounded with pleasant Meadows and many Villages. This Fort was one of the Cautionary Towns deliver'd to Queen Elizabeth.

Flusfing, call'd by the Dutch Vlissingen, is seated in the most Southern part of the Island, at the distance of about 3 miles from Middleburg; and tho' formerly but a small Place at which a Ferry was establish'd to carry Passengers to Flanders, (which is just over against it, at about half a League's distance) is at present a considerable City, well-built, and a Place of good Trade by means of its excellent Port. The Buildings are not quite so good as those of Middleburg, nor the Streets so broad, but the Stadtbuysse is a very stately modern Building. It was first Wall'd about 140 years ago, but upon the Ereccion of this Republick it was very strongly fortified, as being a Place of great consequence. It was formerly subject to its own Lords of the Family of the Borfals, of whom it was purchas'd by the Prince of Orange about the year 1581. who hath still the Nomination of their Magistrates. This was also one of the Cautionary Towns deliver'd to Queen Elizabeth in 1555. and restor'd by King James in 1616.

Ter Vere is a strong fortified Town with two good Harbours, seated on the North-side of the Island, at the distance of three Miles from Middleburg, and hardly so much from Armmuyden to the North. It hath been a place of good Trade, especially for the Scotch Trade, the Staple of which was fix'd here, but is not now so considerable. It is govern'd by its own Magistrates, and is (as I have said) well fortified, having three strong Bulwarks and a broad Ditch. The Sea hath often assailed and threaten'd the Ruin of this Town, as it actually did its Tower that stood on the North-side of the Port, in the year 1630. This Town is also subject to the Prince of Orange.

Zierzee, or Ziriczee, the chief City of the Island of Schouwen, is seated on the Channel which divides Schouwen from Duyveland, at the distance of about 15 miles from Middleburg to the North-east, and as many from the Briel to the South. It is esteem'd the ancientest City of Zeeland, and is a place of Trade, having a good Haven by means of a Channel from the Sea, by which they receive Salt from France, and export Madder in great quantities; though the Harbour, by being somewhat choak'd with Sand, be less convenient than formerly. It is a large place and hath several good Buildings, especially the great Church called de Munster, which is a very beautiful Structure: The Walls are old, but by reason of the low Grounds about, which are easily laid under Water, the place is strong enough, and did actually sustain a Siege of the Spaniards in 1575. for 3 Months, and at last obtain'd good Terms.

Broweshaoven, so call'd from the great quantities of Beer brought hither from Delft and other places, and distributed to all the Towns in this Province, is seated on the North-side of the Island over against Goree, at the distance of 5 miles from Zierzee; and was formerly a place of good Trade, and therefore Wall'd, increas'd in Buildings, and govern'd by its Magistrates; but it is now much declin'd, and subsists chiefly by Fishing and Agriculture.

Bommenee stands near the Sea, about a mile East, ward of Broweshaoven, over against Goree and the West part of Overslackee, and is a very strong Fortrefs, being encompass'd with a Wall and a deep Ditch, fill'd by the Sea, besides other Fortifications.

Oostduyveland, q. d. in the East of Duyveland (so nam'd from the great numbers of Doves and Pigeons found in this Country) is a Village only; as are also Oudekerke, Niewekirk, Vismen, Capelle, Swaneburg, &c. situate also in Duyveland.

Tolen or Ter Tolen, the chief City of the Island of the same Name, is seated on the Channel call'd Het Slaeck, which makes Tolen an Island and divides it from Brabant, and is distant about 10 or 12 miles from Zierzee to the South-east, and 3 or 4 from Bergen-op-zoom to the North-west. It was formerly the Seat of one of the Custom-houses of the Earls of Zeeland, whence it had its name, and is at present a well-fortified and strong Place, capable of resisting a powerful Enemy.

This Island is but small, and hath no other considerable Town in it.

Cats and Colyns Plaet, are the chief Towns of North-Beveland; the first seated on the Eastern Shoar, and the second on the Southern, but neither of them are considerable enough to deserve a particular Description. This Island was formerly exceeding pleasant, but by an Inundation in 1532. the greatest part of it was overwhelm'd, and therein the City Cortgeen (at that time a place of note) with many Villages destroy'd. The Inhabitants have recover'd a great deal of the Land in the North and East part, whereon stand the Towns above-mention'd, but cannot regain their ancient State, the place being at present not at all considerable.

Oresand or Maersand, reckon'd one of the Islands of Zeeland, is a very small Country lying North-west from North-Beveland, and divided from that but by a narrow Channel, hath no Town in it worth describing.

Wolferfschek, another small Island of about 5 miles long, but not above one mile broad, is situate between North and South Beveland, and contains only 3 or 4 Villages, nam'd Westerland, Oosterland, Hongerfschek, &c.

South Beveland may be reckon'd the largest of all the Islands of Zeeland, tho' it be at present of less extent than formerly, the Sea having encroach'd upon it several times, especially in 1532. when the Town and most of the Lordship of Bosjales was swallow'd up. The length of this Island is about 24 or 25 miles; but all the Eastern part being overflow'd, it cannot be reckon'd above 15 miles, and its breadth 8 or 9. The Soil of it is in some places Woody, but the rest produces very good Corn and Fruit. The chief Town here is Ter Goes, seated on the South-side of the Island, 12 miles East from Middleburg, and 15 West from Bergen-op-Zoom. It is a reasonable large City, neatly built and well inhabited; the chief Church was burnt down in 1618. but was quickly rebuilt, and is now a stately Structure. Here are three Market-places, a Grammar-school and three Hospitals, all fair and well built. This Town was endow'd with large Privileges in 1530. wall'd round about in the year 1340. and afterwards strongly fortified by the States in 1585. It hath a Channel to the Sea, by which Vessels of smaller Burden come up to the Town.

There are many large and populous Villages, as also several fine Mansion-houses of Gentlemen in South-Beveland; but those containing nothing very remarkable, we must omit them to speak a little of Romenjwael, formerly one of the three chief Towns of this Island, and enjoy'd large Privileges; but by the Misfortunes of six Inundations and one Conflagration which all happen'd in ten years time; about the middle of the last Century was so reduc'd, that though many Attempts were made for its Restoration, the Remains of the whole Town were sold in the year, 1631. for no more than 90 Pounds Flemish or 60 Pounds Sterling. It stands on the Banks of the Ooster-Scheld 10 miles from Ter Goes to the East.

C H A P. XIII.

UTRECHT, Ultrajectina Ditio.

THE Province of Utrecht is bounded on the North by Holland and the Zuyder-zee, on the South by part of Holland and part of Guederland, on the East by Guederland, and on the West by Holland, containing in extent about 20 miles both in length and breadth. The Land here is higher and therefore fitter, for Agriculture, and the Country much pleasanter than those we have been speaking of: It produces plenty of good Corn, and is replenish'd with fine Gardens and Orchards. An account hath already been given of its having been subject to its Bishops for several Ages, and of its Engagement with the other Provinces in the Union made in its Metropolis; since when it hath been always part of these States, but with the same Form of Government, the Bishops excepted, as formerly; and tho' the Episcopacy be banish'd, the Canonties and Prebendaries having been disposed of to Gentlemen of the Country, retain the same share in the Government that their Predecessors the Clergy had, and send Eight Delegates to the Provincial States, who, in the name of the Clergy, have Session therein: The rest of the Members of the States being the Deputies of the Nobles and of the chief Towns, as in the other Provinces

This Province was wholly subjected to the French in the years 1672 and 1673. their King keeping his Court in the Metropolis some part of the year 1672, and it remain'd their Head Quarters till the end of 1673.

The Chief Towns of this Province, are { Utrecht, Cap.

 { Amersfort.
 { Dufterde Wyck.
 { Rheenen.

UTRECHT, Utrajectum, Trajectum Inferius, & Trajectum ad Rhenum, so nam'd from an ancient Ferry or Passage over the Rhine, is a fair, large and populous City, seated upon the old Channel of the Rhine, at the distance of 24 miles from Amsterdam to the South-east, 27 from Leyden, and about as many from Rotterdam to the East, 17 from the Zuyder-zee to the South, and 34 from Breda to the North. The Buildings are of Brick, neat and beautiful, with convenient deep Cellars, not to be found in Holland. The Streets are large, but not so well adorn'd with Trees, nor the whole City in general quite so cleanly and burifal as some in Holland are. The Church of S. Martin, call'd the Dome, formerly the Cathedral, was a magnificent Building before a great part of it was destroy'd by Tempest in 1674. but the large square Tower, of 460 Steps to the top, is still standing. The Churches of our Saviour, S. Mary, S. Peter, and S. John, were formerly Collegiate, the Chapter whereof (tho' now compos'd of Laymen, to whom the Revenues have been given) make the States of the Clergy. The other publick Buildings are stately enough, but being ancient are not particularly remarkable. The chief Excellence of this City is its pleasant Situation (in a serene and whollom Air, among rich Meadows and Corn-fields, and within a days Journey of at least fifty Wall'd Towns) and its famous Univerfity, at first a publick School only, founded by David of Burgundy Bishop of Utrecht in 1459, but erected into a Univerfity by the Magiftrates, and confirm'd by the Provincial States in the year 1636. which is at present in a very flourishing State. Besides the Rhine, two artificial Channels call'd de Vaert and de Nieuwe Gracht, run through the Streets, and have 35 arch'd Bridges of Brick over them. The Wall of this City is very high and hath a broad Bank within-side to sustain it (which is planted with Trees and makes a pleasant Walk) but is old and decay'd; and here being pretty large Suburbs, and no Outworks, the place cannot be esteem'd fit to resist a powerful Enemy; which was the Reason the Inhabitants gave for their sending the French King the Keys of the City in 1672. But the Hollanders accuse them of Treachery and Cowardice, and say, They had beforehand made a Bargain, and therefore refus'd to permit new Fortifications to be rais'd, or to admit the Prince of Orange with the Army into the City, when the French were at Arnhem. But tho' these courageous Citizens sent above 20 miles to seek the Enemy; and present them the Keys, they fare'd little better than the other Conquests of that King, having been forced to pay no less than One hundred and sixty thousand Pounds Sterling to their new Guests while they tarried with them, (which was from the 23^d of June, 1672. to the end of November, 1673.) besides above Forty thousand Pounds at their departure.

Amersfort, Amisfortia, and Amisfortum, stands upon the little River Eems, 14 miles from Utrecht to the North-east, and 7 from the Zuyder-zee to the South. It is a good large Wall'd Town, well inhabited, and pleasantly seated between large Corn-fields to the East and South, and Pasture-Grounds to the North, which afford the Inhabitants a plentiful Subsistence, the chief Trade of the Town being Agriculture and Grazing. The Buildings are neat and handfom; among the publick ones are two Churches, several Hospitals, and a publick School. The Town is Govern'd by its own Magiftrates, and is a place of great Antiquity, but hath been much enlarg'd; for tho it were formerly a small Place, the compass of its Walls at present is near an hours Walk. The Strength of it is not considerable. It is the usual Winter Quarters of several Troops of Horse.

At a little distance from Amersfort to the South-west lies a large Tract of Hills, Woods, and barren Heaths, of near 10 miles long and 4 or 5 miles broad, call'd Amersforder Berg. Just upon the edge of which stands SOESTDYCK, a pleasant Palace of His Majesty's adorn'd with fine Gardens and curious Fountains, delightful Walks shaded with tall Trees, pleasant Parks fill'd with Deer, a large Volary and exceeding fine Stables.

Dufterde Wyck, or Wyck to Dufterde, Duroflatum, and Durofladium olim Batavorum, is seated just in the place where the middle Channel of the Rhine joins with the Leek, and is distant 15 miles from Amersfort to the South, and as many from Utrecht to the South-east. It is a pretty neat wall'd Town, pleasantly situated and indifferently rich. It is a place of Antiquity, being mention'd by Tacitus, and afterwards ruin'd by the Normans.

Rheenen, another Wall'd Town of great Antiquity, is seated on the Rhine 7 miles from Dufterdewyck to the East, and 15 from Amersfort to the South.

Montfort is a good neat Town, tolerably well Fortified, and seated about 7 or 8 miles from Utrecht to the West, near the Frontiers of Holland. It is water'd by the small River Issel, and is the Capital of a Small Territory adjoining.

CHAPTER XIV.

GELDERLAND and ZUTPHEN, Geldria & Zutphania.

Gelderland, with Zutphen, which is reckon'd part of it, (both together composing one Province of the United Netherlands) is bounded on the North by the Zuyder-zee and Overyffel, on the South by Brabant and and the Dutchy of Cleeve, on the East by the Bishoprick of Munster, and on the West by the Provinces of Utrecht and Holland, containing in extent about 56 miles from North to South, and about 45 from East to West, without reckoning the Spanish Gelderland, which is disjoined from the rest by part of the Dutchy of Cleeve. The Air of Gelderland is Clear and Healthy, the Country lying high and Inland, and consequently freed from those Fogs that infect the Maritime Provinces. The Soil of it is Fruitful, producing good Corn and Pasture, except in the Veluwe, part of which is Heathy and Barren. Zutphen is somewhat more Level and Moorish, and therefore yields not much Corn, but affords very good Grals.

This Province hath in it 25 Cities and Wall'd Towns, besides the Royal Seats of His present Majesty, Deeren and Loos; many Noblemen and Gentlemens Mansion Houses, and a great number of fine Villages, and is usually divided into these four Parts, viz.

The Veluwe, being the Northern part, and seated between the Zuyder-zee, the Issel, and the Rhine, contains these chief Towns, Arnhem.

Wageninge.
Harderwyck.
Elburg.
Hattem.

The Betuwe, lying between the Rhine and the Leck to the South, and the Maes and Merwe to the North, hath these considerable Towns, Nimeguen.

Tiel.
Schenkenichans.
Bommel.
Buren.
Culenburg.

Zutphen, bounded on the North by Overssel, on the South by Cleeve, on the West by Munster, and on the East by the Issel, which parts it from the Veluwe; wherein these Towns are most remarkable,

Zutphen.
Doesburg.
Groll.
Brevoort, &c.

The Quarter of Geldre, subject to the King of Spain, lies at some distance from the rest of the Province, the Western part of the Dutchy of Cleeve intervening. Its extent is about 25 miles from East to West, and 15 from North to South; to which the Quarter of Ruremond is joined on the South, and is extended along the Banks of the Maes for about 15 miles more; in both which these are the Towns of chiefest note, viz.

Geldre.
Venloo.
Stralen.
Wacht, and nk.
Ruremond.
Mantfont.

ARNHEM, Arnhemum, is seated on the Southern Banks of the Rhine, at the distance of 60 miles from Utrecht, and 26 from Rhenen to the East, 24 from Amersfort to the South east, 23 from the Zuyder-zee to the South, 10 from Doesberg to the West, and 23 from the Grave to the North. It is a very large, neat and strong City, formerly the Seat of the Dukes of Geldre, and at present of the Supreme Council of the Province. It is very pleasantly situated, having the River on one side, and beyond it the Meadows of the Betuwe; and on the other side Heaths, Woods and Hills of the Veluwe, which afford abundance of all sorts of Game, and an exceeding wholesome Air, and is therefore inhabited by many Gentlemen and Persons of Quality. The Buildings are neat and beautiful: The Church of S. Eusebius is a noble Structure, and adorn'd with a stately Tower: The three Hospitals, especially that called the Island of God, for the maintenance of decay'd Citizens, are well Endowed. Large Privileges were conferr'd on this City by Ordo Earl of Geldre, in the year 1233. when it was first Wall'd about; and in 1443 it was incorporated into the Body of the Hanse Towns of Germany. It is Fortified with a Wall of Brick and strong Ramparts, but is commanded by a Hill on the North-side: However it is esteem'd a place of good Strength, and capable of making a good Defence, although the Inhabitants surrender'd it to the French in 1672. the first day they attack'd it; who remaining there all that, and the following Year, added some new Fortifications, and made it a great Magazine, to which they brought the Canon from Utrecht and other places when they quited them; till at last, being forced also to quit this, they Exacted 170000 Guilders of the Inhabitants, as a Ransom for their City. In the Walls are five Gates, which are very strong; that of S. John's was in 1537 fortified with large Our-works. Near the Gate which opens to the Rhine is a Bridge of Boats over that River to the Betuwe; and on the other side is an exceeding fine large flat bottom'd, Ditch lin'd with Freestone, which almost surrounds the Town, and is fill'd with Water by a Spring arising in the neighbouring Hill.

Wageningen is a very ancient Town seated near the Rhine, about 10 miles West from Arnhem; It is Wall'd round, and stands in a Moorish Soil, which makes it a place of some Strength.

About 10 miles from Arnhem to the North-east stands DILREN, where His Majesty hath a stately Palace, adorn'd with beautiful Gardens and exceeding pleasant Walks.

And about 17 or 18 miles from Arnhem to the North, and 20 from Amersfort to the East, stands LOO, another of His Majesty's Houses, which is seated near the middle of the Veluwe, in a very sweet Air, and a Country abounding with all sorts of Game, and therefore was the Place he us'd commonly to reside at all the Summer. The Palace is a noble Building, and the Gardens exceeding Pleasant, being adorn'd with curious Knots of Flowers, fine shady Walks and Grotto's and admirable Fountains, especially the Basin of Venus, and the two great Cascades or Water-falls, which are incomparably beautiful; the Water in the Cascades falling to easily out of one Basin into another, that it makes a broad Mirror from top to bottom.

Harderwyck, Harderovicum, stands on the Banks of the Zuyder-zee, 28 miles from Arnhem to the North, and 22 from Deventer to the West. It is a fair well-built City, adorn'd with an University, which was anciently a publick School only, but rais'd to this Dignity, and Sallaries settled upon the Professors, by the States of this Province in the year 1648. The Houses in general are well built and very high. The Cathedral Church of S. Mary is a stately Building, adorn'd with curious Workmanship on the Roof and Arches within-side, and an exceeding high Tower. A Staple of Fish hath of long time been establish'd here, by which the Inhabitants are Enrich'd; and the Town is defended by an old Castle, a Wall round, a Rampart on the South-side, and some other Fortifications; but was however taken by the French in 1672. as were indeed all the Towns of this Province, as well as Utrecht, &c.

Elburg is seated near the Zuyder-zee, at the distance of 12 miles from Harderwyck to the North-east. It is a small City of an oblong square Form; a small River runs through it, and falls into a Creek of the Zuyder-zee, which makes its Port; over this River are built five Stone Bridges. It was surrounded with Walls about A. 1400. and was sometime one of the Hanse-Towns, as was also Harderwyck.

Hattem stands about 10 miles from Elburg to the East, and hardly one from the Issel to the West; It had formerly a very good Castle and other strong Fortifications, but is at present not very considerable.

Nimeguen, or Nieuwmegen, Noviomagus, famous for the Treaty held in it in the years 1678. and 1679. and at last a Peace concluded between the King of France and the several Princes then at War with him, is seated on the River Waal, at the distance of 10 miles from Arnhem to the South, and 8 from the Grave to the North, 30 from Gorcum to the East, and 12 from Schenckscance to the West. It is a large City, of a semicircular form, and exceeding pleasant, being built upon five small Hills between the River on one side, and an exceeding pleasant Country, consisting of woody Hills (out of which issue many Springs) Corn-fields and Gardens, on the other. The Houses are of Brick, cover'd with Slate, and very neat, and the Streets spacious and handfom. Among its ten Churches, all well built and adorn'd with Towers, that of S. Stephen is chiefly commendable for its stately Tower and costly Structure. The Stadthuyse is a magnificent Fabrick, adorn'd with the Statues of divers Emperors; as is the publick School with those of the Apostles and Doctors of the Church. Here are two Hospitals for the maintenance of poor Orphans, one for old People, and another for the Cure of the Sick. The Walls of the City are of Brick, exceeding high, and guarded by very strong Towers: The Gates are 12 in number, whereof 7 are toward the Water. This City enjoys great Privileges, and was Imperial and Free before the year 1248. at which time it was given to the Earl of Geldre; and with that Province became subject to the States General.

Schenckscance or Schencken-schanse, so named from a famous Captain Schenck, by whose direction it was built by the States in 1588. is seated upon the point of the Beuwe, where the Rhine divides into two great Arms, one whereof retains its Name, and runs to Duesterde-wick, and the other is call'd the Waal, by which situation it commands both those Rivers, and the Commerce between Germany and the Netherlands. It is an exceeding strong Place, having, besides the Rivers on two sides, very strong Walls, with good Bastions, a large Ditch, Half-moons and other Fortifications; however, it was taken by the Spaniards in 1635 by Surprise, but the same year recover'd by the Prince of Orange; and by the French in 1672 by the Treachery of the Governour. In 1674 the French surrender'd it to the Duke of Brandenburg, who claim'd it as a dependent on Cleve; and in 1679 fold it to the Dutch. It stands about 10 miles East from Nimeguen, and 12 South from Doersburg. About 2 or 3 miles below Schenckscance, on the West-side of the Rhine, stands a small Fort call'd the Tolkuy, which was also taken by the French in 1672.

Tiel stands upon the South side of the Waal, about 12 miles West from Nimeguen, and 8 miles South from Rhenen, in a marshy Ground, which, together with the narrowness of the Streets, makes the Town somewhat unhealthy. It is well Fortified, and by reason of the Soil, not attackable but on the North-west side: However it was taken by the French in 1672. The Country lying to the Westward between the Waal and the Ling, depends on it, and is call'd the Tieler Waert.

Buren is seated about 7 or 8 m. West from Tiel, on a small Stream that falls into the Ling; it is a wall'd Town, and the Capital of a small Lordship, which with the Town belong to the Prince of Orange, as do also the Town and Lordship of Culenburg, seated on the Leck, about 5 or 6 miles from Buren to the North-west, and about 12 from Utrecht to the South-east.

Bommel is seated on the South side of the Issel, about 12 miles from Tiel to the West, and as many from Gorcum to the East. It is a pleasant, neat and well built City, govern'd by its own Magistrates, and sends Deputies to the Provincial State. It is surrounded with very good Fortifications, and seated in a low and marshy Country, which renders the place exceeding strong. It was first wall'd and endow'd with Privileges by the Earl of Geldre, in 1229. and in the Low Country War very strongly fortified by the States. When the French took it, in 1672. it was surrounded with a double Ditch and Ramparts, besides the Walls and Bastions; all which they destroy'd before they quitted it, in 1673. But it being a Place of great consequence, the States speedily repair'd the Fortifications, and put it into a state of Defence. Bommel stands on an Island made by the two Rivers Maes and Wael, which is called the Bommeller Waert; on the West point whereof stands the Castle of Louvestein, already mention'd in the account of Holland, and on the East stand two strong Holds, call'd Fort S. Andrew and Fort Voorn, which command the Passage of these two Rivers.

The Earldom of ZUTPHEN, reckon'd formerly one of the Provinces, but now, as we have said, only a part of Gelderland, lyes on the East side of the Issel, between Cleve to the South, and Overissel to the North; and is extended about 30 miles from North to South, and near as many from East to West. The Capital City from which the whole Province hath its Name, is,

ZUTPHEN, Zuiphania, seated upon the Issel, over which it hath a Bridge, at the distance of 25 miles from Nimeguen, 18 from Arnhem to the North-east, 42 from Utrecht to the East, and 22 from Hattem to the South. The River Berkel, which rises in the Bishoprick of Munster, after it had cross'd the Province, runs through the middle of this City, and falls into the Issel, dividing the Town into two parts, call'd the Old and the New: The chief Church, dedicated to S. Peter, is a neat, sumptuous and ancient Structure, the Tower whereof being fired by Lightning, was rebuilt in 1635. in most curious manner: The Brazen Font in this Church is particularly remarkable for its curious Workmanship; and the publick Library at the East end is a reasonable good one. Here is a publick School, and several Hospitals, which, together with the high Brick Tower, call'd Drogenap's Toorn, are worth a Stranger's View. In this City dwell many Nobles and Gentleman of Quality, and it is generally reckon'd a Place of much Civility. The Buildings are fair and neat, and the Fortifications very strong, at least were so before the French took it in 1672. for then we read, that it had nine Bastions, four Half-moons, a double Ditch, and treble Ramparts: Notwithstanding which, it was surrendred to them after a very short Siege, on the 26 of June 1672. and kept by them till April 1674. In the Spanish War it was taken and rack'd by d'Alva's Army, and regain'd by the States by this Stratagem: A good number of Soldiers coming in the Habit of Market-women, loiter'd about the Gate till they found an opportunity to seize it, and let in the rest that lay ready to assist them. But this was after a long Siege, wherein that Ornament of our Nation, Sir Philip Sidney, was unfortunately slain. This City enjoys great Privileges, and was one of the Hanseatick Society; as also had the Royalty of Coinage: But this last they parted with to the States in 1694. for an annual Sum of Money to be paid them in lieu.

Doesburg is seated on the Old Issel, 9 or 10 miles from Zutphen to the South: It is strongly situated between the River on one Side and a great Marsh on the other, and had good Fortifications when the French attack'd it in 1672. so that it might have been expected to have made a very good Defence, but was however quickly surrendered, the French losing only 3 Men in obtaining it, and held it till the April following; when, being oblig'd to quit it, they demolish'd the Fortification.

At this place the Channel mention'd by the Ancients to be cut by Drusus, and therefore call'd Fossa Drusiana, is let into the Issel, being derived from the Rhine a little above Arnhem; by which the Issel is very much enlarged, and may not improperly be reckon'd another Branch of the Rhine.

Groll stands on the small River Slink, which falls into the Berkel, and is distant 18 miles from Zutphen to the East. It was esteem'd a very important Pals from Germany, and therefore fortified by the Emperor Charles V. which was afterward improv'd by the Spaniards. The Works described by Grotius, in his account of the remarkable Siege of this Place by the States in 1627. being exceeding Strong and Regular, consisted of five Bastions, joined by strong Curtains, a lower Wall or Rampart under the Bastions, in lieu of the modern Ravelins, a broad Ditch fill'd by the River Slink, and a Rampart or Counterscarp beyond it; yet did this Town make but very little Resistance before it surrendered to the Bishop of Munster, in 1672.

Breevoort is a good strong Town, having, besides pretty good Fortifications, a marshy Soil all round; by which it is rendered almost inaccessible: And therefore not taken without great difficulty by Prince Maurice in 1597. It stands 12 miles South from Groll, and 17 East from Doesburg.

Spanish Gelderland, or the Quarter of Geldre, contains these chief Towns, &c.

GELDRE, Geldria, altho' it hath the Honour to give Name to the whole Province, is but a small City, and not very considerable: It hath an old Castle, and is strongly fortified by the Marshes that surround it; which together with its distance from the rest of the Province, has hindred its falling into the Hands of the States. It is distant 36 miles from Doesburg to the South, and 20 from the Frontiers of Brabant to the East, 32 from Nimeguen to the South-east, and 25 from Dufeldorp to the North-west.

Venloo, a City of good note, is seated in a flat fenny Country, on the East side of the Maes, about 8 miles from Geldre to the South-west. It is a Place of great Trade for Corn, Brals, Marble, Free-stone, Coal, &c. brought from the Country of Liege and other parts of Germany, down the River to this City, whither the Hollanders and Brabanders repair to buy 'em. It was endow'd with the Privileges of a City in 1343. and was strong enough in the last Century to oppose Margaret of Austria when she besieged it; and even to keep out Charles V. till he had granted them good Conditions. The States took it in 1532. but lost it again to the Spaniards in 1536.

Wachtendonck, a very strong Town, is seated on the small River Niers, 5 miles from Geldre to the South, and 7 from Venloo to the East: It is surrounded by low moorish Grounds, which hinder any access to it, and makes it one of the strongest Towns in the Province. In 1588. it held out three Months against Count Mansfeld: In 1600 it was surpriz'd by Lodowick of Nassaw upon the Ice; but in 1605 was finally regain'd by the Spaniards.

Stralen stands about 2 miles from Wachtendonck, and almost in the mid-way between Venloo and Geldre: it is a Place of some Dignity, having a small Territory depending on it, but otherwise not very considerable.

Roermond stands upon the Maes, where the small River Roor falls into it, and is distant 12 miles from Venloo to the South; it is a rich and populous City, and remarkable for the Neatness of its Buildings and Strength of its Walls. A Monastery of Carthusians here is much spoken of for its Grandeur and Wealth. The City was taken in 1632. by the States, but was restor'd at the Peace of Munster, and is still subject to the Spaniards.

CHAP. XV.

The Province of OVERISSEL, Transsissalana.

OVERISSEL, so nam'd from its situation beyond the River Issel, is bounded on the North by Groenningen and Friseland, on the South by Zutphen and Gelderland, on the East by the Bishoprick of Munster, and on the West by the Zuyder-see. Its Extent from North to South is about 60 miles, from East to West about 40 miles; but the Soil is not very Fertile, a great part of it being either Barren Heaths or Quaggy Marshes; which, together, with its Inland situation, unfit for Trade, and its lying expos'd to Inroads from Germany, makes this Province less inhabited than any of the others. It is divided into three Parts, viz.

- I. Iseland, Isaland, and by corruption Salland and Zalland, lies next the Issel, and contains these Chief Towns;

}	Deventer , Cap.
}	Swoll
}	Campen .
}	Hasselt , &c.
- II. Twente, lies East of Salland, and to the Frontiers of Munster. In it are these Towns, with many others of smaller moment;

}	Oldenael .
}	Otmarfen .
}	Enschede .
- III. Drent is the North part of Overissel, and contains these Towns of chiefest note;

}	Coeverden .
}	Meppel , &c.

The small Territory of Vollenboven, on the Banks of the Zwyder-zee, is by some Geographers made a separate part, and not included in the Dreus; In it stand Vollenboven.

Steenwyck.
Swartic-sluis.
Blockzijl.

DEVENTER or Daventer, Daventria, is seated on the Issel, 8 miles from Zutphen to the North, and 18 from Swoll to the South, 30 from Amersfort to the East, and 22 from Arnhem to the North. It is a large and populous City, exceeding neatly built and well fortified: By means of the River it enjoys a good Trade, and was formerly one of the Hanse Towns. It still enjoys great Privileges, particularly the Royalty of Coinage. It is seated in a very fruitful and pleasant Country, and inhabited by many Noblemen and Persons of Quality. The Cathedral Church of St. Lebrin is a spacious ancient Structure, and the Stadthuys is a handsome old Building; here is a publick School, and several Hospitals, which with the remarkable round Tower, 15 foot thick, near the Noremberg-Gate, are worth a Stranger's notice. The City is fortified with a double Wall and Ditch, besides several Outworks; notwithstanding which it was surrendered to the Bishop of Munster, after only 5 days Resistance, on the 21st of July 1672.

Swoll or Zwoll is seated in a fruitful Country, between the two Rivers, Issel and Vecht, at about 2 miles distance from the first, and 4 from the last, and 18 miles from Deventer to the North; having also another small River, which rising near Deventer, passes through it, and a little beyond falls into the Vecht, and with it runs into the Zwyder-zee. The Buildings are fair and the Streets neat, which makes the City exceeding pleasant. It enjoys a reasonable good Trade, by means of the aforesaid River, through which the Tide flows up to the Town: The Church of St. Michael is a stately Structure, and remarkable for its fine Organ, Pulpit, harmonious Chimes and exceeding high Steeple. The publick School is considerable both for its great number of Schollars, and its College for the Study of the Sciences. Here are also divers Hospitals, a publick Granary and an Arsenal. The City enjoys great Privileges, particularly the ultimate Determination of all Causes, the Royalty of a Mint, and the Jurisdiction over 18 large and populous Villages, that stand in its Prefecture. It is surrounded with Walls, on which are 24 Towers, and a Trnch; and hath three very strong Gates, which open to so many Suburbs. In 1672. it was surrendered to the Bishop of Munster, as soon as they had of the taking of Deventer.

Campen is seated among pleasant Fields (whence it has its name) on the South side of the Issel, near the Zwyder-zee, and 8 miles West from Swoll. It is a large, neat and well-built City, and hath a strong wooden Bridge over the Issel, which is secured by a Fortification at the End of it. The Churches here are very capacious and of a curious Structure, as is also the Stadthuys; but the Custom-house is an exceeding fine Building and much admired. This was formerly a place of great Trade, but of late years the Mouth of the Issel hath been so choaked up with Sand, that Ships of Burthen cannot enter. The Wall is high and thick, and provided with many Towers, after the old manner, but not able to resist the modern way of Attacking. This City also Capitulated upon the Surrender of Deventer, and was yielded to the Bishop of Munster; who delivering it to the French, they kept it to the end of the next year, and then being forced to quit it, exacted 80000 Guilders of the Inhabitants to save it from Fire.

At the Mouth of the Vecht, and on a Bay of the Zwyder-zee, called the Zwolsche-diep, 7 miles from Swoll to the North, stands the small City Genemuyden, which had formerly a good Cattle.

Vollenboven stands upon the Zwyder-zee, 12 miles from Swoll and 7 from Genemuyden to the North; it is a neat and handsome Town, conveniently seated for Trade, and is a great Market for Corn brought from the Baltick Sea and other places.

Steenwyck stands near the Frontiers of Friezland, 10 miles North from Vollenboven, and 17 from Swoll: It is a small but very strong Town, having been very well fortified by Prince Maurice after he took it, in 1592. It was taken by the Bishop of Munster in the last War, and obliged to pay 10000 Guilders as a Ransom, when he quitted it in 1673.

Blockzijl stands on the Zwyder-zee, 3 or 4 miles from Vollenboven to the North, and 6 from Steenwyck to the South-east. It is a strong Town and besides, considerable for Navigation and Commerce.

Swartsluis, a Fortrefs standing upon the Vecht, 2 miles East from Genemuyden, and 7 North from Swoll; being taken from the Munsterians in 1672. was by them made very strong, and able to resist three several Attempts of the Dutch to regain it.

Coeverden, the chief Place of the Drente, is seated near the Frontiers of the County of Benthem, and about 12 miles from the Confines of Munster, 30 miles from Swoll, 35 from Campen to the East, and near 46 from Deventer to the North-east. It is a Fortrefs of very great Strength, having, besides the strong Walls and Outworks, Marshes and impassable Grounds almost all round it. It commands the Passes out of Munster into Friezland and Groningen, and being therefore a Place of great Importance, hath been often besieged. It was taken by Prince Maurice in 1592. and withstood a Siege of 7 Months by the Spaniards the next year: Yet in July 1672. it surrendered in 4 days to the Bishop of Munster, but was recover'd by surprize by the Dutch in December following: Again, in 1673. the Munsterians blockaded it, but could not take it.

Ootmarsum or Ootmarfen, a Town of great Antiquity, and said to be founded by Odmarus King of the Franks, is seated in the Twente, near the Borders of Benthem, and 20 miles South from Coeverden; it was formerly secured by a Rampart and a Ditch round it: But is at present not very considerable.

Oldenzyl or Oldenzael, stands 8 miles South from Ootmarfen, and as many West from Benthem: It is a wall'd Town, but not remarkable for Strength or Grandeur; it was often taken and retaken in the Spanish War, and being taken by the Bishop of Munster in the last War, was regain'd by the Dutch in 1674.

C H A P. XVI.

The Province of FRIEZLAND, Frisia.

Concerning the Country possess'd by the ancient Frizons, there is great dispute among the Learn'd, some affirming, that they spread over all Holland, Utrecht, part of Gelderland, Zutphen, Overissel and Groningen, as well as this Friezland, and the other call'd East-Friezland, beyond the Ems: Others say, that of Holland, they had the North part only, which is thence call'd West-Friezland, whilst others make the old Channel of the Rhine the Southern, and the River Ems the Eastern Bounds of their Country. The present Bounds of this Province is the Zuyder-zee to the West, North and South, Groningen and Overissel to the East and South, containing in extent from North to South about 35 miles, and from East to West about 30 miles. The Land is low and marshy, and frequently overflow'd, however affords good Pasture, and in some parts store of Corn. The Province is divided into three parts, viz.

Westergee, or the West Part, containing these Towns,

Franeker,
Harlingen, Bolswaert,
Sneek,
Worcum,
Staveren, &c.

Ostergee, or the East Part, hath these,

Leuwarden, Dockum.

Seven-Wolden is the South-east part, which being a barren Soil, is but meanly Inhabited, and besides 77 Villages, hath only one Town of Note, namely,

Sloot.

FRANEKER, Franequera, & Franequera, is seated on the Channel cut from Leuwarden to the Zuyder-zee, and is distant 40 miles from Campen to the North, 37 from Groningen to the West, not above 7 from the Shoar of the German Ocean, and in the midway between Leuwarden to the East, and Harlingen to the West. It is a fair, neat, well-built City, enjoying a reasonable good Trade by means of its Canals, and Inhabited by many Persons of Quality: Being also the Seat of an University, which was erected by the States in the year 1583, and good Revenues allotted to the Professors out of the Abbey-Lands, confiscated upon the Revolution. The Rector hath the Power of judging Civil Causes, and the Students enjoy many Immunities. The whole Town hath but one Church, which is a spacious Building, with a tall handsome Steeple: Here is an Hospital for Orphans, and a very good Grammar-School. The Town is surrounded with a good Rampart, and a deep Ditch, and hath a strong Castle built of Brick.

LEUWARDEN, Leoardia, is distant 6 miles from Franeker to the East, 30 from Groningen to the West, and 12 from Dockum to the South; and is the largest, richest, best-built, and most populous City of Friezland, being also the Seat of the Sovereign Council, and the Residence of the Stadtholder of the Province. It enjoys a good Trade by means of its Channels, whereof that from Dockum brings up large Boats with Goods, from Hamburg, Bremen, &c. This Place is commended for the neatness of its Streets and Bridges, the Pleasantsness of its Gardens, and the Splendour of its Buildings; among which the Stadtholder's Palace, the Provincial Court, and several Houfes of Noble-men, together with the two Hospitals and the Churches, are especially remarkable. It is well fortified, being surrounded with a thick and high Rampart, a broad Ditch and 5 Bulwarks.

Harlingen stands on the Banks of the Zuyder-zee, in which it hath a good Haven, being distant about 5 miles from Franeker to the West. It was at first a small Village only, but by several Enlargements since 1543. it is become a considerable City, and a place of good Trade, which consists in Corn and the Commodities of Norway and the Sound; its Harbour being well frequented by Merchant Ships from those Parts. It is well fortified, which, with the flatness of the Country round it (by that means easily Overflow'd) makes it a place of good Strength and Security.

Dockum is a neat and well-fortified Town, seated at the head of the Channel leading to Leuwarden, and upon a River, which makes a good Haven of 2 Leagues in length, from a Bay of the German Ocean, call'd Dockumer-diep, and is distant 12 miles from Leuwarden to the North-east, and about 5 from the Ocean to the South. The Streets and Buildings are remarkably neat; the Tower of its Church is high and stately, and the Stadthuys is a handsome Structure. The chief Bridge is of Stone, and very large; besides which there are two others over the River, which runs through the Town, and communicates with the Channel of Leuwarden. The Harbour is secured by Piles of large Timber driven into the bottom of the River, and shut up a-nights with a strong Boom: And the Town is fortified with a Rampart, large Ditch, and Bulwarks, built by the States in 1582.

Bolswaert stands about 7 miles from Franeker to the South, and 10 from Leuwarden to the South-west. It is a good wall'd Town, formerly one of the Hanseatick, and maintaining a pretty good Commerce, by means of the Channels leading from it to Franeker, Leuwarden, Worcum, and other Places.

Worcum stands upon the Zuyder-zee, 7 miles South from Bolswaert. It hath a small Haven, but by the Tempests from the North and West is almost choak'd up with Sand; but by the many Channels the Inhabitants Trade in small Vessels, and supply the Country with store of Fish.

Sneek is an ancient populous, neat and well fortified Town, 6 miles distant from Bolswaert to the South-east, and as many East from Worcum, seated in a low senny Country, near a Lake of the same name; which being well stor'd with Fish, afford the Inhabitants a good Support, by furnishing the Neighbouring Parts with that Commodity. Here is a Publick School, which for the number of its Scholars and Sallaries is very considerable.

Sloot or Sloten, stands upon a navigable Channel, which comes from a neighbouring Lake, and falls into the Zuyder-zee about a League below the Town, which is distant 8 or 9 miles from Sneek to the South, and by means of this Channel maintains a Commerce

Commerce with Holland and other Parts. The Buildings are but ordinary; nor are the Fortifications very strong. It hath one Church a handsome Stadthuys, and one of the Gates is very large and stately.

Staveren stands on the Zuyder-zee, at the extrem South-west Point of Friezland, over against Medenblick in North Holland, from which it is distant four Leagues to the North-east, as also twelve Miles from Sloten to the West. It had formerly a capacious Harbour, and was a famous Empory; and the Inhabitants still enjoy particular Privileges in the Sound, which shew the great Trade they formerly had thither, and was also the third in the Rank of the Hanse Towns: But this Trade is long since decay'd, and the Haven choak'd up with Sand, so that at present the Town is not considerable, and can only brag of what it hath been; wherein they have much to say, for this was anciently the Metropolis of the Frisons, and the Seat of their Kings. It is recorded also, That about 500 years ago, there was a Passage by Land almost quite cross from hence to Enkhusen, in North Holland.

C H A P. XVII.

The Province of GROENINGEN, Groeningia, with the Omlands:

THIS Province is the most North-east Part of the Dominions of the States General, and is seated between the German Ocean to the North, Overissel to the South, Friezland to the East, and the Bay called den Dollert, which parts it from the Country of Emden or East Friezland, to the West. Its Extent from North to South is about 20 miles, and from East to West about 35. The Soil of it is but poor, except the Parts lying towards the Sea, which afford very good Pasture. The Air is sharp, but wholsom enough, and the Inhabitants long liv'd. It is divided into

- The Lordship of Gorecht, a narrow Tract in the middle of this Province; in which stands Groeningen, Capit.
- The Old Ampt, lying East from Gorecht, and extending to the Bank of the Dollert, the chief Town whereof is Winschoten.
- The Westerwold, which lies South of the Old Ampt, and runs out, in form of a Wedge, between the Drente of Overissel and the North Part of Munster. It hath several Villages, but no Town of considerable note.
- The West Quarter, or the West Part, lying between the River Lavica, which parts it from Friezland, and the River or Channel leading to Groeningen. In it are about 25 Villages, but no considerable Town.
- Hunsingo*, which takes up all the North part of the Province: But hath likewise no Town of note.
- Five-lingo*, which lies between Hunsingo to the North, the Old Ampt to the South, Gorecht to the West, and the Mouth of the River Ems to the East: In which District stand several Villages, and the Town of Dam.

GROENINGEN or Groeningen, Groeninga, is seated upon the Confluence of two small Rivers, called the Aba and the Hunefis, with several artificial Channels, which lead to all parts of the Province; and is distant 30 miles from Leuwarden to the East, 32 from Coeverden to the North, 13 from the Sea to the South, and 14 from the Mouth of the Ems to the West. It is a large and populous City, surrounded with strong Walls, in which are 17 large Bastions, and other Fortifications; and is the Seat of an University, which was founded in the year 1614, and well endowed with the old Abbey-Lands. Besides several other Channels, leading from this City, there is one, which running Westward, falls into a Bay of the German Ocean; and another Eastward, that leads to Dam, and thence to the Ems; by these the Inhabitants receive Goods from Foreign Parts, and by the other Rivers and Channels convey them to the other Places of the Province, and so maintain a pretty good Trade. The principal Church is that of S. Martin, and next is that of S. Walburgh, which hath a Tower exceeding high; there are also two other Churches, viz. S. Mary's and the New Church. The Stadthuys is an old Building, and not remarkable; but the broad Market, on which it stands, is very large; as is also the Fish Market: Upon these Markets 17 Streets meet, 6 whereof lead to so many Gates of the City. The City hath been twice enlarged since the year 1600. and may at present be reckon'd 3000 Paces in compass. Most of the Houses are furnish'd with Gardens, wherein grow many Fruit-Trees, and make the Place exceeding pleasant. It enjoys great Privileges, and was some Ages ago one of the Hanse Towns. In the Low-Country War it sided with the Confederates in 1579, but returning to the Spaniard, was taken by Prince Maurice in 1594. In 1672 it was besieg'd by the Bishop of Munster, but so bravely defended, that after a Month's furious battering it with great Shot and Bombs, he was forc'd to raise his Siege. For which Valour, the Groeningers were rewarded with a double Voice in the Council of State.

Dam is seated upon the Channel call'd the Damsterdiep, about 3 miles from the Mouth of the Ems to the West, and 12 from Groeningen to the East. It has a rich Soil about it, and is beautified with good Buildings, but hath no Walls or Bulwarks.

Winschoten is a strong Fortres, which commands the Pals out of East Friezland into this Province, being seated between the Dollart Bay on one side, and a great Morass on the other, 17 miles from Groeningen to the East, and 13 from Dam to the South. It was fortified by the States in the latter end of the last Century, in whose hands it continued; but was taken by the Bishop of Munster in 1674.

For the better Security of this Pals, there is another strong Fort about six miles South-east from Winschoten, call'd Billingworder-sconce, which, though it be very well fortified, was taken by the Bishop of Munster in the year 1672. but soon recovered by the Dutch.

The Bourtanger Fort, seated in the middle of a Marsh, on the very Borders of the Westerwold, towards Munster, and 12 miles South from the Dollart, is another very strong place, and a good Defence to the Country.

CHAP. I.

THE Bounds of Germany, as set out by Ptolemy and other ancient Writers, were much different from what they are at present; for, according to their Account, it extended Northward as far as the Ocean, whereby Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, were included; and Southward it was bounded by the Danube, so that Austria, Bavaria, Stiria, Carinthia, Carinola, &c. now reckon'd part of it, were were then excluded; as were also Alsace, part of the Palatinate, and the Spiritual Electorates, the Rhine being by them reckon'd the Western Bounds; but theſe laſt, together with Lorraine and the neighbouring Countries, were afterwards poſſeſſed by Germans; and being Conquer'd by the Romans, were by them nam'd Germania prima & ſecunda.

Germany, as it is at preſent bounded by the Low Countries on the Weſt; Poland and Hungary on the Eaſt; Denmark and the Baltick Sea on the North; and Swiſſerland, with the Dominions of the State of Venice, on the South; is ſituated between the 45 D. 12 M. and 54 D. 50 M. of Latitude, and 25 D. and 39 D. of Longitude, in form almoſt ſquare; extending from North to South (that is to ſay, from Straelſund in Pomerania, to the Frontiers of Carniola and Iſtria) 150 Germanleagues, which is 600 Engliſh miles; and in breadth from the Town of Spa in the Weſt, to the Conſines of Poland in the Eaſt, about 500 Engliſh miles.

The SOIL is exceeding fruitful, eſpecially on the Banks of the Rhine and the Danube, where alſo the AIR is very Temperate; but in the Northern part it is cold, and the Ground leſs fruitful. Beſides great plenty of Corn, vaſt quantities of rich Wine is produc'd here and exported to Foreign Nations. The Earth alſo affords Mines of divers ſorts of Metals and Minerals, as Iron, Copper, Tin, Lead, and even Silver in ſome parts; Alom, Quickſilver, Salt, &c.

The chief RIVERS, are, 1. The Danube, call'd by the Natives Thonaw, which riſes in Schwaben, near a Village call'd Tone Eſchingen, whence tending Eaſtward, it receives two ſmall Riyulets, and ſoon after divides and encircles the City Ulm, where it begins to be Navigable, and having receiv'd the Iler Guntz, Minael and Wernitz, paſſes on through Bavaria, receiving the Lech at Lechmund, the Atmul at Kelheim, the Nab, Regen, Iſſer and Irn, watering by the way the Cities Newburg, Ingolſtadt, Ratisbon, and Stranbingen; thence paſſes through Auſtria, where, having water'd Lintz, it is increas'd by the Rivers Fraun, Enns, and others of ſmaller note, and then runs by the Walls of Vienna, receiving the ſmall River Wien, (whence that City hath its name) and afterwards the Moraw, purſuing its courſe ſtill Eaſtward into Hungary, where it paſſes by Prezburg and Graz; then, tending Southward, it paſſes by Buda and Belgrade, being exceedingly increas'd by the Drave, which it receives at Eſſeck, and the Save at Belgrade; after which it loſes its name and is call'd Iſſer, and running Eaſtward between Servia and Wallachia, as alſo between Moldavia and Bulgaria, falls at laſt into the Black or Euxine Sea in ſix Mouths, which part Bulgaria from Beſſerabia, after having run above eleven hundred miles an end. It is very broad, runs with a very rapid Current, and hath three great Cataracts, which are 1. The Saw-Ruffel, or Swine's Snout, near Lintz, ſo call'd from a pointed Rock hanging over, which hath under it a dangerous Whirlpool. 2. Der Strudel near Gronon in Auſtria, where the falling of the Water makes a horrid noiſe. And, 3. Der Warbel, another very dangerous Whirl-pool. The Rhine riſes in two Springs in the Alps, which falling into Swiſſerland, unite near the City Cur or Coir, and ſoon after dilates it ſelf into a large Lake, call'd the Boden Sea, or Lake of Conſtance; whence paſſing Weſtward to Baſil, it turns up to the North, and runs between Schwaben and Alsace into the Palatinate, receiving the Nekar at Manheim, and the Maine at Mentz; then runs to Coblentz, where it receives the Mſelle; afterwards waters Cologne, and paſſes on through the Dutchy of Cleeve, receiving the Reer and the Lippe, and other ſmaller Rivers by the way, and paſſes into the Netherlands at Schenckſchan. Of its Courſe afterwards we have already given an account. It is very broad, even two Engliſh miles (as ſome ſay, at Schenckſchan), and its courſe very ſwift, but the Navigation of it is interrupted by nine Cataracts; the moſt remarkable whereof are two in Swiſſerland, one near Schaſtloſen (where the whole River falls 75 foot) and the other near Lauſſenburg. 3. The Ebe riſes out of the Mountains near Hircsburg in Sileſia, upon the Conſines of Bohemia, in eleven ſeveral Springs, which being united, paſs Northward between Miſnia and Lufatia into Saxony, receiving by the way the Warlitz, Orlitz, Moldau and Agra, paſſes by Magdeburg, Lawenburg and Hamburg, and a little below Gluckſtadt divides into two Branches which falls into the German Ocean; it is very large and deep at Hamburg, which is above 70 miles from the Sea; Ships of 4 or 500 Tun ride at Anchor in it. 2. The Oder ſprings in Moravia, and after a Current of 300 Engliſh miles, through Brandenburg and Pomerania, falls into the Baltick Sea. 4. The Weſer riſes in the Mountains of Thuringen, runs through Heſſen and Weſphalia, and empties it ſelf into the Ocean below Bremen.

Other Rivers of ſmaller note the Reader will diſcover the Courſe of, in the following Deſcription of the Country; as alſo an account of the Mineral Waters, Baths, Mines, Mountains, Foreſts, Lakes, &c. found in ſeveral Parts of this great Nation.

Of the Inhabitants of Germany.

Whether Germany was Peop'd after the Flood by Aſcanus the Grandchild of Japhet, or whether Tuiſco, who ſome ſay was the Son of that Aſcanus, and others the Son of Noah, was the Conductor of the firſt Colony hither, is uncertain. Cluverius affirms the former, aſſigning the very year when this Plantation was made, viz. The 136th after the Flood; and Verſtegan pleads hard for the latter. However that be, it is certain that Germany was Peop'd very Early. The ancient Germans had two Deities call'd Tento or Tuiſco, and Mannus his Son, under which Names, by their Songs and Feſtivals, they honour'd God the Maker of the World, and Adem the Propagator of humane Kind. And from the names of the former of theſe two Deities, had the appellation of the Teuſche Nation, which by the mutation of T for D is now made Duyſche; and the Cuntry Duyſchland.

Much Diſpute hath riſen among the Etymologiſts concerning the derivation of German and Alman, two other Names of this Nation: The moſt agreed on is, That Gar ſignifying all, they were call'd Gar Man, q. d. all Men, denoting their great Manlineſs and Valour. All ſignifies the ſame, and therefore Alman is but a ſynonymous Term, ſignifying the ſame thing with German; though others aſſign the reaſon of that denomination to be the many Nations of them, and that it was firſt given 'em in the year 358. when they muſter'd up a great Army from all parts againſt the Romans; which being a mixture of many ſorts of Men, it was call'd an Army of Almanner; which word afterwards was uſ'd by the Italians, Spaniards and French, to ſignifie the whole Nation of Germans. Again, others ſay, That the name Almain, belong'd to the People of Schwaben;

which they took from Mannus the Son of Tuisco; and that it became not universal, till those Dukes, having obtain'd the Imperial Dignity and kept it many years, made the name of the Inhabitants of that Region be extended to the whole Country.

By what we have said, the Reader will judge, That the TEMPER of the Inhabitants was Martial; which indeed they were, so far as to oppose the Romans for 210 years, but cannot however be esteem'd to deserve the Character their Name implies; For though they are generally of large Bodies, with big Bones, much Flesh and strong Sinews; they want Spirit to actuate their large Bulk, and Hat to concoct the Phlegmatick Humour where-with their Bodies are fill'd, and therefore are better at guarding a Post than gaining Ground. 'Tis true, in our days they have notably oppos'd the Turks, fought many Battels, and acquir'd great Honour by the glorious Victories they have obtained over those Infidels. They are generally good natur'd, free from Malice and Subtily, much addict'd to both Drunkenness and Gluttony, but not over-much to Venery. The poorer sort are laborious, sincere and honest. The Nobility are Men of great Honour, and commonly Scholars. All the Sons of a Noble Man inherit their Father's Title, which exceedingly increaseth the number of the Nobility, and the more, because the German Women are generally good Breeders; and by that means the Estates of the Princes are so often divided for the sake of younger Children, that the Principalities and Sovereign Lordships have increased to a vast number. All the Nobility scorn Marriage with a Commoner; wherefore the younger Brothers are often oblig'd to take up Arms, or enter into Orders, whereby they are enabled to keep up the Grandeur of the Family, especially by the latter, because the Ecclesiastical Preferments here are both Numerous and Rich. The Women are of good Complexions, Corpulent, and very Fruitful, as we have said, and more obsequious to their Husbands than our Women, many not sitting at Table with them, and none having the upper Place there.

The GENIUS of the Germans hath appear'd in the Invention and Improvement of many Mechanical Arts, whereof Clock-work especially is owing to them. In this Art they have exceeded all the World in the contrivance of variety of Motions, to shew not only the Course of the Hours and Minutes, but even of the Sun, Moon and Stars; whereof the Clocks at Strasburg, Prague, and many other places all over Germany, are sufficient Instances. The Emperor Charles V. had a Watch in the Jewel of his Ring; and in the Elector of Saxony's Stable, is to be seen a Clock in the Pommel of a Saddle. The Story of Regio Montanus's wooden Eagle, that flew an English mile to meet the Emperor Maximilian, and return'd with him to Norimberg; as also of the Iron Fly (made by the same Perlen) that flew round the Room, and return'd to his Hand, are seriously related by Keckerman and Peter Ramus. The Germans claim the Invention of the Art of PRINTING, whereof something hath been already said in our description of Haerlem; but because that Art is so very curious, and hath been so serviceable to the World, we shall a little enlarge in the History of it. We have said already, That Lawrence Coster of Haerlem found out the Art by accident, and had brought it to some perfection, but was robb'd of his Materials by a Servant who fled with 'em to Germany: This the Dutch men say; but the Germans alledge, That John Gut- temburg, an Alderman of Strasburg, first Invented it in the year 1440. and remov'd with it to Mentz, printed several Books, in which he made use of Cast Letters of Metal in the same manner as now used. The Hollanders in answer affirm, that it was Coster's Servant that taught Guttemburg, and that the Servant's name was John Faust; which name is set in all the first Printed Books, as the Printer of them. Tully's Offices, Printed in 1465, is to be seen in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and in many other places, with this Inscription at the end: Præfens M. Tullii clarissimum opus, Johannes Faust, Moguntinus Civis, non atramento, plumali, calama neq; areæ. Sed arte quadam per puleira Petri manu pueri mei feliciter effici fuit Anno MCCCCLXV. Angelus Rocca in his Account of the Vatican Library (printed at Rome in 1501.) says, that he had seen Donatus's Grammar, Printed upon Vellum with this Inscription at the beginning; Johannes Faustus, Civis Moguntinus, Acus Maternus Johannis Schæffer, primus excogitavit imprimendi artem Typis æreis: Quos deinde plumbeas invenit: multaque ad poliendum artem addidit ejus filius Petrus Schæffer: Impressus est autem hic Donatus primum omnium, A. D. MCCCCL. Admonitus certe fuit ex donato Hollandia prius impresso in tabula incisâ. In an old Chronicle of Colen, Printed in 1496, 'tis said, That the hint of this Art was given from Holland, where an Impression of uns Donatus had been made before that of Mentz. So that upon the whole, the Invention may be granted to Holland, but improved and propagated in Germany; whence it was carried again to Holland, and from thence brought to England very early, by Caxton and Turner, whom King Henry VI. sent at his own expence to learn it: These prevail'd upon one of the Printer's Men at Haerlem to steal away and come with them to England; where being arriv'd, they set to Work at Oxford, and having taught other Men, Printing-houles were set up at Westminster, S. Albans, Worcester, and other places. There is now to be seen at Oxford, S. Jerom upon the Creed with this at the end; Explicit expositio Sancti Jeronimi in simbolo Apostolorum ad Papam Laurentium. Impressa Oxonia Et finita Anno Domini, MCCCCLXVIII. xviii die Decembris.

But to return to the Germans,

The Invention of Guns is undisputedly theirs, which was also produc'd by an Accident, in this manner. One Barthold Schwartz, a Friar, in making Chemical Experiments, had one day mix'd some Saltpetre and Brimstone with other Ingredients, and set them upon the Fire in a Crucible; but a Spark getting in, the Pot suddenly broke with great violence and wonderful noise; which unexpected effect surpriz'd him at first, but thinking farther on the Matter, he repeated the experiment, and finding the effect constant, set himself at work to improve it: To which purpose he caus'd an Iron-pipe to be made with a small hole at the low end to fire it at, and putting in some of his new Ingredient together with some small stones, set fire to it, and found it answer'd his expectation in penetrating all before it. This happen'd about the year 1330. and was soon improv'd to the making of great Ordnance, &c.

To these Inventions of the Germans, we may add their improvement of the Art of Chymistry; which being brought hither by Albertus Magnus, was very much studied by the Monks, and much time lost by them in the search of the Philosopher's Stone, and the Study of the Resurrection Philosophy.

The RELIGION of the ancient Germans was Paganism, which was driven out of several parts of it by the Preaching of S. Clemens, S. Crescens, S. Mark, S. Maternus, S. Eutberius, and other the immediate Successors of the Apostles : So that in the middle of the second Century, Christianity was in a flourishing State in Germany, as is testified by S. Ireneus. But the remote Northern parts remain'd long in their blind Superstition ; the Saxons not being Converted till the time of Charles the Great, as we shall shew more particularly when we come to speak of that Nation.

The Corruptions that crept into the Romish Church, in the middle Ages, dispers'd themselves hither, and were generally believ'd, before John Huss and Jerom of Prague, about the year 1407. oppos'd those Errors, and Preach'd up the Doctrine of Wiclif; for which they were both burnt at the Council of Constance: But their Followers in Bohemia being numerous, obtain'd a Tolleration of the Emperor, and continued administering the Sacraments in both kinds, and in several things acting contrary to the Church of Rome: In which State the Reformation stood when Luther appear'd for it, upon the following occasion :

In the year 1517. Pope Leo X. in pursuance of the pretended Power of the Popes in pardoning Sins, sent abroad his Letters and Bulls, promising Pardons to all that would purchase them with Money : And the Friars were employ'd to Preach up the Doctrine, and Offices establish'd in several parts of Germany, to receive the Money that the ignorant People gave for the Indulgences the Collectors were impower'd to give them. These Preachers continually buzzing in the People's Ears the Efficacy of the Pope's Pardons, and the mercenary manner of prostituting of them, rais'd Indignation in many ; and therefore Martin Luther was soon favour'd in opposing it. He was a Doctor of Divinity, and an Augustine Friar, living at Wittenberg in Saxony: At which place, in the same year, 1517. he began to preach against the Pope's Power of pardoning Sins ; and publish'd Theses concerning Purgatory, Penance, &c. which were answer'd by Terzelius, Eckius, Prierias and others, on the Pope's side. To which Luther reply'd ; and being now favour'd by Frederick the Elector of Saxony, proceeded in time from one Point to another, till he took the very Foundation of the Roman Church; a publick Disputation being held at Liepsick in 1519. between him and Eckius, wherein the Authority and Primacy of the Pope was the Subject of the Argument. And in a few years, not only the Elector of Saxony, but the Dukes of Brunswick, Mecklenburg, and Lunenburg, the Marquels of Brandenburg, the Landgrave of Hesse, together with several other Princes and many Imperial Cities, embrac'd his Doctrine. In 1529. a Decree was made against it by the Diet at Spire; against which, the Elector of Saxony, the Marquels of Brandenburg, the Dukes of Lunenburg, the Landgrave, together with the Deputies of Stralsburg, Nuremberg, Ulm, Constance, and ten other Imperial Cities, enter'd a publick Protestation ; which gave Occasion to the name of PROTESTANT, the Lutherans from that time being so call'd. In the next year, the Princes above-mentioned presented the Confession of their Faith to the Emperor, in the Diet at Augsburg; which being rejected, and a Decree made against their Opinions, the Protestant Princes and Cities met at Smalcald, and enter'd into a Defensive League about the end of the same year, 1530. and not long after a War broke out ; between them and the Emperor, which lasted many years, till in the end the Emperor comply'd ; and, by the Pacification of Passaw in 1552. agreed, That Matters concerning Religion should be referred to the Diet ; which being assembled at Augsburg in the year 1555. decreed, That neither the Emperor, nor any other Prince or State, should in any manner whatsoever hurt or injure any Man for the Confession of the Augustan (or Protestant) Religion, nor force any of the Princes to forsake their Religion, Ceremonies or Laws, which they had already instituted in their Dominions, or which those of the Augustan Confession should thereafter institute, or that the Emperors nor Princes should condemn the same, but suffer them freely to profess this Religion, and quietly enjoy their Goods and Estates ; together with much more to that Purpose, as may be seen, at large, in Sleidan's Hist. of the Reform. in Germany, lately Translated into English. So that at present the Lutheran Religion is profess'd in the Dominions of all those Princes and Cities above-mentioned, and many others ; as the Roman Catholic is in Austria, Bavaria, the Spiritual Electorates, &c.

The Germans value themselves extremely upon speaking a Primitive LANGUAGE, and have obstinately refused to borrow Words of their Neighbours, tho' they are forc'd to make very uncouth Compounds, to be able to express themselves intelligibly. The Radical Words themselves are very harsh, and abound with Consonants ; and many of these being put together, fill the Mouth, 'tis true, and make a thundering Sound, which is called Manly ; but to a Stranger it seems as untuneable as the Welch, and as difficult to learn. Compounds, 'tis granted, is an Elegancy, but excess in every thing is ill ; and no Language is copious enough of it self to furnish all Words ; which themselves begin to be sensible of, and do therefore now admit some few French words, for the better and more intelligible expressing themselves. In short, the High Dutch hath the Reputation of a manly noble Language, but withal, not tuneable or docible, and is fitter for a General than a Courtier. It extends very far, for not only in Germany, but in Denmark and Sweden, the High Dutch is spoken, with some variation of Dialect, as also in Switzerland; not to mention Holland and Flanders, the Language whereof is of the same Original, but varied to much that the Germans disown it, and have given it the Name of Low Dutch for distinction.

Concerning the ANCIENT STATE of Germany we can only say, That from the beginning of History it was divided into many Nations ; who, tho' they all spok'd the same Language, preserv'd their separate Governments ; and though by Invasion of Neighbours, and Wars among themselves, several Revolutions have happen'd in almost all the Parts, yet to this day it is divided into a great number of Principalities, every one of which hath had a different Fate ; as the Reader will find in the following Description of them.

The greatest Monarchy that hath been in Germany was that of Charles the Great, otherwise call'd Charlemaigne, King of France; for he was not only Lord of the Parts upon the lower Rhine and the Main, but by his Arms subdued Saxony and Bavaria; and acquiring the Honour of Emperor, of the Romans, resid'd with it here ; and Germany hath ever since been called, The Sacred Roman Empire.

But to be inform'd how Charles attain'd this titular Honour, it is necessary to look back into the latter State of Italy, and see by what degrees the Roman Monarchy declin'd, and at last expir'd in the Person of Augustinus, 300 years before the time of Charles the Great: The beginning whereof must be dated from Constantine the Great; for tho' he was a very wife and excellent Prince, yet by removing the Seat of the Empire to Byzantium (now call'd Constantinople) he left these Western parts naked, and exposed to the Ravages of those iwarms of Northern People that soon after invaded them. At his Death Constantine dividing the Empire between his Sons, first erected the Eastern and Western Empires, the Seat of one being Constantinople, and the other Rome: But the latter became again united under the Eastern Emperor, and continued to till the Death of Theodosius, who again divided it for the sake of his two Sons Arcadius and Honorius; these were succeeded for about 80 years by several Eastern and Western Emperours, but both the one and the other very sensibly declin'd; especially the Western Empire, by the Invasion of the Goths and other barbarous Northern Nations (who seized its Provinces, invaded Italy, and sack'd even Rome it self) was brought very low, and none of the latter Emperours made any considerable figure in the World: The last of them was Augustulus, against whom Odoacer King of the Heruli waged War, subdued a great part of Italy, took Augustulus Prisoner, and made him resign the Empire, and finally determine that Dignity: This happen'd about the year 476. The Heruli reign'd but a little while, being conquer'd by the Ostrogoths, and those at last driven out by Justinian, and Italy again made a part of the Eastern Empire; till (the Power of those Emperours being much declin'd) the Popes found means to obtain the Temporal as well as Spiritual Jurisdiction over a great part of it; and the Lombards conquer'd another large part, and erected a considerable Monarchy; which at last, the Popes grew uneasy at, and therefore stirr'd up the French Kings against them; and Pope Adrian I. being besieged in Rome by Desiderius King of Lombardy, sent to Charlemain for assistance; who accordingly invaded Lombardy, overcame Desiderius, and was himself crown'd King: By which he became Lord of a great part of Italy, as he was before of Germany and France. Upon this occasion it was that the Pope, in gratitude for the Service he had done him, and to secure to himself so powerful a Protector, by consent of the People of Rome, declared Charles Emperor, and erected anew the Western Empire. But inasmuch as the Pope was Lord of the Territory about Rome, and Charles in his turn must shew his Gratitude, he left that City to the Pope, and fixed the Seat of the Empire in Germany; which was also more convenient to him, because more in the middle of his Dominions. Thus Germany became the Seat of the Western Empire; which Dignity (tho' but a shadow of the ancient Roman) it has ever since born, under the Government of these following Princes.

Of the Power of the Emperor.

Having shewn how the King of Germany obtain'd the pompous Title of Romanorum Imperator, and how many Princes have succeeded in that Dignity, it remains that we speak something of the Territories subject to his Dominions, and of his Power. It is plain, by what we have already said, That Charles the Great got nothing but a bare Title by the Pope's saluting him Emperor: Germany and France were already in his possession, Lombardy he had just Conquer'd, Spain had been long possess'd by the Goths, and the Popes had a good part of Italy; so that the Citizens of Rome had nothing to bestow upon him but the Honour, when he declared him their Emperor. However, That Title his Successors have been careful in preferring, and always write themselves Cesar in memory of Julius, and Augustus from Octavius, in imitation of the Roman Emperors: They also call Germany the Sacred Roman Empire, and endeavour in all things to keep up the Grandeur of those ancient Princes. The Dominions of Charlemain were soon divided; his Son Lewis the Godly erecting out of 'em many Kingdoms, as we have already shewn in our account of the Kings of France: Germany with the Imperial Honour he gave to his eldest Son Lotharius; but his Posterity proving mean degenerate Persons, they soon lost it, and several Princes were afterwards elected to that Dignity; Germany in time being divided among many Princes, whose Powers were exceedingly encreas'd by the Offices and Dignities that the Emperors conferr'd on them, and at several times made Hereditary to their Families. These Offices were Hertogen or Dukes, to whom were committed the Government of the larger parts of Germany; Grassen or Earls, who had the care of smaller parts; Pfaltzgraven, Counts Palatine or Præfects of the Court-Royal, who administr'd Justice in the Verge of the Court; Landgraves, who were Presidents set over Provinces; Margraves or Marquisses, who were Presidents of the Marches or Borders for repelling the Incurfions of Æemies and administring Justice to the Inhabitants; also Burggraves, who were Governors of the Royal Castles or Forts. These Offices being made Hereditary, the Possessors of them in time obtain'd Sovereign Authority in their respective Governments; which the Emperors, either through their own Liberality, or being prevail'd on by Money or Service, or oblig'd by some exigency of Affairs, have at several times confirm'd to them: So that at present, tho' the Emperor be supream Lord over all Germany, he is not, as Emperor, Master of any particular part of it (except some few of the Princes Estates that have returned to the Crown as Fiefs for want of Heirs) it being all subject to the several Princes; whereof 'tis true the present Emperor, as Arch-Duke of Austria, is the Richest.

The Power of the Emperor hath been so restrain'd by several Capitularies or Agreements between the Emperors and Princes, that 'tis difficult to say what it is: The best account that can be given of it is, That he exercises Regal Authority over all Germany, except in such things as by Grants of his Predecessors he is restrain'd; the chief whereof are as follows, according to a late Author that collected it out of them. First, the Emperor hath not the Legislative Power. The general Law all over the Empire is the Civil or Roman, mix'd with the Canon, and the old Customs of the Germans, and in the several States the particular Laws made by them, which firmly oblige in their own Dominions. To these are added the Statutes of the Diets, by which alone can any new Law be introduced, or any Law made that will bind all the States; and such Statute or Recess (as it is call'd) of the Diet, obliges the Emperor also. Next, the Emperor cannot levy Taxes. If there be occasion for Money to be rais'd for the Service of the Empire in general, it cannot be done without the consent of the Diet. By the Capitulary of the present Emperor, he is tyed up from beginning a War, or making Alliance with a Foreigner, without the consent of the Electors. By the same it is declar'd, That the Emperor shall not deprive any Prince or State of their Dignity or Dominions. Nor can he impose Religion on any Prince or State, or punish any Man on that account.

But what I have been saying of the limitation of the Emperor's Power, is to be understood of him as he is Emperor; for in his own hereditary Dominions he may act as he pleases, with respect to the particular Laws there: Wherefore, the present Emperor being King of Hungary and Bohemia, Arch-duke of Austria, Duke of Silesia and Marquess of Moravia Duke of Stiria, Carinthia and Carniola, Earl of Tyrol, Cilley and Gorice, and Lord of many Cities and Territories in Schwaben, besides what he has lately gain'd from the Turks, is a very powerful and mighty Prince, and able to carry on a War at his own Expence, though the Diet should happen to disagree with him.

The Emperor only can confer Honours, create Princes, and enfranchise Cities; all the Princes receive Investiture from him; he instituteth Universities; and 'tis he only can give leave to build Cities. He is serv'd by the greatest Princes of Germany, address'd to by the name of Cesar, and semper Augustus, and his Embassadors in Foreign Court take place of those of all the Kings and States of Europe.

Of the King of the Romans, the Electors of the Empire, and the other Princes of Germany.

The King of the Romans is a Dignity erect'd of late Ages, being begun in the time of Charles IV. He is chosen to be the Emperor's Deputy in case of his Absence or Sicknets, and upon his Death to succeed ceed him without other Election. This was introduced in Policy by the Emperors, that they might in their Lives time secure the Succession to their Family, and procure their Successors better Terms than they might be able to obtain in a Vacancy. This Dignity therefore is not constantly in being, and hath been only conferr'd when the Emperors have had a Son to succeed, and have had Interest enough to engage the Electors to choose him. The Son of the present Emperor was elected to this Honour on the 24th Jan. 1635, and crown'd at Augsburg two days after.

The Electoral Princes are Nine in number, viz. 1. The Archbishop of Mentz, who is styled Arch-Chancellor of Germany, Dean of the Electoral College, sits on the Emperor's right Hand in the Diet, and had formerly the right of crowning the King of Bohemia. 2. The Archbishop of Trier, who is call'd Arch-Chancellor of France and the Kingdom of Arles, and claims the first Vote in the Election of the Emperor; he sits over against the Emperor in the Diet. 3. The Archbishop of Cologn, he has the Title of Arch-Chancellor of Italy, claims the first Vote in choosing the King of the Romans, and of setting the Crown on his Head; he sits next the Emperor on his left Hand. 4. The King of Bohemia, he is Lord Cup bearer to the Emperor, first of the secular Electors, and in publick Processions walks next the Emperor or King of the Romans. 5. The Duke of Bavaria, who is Lord Sewer, and carrieth the Globe before the Emperor in solemn Processions. 6. The Duke of Saxony, he is Lord High Marshal of the Empire, and carrieth the naked Sword before the Emperor. 7. The Marquess of Brandenburg, he is Lord High Chamberlain, and in Processions carrieth the Scepter before the Emperor. 8. The Count Palatine of the Rhine, who is Lord High Treasurer, and in the Procession at the Coronation scattereth the Medals among the People. 9. The Duke of Brunswick-Lunenbug-Hanover.

These have much greater Authority, and enjoy larger Privileges and Rights than the other Princes of Germany. They chuse the Emperor and King of the Romans, and pretend a Power of Deposing him. In some Cases they exclude the rest of the States, and consult by themselves Matters of greatest Importance; the Emperor is oblig'd to ask their Advice when he calls a Diet. In an Interregnum the Elector of Saxony and the Elector Palatine of the Rhine govern the Empire; in which case, the Jurisdiction of the former extends over all the Northern part, and the latter governs all the Countries on the Rhine, the Circle of Schwaben, &c. but the Duke of Bavaria disputes this Right with the Count Palatine, and at the Death of the last Emperor did actually take the Office upon him; which the other protested against, and complain'd of as an Usurpation upon his Right.

At what time, or by what means, these Princes first obtain'd the Electoral Power, is not certainly known: The common Opinion is, That the Emperor Ordo III. and Pope Gregory V. instituted them; but this is disputed, and many learned Men are of Opinion, That tho' it be true that from the time of Ordo the Empire was elective yet that the Elections were not made by these seven Princes only, but by the great Officers of the Empire in general; of whom these being the chief, and most considerable by their Estates, made a shift to overtop the rest, and assume that Power wholly to themselves; this is dated from the time of Frederick II. and Conrad IV. at the death of the last of which, several Elections were made at the same time, and the Affairs of Germany put into great disorder thereby. But these Princes having Power enough to repeal this Act, made it a Custom, which was at last pass'd into a Law by the Emperor Charles IV. who made that famous Bulla Aurea (so call'd from the golden Seal affix'd to it) that contains the whole Form of the Election and Power of the Electors. The number of these Electors were then but seven, to whom an eighth was added in this Age on the following occasion: Frederick V. Count Palatine, falling into difference with the Emperor, and accepting of the Crown of Bohemia in opposition to the pretension of Ferdinand II. was by him proscrib'd; and being defeated at the Battel of Prague in the year, 1620. was depriv'd of his Country and Honours, which the Emperor bestow'd upon the Duke of Bavaria: But great Contentions and Wars ensuing thereupon, it was at last agreed in the Westphalian Treaty A. D. 1648. That the Count Palatine should be restor'd his Electoral Dignity. But because the Duke of Bavaria could not be brought to part with his, an eighth Electorate was erected for him, and part of his Country, viz. the Lower Slesatine, being restor'd, he has since had the Title of Elector Palatine of the Rhine, and the eighth Seat in the Electoral College. To this number there has been yet another added very lately, viz. in the year, 1693. and by the Emperor's favour conferr'd on Ernestus Augustus, Duke of Brunswick-Lunenbug-Hanover.

The other Princes are, the Dukes of Lunenbug, Meckenbug, Wuttemberg, Sax-Lauenburg, Sax-Naumburg, Sax-Hall, Sax-Gotha, Sax-Mersburg, &c. the Marquisses of Baden, Culembach, &c. the Landgraves of Hesse, the Princes of East-Frizeland, Anhalt Montebeliard, Birkfeld, Nassaw, Furstemberg, Hoenzollern, &c. the Counts of Solm, Dietrichstein, Aversburg, with many others. As also, the Archbishop of Salzburg, the Bishops of Munster, Liege, Wurzburg, Bamberg, Paderborn, Osnabrug, Aichstadt, Strasbourg, Augsburg, Basil, Constance, Hildesheim, Spire, Worms, Passaw and Lubeck, together with some Abbots, and the Great Master of the Teutonic Order, &c. These have Sovereign Authority in their own Estates, and govern their Subjects without Cognizance of the Emperor.

There is yet another Class of Sovereign States in Germany, viz.

The Imperial Cities and Hanse-Towns.

The Cities of Germany were, from their beginning, endow'd with large Privileges, which were given by the Princes that built them, to invite the People to inhabit them, and leave the rude manner of Living they had been accusom'd to before the Fifth Century after Christ. Accordingly, upon this encouragement, they flock'd to the Cities, and betook themselves to Manufactures and Trades; by which being in time grown Rich, many of the Cities obtain'd by purchase, or otherwise, exemption from the Jurisdiction of the Princes in whose Dominion they stood; and by permission of the Emperors, at several times, were erected into independent States, to be govern'd by their own Magistrates under the Protection of the Emperor, each City paying its Proportion in all Taxes levied for the publick Service of the Empire; and these are thole Cities that are call'd Imperial and Free, and are very numerous, the Catalogue of them would be too tedious; the Reader will find them noted in the following Description, to which we refer him. These Cities have frequently made Leagues

Leagues for their mutual Defence, as also for the sake of Trade; upon which account was form'd the famous Hanseatic Society, which was a League made between several of the Maritime Cities of Germany, (whereof Hamburg and Lubeck were the Chief) about the end of the 13th Century, for their mutual assistance in carrying on their Commerce, by which they grew very considerable, and engag'd many Cities into their Society, even to the number of near fourscore; they also obtained large Privileges, and exercised a Jurisdiction among themselves; to which purpose they were divided into four Circles, distinguish'd by the names of the four Principal Cities among them, viz. Lubeck, Cologne, Brunswick and Dantzick, wherein were held their Courts of Judicature. They were call'd Hanse or Anse, q. d. am æge, on the Sea, because the Society at first consisted only of such, who afterwards many Inland Cities were introduced; 'Tis true, this Etymology is disputed, and many others assign'd; but this seems the most probable, and therefore we shall name no more. The most flourishing time of this Society was from about the year 1400 to 1500. after which it declin'd, and is at present not very considerable.

Of the Diet of the Empire.

The Diet or Parliament of Germany is compos'd of the Electors, the Princes Spiritual and Temporal, of the Empire; and the Deputies of the Imperial Cities. This general Assembly of all the Estates of the Empire is summoned by the Emperor, by Letters directed to every Member six Months before the Session, informing them of the time and place. When they are assembled, the Emperor, or his Commissioner, proposes to them the Matters to be transacted, which are things that concern the whole Empire in general, such as raising Money for a Foreign War, and making Laws which oblige all the States. The Diet is divided into three Houses, which are, the Electors, the Princes, and the Cities: In the first, the Bishop of Mentz is Speaker; in the second, some Prince of the House of Austria and the Bishop of Saltzburg by turns; and in the third, that City in which the Session is held. The Princes are divided into two Benches, the Spiritual and Temporal: The Cities are also divided into two Benches, the Rheinische and the Schwäbische; on the former sit the Deputies of the Cities on the Rhine, &c. and on the latter the Cities in Schwaben, Franconia, &c. The Diet was formerly assembled annually, but latterly not so often, except at this time of War; and it is at the Emperors pleasure to call it; only in case of his omission the Electors may advise him to it; the States judging it convenient that it be assembled once in three years. The place of its Meeting is also at the Emperors disposal; Mentz was by Charles the Great appointed for it, but it has since been held at several other free Cities; At present Ratisbon is the usual place of its meeting.

Of the Supreme Courts of Judicature.

The chief Court for determining great Causes in Germany is the Imperial Chamber: At first the Emperors with their chief Ministers heard and decided all considerable Causes, but those growing numerous Maximilian I. settled a Court at Worms in 1495; which was afterwards removed to Spire, and nam'd The Imperial Chamber, wherein Causes are Tryed by certain Judges call'd Affessors: Of these at first there were sixteen, now fifty, whereof the Emperor appoints the President and the four chief Officers, the Electors chuse each of them one, and the rest are nam'd by other Princes and States of the Empire. Disputes between the Princes are brought before this Court, as also other Causes, by Appeal from Inferiour Courts. The Seat of it was establish'd at Spire, never to be remov'd without consent of the Diet; but in this last War, the City having been taken and burnt by the French, it is remov'd and establish'd at Wetzlar in Hesse, by consent of the Diet.

The Emperor holds another high Court in his Palace, which is call'd the Chamber of Vienna, and is of equal Authority with that of Spire: The Emperor, by himself, or Deputy, sits as Chief, and is assisted by a certain number of Judges, whereof part are Protestants: This Court decides all great Causes brought by Appeal from subordinate Courts, and claims the same Authority with the Chamber of Spire.

The Arch-bishopricks, Bishopricks and Universities in Germany.

For the Government of the Church, there are seven Arch-bishops, and thirty five Bishops; which are as follow.

I. The Arch-bishop of Mentz hath 12 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishops of 1. Spire, 2. Worms, 3. Strasburg, 4. Wurtzburg, 5. Aichstat, 6. Verden, 7. Chur, 8. Hildesheim, 9. Paderborn, 10. Constance, 11. Harberstadt, and 12. Bamberg exempt.

II. The Arch-bishop of Trier hath 3 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishop of Metz, Toul, and Verdun.

III. The Arch-bishop of Cologne hath 4 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishops of Liege, Munster, Minden, and Osnabruck.

IV. The Arch-bishop of Madeburg hath 5 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishops of Meissen exempt, Maezburg, Maurburg, Brandenburg, and Havelberg.

V. The Arch-bishop of Saltzburg hath 10 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishops of 1. Freisingen, 2. Ratisbon exempt, 3. Passaw, 4. Chiemsee, 5. Seckaw, 6. Lavant, 7. Brixen, 8. Gurk, 9. Vienna exempt, and 10. Newstadt.

VI. The Arch-bishop of Bremen hath 3 Suffragans, viz.

The Bishops of Lubeck, Roxzburg, and Sebweirin.

VII. The Arch-bishop of Prague hath 3 Suffragans, viz.

The EMPIRE is divided in TEN CIRCLES, which are as follow

The Circle of the UPPER SAXONY, containing the Dukedom of Pomerania, the Electorate of Brandenburg, and the States of Saxony; the Earldoms of Mansfeld, Schwartzenberg, Stolberg and Barby, the Landgraviate of Thuringen, the Marquitate of Misnia, with the Duchies of Altenburg, Mersburg, and Naumburg and Voiland; as also the Bishoprick of Havelberg, the Abby of Quedlenberg, &c. The Director of this Circle is the Elector of Saxony.

The Circle of the LOWER SAXONY, which contains the Duchy of Holstein, the Duchies of Mecklenburg, Lawenburg, Bremen, Brunswick, Lunenburg, Hanover, and Magdeburg, the Principalities of Halberstadt and Ferden, the Bishopricks of Hildesheim and Lubeck. The Directors of this Circle are the Duke of Brandenburg and the Duke of Brunswick by turns.

The Circle of WESTPHALIA, containing the County of Emden or East-Frizeland, the County of Oldenburg and Delmenhorst, the Bishoprick of Munster, the Principality of Minden, the Counties of Diephot, Hoya, Bentum, Tecklenburg, Steinfurt, Lemgov, Lippe, Ravensburg and Spigelburg, the Bishopricks of Osnabruck, Paderborn and Liege, and the Abbey of Corbey; the Duchy of Westphalia, the Duchy of Cleves, the Duchy of Juliers, the Duchy of Berg, and the Country of Marck. The Directors are the Bishop of Munster and the Duke of Newburg.

The Circle of the LOWER RHINE, wherein are the three Spiritual Electorates and Archbishopricks of Mentz, Triers and Cologn, the Palatinate, and the Electorate of the Rhine, with the Bishoprick of Worms. The Director is the Arch-bishop of Mentz.

The Circle of the UPPER RHINE, contains the Landgraviates of Hesse and Darmstadt, the Counties of Nassau, Solms, Waldeck, Hanaw, Erpach; the Bishoprick of Spires, the Abbies of Fuld and Hirsfeld, the Duchy of Zweibrucken, and Alsatia. The Elector Palatine and the Bishop of Worms are the Directors.

The Circle of FRANCONIA, wherein are contain'd the Bishoprick of Wurzburg, Bamberg and Aichstadt; the Principality of Henneberg, the Duchy of Coburg, the Marquitate of Culmbach, the Marquitate of Onspach, the Burgaviate of Nurenberg, the Estate of the Great Master of the Teutonick Order, the Counties of Reineck, Wertheim, Holach, Papenheim, Schwartzenberg, Castel Sensheim &c. The Directors of this Circle are the Bishop of Bamberg and the Marquiss of Culmbach.

The Circle of SCHWABEN comprehends the Duchy of Wurtemberg, with the County of Loebenstein, and the Principality of Hoen-Zollern, the Marquitate of Baden, the Marquitate of Ortaw, the Territory of Brisgov, the Bishoprick of Constance, the Principality of Furstemburg, and County of Reinsfelden, the Bishoprick of Augsburg, the Abbies of Kempfen, &c. the Counties of Oeting, Konisfeck and Miodelheim; the Marquitate of Burgaw, the Baronies of Limpurg and Jussingen, the Estate of the Fuggers, and the Territory of Ulm. The Directors are the Duke of Wurtemberg, and the Bishop of Constance.

The Circle of BAVARIA contains the Duchy and Electorate of Bavaria, with the Bishopricks of Freisingen, Ratisbon, and Passaw; the Palatinate of Bavaria, the Duchy of Newburg, the County of Sultzback, and the Abbey of Waldsassen, the Archbishoprick of Saltzburg, and the Provostship of Bergtelsgarden. The Directors of this Circle are the Elector of Bavaria and the Arch-bishop of Saltzburg.

The Circle of AUSTRIA, wherein are contain'd the Arch-dukedom of Austria, the Duchies of Stiria, Carinthia, Carniola, the Counties of Goritz Cilley and Tyrol, and the Bishopricks of Brixen and Trent. The Arch-duke of Austria is Director of this Circle.

The other Circle was the 17 Provinces of the Netherlands, which the Emperor Charles V. made a part of the Empire, by the name of the Circle of BURGUNDY, but those have now, no Votes in the Diet; and, having been already describ'd, we need not say any more of them.

To these must be added the Kingdom of BOHEMIA, with the Duchy of SILESIA and Marquitates of LUSATIA and MORAVIA, all subject to the House of Austria, and reckon'd part of the Empire.

CHAP. II.

Of the Spiritual ELECTORATES.

IN this Description of Germany, we shall pursue the same Method as in other parts, and without regard to the Precedencies of Princes place the Descriptions according to the situations of the Countries, and therefore begin with Cologne, rather than Mentz and Triers, because this lyes first in the way from the Netherlands, whence we are last come, omitting Cleeve and Juliers, till we come back to Westphalia, and the Dominions of the Elector of Brandenburg, whereon they depend.

From Cologne we shall pass up the Rhine, taking in by the way the Maine and the Neckar, together with so much of the Moselle as lyes in Germany: And having viewed all the Countries on both sides of these Rivers, pursue our Journey through Suabia to the Danube and the Estates of the House of Austria; thence, through Bohemia and its Dependencies, Coast the Oder, Elbe and Weser, and at last return through Westphalia again to the Banks of the Rhine.

SECT. I.

The Electorate of COLOGNE.

The Archbithoprick and Electorate of COLOGNE is extended on the Western Bank of the Rhine, between the Duchy of Cleeve on the North, and the Electorate of Trier on the South, the Duchy of Ju- liers on the West, and that of Berg (parted from it by the Rhine) on the East. It is a fruitful and pleasant Country, producing excellent Wine, besides Corn and other Necessaries for Life. Its extent is not large, for though it be about 40 miles in length, it is not above 7 or 8 in breadth; the Archbishop is Supream Lord of it, as also of a pretty large Country in Westphalia, and is richer and more potent than either of the other two Ecclesiastical Electors; his Annual Revenue being reckon'd to be above 100 Thousand

Thousand Pounds Sterling. He is dignified with the Title of Arch-Chancellor of the Empire, and Legate in Italy. This See was advanced from Episcopal to Arch-Episcopal in the year 743; to which was added the Dignity of Elector in 1021. The Archbishop is chosen by the Chapter, which is the most Illustrious of any in Germany (being composed all of Princes or Noblemen at least (private Gentlemen being excluded) and are 24 in number. The present Archbishop and Elector of Cologne, is Prince Clement, Brother to the Elector of Bavaria, who was chosen July 14. 1688. and invested notwithstanding the Pretensions of Cardinal Furstemburg; the Justification of which by the French King, and the Opposition of it by the Emperor, was the occasion of the beginning of the late War.

The chief Cities and Towns of this Electorate are,	{	Cologne , Cap.	Brecl.
		Bonne .	Zons .
		Mulheim .	Arensberg .
		Rheinberck .	Werle .
		Kempen .	Geseck .
		Keyserwaert .	Dorsten .
		Niuy .	Recklenhausen , &c.

COLOGNE, or Colen, call'd Keulen by the Germans, and in Latin Colonia Agrippina, and Colonia Ubiorum, is seated on the River Rhine, at the distance of 70 miles from Mentz, and 40 from Coblentz to the North, 70 from Nimeguen, and 20 from Duseldorp to the South-east, and 60 from Maestricht to the East. It is one of the largest Cities of Germany, and very considerable on account of its Buildings, number of Inhabitants, and great Trade in Wine and other Commodities of Germany, which by the means of the Rhine are brought hither, and Transported to Holland. It is a free City, being Govern'd by its own Senate, which Orders and Judges all Civil Matters and Causes; but Criminal are judg'd by the Elector. It is also one of the four chief Hanse Towns, and is called the Holy City, because of the many Churches and Religious Houses in it; here being, besides the Cathedral, 10 Collegiate and 19 Parochial Churches, also 37 Monasteries and many Hospitals. In the Cathedral they shew the Tombs of the Three Wise Men that came to Worship our Saviour, call'd hence the Three Kings of Colen, whose Bones they pretend were removed to Constantinople by Helena the Mother of Constantine; thence they were carried to Milan, by Eustorfus Bishop of that See, and afterwards brought hither by Rainold Archbishop of Colen: Three Skulls very richly Enshrined are shewn to Strangers, and affirm'd to have belong'd to their Bodies, and to have great Virtue in Curing Diseases by Touch, &c. One of the Parish-Churches is dedicated to S. Ursula, who, with her 11000 Virgins, they say, were Martyr'd here. An Univeristy was long since planted here, which being Declin'd, was Re-established in 1388. and Endow'd with large Privileges by Pope Urban VI. and is at present in a very flourishing State. The Walls of this City are flank'd with 83 Towers, and encompass'd with three deep Ditches.

Cologne was Built, or Repair'd and Enlarged at least, by the Ubii, who possess'd the Weteraw and Hassia and in the time of Augustus obtain'd this Country and Juliers of that Emperor (being disturb'd by the Catti their Neighbours) and put themselves under the Protection of Agrippa, from whence some say it had its name, or as others, from Agrippina (Daughter to Germanicus, Wife of Claudius, and Mother to Nero) who was born here. It was the Metropolis of the Germania Secunda, and the Seat of the chief Roman Colony. Meroue King of France beat the Romans hence about the year 450. and quickly after Attila the Hunn ruin'd it. Afterwards the Romans Rebuilt it, and it was again taken by the French, and about the year 500 made part of their Kingdom by Clot's the Great. The Emperor Otho about 950. subjected it to its Prelate, which was opposed by the Citizens, and great Differences at several times have happen'd thereupon, which were at last compos'd by the Emperor Maximilian, and the City made Free and Imperial, but oblig'd to pay Homage to the Elector, who is also oblig'd to confirm their Privileges: And they are still so tenacious of Liberty, that though the Elector by his Officers exercise Justice in all Criminal Cases in the City, they will not permit him in Person to reside long in Town, nor come with a great Train; for which reason he lives always at Bonne. It was in the year 1260. that this City enter'd into the League of the Hanse Towns, and was made the Capital of their Fourth Province. Cologne is seated in Lat. 51 Deg. and Long. 26 Deg.

In a Convent of Carmelites, not far from hence, a Treaty of Peace was set on foot in 1673. between the Emperor, King of Spain, France, &c. and the several Princes sent their Plenipotentiaries accordingly: But it was interrupted by the Seizure of William Prince of Furstemburg, since made Cardinal, who tho' a German and a Count of the Empire, had espous'd the Interest of France, and was made that King's Ambassador at this Treaty, in which he carried Matters so high, that he defeated the endeavours of the several Ministers for Peace, and made the Emperor cause him to be Seized and carried to Vienna, where he was detain'd close Prisoner till the Treaty of Nimeguen.

Bonne, Bonnas, Colonia Julia Bonna; also Ara Ubiorum, from the Altars erected here by the Ubii the ancient Inhabitants; is the usual place of Residence of the Archbishop of Colen, who has a magnificent Palace here in the Castle. It stands upon the Rhine 15 miles South from Colen, in a fruitful Country, which produces very good Wine, and the Woods abound with variety of Game. A ridge of Mountains on both sides the Rhine, reach from hence as far as Bingen. It is as a small City, but well inhabited: The Churches are stately, especially the Collegiate, Dedicated to the Holy Martyrs Cassius, Florentius, and Malsius, whose Bodies, with several other of the famous Theban Legion, are said to be buried in it being brought hither by S. Helena, who Founded this Church to their Honour. The Town house is well Built, and Adorn'd with fine Paintings. This was formerly an Imperial City, but now subject to the Elector. Frederick of Austria, chosen Emperor in opposition to Lewis of Bavaria, was Crowned here in 1314. It suffer'd much in the Low Country Wars, was Besieged by the Duke of Parma, and forc'd by Famine to surrender in 1588. The Fortifications here are regular; the Wall is fac'd with Brick, and the Ditches are very broad and dry, but the Counterscarp is not very defensible: In 1673. it was taken by the Prince of Orange, our present King, from the French; after a Siege of 9 days. In 1688. Cardinal Furstemburg, in pursuance of his pretended Election above-mention'd, by assistance of the French Troops, got possession of it; but the Germans, under the Command of the Elector of Brandenburg, re-gain'd it in 1689. after a Siege of three Months.

Rhineberg, is a pretty large Town seated on the Rhine, in a small Country of 10 miles extent, belonging to the Archbishop of Colen, though separated from the rest by the small County of Meurs. It is distant 40 miles from Colen to the North-west, and 10 from Geldre to the East; a small River (or Canal rather, for it seems to be Artificial) passes by it, and runs quite cros from the Rhine to the Mees: By means of this convenient situation, it hath a good Trade, and the Burghers are reasonably Rich. This Town being near the Borders of Guelderland, hath been claimed by the Hollanders, and is therefore strongly Fortified.

Kempen, a strong Town and Cattle, stands on the Borders of Guelderland and Zuliers, 35 miles North-west from Colen, and 10 miles West from the Rhine. It was remarkable for the gallant Defence it made in 1642. when it was vigorously Besieg'd by the French, Hessians and Saxons United.

Keyferswert stands on the East-side of the Rhine, between Dinsturg and Dufeldorp, 15 miles from Kempen to the East, and 25 from Colen to the North-west. It is a small Town and strong Fort, first built, as 'tis said, by one Swilbertan an Englishman.

Niys, or Neufs, Nevoisium, Nussa, seated on the River Ers, and near the Rhine, 20 miles from Colen to the North, and 15 from Kempen to the South-east, is a large City and well Fortified, having the River on one side, and a double Wall on the other. The Rhine did anciently run by its Walls, but having alter'd its Channel, they have been forc'd to make a Trench from it to the Ers to bring Vessels up to their Gates. The Citizens enjoy great Privileges, which were granted to them by the Emperor Frederick III. in recompence for their Service, in holding out a whole year's Siege against the Duke of Burgundy, who oppos'd Herman Landgrave of Hesse, chosen Bishop of Colen, in defence of his Brother, chosen also by another Faction. Here is a fair Collegiate Church, besides other publick Buildings of good Structure.

Bracl is a small pleasant Town with a strong Castle, which is the Seat of the Elector when he diverts himself with Hunting in the Neighbouring Forest. It stands in the mid-way between Colen and Bonne, and 5 miles West from the Rhine.

Zons, a small Town tolerably well Fortified, stands on the Rhine, 8 miles West from Niys, in a Country producing much Corn, the Sale whereof is the chief Trade of the Town. The Houses are of Brick, and make a good shew.

Mulheim, a fair and large Town on the Eastern Bank of the Rhine, 5 miles below Colen, stands in the Limits of Berger, but is subject to this Elector. The Inhabitants attempted to Wall it round, and intended to make it an Imperial City, but were oppos'd in it by the Citizens of Colen, and forbid by the Emperor, who caus'd the Marquis Spinola to spoil their Out-works in the year 1614. and the next year the Inhabitants of Colen pull'd down all the new Buildings in the Town: Afterwards, during the Wars in Germany, they endeavour'd it again, pretending it necessary for their Security; but it was again hinder'd, and it still remains a Dependent on Cologne.

On the East-side of the Rhine, at about 20 miles distance from it, lyes a Tract of Land of about 20 miles long and 12 broad, bounded on the North by the River Lippe, that parts it from Munster, and on the South by the River Emser; which belongs to the Archbishop of Colen, and contains many large Manors and Lordships, and these 2 Towns, viz.

Recklenhausen, a strong Town in the middle of this Territory, 35 miles North-east from Niys; Taken in War from the Duke of Cleeve, by the Elector of Colen's Forces, A. 1343. Mortgage'd in 1442. but Redeem'd 150 years after by Archbishop Salentine. Here is a Nunnery, the Abbeis whereof hath power of punishing Offenders, even to Death.

Dorsten, a place very well Fortified by the Landgrave of Hesse Cassel in 1639. but taken from him two years after by the Elector of Colen's Forces, after a sharp Siege of two Months. It stands on the River Lippe, 10 miles West from Recklenhausen, in the Barony thereof.

To this Electorate also belongs a large Tract of Land in Westphalia, wherein are these Towns, viz.

Arnsberg, a neat and pleasant City on the River Ruhr, 60 miles from Niys to the East, often honour'd with the Archbishop's Presence, who comes hither for the diversion of Hunting. It was formerly subject to its own Lords, and by them given to this Elector.

Werle, a pleasant Town, between the Rivers Ruhr and Lippe, in which the Elector's chief Judge Official in Westphalia Resides. It is wall'd and fortified.

Geseck, which stands near the Borders of the Bishoprick of Paderborn; it is a fortified Town and came to this Elector in 1501. was taken by the Landgrave of Hesse in 1635. but afterwards restored.

SECT. II.

The Archbishoprick and Electorate of TRIER.

The Electorate of Trier lies between that of Cologne and the Duchy of Zuliers on the North, Lorraine and the Palatinate on the South, Luxemburg on the West, and Weteraw on the East. It is a fruitful and pleasant Country seated on both sides the River Moselle and Rhine. Its extent from South to North-east is about 70 miles, and from West to East about 60. It was made a Metropolitan See under Agilolphus, in the year 743. and the Archbishop was made an Elector in 1021. He hath also the Title of Arch-Chancellor of the Empire in France, is Temporal as well as Spiritual Lord of this Country, and hath Precedency of the Elector of Cologne. The Grandeur of this Prince was much greater when the Empire was in the House of France, than it is at present: In this Age the French have Invaded it often, and taken many of the Towns, which they held till the Peace of Munster. And both in the War of 1675. and in this late one, they have over-run and harras'd it exceedingly. The Revenue of the Elector used to be reckon'd near One hundred thousand Pounds Sterling per Annum, but hath been much diminish'd by the War. The Chapter is compos'd of 16 Capitulary Canons, who are all of Noble Extraction, and choose the Bishops always out of themselves.

The chief Towns of this Electorate are,

{ Trier, Cap.
 Coblenz.
 Hermanstein.
 Meer.
 Overeiffel.
 Bopart.
 Engers.
 Sarburg.
 Bern-Castle, &c.

TRIER, call'd Treyes by the French and in Latin Triviri aut Augusta Triviorum, is seated on the River

River Moselle, over which it hath a fair Stone-bridge, and is distant 55 miles from Coblentz to the South-West, 70 from Mentz to the West, and 65 from Cologne to the South. It is a large City, and of very great Antiquity, but was often ruin'd by the Huns, Vandals, Goths and French. It was afterwards Imperial and Free; but hath been subject to its Archbishop ever since 1561. when it was surpriz'd by the Archbishop James III. A University was establish'd here in 1472. which is in a flourishing State and well fill'd with Students. Here are four Collegiate and 5 Parish Churches, 2 principal Abbies and several other Religious Houses. The City is fortified with strong Walls and Outworks; but was taken by the French in the last War, and recover'd from them in 1675. And in this War they put a Garrison into it in 1683. but quitted it after they had almost destroy'd it.

Coblentz, in Latin Confluentia & Confluentes, from its situation on the Confluence of the two Rivers Rhine and Moselle, stands in a pleasant and fruitful Country cover'd with Vines, at a the distance of 35 miles from Mentz to the North-West, and 40 from Cologne to the South-East. It is a large City and built in form of a Triangle, two sides whereof are secur'd by the two Rivers, and the third by strong Fortifications. It has a Bridge over the Moselle, and to guard it a Fort of 3 Bastions on the other side, and another Bridge over the Rhine to Hermanstein. This, in the time of the Romans, was the station of their first Legion. It was given to the See of Triers about 1000 years ago by King Dagobert, and was afterwards an Imperial City till 1312. when it was separated from the Jurisdiction of the Empire by Henry VII. Its situation has made it exceeding populous and of great Trade, which consists chiefly in Wine, Corn, Wood and Iron. The chief publick Buildings are, the Elector's Palace, two great Churches and some Monasteries. The private Houses are generally fair and uniform, and better built than the other Cities on the Rhine. It was first encompass'd with Walls by Arnulphus Elector of Trier in 1250. and afterwards regularly Fortified by Gaspar a Petra and other Archbishops, and is now one of the strongest Cities of Germany.

On the other side the Rhine, just over against this City, stands, Hermanstein, or Ehrenbreitstein, an impregnable Fort well defended by Out-works on the top of a steep rocky Hill, twice as high as Windsor-Castle, which commands the City and the two Rivers: At the foot of this Fort, on the Banks of the Rhine and fronting the River, stands the Elector's Palace, which is a very noble Building. From hence is a Passage to Coblentz by a long Bridge of Boats, in the middle whereof two or three are let slip to let any great Vessel pass by, which they easily fasten again.

Meyn or Meyen, on the River Nette, is 15 miles distant from Coblentz to the West: It has a Castle built in 1230. by Henry Archbishop of Trier, and the Town was wall'd round by his Successor. It gives Name to a large Territory about it, in which stands Munster a small Town, for distinction call'd Munster Meynfeld.

Oberwesel stands on the West-side of the Rhine 20 miles from Coblentz to the South, and 25 from Mentz to the West. It was once an Imperial and Free City, but since the year 1312. it has been subject to the Archbishop of Trier.

Boppart is a Town and Fort seated on the Rhine, 10 miles South from Coblentz. It was also formerly an Imperial City, but given by the Emperor Henry VII. to Baldwin Archbishop of Trier, who built the Castle to secure it.

Engers, a fair Town and Fort of the Rhine, stands between Coblentz and Andernack, and gives Name to a neighbouring Territory. It has a strong Castle and a noble Bridge over the Rhine, founded by Cuno Archbishop of Trier, who died in 1383.

Bern-Castle is a good Town pleasantly seated upon the Moselle, and makes great quantity of Wine, which enriches the Place, and has made it Populous.

Sarburg, on the River Sar, is a Town of good Strength; made so and much beautified by Vestinger their Archbishop.

Limburg stands on the River Lohn, betwixt Idenstein and the County of Weilburg; it suffer'd much in the Wars between the French King and the Emperor.

Montroyal, belonging to the French, stands on the Frontiers of the Electorate, 20 miles from Triers to the North-East, and 30 from Coblentz to the South-West; It is a strong Fortress, built in a Peninsle made by the Rhine, which, with the Citadel and Our-works, render it almost Impregnable.

S E C T. III.

The Archbishoprick and Electorate of
M E N T Z.

The Archbishoprick of Mentz lyes on the Banks of the River Mayne, between the Electorate of Trier on the West, the Palatinate on the South, Franconia on the East, and the Weteraw on the North. It is in length from North-West to South-East about 50 miles, and about 20 in breadth; but besides this, the Elector hath Dominions in other Provinces. This Prince hath the Precedency of both the other Ecclesiastical Electors, is Dean of their College, and stiled Arch-Chancellor of the Empire in Germany. He is Lord of this Country, and maintains in his Court a Marshall or General, and a Chancellor: His annual Revenue is reckon'd above one hundred thousand Pounds. To all which he is Elect'd by the Chapter of 24 Capitulary Canons, who are all of noble Extraction. This See was formerly Episcopal only and Suffragan to that of Worms, till 745. it was erected into an Archbishoprick. It is a pleasant fruitful Country, very populous, and hath these Towns of note, viz.

Mentz, Capit. Bingen. Aschaffenburg. Koningstein. Weisbaden. Elfeld. Reineck Coun. Lobr, County.	Other Towns subject to this Elector.	{ In Hesse, { Fritzlar. { Nmmerburg. { Neustat.	{ In Thuringen { Erfurt. { Heyligerstadt. { Duderstadt.

MENTZ, call'd by the Germans Mantz, by the French Mayence, in Latin Magentia, Mogontiacum & Mocontiacum, is seated on the Rhine near its Confluence with the Maine, at the distance of 65 miles from Trier to the East, 32 from Coblentz to the South-East, 20 from Frankfort to the West, and 50 from Spire to the North. It is a large City, well fortified and very populous. The private Buildings are not extraordinary, the Houses being old and the Streets narrow: But the publick ones, which are many Churches, the the Electoral Palace, the Town-house or Guild hall, three Castles, and a Bridge of Boats over the Rhine, are stately Structures. Here is an Univerſity which was founded in the year 800. and re-establiſh'd in 1482. This City claims the Invention of the Art of PRINTING, which at least was brought to perfection here by John Faust, or, as others, John Guttenburg, about the year 1450. It is a place of very good Strength, which hath been much increas'd by a Fortrefs built not many years since on a Hill, (wherein stands the Elector's Palace) and by the regular Fortifications that have been added by the late Archbifhop, ſince the beginning of this present War: This City is by the Germans pretended to be above 1300 years older than Chriſtianity; but by others 'tis thought to have been built by Drusus, whole Tomb is still ſhewn here. It was ſometime Imperial and Free, but ſubjected by its Archbifhop Adolphus of Naſſau, who took it in the year 1462. and his Succellors ſtill retain the Authority. Gustavus Adolphus took it in 1631. and oblig'd the Citizens to pay 80000 Dollars as a Ransom for their Lives and Houſes. And in the late War it was taken by the French in the year 1688. and regain'd by the Duke of Lorraine in 1689.

Bingen is a pleaſant Town, ſeated on the Rhine, 15 miles Weſt from Mentz. It was a Fort in the time of the Romans, and thought to be the place where Drusus died. The River Nabe, over which here is a fair Stone Bridge, runs through the Town, and empties it ſelf into the Rhine: Here is alſo a Caſtle, which ſtands on a Hill, and over-looks the Town. This was alſo formerly an Imperial City, but is now ſubject to the Dean and Chapter of Mentz.

Between this place and Mentz in an Iſland in the Rhine, ſtands the Famous Mauſs-tburn, an old Watch-Tower, ſaid to have its name from the Mice and Rats which follow'd hither, and devour'd the coverous Archbifhop of Mentz, who ſcoffingly call'd ſome poor People that begg'd at his Gate, the Rats that eat up the Corn.

Eiſfeld is a ſtrong fortiſh'd Town ſeated on the North ſide of the Rhine, 5 miles from Mentz, to the Weſt, and adorn'd with a fair Church and a high Steeple. It is the chief Town of a ſmall Territory, extended along the Rhine 20 miles, call'd Ringaw, a Country richly ſtor'd with choice Vines; wherein alſo ſtands Ertach, a ſtately Monaſtery, where lie buried many of the Counts of Naſſau, and Rodeſheim, a Place noted for the Growth of the beſt Wines in theſe parts.

Weisbaden ſtands about five or ſix miles North from Mentz.

Koningſtein is 15 miles diſtant from Mentz to the North-eaſt.

Aſchaffenburg, Aſchaffenburgum, aut Asciburgum, is a ſtrong Town and Caſtle on the Eaſtern Bank of the Main, 40 miles diſtant from Mentz and 20 from Frankfort to the Eaſt; it is divided into the Upper and Lower Town, and is beautified with a ſtately Palace, lately built, wherein the Elector often reſides; and hath a fair Stone-Bridge over the Main.

Reineck, the chief Town of a County of the ſame name, ſtands on the River Syn. 35 miles from Aſchaffenburg to the Weſt, 25 from Fuld to the South, and 8 from the Main to the North. This Town and County, together with that of Lobr adjoining to it, and on the Banks of the Main, do alſo belong to this Archbifhop.

Ommenburg or Amelburg, a ſtrong Town on the River Obrn, 5 miles diſtant from Marpurg in Heffen, and 45 from Frankfort to the North, is the Capital of a ſmall Territory belonging to this Elector, in which alſo ſtands Neuſtadt.

Freitzlar, the chief Town of another ſmall Territory, ſubject to this Archbifhop, is ſeated on the River Eder, in the Landgraviate of Heffe, about 25 miles from Ommenburg to the North-eaſt, 10 from Waldeck to the South-weſt, and near the mid-way between Marpurg and Caffel. It hath a Caſtle and good Fortifications, and is eſteem'd a place of as good Strength as any in theſe parts.

To this Electorate belongs alſo a ſmall Country of 20 miles extent, call'd Eichfeld or Echfeld, lying beyond the Weſer, between the Duchy of Brunſwick on the North and the Landgraviate of Heffe on the South. In which ſtand Heglingenſtat, built by King Dagobert; in it is a College of Jeſuits, but is not otherwiſe conſiderable.

Daderſtadt, a ſmall Hanſe-Town, anciently ſubject to the Duke of Brunſwick, by whom it was ſold to Gerlakus Archbifhop of Mentz.

CH A P. III.

HESSEN, Haffia.

THE Province of Heffen lies on the North Side of the River Main, extending as far as the Weſer, comprehending under this Name in general, beſides the Landgraviate of the ſame Name, the Abbies of Fuld and Hirſchfeld; the Weteraw, in which are alſo compris'd ſeveral Principallities and Lord-ſhips; and the Landgraviat of Darmſtadt; together with ſeveral Imperial Cities. The whole Country is bounded on the North by Weſtphalia, on the Weſt by the Duchy of Berg and Electorate of Trier, on the South by the Electorate of Mentz and Franconia, and on the Eaſt by the Duchy of Wei- mar and Thuringen. Its utmoſt Extent from North to South is about 100 Engliſh Miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt as many. The Air is healthful, the Waters whoſom, and the Soil fruitful, producing much Corn, and towards the Banks of the Rhine and Lobr Grapes; here are alſo large Foreſts, which afford ſtore of Deer and other Game; and Mountains, wherein Mines of Copper and Lead are found. This is judg'd to have been the Country of the ancient Catti, mention'd by Tacitus and others.

It is divided into Hessen and Veteravia, or the Weteraw.

In Hessen are	The Landgraviates of	Hesse Cassel, which lies on the Banks of the Rivers Weser, Eder, and Lohn, and hath these Towns, viz.	Cassel, Rodemberg, Hamburg, Witzenhausen, Zeigenheim, Suntra, Geyfmar, Eschwege, Smalcald.
		Hesse Darmstadt, the Territories whereof are divided, part lying on the South side of the Main, and part between Hesse Cassel, Waldeck, Solms and the Rhine.	Darmstadt, Marpurg, Frankenburg, Alsfeld, Gießen, Catzelbogen, Schwalbach.
In the Weteraw	The County of	Waldeck, lying West from Hesse Cassel.	Waldeck, Wildungen, Corback, Eyenberg.
		The Territories of Fuld, the Abbies of	Fuld, Hirschfeld.
		The County of Solms,	Solms, Brunsfeld.
		The Imperial Cities of	Wetlar, Fridberg.

Witzenhausen is seated on the Weser, 12 miles from Cassel to the East.

Eschwege stands also on the Weser, 20 miles above Witzenhausen, a wall'd Town, built by Charles the Great, and repair'd by Henry II.

These are all good Towns, but not particularly remarkable.

Smalcald stands in a little Territory on the East side of the River Verra, disjoin'd from the rest of the Lands of this Prince; it is 50 miles distant from Cassel to the South-East, 30 from Hirschfeld to the East, and 20 from Eysenach to the South. It is a Town of good Trade for Iron-ware, many Mines in the Neighbourhood furnishing the Inhabitants with plenty of that Metal, which they work and send abroad to foreign Parts. This place was famous in the last Age, by the assembling of the Protestant Princes here, in the Years 1530, 1531, 1535 and 1537. To make a League for the Defence of the Augsburg Confession, against the Emperor Charles V. and the Popish Princes of Germany: Which League grew so powerful, that they forced the Emperor to a Treaty, held in 1557. at Passaw, wherein Lutheranism was establish'd in several Parts of the Empire.

Marpurg, Marpurgum, Amisia, is seated on the River Lohn, in a pleasant Country, near 50 miles from Cassel to the South-west, and 40 from Frankfort to the North. It was some time a free and Imperial City, afterwards subject to its own Lords, now the Chief of the Upper Hesse, and the Seat of the supreme Court of Judicature; to which Appeals are brought from both Cassel and Darmstadt. It has a strong Castle, which stands on a Hill, and is otherwise well fortified. The great Church is a stately Building, and has in it many noble Monuments. The University here is one of the most considerable in Germany.

Frankenburg, on the River Eder, 25 miles North from Marpurg, is a large Town, said to be built by Theodorick King of France Anno, 520.

Alsfeld stands 15 miles from Marpurg to the East: It is one of the ancientest Towns of Hessen, and had formerly very great Privileges, even Power over Life; but lost their Charter in an accidental Fire many years since, so that now they have only a Memorial of it, by the chief Magistrate's having a Sword born before him. The Town-house is a fair handsome Building.

Gießen is a fair Town, seated on the River Lohn 15 miles from Marpurg to the South, and 28 from Frankfort to the North; the Royalty whereof is divided between the two Landgraves of Cassel and Darmstadt: It is adorn'd with a University, and defended with a strong Wall and regular Fortifications, and hath an Armory very well furnished. The Trade of this Town lies in Dressing and Selling of Cloth.

WESTLAR, an Imperial City, stands on the Borders of the County of Solms, upon the River Lohn not above 6 miles below Gießen, 18 miles South-west from Marpurg, and 26 North from Frankfort. It is an old Town, and has nothing in it worth notice but the great Church. However, it is at present the Seat of the Imperial Chamber, which was removed from Spire hither in the Year 1689, by reason that that City was taken and destroy'd by the French.

FRIEDBURG, a Rich and Imperial City, stands 15 miles South from Wetlar, and 12 North from Frankfort: It is seated at the Foot of a Ridge of Hills, call'd de Hobe, and enjoys large Privileges, granted by the Emperor Frederick II. The Mart, now held at Frankfort, was, before the Year 1340. held in this Town; at which time it was remov'd, at the desire of the Merchants, and this City, in lieu, hath four annual Fairs.

CASSEL, Cassella, aut Cassilia, olim Castellum Catorum, & Sterodontium, the Capital City of the lower Hessen, is seated in a pleasant Plain on the River Fuld, near the Confines of the Duchy of Brunswick, at the distance of 50 miles from Marpurg and as many from Fuld to the North, and 40 from Paderborn to the South-east. It is a place of good Trade for Wool and other Merchandizes, and West is fortifi'd with Walls, Ditches, and a strong Cittadel: It is the Seat of the Landgrave, whose Palace stands without the Town, and is surrounded by Bulwarks: The Family of Hesse is one of the most ancient of Germany. This House of Cassel is the Elder, and the Landgrave, with his Subjects, are of the Calvinist Religion.

Rodemburg, a fair Town, stands on the River Fulda, 30 miles from Cassel to the South-east; it is pleasantly seated, and has a Collegiate Church with a Dean and 20 Canons nobly endow'd. Near the Town is a Quarry of white Marble.

Suntra stands 12 miles East from Rodemburg.
Homburg is 25 miles distant from Cassel to the South, and 12 from Rodemburg to the West.

Zeigenheim stands 30 miles South from Cassel. It is a small but fair City, and gives Name to a County.

Geyfmer, stands 12 miles from Cassel to the North.

D A R M S T A D T, Darmstadium, seu Darmostadium, a considerable City, seated on the Banks of a River of the same name, in the Country of Gerav, otherwise call'd the Landgraviate of Darmstadt, which lies on the South-side of the Main; it is defended by a strong Castle, which is the Palace of the Landgrave; and for the better Security of the Country, there are two Forts, one on the Rhine, named Markburg, and another on the Main, called Russelbeim. The Town is distant 10 miles from the Rhine to the East, and 15 from Frankfort on the Main to the South. The House of Darmstadt, by the failure of the Second House of Marpurg, succeeded to that Lordship, together with those of Gießen and Catzelnbogen, and by that means is become more considerable than the elder House of Cassel. The Landgrave usually resides at Marpurg; he is of the Lutheran Religion, as are also most of his Subjects.

The County of Catzelnbogen lies on the Banks of the Rhine, between that River and Nassau; the Town which gives name to the County is but small, and is seated at the distance of 10 miles from Nassau to the East, and about 22 from Mentz to the North-west. The Property of this Town and County has been much disputed between the Earls of Nassau and the Landgraves of Hesse, the former having married the Sister of the last Earl, and the latter pretending a Donation from the Earl: In 1548 the Emperor Charles V. adjudg'd it to the Count of Nassau; but the Judgment was revers'd at the Treaty of Passaw, and Count William of Nassau surrendered it to the Landgrave Philip, who paid him 600000 Crowns for it: However, the Family of Nassau does still retain the Title of it. In the same County stands Schwalbach, famous for many Springs of Medicinal Waters in it, which are of great Virtue for curing several Distempers. It is distant 10 miles from Catzelnbogen to the South, and 12 from Mentz to the North.

The Castle of Rheinfeld, which gives Name to a small County, stands on the East-side of the Rhine, 25 miles West from Catzelnbogen, and 20 South from Coblentz.

W A L D E C K, Valdecum, is the Capital of a small Principality, of about 20 miles Extent, situate in the North part of Hesse, beyond the River Eder, and Westward of the Landgraviate of Cassel. The Country is fruitful, affording Wine as well as Corn and Pasture, besides Mines of Copper, Lead, Quicksilver, &c. The ch. Town is but small, and not very considerable; it is distant 30 miles from Marpurg to the North, and 20 from Cassel to the South-west.

The other Places of Note in this County are Waldungen, a pleasant Town built upon two Hills, in the middle of which lies a very fine Garden;

Corbach, formerly a free City, wherein is held a small University; and Eyenberg, a very strong Castle, built upon a Hill near Corbach.

The Territory of the Abbey of FULD, call'd by some Buckem and Figonia, is a large rich Country, lying South of Hesse, and North of Hanaw, Reineck, &c. extending about 30 miles in length. The ch. Town Fuld stands upon a River of the same name, 40 miles East from Marpurg, and 45 North-east from Hanaw: The Monastery is of the Benedictine Order, and one of the noblest in all Europe; it was founded in the Year 744 by S. Boniface, and endowed with great Privileges by several Emperors. The Abbot is Lord of the Town and Country, Primate of all the Abbots in Germany, a Prince of the Empire, and sits in the general Diets at the Emperor's Feet. There are many other Towns in this Territory.

The Monastery of HIRCHFELD stands on the River Fulda, at the distance of 20 miles from Fuld to the North. It is a very noble Structure, artificially built upon an Arch, supported by 16 Pillars. It was founded by Sturmius, Abbot of Fulda, and a Territory of about 12 miles extent given to it. Alcuinus, who was Tutor to Charles the Great, was Abbot of this Monastery, and lies buried in its Church. The Revenues of this Abbey have been in the Hands of the Landgrave of Hesse ever since 1606.

The WETERAW, Veteravia, is the general name of the Country lying between Hesse on the North, the River Main on the South, the River Rhine on the West, and the County of Reineck on the East; wherein are contained the Eitates of the Counts of Nassau, Solms, and Hanaw, who are constant Confederates for their mutual Defence.

NASSAW, as it is now increas'd by the accession of the Counties of Weilburg, Idstein, Wiskaden, Dillenbergh, Beilstein, Geilberg, Sigen, and Hadamar, is bounded on the North by Westphalia, on the East by Hesse and Solms, and on the West by Berg, Trier, and the Rhine. This Country is fruitful in Corn and Pasturage, abounds with Cattle and Venison, and hath Mines of Iron, Lead and Copper. It was at first only a County, but was made a Principality by the Emperor Ferdinand II. Anno 1653, and is subject to its own Princes, a very ancient and honourable Family; from which descended Adolphus, chosen Emperor A.D. 1292. Engelbert, the Seventh Earl of this Family, acquir'd by Marriage the Barony of Breda, and other Eitates in the Netherlands; and Henry his Great-grandson married Claude de Châlons, Sister and Heir to Philippe, Prince of Orange, whose Son Rene, in 1530, succeeded in that Principality; which Honour hath ever since remain'd in this Family. These Princes have in all Ages been celebrated for their Bravery, especially in the last, when they so zealously defended the Belgick States, and by their Courage and Wisdom rescued them from the Spanish Cruelty, and acquired the Dignity of Hereditary Stadtholder, and Captain General of all the Forces of the United Netherlands: Which great Honours being possess'd by William of Nassau, Prince of Orange. King Charles I. chose him for a Husband to his eldest Daughter Elizabeth; by whom he had Issue William Henry, who married Mary the eldest Niece of Charles the Second, our late Queen of blessed Memory, and is at present King of Great Britain.

NASSAW, Nassovia, that gives name to this Principality, is a small Town and Castle seated on the River Lohn, 8 miles from the Rhine to the East, 12 from Coblentz to the South-east, and 35 from Frankfort to the West. It was the usual Seat of the first Branch of this illustrious Family.

Dillenbergh stands on the River Dilla, 40 miles from Nassau to the North-east, and 16 from Marpurg to the West. It is a Town of good Trade, and hath two annual Fairs. Here is a Castle standing on the top of a Hill, which commands the Neighbourhood, and was the Seat of a Branch of the Family of Nassau, who had the Title of Counts of Dillenbergh: In it is a large Armory, very compleatly furnished.

Sigen, on the River Siegea, 18 miles from Dillenbergh, is seated on the top of a rocky Hill, and defended with a strong Wall and regular Fortifications, and gives Name to a County. Near the Town is a Mine of Iron.

Herborn stands upon the River Dilla, but 5 miles South from Dillemburg; it is a City of pretty good Trade in Woollen Cloths, and hath an University of good Repute, endow'd with the Lands of some dissolved Monasteries, and hath bred some considerable Scholars; particularly J. Piscator, H. Martinus, G. Passor, and H. Alstedius. This City is wall'd round, and has a Castle.

Beilstein gives Name to a County, which was the Inheritance of a younger Branch of the Family of Nassaw. It is an old Town, seated among rocky Hills, at the distance of 10 miles from Herborn to the South, and hath a Castle and a fair Church.

Diern, the Capital of another County, is pleasantly seated upon the River Lohn, 10 miles from Nassaw to the East; it is wall'd, and hath two Towers standing upon two Hills in the Town.

Hademar, a small Town, the Capital of a Territory which hath the Title of a Principality, stands upon the Lohn, at the distance of 20 miles from Mentz to the North.

Weilberg, which gives name to another County, stands also on the Lohn, 35 miles from Nassaw to the East.

Wisbaden, the Capital of a County also, stands 5 miles North from Mentz, and 20 South-east from Nassaw; it is an ancient Town, and much frequented by reason of famous Hot Baths in it, which give name to the Place.

Idstein, a Town and County, lies next to Wisbaden to the North.

The Coutry of Ifenburg lies between Solms on the West, Hanaw on the East, the Lands of the Abbey of Fuld on the North, and Nassaw on the South. It is about 20 miles in length, and 8 or 9 in breadth.

Budingen, the chief Town of it, is about 30 miles North-east from Francfort. And

The Castle of Ronenburg, a noble old Fort, a few miles from Gelnhausen, was anciently the place of Residence of the Counts.

SOLMS, the Capital of another County, subject also to its own Lord, and situate on the South of Hesse Marburg. The Town stands in the most Northern Part of the County, 15 miles distant from Marburg to the South-west, and 35 from Francfort to the North. The usual Residence of the Count is in the Castle of Brunsfeld, which stands 15 miles South from Solms.

The County of HANAW is bounded on the North and East by the Territory of Fuld, and on the West by the Estates of Nassaw and the County of Ifenberg: It extends from the River Main North-east, about 40 miles, and is subject to its own Earl. The chief Town

Hanaw, Hanovia, stands upon the River Kantz, near the Banks of the Main, 10 miles East from Francfort, 15 from Aschaffenburg to the North-west, and 40 from Marburg to the South. It is a fair well-built Town, neat and uniform, and a Place of Trade, much resorted to by Foreign Merchants; insomuch that the French and Dutch have Churches here. It is now defended by strong Walls and modern Fortifications, but was twice taken, viz. in the year 1631 by the Swedes, and in the year 1658 by the Germans, after a long Siege both times, and not without Treachery and Stratagem at last.

GELNHAUSEN, an Imperial City, stands in the Limits of this County, on the River Kintzing, 12 miles North-east from Hanaw, 15 North from Aschaffenburg, and 20 East from Friedberg: It is now but a poor City, though very considerable, and inhabited by many Noblemen and Gentlemen before the German Wars.

CHAP. IV.

FRANCONIA, Franconia.

THE Dutchy of Franconia, call'd by the Germans Frankenland, and heretofore Franconia Orientalis, one of the chief of the ten Circles of the Empire, is bounded on the North by Thuringen and Hessen, on the South by Schwaben, on the East by the Palatinate of Bavaria, and on the West by that of the Rhine; extending from North to South about 130 miles, and from East to West 140. The Soil of it in some parts is mountainous and barren, but in others very fruitful in Corn, Wine, Liqueurice, Saffron and Fruits: Here are also several Forests, well stocked with Game, and Rivers abounding with Fish. This Province is suppos'd to have been the ancient Seat of the Franks or French, from whence they set forth under Pharamond, to their Conquest of Gaul; and also that the famous Salique Law was made upon the Banks of the River Sala: Besides which, the chief Rivers here are the Main, the Tauber, the Kednitz, the Pegnitz, and the Altmutz. Several Sovereign Princes have the Dominion of this Country, which is the Reason that several Religions are predominant in several parts; but the Lutherans are most numerous.

Franconia hath these States and Chief Towns following:

- The Bishopricks of
 - Würzburg*, Orsbensfurt, Königsbaven, Bischoffsheim.
 - Bamberg*, Cronach, Weisman, Forcheim.
 - Aichstat*, Aichstat, Ornbaw.
- The Estate of the Master of the Teutonick Order, Margentem.
- The Marquises of
 - Culembach*, Culembach, Weinsstat, Bertrut.
 - Olnspach*, Olnspach, Kregling.

The Counties of Holach, Cassel, Schwartzburg, Senfheim, Limpurg, Lewenstein, Wertheim, Ersbach, Hennelberg, Coburg, Papenheim.

The Imperial Cities of { Frankfort, Nuremberg,

Rotemburg,
Schievenfurt,
Weinshoben, Weiffemburg.

WURTZBURG, Herbipolis, is the Capital of Franconia, and seated on the Banks of the River Main, at the distance of 80 miles from Mentz, and 60 from Frankfort to the East, 80 from Cassel to the South, 40 from Bamberg to the West, and 30 from Roemburg to the North. The City is divided into two parts by the River, which are again join'd by a fair Bridge; besides the Main several little Brooks run through the Streets, and pleasantly water the Town. It is adorn'd with an University, and one of the richest and most magnificent Hospitals of Europe, and defended by a strong Castle, built on a Hill, which is joynd to the Town by a Wall, flanked by four Bastions. This was formerly an Imperial City, but has been subjected to the Bishop. To S. Bucard, the first Bishop of this See, the Emperor Charlemaign granted the Country of Francia Orientalis, upon which account his Successors assumed the Title of Duke of Franconia. This Prelate is very Potent, being Secular as well as Spiritual Lord of 400 Villages and Towns, and able to raise an Army of 15000 Men. He judges Causes, and Condemns Criminals, in token whereof on Solemn occasions he hath a naked Sword born before him.

FRANCFORT, Francofurtum aut Francofordia, being the Foord of the Franks, and heretofore Heleopolis: Now commonly for distinction call'd Francofurtum ad Menum. It is seated on both sides the Main, if the Suburb of Saxenhausen on the South-side of the River be consider'd as part of it, that as well as the City being strongly Fortified with Bastions, large Moats, Countericars, and other Outworks; and also joined to the City by a Bridge, which is a noble Work, being built of Stone, and compos'd of many Arches. It is a large, populous, rich and well traded City, Imperial and Free, and govern'd by its own Consuls, Senators and Sheriffs, chosen by the Trades men. In the Church of S. Bartholomew here the Election of the Emperor is made, being expressly so ordained in the Golden Bull, or Grand Charter of Germany, made by the Emperor Charles IV. Which Golden Bull is also it self laid up in the Town-houfe of this City. Here is also an Imperial Palace, call'd the Braunsfeld, a Mansion-houfe of the Knights of the Teutonic Order, which with the Port, the Fortrefs, the Bridge between two Towers, and several Houses of Noblemen, together with the Bridge over the Main above-mention'd, are good Ornaments to the Town. The private Houses are of Wood Plaster'd and Painted over. Frankfort is conveniently seared for Trade; for the Main receives several smaller Rivers, and it self falls into the Rhine about 20 miles from hence, whereby Goods are easily brought to it, especially at the two great Annual Marts in April and September, when great quantities of all sorts of Commodities, especially Books, brought from all parts Europe, are Vended here, to the great profit of the Town. The Inhabitants are generally of the Lutheran Religion, and were the first that demanded the free exercise of it; the refusal of which in the year 1525 made them revolt against the Clergy and Senate, and chuse themselves new Magistrats: And in 1530 the Ausburg Confession was Established; however other Religions are tolerated; and among the rest, the Jews, who are pretty numerous here, but confin'd to live in one Street, which is lock'd up every Night. A Monument is to be seen here of a very Notorious Fact that three of the Nation were guilty of, for which they were tied up in Sacks and thrown into the Main, and a Memorial of their lewd Action painted over one of the Gates. Frankfort stands in the Latitude of 50 deg. and in the Longitude of 28. deg. 10. min.

Aschaffenburg on the South-side of the Main, with the Counties Reineck and Lohn, are reckon'd part of this Circle, but belonging to the Archbishop of Mentz. They are already spoken of in the account of that Electorate.

NUREMBERG, or NURNBERG, Nuremberga, aut Noricorum Mons, one of the largest, richest and most populous Cities of Germany, stands at the bottom of a Hill near the confluence of the Rivers Rednitz and Pegnitz, at the distance of 55 miles from Wurtzburg to the East, 40 from Bamberg to the South, as many from Inselstadt to the North, and 50 from Ratisbon to the North-west. It is a very considerable place on account of its two annual Fairs, its Traffick and Manufactures; the Clocks and small Wares made here being especially admired. The Houses are all built of Free-stone, and four or five Stories high; the Streets are large, and the publick Places very regular: The Town-houfe, or Guild-hall, is very magnificent: Here are eleven Stone-bridges over the Pegnitz, whereof that of one Arch is most artificially and admirably built. The other publick Works are 12 Fountains, 26 Wells, and a large Arsenal, containing 300 pieces of Canon, and Arms for 1500 men, a strong Castle, and 6 Gates, each defended with a large Tower. In this City the Emperor is obliged to hold the first Dyet after his Coronation, and for that purpose, the Regalia or Imperial Ornaments, viz. the Imperial Crown of Charlemaigne, the Dalmatica or Mantle of the same Charles, together with his Cloak, Sword, Belt, Gloves, &c. are here laid up. It was made an Imperial City by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, and purchas'd its Liberty of Frederick I. Elector of Brandenburg; and it is now Govern'd by its own Senators. The Inhabitants are of the Lutheran Religion, the Roman Catholics having only one Church. A Peace was concluded here between the Princes of Germany in the year 1649.

The City of Nuremberg hath a Territory belonging to it of about 20 miles extent, wherein about 15 miles to the South stands

Altorf, a small Town, but made considerable by an University in it, first established in 1578, but improv'd in 1623, and does now contain at least 200 Students:

BAMBERG, Bamberga, aut Babanberga, took its Name from Baba, the Daughter of the Emperor, Otto. It stands about 40 miles from Wurtzburg to the East, and 30 from Nuremberg to the North, in a Country abounding with rich Fruits and Plants, and is Water'd by the River Rednitz, which a little below falls into the Main. It was formerly Imperial and Free, but now subject to its Bishop, who depends on no Metropolitan but the Pope, and is not only Lord of this See (which is 60 miles in length, and thirty in breadth) but also of divers Mannors in Carinthia, and the Castles of Cronach and Forkheim, besides several Royalties elsewhere, whereby he has the Honour to have four of the Electors, viz. The King of Bohemia, and the Electors of Bavaria, Saxony and Brandenburg, his Dependents for some parts of their Estates. The Bishop's Palace here is a splendid Building, and adorn'd with fair Gardens and Orchards: The Cathedral Church has a high Sceptle Steeple with four Spires, which, with the Jesuits Church and the Castle, are worth a Traveller's View.

MERGENTHEIM, or MARIENDAL, the Capital of the small Territory of the Great Master of the Teutonic Order, and the usual place of his Residence, is a small Town, and not very considerable. It stands upon the River Golach 20 miles South-west from Wurtsburg.

O HNSPACH, or ANSPACH, Onoldium, and Onspachium, is the Capital of a Marquisate of pretty large extent, which belongs to a Prince of the Family of Brandenburg; it is Fortified, and hath a Castle, situate about 25 miles from Nuremberg to the West, and 20 from Rotemburg to the East.

The Bishoprick of AICHSTAT lyes between the Marquisate of Obnspace and the Burgaviate of Nuremberg on the N. the County of Oeting and Dutchy of Newburg on the S. and the Palatinate of Bavaria on the E. It extends about 30 miles from E. to W. and in some parts of it 15 or 16, in others not above 7 or 8 from N. to S. The Bishop is Temporal as well as Spiritual Lord of it; and the chief City whence it is nam'd stands upon the River Almul, 35 miles S. from Nuremberg, and 8 or 9 N. from the Danube.

ROTEMBURG, Rotemburgum a Free Imperial City, seated in the limits of the Marquisate of Obnspace upon the River Tauber, 20 miles from Obnspace, 30 from Nuremberg to the West, and 40 from Wurtsburg to the South. It obtained its Freedom of the Emperor Frederick I. in the Year 1163.

WINTZHEIM, another small Imperial City, stands also in this Marquisate upon the River Aisch, about 16 miles North from Rotemburg, and 20 North-west from Obnspace.

The County of HOLACH lies next to Obnspace to the South-west.

The Barony of LIMPUROG adjoins to Holach on the South.

The small County of LEWNSTEIN, lies also South from Holach, and West from Limpurg.

The County of WERTEIM lies on both sides the Main, West from the Bishoprick of Wurtsburg; 'tis of about 20 miles extent, of a square form, and a very fruitful Country, affording, besides Corn and Pasture, very good Wines, the making whereof is the Trade of the chief Town, which stands on the Banks of the Main, where it receives the Tauber, and is distant 20 miles from Wurtsburg to the West.

REINECK County lies on the North of Wertheim.

ERPACH, the Capitol of another County, which lies on the South-side of the Main, stands 30 miles South-east from Francfort, and 20 North from Heidelberg; it is a Place of no great Trade, nor considerable, but for giving Title to a Count of the Empire.

SCHWEINFURT, an Imperial Free City, is seated on the Main, 30 miles from Wurtsburg to the N. E. and near as many from Bamberg to the East. This City suffer'd much in the German Wars, having been taken by the Swedes, and afterwards seiz'd by the Marquels of Brandenburg, in 1553. but being belieg'd the next Year, he plunder'd and deserted it.

The Marquisate of CULEMBURG is reckon'd part of this Circle, tho' it be subject to the Duke of Brandenburg. It is a Country of 50 miles in length from North to South, and 30 miles in breadth, lying next the Bishoprick of Bamberg to the East: The chief Town, which gives name to the Country, is seated on the Main, 25 miles East from Bamberg.

The RIVER MAIN arises in two Springs in Mount Fichtelberg on the East-side of this Marquisate, which unite near the Town of Culembach, and flowing Westward, receives the Rednitz, Warres, and other Rivers; and in a Serpentine course runs through the middle of Franconia, passing by Schweinsfurt, Wurtzburg, Wertheim, Aischaffemburg and Francfort; and falls into the Rhine a little above Mentz, after a course of 110 miles: Its breadth at Francfort is reckon'd by English Travellers about half as much as the Thames at London.

CHAP. V.

The PALATINATE of the RHINE, Palatinus Rheni, aut Palatinus Inferior, in the German Language, pfaltz aut Rhein, or Stidex Pfaltz.

The Palatinate of the Rhine, called the Lower Palatinate, to distinguish it from that of Bavaria, is bounded on the North by the Bishoprick of Mentz, on the South by Alsatia, on the East by Franconia and Wirtemberg, and on the West by Lorrain and the Bishoprick of Triers: It extends from East to West almost 100 English Miles, and from North to South about 60. The Air is Healthful, and the Soil Fruitful, the Country abounding in delicious Wine, besides Corn and Pasture: Here are also some Mines of Agate and Jaspár, and even Gold is found among the Sands of the Rhine, whereof particular Ducats are Coin'd. Besides the Rhine, which by passing through it gives name to this Region, the Neckar, a very considerable River, waters the Eastern part of it, and having passed by Heidelberg, falls into the Rhine at Manheim; and severa' other smaller Rivers are found in several parts of it.

The Dominions of this Elector were much larger before Frederick V. (who Married the Daughter of King James I.) was dispossest of them by the Emperor in 1620. and his Estates, together with the Electoral Dignity, given to the Duke of Bavaria: Afterwards at the Treaty of Munster in 1648. he obtained this part to be restored, but that of the upper Palatinate he could not recover, nor prevail that the Duke of Bavaria should be divested of the Electoral Dignity; however to make him some amends, he was chosen a-new, and made an Eighth in the Electoral Colledge, with the Title of Elector Palatine of the Rhine.

The chief Cities and Towns in this Electorate; are { Heidelberg, Capital, Manheim,

Frankendal,
Openheim,
Creutznach,
Alzheim, Keiserlauter,
Newstadt, Bacharach.

HEIDELBERG, Hedelberga aut Eldelberga, the Capital of this Palatinate, is seated on the Banks of the River Neckar in a fruitful Plain at the foot of a Mountain near the Frontiers of Schwaben, at the distance of 40 miles from Frankfort to the South, 60 from Wartzburg to the South-west, 10 from Manheim and the confluence of the Rhine and Neckar, to the East, and 12 from Spire to the North-East. It is a large and flourishing City (at least was so before the French destroy'd it) populous and rich; it was much enlarged, and a Suburb call'd Bergheim added to it, in 1392. It is beautified with a magnificent Castle wherein the Elector keeps his Court; and adorn'd with an Univerfity, planted by Rupert Prince Elector Palatine, in 1387. which hath been happy in the Education of the famous Philologer Janus Gruterus, and other considerable Men. The Church of the Holy Ghost was remarkable for the famous Library kept in it, which in the Wars with Spain was transported to Rome for preservation. The Wine of this place is valued, and the great Tun is much talk'd of, for it's stupendous Bulk, containing no less than 200 Tun of English measure: It stands (if the French have not destroy'd it) near the Palace. This City was part of the Bishoprick of Worms before the year 1225. at which time Lewis the first Elector Palatine was invested with the Castle and old Town, to which his Successors added the New Suburb, as is already said. It has suffer'd much by Wars, having been laid wast by the Spaniards and others during the German Wars in the last Century; but more so in this late War, for the French have twice taken it, viz. in 1683 and 1692, and most barbarously burst and destroy'd it.

Manheim, seated at the confluence of the Rhine and Neckar 10 miles West from Heidelberg, was strongly fortified by Frederick IV. in 1606. but taken and dismantled by the Spaniards in 1622. afterwards re-fortified by the last Elector, and had besides the Citadel several Outworks and a small Citadel on the Rhine, when the French attack'd and took it in 1689, who being forc'd to abandon it in 1689. destroy'd all the Fortifications.

Frankendal is seated on the West-side of the Rhine. 10 miles from Manheim, and 20 from Heidelberg to the West. It was at first a Monastery only, but encreas'd to a fair City, and fortified by Frederick III. Elector Palatine in 1571. afterwards taken by the Spaniards and kept by them till the Westphalian Treaty, when it was restored to the Elector. It hath suffer'd the same Fate as Manheim in this War, having been taken and burnt by the French in 1689.

Alzheim or Alzey, the Capital of one of the Bailiwicks, or Ampten and the ancient Seat of the Elector, stands 25 miles North-west from Frankendal: It is a good Town, with a Castle and Walls.

Creutznach is a good Town, with a Castl seated upon a Hill, and nam'd Kanfenberg: The Town stands upon the River Nabe, about 18 miles North-west from Alzheim. The Jurisdiction of it is divided between this Elector, the Marquels of Baden, and the Prince of Simmeren.

The Castle of Eberimberg, remarkable for the Siege it sustain'd in 1692. stands on the Nabe, not above 8 or 9 miles East from Creutznach.

Keiser-lautern, call'd Caseloure by the French, stands upon the Rivre Lautern near the Borders of the Duchy of Zwibrucken, 30 miles South from Creutznach, and 35 East from Manheim. It is a small City, formerly Imperial, but exempted in 1402. and now subje& to this Elector.

SECT. II.

The Bishopricks of SPIRE and WORMS, The Duchy of ZWEYBRUGGEN, or DEUX PONTS, with the other smaller States that make up the rest of the Circle of the LOWER RHINE.

The Bishoprick of Spire lies on both sides the Rhine, in length from East to West about 40 miles, and in breadth about 15. it is surrounded by the Dominions of the Elector Palatine, and lies next to the Bailiwick of Heidelberg to the South.

The Bishoprick of Worms lies also on both sides the Rhine, and encompass'd by the Palatinate; it is small, being hardly 2 miles in length, and about 7 or 8 in breadth. It lies North-West from Heidelberg.

The Duchy of Zwibrucken is stretcht out from North-east to the South west about 40 miles in length, and in breadth in some places 25, in others not above 8 or 9. It lies next to the Palatinate to the South-west and is possel'd by a Prince of that Family.

The other Estates, together with the chief Towns, will be seen in this Table, viz.

The Bishopricks of	{ Spire , { Worms ,	{ Spire , { Philipsburg . { Worms , { Ladenburg .
The Counties of	{ Linange , { Rheingravestein , { Reipolzkirk .

SPIRE, Spira, aut Noviomagus, Nemetum, & Nemetas, is a large rich and populous City, seated on the East side of the Rhine, where it receives the small River Sparbach, being almost in the Midst between Menz to the North, and Strasburg to the South, at the distance of about 50 miles from both, and about 12 or 14 from Heidelberg to the South-west. Tho' it be the Seat of the Bishop, it is not subject to him, but Imperial and Free, under the Protection of the Elector Palatine. The Cathedral Church is a very stately Building, and hath in it the Monuments of no less than eight Emperors that have been buried there; but the private Buildings are not very good. In this City the Imperial Chamber, or supream Court of Judicature in Germany, was establish'd in the Year 1530. and was constantly held till the Year 1689, when it was removed to Wetzlar in Hesse, because this place was taken by the French, and most inhumanely burnt and destroy'd. The Chamber was the chief support of the Town; so that at present it must needs be in a very ordinary condition.

Philipsburg, Philiburgum, formerly a small Town call'd Odenheim, which was encompass'd with Walls, by Gelberd Bishop of Spire, in 1343. is now one of the strongest Towns of Germany. In 1615, Philip Christoph of Soetern, Bishop of Spire and Trier, repair'd and fortified it with seven Royal Bastions, and gave it its present name. The Castle was founded in 1513. by by George Count Palatine of the Rhine and Bishop of Spire, repair'd in 1570 by Bishop Marquard de Hatstein, and is a stately Building. The Town is seated in a Plain inwiron'd with Marshes, which adds much to its Strength; however it was often taken and regain'd in the German Wars, viz. by the Swedes, in 1634 by Famine; by the Austrian Troops the Year after, by Stratagem; and by the French by Storm, in 1644, which last bestow'd great Cost in fortifying it, adding many Out-works according to the modern manner, and kept it till 1676, when the Germans regain'd it after a Siege of four Months, and it was granted to them by the Peace of Nimwegen. But they lost it again in the late War, which was began with the Siege of this place by the Dauphin of France, to whom it was surrender'd on the first of November, 1688 and not restored till the conclusion of the Peace in 1697. It stands on the East side of the Rhine, 20 miles from Heidelberg, and 8 or 9 from Spire to the South.

WORMS, Vormacia, olim Borbetomagus, & Vangiones, is seated on the Western bank of the Rhine, 25 miles North from Spire, and as many South from Mentz. It was formerly a Metropolitan See, but afterwards reduc'd to an Episcopal, under the Archbishop of Mentz. It was made a free and Imperial City by the Emperor Henry II. and is now govern'd by its own Magistrates under the Protection of the Elector Palatine. It was often taken and retaken during the German Wars, and was taken and burnt by the barbarous French in the Year, 1689.

ZWEIBRUKKEN, in French DEUX-

PONTS, lat. Bipontium, so call'd from Bridges over two small Rivers whereon it stands, at the distance of 45 miles from Worms and 50 from Spire to the West, as many from Trier to the East, and 40 from Mentz to the South. It is a small but well built City, formerly fenced with a good Fort, which is now demolish'd, the whole Town having suffer'd much during the German War.

SIMMEREN, Simmera, the chief Town of the lower County of Sponeheim, and the Capital of a Territory formerly govern'd by its own Prince, but now subject to the Elector Palatine, with the Title of a Duchy, is seated at the distance of 30 miles from Mentz, to the West, and 25 from Coblenz to the South.

BIRKENFELD, Bircofelda, is a small Town, with the Title of a Principality and Duchy, seated in the upper County of Sponeheim and District of Hunsdruck near the River Nals, at the distance of 23 miles from Trier to the East, and 30 from Zweibrucken to the North-east. It is wall'd and hath a Castle, wherein died Charles III. Duke of Lorraine, on the 17th Sept. 1675.

LAUTERACH, is seated on the River Lauter, 40 miles West from Worms, and 18 from Zweibrucken.

LENINGEN, the Capital of the County of Linnage, stands 18 miles North-west from Spire, and about 20 South-west from Worms.

HINGRAVESTEIN, stands between Crenz-nach and Ebenburg, 35 miles almost North-west from Worms.

REIPOLSKIRK is 30 miles West from Worms, and the Capital of another small County.

CHAPTER VI.

ALSATIA, Alfatia, in High-Dutch Elfalz.

ALSATIA is the Country of the ancient Triboces, and one of the four Landgraviates of the Empire, but is at present intirely subject to the French, having been conquer'd by the present King. It is seated on the Banks of the Rhine, and bounded on the East by that River, the Duchy of Wirtemberg, and some other parts of Schwaben; on the West by a Ridge of Mountains that divide it from Lorraine; on the North by the Palatinate; and on the South by Switzerland. Its Extent is from North to South 100 English miles, and from East to West, comprehending Briggaw, 40 miles, but in the other parts not above 25. The Soil is fruitful in Corn, Pasture, Wine and Fruits; and in the Mountains Mines of Copper and Lead. Alfatia was erected into a Landgraviate by the Emperor Otho III. and sometime possess'd by the House of Austria; but, being conquer'd by the French, was granted to them by the Pyrenean Treaty 1659. It is divided into the Upper and Lower, to which is usually added Suntgaw, Briggaw and Ottmow. The whole contains 46 Towns and 50 Castles, besides a great many Villages. The chief whereof are these, viz.

- In the Upper
 - Alfatia, { Munster,
 - { Murbach,
 - { Pfirt or Ferietz,
 - In Suntgaw, { Mulhausen,

 - In Briggaw, { Brisac,
 - { Erlburg.

To which may be added, The County of Mentz-beliart.

STRASBURG, Argentoratum, Argentina, aut etiam Strasburgum, stands upon the Confluence of the two Rivers Ill and Breisib, which a little below falls into the Rhine, and is distant 50 miles from Spire, and 14 from Hagenaw to the South, 30 from Brisac, and 55 from Basil to the North, and about 70 from Nancy in Lorraine to the East. It is seated in the midst of a pleasant Plain, and is a large, populous and rich City; formerly Imperial, and govern'd by its own Magistrates, from the time of its embracing the Reformation, Anno, 1529, till the French took it in 1682, who having alter'd the Government, has much injur'd the Trade of it. It is an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Mentz, and adorn'd with many stately Buildings, among which the Town-house, Arsenal and Cathedral Church, are chiefly remarkable; especially the last, the Tower whereof is built in form of a Pyramid 574 Foot high; and hath in it a Clock exceedingly admir'd for its curious Workmanship, shewing not only the Hour of the Day, but the course of the Sun, Moon, and all the other Planets. Here is an Univerſity, which was founded in the Year 1538. and a conſiderable Library. Tho' the French be Maſters, the Inhabitants are generally of the Lutheran Religion. The old Wall and Fortifications were formerly of no great Strength; but ſince the French have had it, they have made it very ſtrong by the addition of many new Works and a Cittadel, with a great Horn-work for its defence on that end of the Town next the Rhine, together with Forts in ſome Iſlands in the Rhine, which ſecure the Bridge and command the Paſſage of the River; all which will be better underſtood by this Draught, which, becauſe this City was ſurrender'd to the French by the Treaty of Ryſwick, we have added. By that Treaty the Fort Keil, here alſo ſhewn on the other ſide the River, was granted to the Confederates.

Zabern, Saverne or Elsaßzabern, is, next to Strasbourg, the chief Town of the Lower Alfatia; it is ſituate 15 miles North weſt from Strasbourg, and defended by a ſtrong Caſtle at the top of a Rock, wherein formerly the Biſhops of Strasbourg kept a Court of Judicature.

Hagenaw, an Imperial City before the French Wars, is ſeated between the two Rivers, Motter and Sorna, about 6 miles from the Rhine to the Weſt, and 14 from Strasbourg to the North, and encompass'd with thick Woods, and at ſome diſtance with Corn-fields and fruitful Vineyards. It was formerly the Seat of the ſupream Court of Judicature for Alfatia, and had in it a fair Palace of the Emperors, built by Frederick Barbaroſſa, in 1164. It was taken by the French, and granted to them by the Treaty of Munſter, and hath been ſtrongly fortified.

Fort Louis ſtands in an Iſland of the Rhine, almoſt over againſt Baden, and about 10 miles Eaſt from Hagenaw. It is ſmall, but very ſtrong, and was built by the preſent French King, for the better ſecurity of this part of the Country, and the command of the River.

Weiffenburg was alſo an Imperial City, and much honoured by Dagobert King of France, who preſented them with a large Crown of Silver: But now ſubject to the French. It is ſituate on the River Lutra, about 10 miles Weſt from the Rhine, 16 North from Hagenaw, and 25 South-weſt from Spire.

Landau is ſeated on the Borders of the Palatinate, 10 miles North from Weiffenburg, and 15 weſt from Spire. It was granted to the French by the Treaty of Munſter, and is now in their Poſſeſſion, and very ſtrongly fortified.

In 1688, the French lodged here the Plunder they took out of moſt of the Towns of the Palatinate, which by accidental Fire was all deſtroy'd the next Year.

Roſcheim ſtands 12 miles Weſt from Strasbourg. Scheſtadt, formerly a Free and Imperial City, but taken by the French, and granted to them by the Weſtphalian Peace, is ſeated 20 miles from Strasbourg to the South, and 12 from Colmar to the North. The Fortifications were demolish'd by the Confederates, in 1673, but ſince rebuilt by the French, and is now a place of good Strength.

Colmar, once an Imperial and very populous City, but by the German Civil War and the French Armies almoſt quite depopulated, ſtands in a plain fruitful Country, about 8 miles Weſt of Briſac, and 30 South from Strasbourg.

Pfirtz, called Ferette by the French, is a ſmall City, but the Capital of Suntgow; it ſtands near the ſource of the River Ill, 30 miles South from Colmar, and about 10 Weſt from Baſil. It was granted to the French by the Treaty of Weſtphalia, and is now poſſeſſed by them. About 10 or 12 miles from hence to the North-eaſt, and not above 2 or 3 from Baſil, ſtands Huningen, a very ſtrong Fortrefs, built not many Years ſince by the French King; it ſtands on the Weſt ſide of the Rhine, about 2 or 3 miles North of Baſil, and 20 South of Briſac: It is large enough to hold a Garrifon of 4 or 5000 Men, and is compos'd of five Baſtions; and had a Magazine vaulted with Brick ſo ſtrongly, that it is proof againſt Bombs; beſides the Tenailles, Ravelines, Counterſcarp and double Ditch, two large Horn-works to the North and South, and a third on the other ſide of the River; and from the Ramparts go Vaults to the Horn-works, for conveying Men to them. But all this is deſtroyed, as was agreed by the Treaty of Ryſwick.

Mulhausen, an Imperial City in Alliance with the Swiss Cantons, stands 12 miles North from Pfirt, and near 20 South from Colmar.

Befort or Beford, formerly the Capital of this County, but was almost ruin'd by the Wars, and is now a small City of no great Note. It stands 20 miles West from Pfirt, and as many from Mulhausen.

Adjoining to Alsace, and Westward of Sunegaw, lies the County of MONTBELGART, formerly belonging to the Dukes of Wurtemberg, but now to France: The Capital City is of the same Name, seated in a very pleasant and wholsom Air, 40 miles South of Colmar, and 35 from Basil, and about 18 from Befort to the West. See the Account of it in the Franche Comte.

Brisac, the Capital of the Brisgaw, stands on the East side of the Rhine, 30 miles South from Strasbourg, 24 North from Basil, and 8 West from Colmar. It stands on the Banks of the River, and is joined to two or three Islands in it, by Bridges, which, as well as the Town, are fortified. It was heretofore an Imperial City, but was subjected to the House of Austria about 1330. and taken by the French in 1638. To whom it was granted by the Westphalian Treaty, and has ever since been subject, till the year 1700. when, in Pursuance of the Treaty of Ryswick, it was restor'd to the Emperor, after the fair Stone-Bridge over the Rhine was destroyed. It stands upon a Hill, in a plain level Country, and hath a strong Citadel standing in an Island on the West side of the Town. The Fortifications are exceeding strong; on the West side are 8 Bastions filled with Earth and faced with Brick, and before every Courtine stands a Half-Moon; the Ditch is broad, and the Counterescarp, Cover'd Way, and Palisado, are well executed. The Fortifications are a League in Circumference, and the Place capable of garrisoning 9 or 10000 Men.

Friburg stands on the East side of the Rhine 10 miles from Brisac, in a fertile Plain, at the foot of the Mountains, and on the small River Treiseim, that falls into the Rhine; it is a good City, and the Seat of an University, which was first establish'd by Allert Archduke of Austria, in 1450. It was thrie taken by the Swedes, in 1632, 1634, and 1638. and twice by the French, viz. 1671, and 1677. and surrendered to them by the Treaty of Nimeguen, and since very strongly fortified: But by the Treaty of Ryswick it was restored to the Emperor.

C H A P. VII.

SCHWABEN, Suevia.

THE Dutchy of Schwaben, or Swabia, in French Souabe, had its Latin Name Suevia, from some Tribes of the Suevi, that came down from the Northern parts against Julius Cæsar; whose Posterity settling in this and the neighbouring Countries, in time established a powerfull State, which was govern'd for some Ages by a Duke, who was at first elected by the People: But about the beginning of the XIIth Age 'twas made Hereditary to Frederick the Ancient; in whose Family it continued till about the Year 1268. when Conradine dying without Issue, this Country was divided between several Princes, Bishops, and Free Cities, who have all Sovereign Power in their respective Dominions, viz. the Bishop of Augsburg and Constance, the Duke of Wurtemberg, and the Princes of Hohenzollern and Furstemberg, 8 Counts, 5 Barons, the Grand Master of Malta, 18 Abbots, the Provost Valenhausen, and 34 Imperial Cities.

The extent of Schwaben from North to South is about 110 miles, and from East to West 130, and its bounds are, the Palatinate and Franconia on the North, Switzerland on the South, Asatia on the West, and Bavaria on the East. The Air of it is healthy, and the Soil is generally fruitful; for though some parts be mountainous and woody, yet do the Hills afford Mines of Copper, Silver and other Metals, and the Forests much Pine and Fir-Timber, besides great store of Game: And the other parts of the Country yeild great store of Corn, Wine and Flax. The chief River is the Danube, which hath its Source here, in the Principality of Furstemberg, as hath also the Necker near the same place. The chief Employment of the Inhabitants is making of Linnen Cloath, whereof they vend great quantities to other Nations, Schwaben hath these States and chief Towns.

The Marquifate of Burgaw.
The small Counties of

The Counties of

Rhinfelden, Nellenburg, Offenburg,
Gengenbach,
Alorf,
Lauffenburg,
Guntzburg,
Hobenburg,
Waldskut,
Zeel.

The Marquifate of BADEN is extended along the Eastern Banks of the Rhine, over againſt Alface, beginning a little below Philipsburg on the North, and paſſing on in a narrow Tract to the height of Baſil in the South, except where it is diſjoined by the intervention of Brifgaw. It is an exceeding fertile and populous Province, producing Corn, Wine, Hemp, Fiſh, Fowl and Veniſon, in great plenty: It is alſo ſo remarkable for Baths and mineral Waters, that the chief Town and the whole Country hath its name from them. The Dominion is divided between two Princes of the ſame Family, who are diſtinguiſhed by the Names of the chief Town of the two Marquifates, Baden and Durlach, whereof Baden is a Roman Catholic, and Baden Durlach a Lutheran.

BADEN, Bada, aut Therma Inferiores, ſtands a German League or 4 English miles Eaſt from the Rhine, 60 from Brifac to the North, and 25 from Heidelberg to the South, upon a hilly craggy Ground, ſo that the Streets lie very uneven. It is famous and exceedingly reſorted unto for its hot Baths, whereof there are many ſpringin the Town, and are reckon'd ſovereign Remedies for the Gout, Cramp, &c. Theſe bringing Nobility and Gentry from all parts of Germany, create a great Trade to the Town, which would be otherwiſe not very conſiderable. The Marqueſs hath his Palace here; and, for the ſecurity of the Town, there is a good Fortreſs built on an adjacent Hill.

DURLACH, Durlachum ſtands 12 miles North from Baden, 20 South from Heidelberg, and 2 Leagues Eaſt from the Rhine. It is ſeated on the Banks of the River Pfinz, at the foot of the Mountain, on the top whereof ſtands a ſtrong Tower. The ſtreets are ſtrait, and the Buildings fair, and the Marqueſs's Palace remarkably Magnificent, far exceeding that of Baden, and even capable of receiving a great Prince's Retinue.

Eſſortheim, is a ſmall City ſeated on the River Enz, where it receives the Nagold, about 22 miles S. from Durlach, between pleaſant Meadows and Corn-fields on one ſide, and Mountains and Woods on the other. It was formerly ſubject to the Duke of Wurtemberg, but now belongs to the Marqueſs of Durlach.

Badenweiler, the chief City of that part of Baden that lies S. of Brifgaw, ſtands about a League from the Rhine, and in the mid-way between Brifac to the N. and Baſil to the S, about 15 miles from each. It is famous, and much frequented for its hot Baths, which are of great Virtue, but not quite ſo valuable as thoſe of Baden above-mentioned.

Offenburg, a ſmall imperial City, under the Protection of the Arch-Duke of Auſtria, is the Capital of the Country of Ornaw, and ſeated on the ſmall River Kintzig, which falls into the Rhine near Straſburg, 20 miles S. from Baden, 30 N. from Brifac, and 9 or 10 W. from Straſburg.

Gengenbach another ſmall Imperial City, ſtands on the ſame River, 5 or 6 miles above Offenburg.

The Dnchy of WURTEMBERG, Wurtembergeniſſi Ducatus, lies next to Baden to the Eaſtward, between the Palatinate on the N. and the Principality of Furſtburg on the South; extending near 70 miles both in length and breadth. The Country is exceeding Fertile, conſiſting of pleaſant Meadows, Mountains containing rich Mines, and Foreſts abounding with variety of Game: A great number of ſmall Rivers water it, which with the Lakes are fill'd with-Fiſh. It is very populous and has no leſs than 63 Cities, 158 good Towns, and a great number of Villages. It was erected into a Dnchy by the Emperor Maximilian in the year 1465. in favour of Eberhard Count of Beutelsbach, in whoſe Family it hath continued, and is now poſſeſſed by Eberhard Lewis, a powerful and wealthy Prince, and of the Lutheran Religion.

STUTGARD, Stuttgartia, the Metropolis of this Dnchy, and the nual place of Reſidence of this Duke, is ſeated near the Neckar, 40 miles Eaſt from Baden, 40 South from Heidelberg, and as many North from the Danube. It is a fair City, and much reſorted to for its famous natural Baths, which cure ſeveral Diſeaſes. The Prince's Palace is a ſtately Caſtle, and adorn'd with exceeding pleaſant Gardens, wherein are rows of Orange-Trees, fine Grotto's and curious Water works.

Tubingen, Tubinga, is a fair and well-built City, water'd by the Neckar, and adorn'd with an Univerſity, founded in the year, 1477. by Count Eberhard above-mention'd. It ſtands about 20 miles South from Stuttgart, near 30 North from the Danube, and 50 Eaſt from Offenburg, and boats of having been the Seat of the Emperor Caracalla, who they ſay had a ſtately Palace, and entertain'd the Germans with publick Games in this place.

Hoendwill, a ſtrong impregnable Caſtle, ſtands on the top of an inacceſſible Hill, near the Banks of the Rhine, and belongs to the Duke of Wurtemberg.

Reſling, or Reutlingen, is an imperial City under the Protection of the Duke of Wurtemberg, being ſeated on the Confines of his Country, 12 miles S. E. from Tubingen. It ſtands in a Plain at the foot of the Mount Alchamack, but affords nothing very remarkable.

Eſlingen, another ſmall imperial City under the Protection of this Prince, ſtands upon the Neckar, 8 or 9 miles Eaſt from Stuttgart.

HAILBRON, Hailbruna, Fons Salutis, ſtands alſo in the Limits of this Dnchy, but is a free imperial City, having been made ſo by the Emperor Friederick III. in the year 1240. It had its Name from the famous Medicinal Springs found in it, and is a goodly City ſeated on the Neckar (over which it hath a Stone-Bridge) in a pleaſant and fruitful Country, at the diſtance of 28 miles from Stuttgart to the North, and 26 from Heidelberg to the South-eaſt.

The County of OETING lies next to Wurtemberg to the Eaſt, between the Marquifate of Onſpach on the North, and the Danube on the South. The extent of it is about 20 miles. The chief Town, call'd in Latin Oeni Pontes, is but ſmall and not very conſiderable; it ſtands 70 miles Eaſt from Stuttgart, 20 S. from Onſpach, and 15 North from the Danube.

Nordlingen a ſmall Imperial City, ſtands in this County on the ſmall River Eger, 10 miles North from the Danube, and 6 or 7 South-weſt from Oeting. It was made Free in the year 1251, and for its ſecurity is in League with the Switzers. Two notable Battles were fought near it between the Sweeds and Germans; the firſt in 1634. wherein the Sweeds were Deſeated, and the latter in 1645, when they and the French were Victors over the Bavarians.

The Biſhoprick of AUGSBURGH lies on the South-ſide of the Danube, extended in a narrow Tract (7 or 8 miles in breadth, a good part of it, and the rest not above 15 or 20) from the Banks of that River to the County of Tyrol, above 80 miles, and bounded on the East by the Dutchy of Bavaria. It is a fruitful pleasant Country, and subject to its Bishop, who is a Prince of the Empire.

AUGSBURGH or AUSBURGH, call'd in Latin, Augusta Vindelicorum, from Augustus Cæsar, who conquer'd these parts and Planted a Roma Colony here among the Vindeli, stands near the Confines of Bavaria, the Confluence of the two Rivers Lech and Werdarh, which fall into the Danube 25 miles below it; and is distant 80 miles from Stutgard to the East, 35 from Munich to the North-west, and 65 from Ratisbon to the W. It is a very ancient and very considerable City, reckon'd the Capital of Schwaben, made Imperial by the Emperor Frederick I. in 1162, and bought its entire Freedom of Conrad Duke of Schwaben, in 1266. It is large and populous, the Streets broad, the Market-places spacious, and the Houses tho' built but with Wood and Clay are fair and handſom; the Cathedral Church, the Town-hall and the Conduits, are stately and magnificent. Here are two Arsenals well furnish'd with Arms and Ammunition, publick Granaries full of Corn, and Hospitals well maintained. The Inhabitants are much enriched by Trade; and the Works of the Gold-smiths, and other Artificers of this Place, are Transported to many parts of Europe. The Noble Family of the Fuggers, Lords of the adjacent Country, have fair Palaces here; a great Hospital built by them is the most remarkable part of this City; it contains 106 Houses in four Streets built cross-ways, inhabited by poor People, who have yearly Pensions allow'd them.

Augsburg is famous for the many Imperial Diets that have been holden in it, but especially for the Lutheran Confession of Faith, call'd Augustan from its having been first promulgated here, at the Diet held by the Emperor Charles V. on that occasion, in the year 1530. Joseph King of Hungary, Son to his present Imperial Majesty, was here chosen and crown'd King of the Romans, in January 1689.

The Marquisate of BURGAU, subject to the House of Austria, lies on the W. of Augsburg, and South of the Danube, extended about 30 miles in length and breadth. The chief Town stands 8 or 9 miles South from the Danube, 24 West from Augsburg, and 12 East from Ulm.

ULM, Ulma, is a very ancient, large and imperial City standing on the Danube, which here receives the Iler, and begins to be Navigable, 40 miles distant from Ausburg to the W. 50 from Stutgard to the E. and 80 from Wurtzburg to the S. It was wall'd in the year 1300. and made Imperial and Free by Lewis of Bavaria in 1346. Soon after the Cittizins purchased the County of Helfenstein, the County of Albeg, and the Town and Castle of Gisfingen, so that they are Lords of a Country of 20 miles in length and 12 in breadth. The City is govern'd by a Senate of 41, and is strongly fortified. It is a rich and populous Place and hath a good Trade, consisting chiefly in Linnen Cloth. The Cathedral Church is a very noble Building, exceeding any of Germany, except that of Strasburg; it's said the building of it employ'd a great number of Workmen for 111 Years; it has five Spires of great height, and within it an Organ so very remarkable as to have merited a Description of it in Print by two Learned Men. It was finish'd in the Year 1599. after 35 years Labour, and is 93 Foot high and 28 broad; it has 16 pair of Bellows, and the largest Pipe is 13 Inches diameter. Here are also many other stately Edifices, among which the Stadt bouise is chiefly remarkable. The Reformation was receiv'd here in 1529, and the Inhabitants are mostly Lutherans.

BIRACII, an ancient Imperial City, is seated in a pleasant and fruitful Valley surrounded with fair Meadows, but some of them boggy and overflow'd in Winter, 20 miles from Ulm to the South, not above 10 from the Danube, and 40 from Constance to the North-east: It was made Free very long since, even in the year 800, as 'tis said. Here is a natural Bath, to which great numbers of the Neighbouring Territory resort.

BUCAU, is also a small Imperial City, but chiefly remarkable for its Monastery, the Abbot whereof is one of the Sovereign Princes of Schwaben. It stands about 7 miles W. from Bibrach, and as many South from the Danube.

MEMINGEN, a free imperial City also, stands on the River Iler, 30 miles South from Ulm, and 20 North from Kempten: It is a large place and of good Trade, which consists chiefly in making and vending Paper. It is also strong, having the natural Fortification of a Marsh on one side, and the artificial one of a good Wall on 'other.

LEUTKIRK, a small Imperial City, stands 12 miles South from Memmingen upon the Road to Italy, which makes it pretty much frequented. The Inhabitants have a good Trade for Linnen Cloth, which they make in great quantities.

RAVENSPURG, or GRAVENSPURG, was anciently a fair Village, but wall'd and made a City in the Year 1100, and afterwards made Imperial and endow'd with Privileges. It has a fair Town-house, and the Churches are well built. It stands upon a small River that falls into the Lake of Constance, 20 miles West from Leutkirck, and about 20 South from Buchaw.

KEMPTEEN, Campodinum, Campidona & Druſonagus, is one of the Ancientest Cities in Germany, and was sometime the Seat of the Dukes of Schwaben, at present famous for its Monastery founded by Hillegard Daughter to the Duke of Schwaben and Wife to Charles the Great; the Abbot whereof is a Prince of the Empire and Lord of the adjacent Territory, and formerly of this City, till the Inhabitants purchas'd their Liberty: The Emperor Feederick III. made it Imperial, and granted the Citizens many Privileges. The Trade of the Place is Weaving and Whiting Linnen Cloth; it lies upon the Road to Italy, by which also the Inhabitants make good advantage. The Reformation was receiv'd here in 1530. and in 1633 the City taken and plunder'd by the Imperialists. It stands upon the River Iler 16 miles South-east from Leutkirck, 50 from Ulm, and 20 from Memmingen to the South.

Altorf, which stands two miles from Raersburg, is an ancient Town, at present belonging to the House of Austria; a Lieutenant or High Commissioner of Swedia resides here, who in the Emperor's name keeps a Court of Judicature to hear and determine all Causes brought from the Imperial Cities in Schwaben. The famous Family of the Guelphs us'd to be buried here.

LINDAU, at first a Monastery built in 810: which was in time encreas'd to a City and subject to the Abbets, and after to the Duke of Schwaben, but hath since obtained its Liberty and Privileges from Rudolf I. Frederick III. and Sigmund, and is now an Imperial City. It stands 30 miles West from Kempten, and on the North-east Part of the Lake of Constance, part of the City being built on an Island in it, and the other part surrounded with pleasant Meadows and sweet Springs.

Iſne stands in the midway between Kempten and Lindaw; Wangen 10 miles South from Lindaw, and Buchorn upon the Lake of Constance 12 miles West of Lindaw, are all three Imperial Cities. As is also

ſtewa

U B E R L I N G E N, which stands also upon the Lake of Constance. 30 miles West from Lindaw, 50 South west from Ulm, and 23 from Buchaw, 30 East from Furstburg, and 10 North from Constance. It is a fair City built on a high Rock, and encompass'd with Vineyards and Orchards, and hath a good Haven, whence are sent out Barges laden with Wine and Fruits, which they carry to Constance, and other Cities upon the Lake; by which the Inhabitants are enriched, being also very industrious and frugal. Here is an Hospital richly endowed and several good publick Buildings; anciently the Dukes of Schwaben have resided here. In the neighbouring Vineyards springs a mineral Water of great Virtue.

C O S T A N C E, call'd in High-Dutch C O S T N I T Z, or C O S T A N T Z, Constantia, Constantia, the Metropolis of the Hegow or Lower Schwaben, had its name, as 'tis said, from Constantius Chlorus, Father of Constantine the Great, who had his Winter station here. It stands on the South side of the Lake of Constance or Boden See, where the River Rhine issues out of it at the distance of 60 miles from Ulm to the South-west, 70 from Basil to the East, and 30 from Appenzel to the North. It was taken by Attila the Hunn, and afterwards possess'd by the Kings of France, by whom the Bishoprick of Windisch was removed hither in the year 594. and the City was enlarged, and so fortified before 938. that it withstood a great Army of Hungarian Savages that then over-ran this County. It is Imperial, but not perfectly free, for Charles V. subject'd it to the Austrian Family for refusing the Terms concerning Religion tender'd to them; and the Emperor still maintains a Governour and Garison here, under the Title of Protector. However, the City enjoys many Privileges, is a populous and rich Place, and hath a considerable Trade by means of the Lake. It is also well built and strongly fortified; the Churches are very magnificent, particularly the Cathedral of St. Stephen; also the Exchange, Town-house, Markets, Bridges, and other publick Buildings are very stately: As is likewise the Bishop's Palace that stands in the Suburb of Petershausen, which was fortified in 1635. when the Swedes attempted to besiege the City.

This City was made memorable by a general Council held in it by the procurement of the Emperor Sigismund in the Year 1414. to remove a Schism in the Romish Church, upon Three Popes pretending to the Infallibility; all which Three were deposed, and a new one (Martin V.) chosen by this Council. They likewise condemn'd the Doctrines of John Wickliff, John Hus and Jerom of Prague, causing the Bones of Wickliff to be digg'd up and burnt; and notwithstanding a safe Conduct granted by the Emperor to John Hus, he was condemn'd and burnt by them, as was also Jerom of Prague. This Council lasted four years, held 45 Sessions, and ended April 12 1418. during all which time there are laid to have been in this City, 4 Patriarchs, 29 Cardinals, 346 Arch-bishops and Bishops, 564 Abbots and Doctors, and 10000 secular Princes and Noblemen. Also 1600 Barbers, 320 Musicians, and (the account is very particular) 450 Harlots.

The Bishoprick of C O S T A N C E lies along the Banks of the Lake and the Borders of Switzerland, among the Allies whereof it is commonly reckon'd. The Bishop is a Count of the Empire, Lord of above 1000 Castles and Villages, and is stiled Baron of Richenaw; he was also formerly Sovereign of Constance.

The principality of F U R S T E M B U R G, Furstembergicus Principatus, is extended in a narrow Tract about 70 miles in length, on both sides the Danube, which River hath its Source within its Limits. The chief Town of the same name stands on the South-side of the Danube 30 miles North-west from Constance, 20 North from Schaffhausen on the Rhine, and 35 W. from Brisac. It is subject to its own Prince, who is a Count of the Empire, and of an illustrious Family, which hath produc'd divers great Persons; particularly Cardinal William Egin, Count of Furstburg and Bishop of Strasburg, whose pretensions to the Arch-bishoprick of Cologne (already mention'd) gave occasion to the breaking out of the late War.

The famous Hercynain Wood or Black Forest extend'd thus far, wherein stands Tone Eschingen a small Village, near which the River Danube hath its first Rise. R O T W E L, a small Imperial City, seated on the Neckar but 10 miles from the head of that River, and is 15 miles distant from Furstburg to the North, and 20 from Tubingen to the South. It is the Seat of a Chamber or Court of Justice for the whole Duchy, first erected in the year 1147. by Conrad III. Duke of Schwaben. This City was taken by the French in 1643. but restor'd at the Treaty of Munster.

The Principality or County of H O H E N Z O L L E R E N is a narrow Tract of Land lying East and West about 35 miles in length, tho' not above 5 in breadth, between the Duchy of Wurtemberg and the River Danube. The chief Town of the same name stands about 20 miles from Rotwel to the North-east, and 12 from Tubingen to the South.

The County of K O N I N G S E C K lies on the East of Furstburg.

The Barrony of W A L D B U R G is about 30 miles in length, and 10 or 12 in breadth, and lies between the County of Koningseck on the W. the Lands of the Abbots of Buchaw on the N. and, Kemton on the East.

Hobenrechspurg County lies on the East-side of the Duchy of Wurtemberg.

Rheinfelden, the Capital of a small County, stands on the South-side of the Rhine near the Borders of Switzerland, and about 10 miles distant from Basil to the East.

C H A P. VIII.

The Circle of B A V A R I A.

T H E Circle of Bavaria is bounded on the North by Franconia, Saxony and Bohemia, on the South by the County of Tyrol, Bishoprick of Brixen and Duchy of Carinthia, on the East by Bohemia and Austria, and on the West by Schwaben. Its extent from North to South is about 200 miles, and from East to West 120. The Air is healthy; the Soil produces Corn, Wine and Pasture; but the Country is much taken up in Forests and Mountains; the former whereof yield much Venison, and the latter Mines of Copper and some Silver, also Quarries of a sort of Marble. The River Danube runs through it, dividing the Palatinate from the Duchy of Bavaria; the Leck runs along the West-side of the Duchy of Bavaria, dividing it from the Bishoprick of Augsburg; and the Inn passes through it, from South-west to North-east and falls into the Danube: These, together with the Amber, the Iler, the Selz, the Altmul, the Nab and the Regen, are the chief Rivers of this Province.

Besides the Dominions of the Elector of Bavaria, there are comprisd in this Circle several other Sovereignities, as the Archbishopsrick of Salzburg, the Bishopsricks of Ratisbon, Passaw and Freisingen, the Duchy of Newburg, the Landgraviate of Leuchtenburg, the Territory of the City of Ratisbon, and several Imperial Cities; which are more particularly set forth in this Table.

- The Dominions of the Duke of Bavaria are divided into
 - The Duchy of Bavaria, which lies on the South-side of the Danube, and hath these Towns of chiefest note.
 - Munich*,
 - Ingolstadt*,
 - Landshut*,
 - Straubingen*,
 - Donaupert*,
 - Burkhanfen*.
 - North-Gow*, or the Palatinate, called the Upper or Bavarian, (to distinguish it from that of the Rhine) in which stand
 - Amberg*,
 - Newmarkt*,
 - Chamb*,
 - Sulzbach*,
 - Leuchtenburg*,
 - Waltmunchen*.
 - The Arch-bishopsrick of Salzburg lies on the South of Bavaria, wherein are these Towns of greatest note,
 - Salzburg*,
 - Lauffen*,
 - Windischmatray*,
 - Dimaning*.
 - The Bishopsrick of Ratisbon lies on the Banks of the Danube,
 - Ratisbon*.
 - The Bishopsrick of Passaw lies on the Danube, next the Borders of Austria,
 - Passaw*.
 - The Bishopsrick of Freisingen lies in the Duchy of Bavaria,
 - Freisingen*,
 - Werdensfels*.
 - The Duchy of Newburg lies partly on the Banks of the Danube, and part between the Palatinate and the Bishopsrick of Ratisbon,
 - Newburg*,
 - Laugingen*,
 - Hochstat*.

The most considerable Cities and Towns are these:

MUNICH, or MUNCHEN according to the pronunciation of the Inhabitants, call'd in Latin Munachium, is the Metropolis of Bavaria and the Seat of the Duke: It stands on the River Iser, 70 miles from Ulm to the East, 40 from Ingolstadt to the South, 60 from Isbruck to the North, and 100 from Linzing Austria to the West, and is esteem'd one of the most pleasant, rich and populous Cities of Germany. The Buildings are fair and uniform, and the Streets broad and even. The Elector's Palace is a most magnificent Structure, the Apartments whereof are adorn'd with exceeding rich Furniture, the stately Galleries with curious Painting and Marble Statues, and the Duke's Closet and Library fill'd with curious Rarities and choice Books; and the spacious Gardens are made pleasant by delightful Walks, Fountains and Grottoes. The Jesuits Church and College is a stately Building; it was founded by William Duke of Bavaria about the year 1600. and is the usual burial Place of the Dukes. The great Church of Munich, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is also a very fine Building, and hath two Towers of 333 foot high. Here are also other Churches and publick Buildings worth a Stranger's notice. Two great Fairs held yearly here, contribute much to the enriching of the Inhabitants. This City was built in 962 and wall'd round in 1156. Gustavus Adolphus took it in 1632.

Ingolstadt, Ingolstadium, Aureopolis, stands on the North-side of the Danube, over which it hath a fair Bridge, 40 miles North from Munich, 12 miles East from Newburg, and 30 West from Ratisbon. It is a fair well-built Place, seated in a pleasant fruitful Country, and adorn'd with an University which enjoys great Privileges, and had the Honour to educate the great Cardinal Bellarmino. It was first made a City by the Emperor Lewis IV. and is fortified with a very strong Castle and good Walls, by which means it was able to resist a very notable Siege of the Protestants in 1546. and another of Gustavus Adolphus in 1632.

Landshut is seated on the River Iser, 30 miles North-east from Munich, and 30 South from Ratisbon: The Duke's Lieutenant in the lower Bavaria commonly resides here. It is a handom well-built City, and adorn'd with a stately Palace of the Elector; and a Church, which, for the height of its Tower, is thought to exceed any in Germany.

Straubingen stands about 25 or 26 miles North from Landshut on the Bank of the Danube, over which River it hath a Bridge.

Amberg, the Metropolis of the Upper Palatinate is seated on the River Wils, 30 miles from Ratisbon, and 40 from Ingolstadt to the North, and 30 from Nuremberg to the East. It enjoys great Privileges, given by the Emperor Riber, and is a place esteem'd most considerable for Strength of any in the higher Germany. The Inhabitants have a good Trade in Iron and other Metals, that are dug out of the neighbouring Mountains. This City was purchas'd of the Duke of Saxen in 1266, by the Elector Palatine, from whom it was taken, together with all this Palatinate, by the Emperor Ferdinand in 1623. as we have already related.

Newmarkt is a fair City, standing on the Banks of the River Sulz, 30 miles North from Ingolstadt, and 20 South from Amberg. It has been an Imperial City but was depriv'd of its Privileges, and now subject to the Duke of Bavaria. The Country about is pleasant, BAVARIA, call'd Bayern by the Germans, is part of the Rhetia Vindilicia & Noricum of the Ancients; and took its name Boiaria (corrupted into Bavaria) from the Boij a warlike People, that came from Gallia Celtica and settled here about 470 years after Christ, being govern'd by their proper Kings at first, and Dukes afterwards, to the time of Charles the Great, who conquer'd Tassilo, made himself Master of the Country and erected it into a Kingdom, in which State it lasted for about 100 years, when Lodowick their King dying without Issue, the Bavarians chose Arnolph, a Descendent from Charlemain, to be their Governor; who contented himself with the Title of Duke, as all the Princes of it have since done; among whom, Maximilian was the first that had the Electoral Dignity, which was conferr'd on him, together with the Upper Palatinate, by the Emperor Ferdinand II. A. D. 1623. in reward for the Service he did him in his War against Frederick V. Elector Palatine, chosen King of Bohemia.

The present Duke and Elector of Bavaria, Maximilian-Emanuel, is also Governor of the Spanish Netherlands; he was born in 1662. succeeded his Father in 1679. and in 1685 married Anna-Maria-Josepha, the Emperor's Daughter by his first Wife Margaret of Spain, by whom he had a Son, who, if he had lived, would have been Heir to the Crown of Spain.

The Country abounds with Forests, which are fill'd with very large Deer, wild-Boars, Bears and other Venison. Great number of Swine are fed here, which the Peasants make their chief Livelihood.

and is call'd the Territory of Neumarkt, tho' but little of it belongs to the City. The Trade of the Place consists chiefly in Iron.

Chamb, a small City, seated on the Rivers Chamb and Regen, 40 miles from Neumarkt to the East, and 20 from the Danube to the North. It was formerly a Marquisate, but now subject to the Duke of Bavaria.

Sulzbach, is a small City seated on the top of a Hill, 5 miles from Amberg to the North-west, which with the County of it was formerly govern'd by an Earl of its own, but has at several times been subject to the D. of Bavaria and D. of Neuburg, a Branch of which last Family does still reside in the stately Palace here.

Leuchtenberg, a Castle, seated about 20 miles North-east from Amberg, gives name to a small Landgraviate, which was formerly subject to its own Lord, but now to the Duke of Bavaria.

RATISBON, call'd in Dutch REGENSBURG, Lat. Ratisbona, olim Reginum, aut Castra regina, heretofore the Seat of the Kings, and afterwards of the Dukes of Bavaria, is seated on the Danube, where it receives the Regen, which running through the Town, gives it its Dutch name: it is distant 60 miles from Munich to the North, 60 from Passaw to the West, as many from Augsburg to the North-east, and 25 from Amberg to the South. It is a fair large and populous City, the Houses neat, and the Streets large. The Cathedral Church is a fine old Building, as is the Castle wherein the Imperial Diets are commonly held: The Chamber in which they assemble, is a large stately Room hung with Tapestry; the Emperor's Throne is cover'd with Cloth of Gold, the Seats of the Electors with Cloth of Silver, and the rest with Velvet, Sattin, Silks, &c. according to the different Qualities. Here is a Stone-bridge over the Danube, which is a noble Building; it is 1091 foot long, 32 foot broad, has 15 large Arches, supported by Pillars and strengthen'd by Buttresses, and hath 3 Towers built upon it; this Bridge was finish'd in the year 1156. Ratisbon is an Imperial City, and the See of a Bishop, who is Lord of the adjacent Territory. It is fortified with good Walls, Bulwarks and Trenches.

PASSAW, Passavia aut Patavia, olim Batava Castra, stands on both sides of the Danube, where it receives the Im on one side, and the Iltz on the other, at the distance of 60 miles from Ratisbon to the East, and not above 10 from the Borders of Austria. It is a large City, Imperial and Free, but under the protection of its Bishop, who is a Prince of the Empire. The Rivers above-mentioned divide it into three parts, viz. Passaw it self, which stands on the South-side of the Danube, and the West-side of the Im; Imstadt, on the other side of the Im; and Iltstadt, on the other side the Danube, and on the Banks of the Iltz. The private Buildings here are of Wood, but the Churches are fair and stately, especially the Cathedral, which is dedicated to S. Stephen. The Bishop's Palace, and the Castle on a Mountain near Iltstadt, are handsome Buildings. This City is very strong, being fenced on all sides with Rocks and Rivers, and hath been made famous by a Peace concluded in it in 1552, between the Emperor Charles V. and the Protestant Princes, by which the Lutherans were granted the free Exercise of their Religion.

The Bishop is Lord of a Country of about 20 miles extent, lying on the North-side of the Danube, between the Palatinate and Austria, in which stand two strong Castles, nam'd Obernberg and Ebersberg.

NEUBURG, Neoburgum aut Novoburgum, is seated on the South-side of the Danube, at the distance of 45 miles from Ratisbon to the West, and 55 from

Ulm to the East, 25 from Augsburg to the North, and 40 from Nurimburg to the South. It is a place of good Trade for Wines, and well fortified; but chiefly remarkable for being the Capital of a Duchy, erected about 150 years ago, and given to a Branch of the Bavarian Family, whose Descendent Philip-William succeeded in the Palatinate of the Rhine, A.D. 1685, and hath been signally fortunate in an illustrious Issue; for of his twelve Children, he has married three Daughters to the present Emperor, King of Spain, and King of Portugal, and a fourth to the Prince of Poland; his eldest Son, the present Elector Palatine, married the Emperor's Daughter; his second Son is Grand Master of the Teutonic Order; his third Son married the Princess Radzeville, the Marquess of Brandenburg's Widow; his fourth Son is Dean of Augsburg and President of the Chapter of Constance; and his fifth Son is Bishop of Breslaw. A stately Palace, built in this City by Otto Henry its Duke, soon after the Erection of the Duchy, is the usual Seat of this Prince. The extent of his Country is not large; it runs along the Banks of the Danube about 40 miles, but is very narrow. In the extreme West part of it stands Laugingen, a strong regular fortified Town belonging to the Duke. It was the Birth place of the famous Albarus Magnus: The great Church is a fine Building, cover'd with Copper, and has a Tower 300 foot high. Here is also a Castle and a Bridge over the Danube.

Hochstadt, which stands on the Danube, not many miles East from Laugingen, a well fortified Place with a strong Castle, is also under the Duke of Neuburg, but claim'd by the Bishop of Bamberg.

Donawert or Thonawert, formerly an Imperial City, stands in the confines of this Duchy, on the Northern Banks of the Danube, at the confluence of the Leck with it, about 15 or 16 miles West from Neuburg; it is on the Road to Augsburg, and therefore pretty much frequented by Travellers; here is a strong Castle, which is nam'd Schellenberg. This City was divested of its Liberty about the beginning of this Age, for adhering to the Reformed Religion, and is now subject to the Duke of Bavaria.

FREISINGEN, Frisinga, olim Fruxinum, is seated on the declension of a Hill, in a fertile Country, near the Banks of the River Iser, about 20 miles North from Munich, as many from Landsbout to the South-west, and 40 from Neuburg to the South-east. It is a very ancient City, and was made an Episcopal See in the year 716. the Bishop whereof is Lord of the adjacent Territory. This City was taken and almost entirely destroy'd by the Sweeds in 1632. but restor'd in 1639. There is another small Territory lying on the Borders of Bavaria and Tyrol, subject to this Bishop, call'd the County of Werdenfels, from its chief Town, which stands near the River Iser, 45 miles South from Munich.

The Arch-bishoprick of SALTZBURG is a Country of pretty large extent, viz. 70 miles from East to West, and 50 from North to South. It is bounded on the East with Syria and the Upper Austria, on the West with the County of Tyrol, on the North with the Duchy of Bavaria, and on the South with the Duchy of Carinthia, and Bishoprick of Brixen. The Country abounds with Salt, Mines of Copper and Iron, and some of Silver, also great Quarries of Stone: A Mineral Water here, call'd the Gastein-bath, is famous for its Virtue in curing many Distempers. The Arch-bishop is a Prince of the Empire; by his place Legate to the See of Rome in Germany, and, in the Diet, sits on the first Bench next the Electors. He is one of the richest Prelates of Germany, and Lord of this Country, which hath its name from Salzburg, Salisburgum, olim Inovia, seated on the River Salza 50 miles South from Passaw, 60 West from Munich, and 60 from Ispruch to the North-east. It is one of the fairest Cities of Germany, and very well fortified. The Cathedral Church hath been new built in 1628. and is esteem'd one of the most magnificent in Europe. The Arch-bishop's Palace is very stately; it is in a Castle nam'd Mirabel, which stands on a Hill. An University hath been establish'd here not many years since. In the Church of St. Sebastian, lies buried the famous Physician and Chymist, Theophrastus Paracelsus.

The whole Town is generally well built, and the Inhabitants have a good Trade, which consists chiefly in the Salt produc'd in the neighbouring Pits. The Archiepiscopal Dignity was remov'd from the See of Passaw, and conferr'd on this by Pope Leo III. in 798. and the Bishoprick of Clamssee incorporated with it to encrease the Bishop of Belian to support the Dignity. This City had the misfortune to be burnt down in the year 1195. but it was soon rebuilt, and now, as we have said, is in a flourishing State.

CHAPTER IX.

The Circle of AUSTRIA.

THE Circle of Austria is seated between Bohemia and Moravia on the North, the Dominions of the Republick of Venice on the South, Hungary on the East, and Bavaria on the West, and comprehends the Estates of the Family of Austria, viz. Austria, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, Cilly, Goritz, and Tyrol, and the Bishopricks of Trent and Brixen. The extent of the whole is about 300 miles from East to West, and 200 from North to South. The Soil is fertile, producing Corn, Wine, Pastures and Woods. The Danube passes through Austria; the Drave rises in the Mountains of Brixen, and runs through Carinthia; the Savè hath its source in the Mountains in the North-west Borders of Carniola, and passes through that Dutchy; the Muer rises in the Confines of Salzburg, runs through Styria, and falls into the Drave a little above Canisja; besides which, a great number of smaller Rivers water the several Provinces of this Circle.

AUSTRIA, which is dignified with the Title of an Arch-dutchy, lies on both sides the River Danube for the space of about 60 or 70 miles from North to South, and 160 from East to West. It was the Pannonia Superior of the Ancients; and its present name of Ostreich or Eastern Kingdom, in Latin Austria, was given by the Franks, because situated Eastward from France. It is a very plentiful Country, affording a great quantity of Wine and Saffron, besides Corn and all other Necessaries for Life in abundance. The Air is not of the wholsomest, the Lower Austria being subject to Infectious Vapours that cause Agues; to prevent which, may be the reason of their much Drinking, which it seems they are notable for, their Neighbours calling'em Paschaller, or Ranters.

This Province, after the Roman's time was part of the Kingdom of Boiarij or Bavarians, afterwards crected into a seperate Marquisate by the Emperor Otho I. and the Austrian Family growing powerful, it was honoured with the Title of Arch-dutchy.

This great Family is, by the German Genealogists, pretended to be deriv'd from the ancient Greek or Roman Hero's. But the first certain Account that is to be found of it, is, That they were Lords of Vindonissa a City of Switzerland, afterwards Counts of Atemburg and Earls of Hapsburg; which Honours they had held from Father to Son for 600 years before Rudolph Earl of Hapsburg was advanc'd to the Imperial Throne in 1273. who, being a very brave Prince, raised his Family exceedingly. In his time Frederick Duke of Austria dying without Issue, Ottocarius King of Bohemia seiz'd upon it, pretending a Right by his Wife, and added to it, Carniola and Carinthia, which he bought of Ulric the last Prince of those Provinces; but the Emperor claimed it is a Fief-male to return to the Empire, and by Force dispossest Ottocarius, and gave it to his Son Albert, who, by Marriage with Elizabeth Daughter of Meinard Earl of Tyrol, obtain'd that Earldom and several Estates in Schwaben and Alsatia: By all which Accessions he became powerful enough to contend with the Emperor Adolph, whom he slew in Battel, and caused himself to be chosen Emperor; but after he had Reigned 10 Years he was slain. He left behind him six Sons, from whom descended Frederick III. chosen Emperor in 1440. Maximilian, his Son, succeeded him in the Empire, and married Mary Daughter of Charles the Warlike Duke of Burgundy (the richest Heirels of Europe) and thereby acquir'd all Belgium, or the Netherlands. Philip the Son of Maximilian, married Joan the Daughter of Ferdinand and Isabel, the first Monarchs of all Spain, and in her Right succeeded in that Kingdom, and began the Spanish Branch of the Austrian Family. Charles succeeded his Father and Grandfather in all their Honours and Estates, so that he was Emperor of Germany, and King of Spain, Naples and Sicily, and Lord of Belgium, besides the Realms of Mexico and Peru in America, with the Dutchy of Milan, which were added to Spain in his time. This mighty Prince, after he had Reigned 42 Years, voluntarily resign'd all his Dominions; and after he had given his Son Philip his Kingdoms of Spain, Naples, Sicily, Mexico, with Belgium, &c. and obtained his Brother Ferdinand to be chosen Emperor, himself retir'd into a Monastery. Ferdinand was chosen King of Hungary and Bohemia, which, with the Empire, his Successors have ever since enjoy'd. By the means of this Grandeur, the Family of Austria hath obtain'd large Privileges: The Arch-duce is the first Councillor of the Empire; he can create Barons and Counts all over the Empire: The Princes of this Family cannot be disseiz'd of their Estates, even by the Emperor himself. In case of the failure of the Male-Line, the eldest Daughter may Inherit, and her Husband enjoy the Dignity and Privileges of Arch-duce, &c.

The present Emperor LEOPOLD is the Heir of the German Branch of this Great Family, and Inheritor of all its Honours and Estates.

Austria is divided into the Upper and Lower, with respect to the Course of the River Danube, being divided by the River Enn.

	} In the Lower are these chief Towns,	Viena , Capital.
		Nusslar .
		Krems .
		Stein .
		Baden .
		Tuln .
		Hainburg .

 } Ens.
 } Eberding.
 } Freistat.

VIENNA, olim Vindomina & Vindobona, call'd by the Natives WIEN, is the Capital of Austria, and by being the Seat of the Emperor, is esteem'd the Metropolis of Germany; it was originally a Fort of the Romans, and not at all considerable till Henry Prince of Austria rebuilt it in 1158. It was enlarg'd, beautified and wall'd round in the Year 1192. with the Money that was paid by the English Nation for the Ransom of Richard I. detain'd Prisoner by the Marquess of Austria, in his return from the Holy Land. It is now a very rich flourishing City, and exceeding populous; great numbers of Strangers, besides Natives of other parts of Germany, being brought hither by the Emperors Court. The Houses are well built of Stone, and very high, commonly six Stories, and besides have Cellars sunk four Stories under one another. The Emperors Palace is a noble piece of Building, but not very large; it consists of two Courts: Over the Entrance are set in Capitals the 5 Vowels, the Exposition of which causes many Conjectures; one that pleases best, is Austria Est Imperare Orbi Univerſo. The Furniture is very princely. But that which most deserves a Travellers sight, are, the Repository or Collection of Rarities of Nature and Art, and the Library; in the former of which are kept a vast number of Curiosities, the bare Catalogue whereof takes up a large Vol. in Fol. Dr. Brown has mention'd several of the most considerable, to which we must refer the Reader, it being too long to set down here. The Library consists of eight Chambers, which contain a very valuable and numerous Collection of Printed Books, besides a great number of Manuscripts, and is excell'd by no Library of Europe.

This City is the See of a Bishop, who is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Salzburg. The Cathedral Church, dedicated to S. Stephen, is a lately Fabrick; the Windows are of thick painted Glass, which makes the Church somewhat dark; the Belfry is extraordinary, being adorn'd with Statues and fine Embellishments; the Steeple rises in a Spire to the height of 482 Foot, and on the top was set the Turkish Arms, a Star and Crescent, to save it from being destroy'd at the time that Solyman besieg'd this City, which continued there till the Year 1683. when after defeating the Turks that year, it was taken down. An University is establish'd here, which is endow'd with many Privileges and a fair Revenue, and a great number of Students: It was founded, as some say, by the Emperor Fredarick II. and enlarg'd and completed by Albert III. Duke of Austria, who also obtain'd its Privileges to be confirm'd by the Pope. The Jesuits have two Houses here, which, together with their College and Church, are fine Buildings; as are also the Abby and Church of S. Gregory.

The Roman Catholick Religion only is here profess'd which obliges the Protestants to go as far as Prefburg to Church. The Jews had formerly a Liberty to Trade here, but of late they have been wholly banish'd.

The Fortification of this City consists of a very strong Wall, wherein are 12 large Bastions, two of which are to the Water, and the other to the Land, and deep Ditches: And indeed this Fortification is needful, for it has been besieged no less than four times by the Turks, viz. in the Year 1529. by Solyman the Magnificent, with an Army of 200000 Men, who were repuls'd and forc'd to return, after they had given two general Af-saults to the Town; in the Years 1532 and 1543. and again in our days, viz. A. D. 1683. at which time the City was reduc'd to great extremity, being batter'd by the Enemy's Cannon from the 14th of July to the beginning of September, which they valiantly resisted, under their Courageous Governour Count Staremburg; till John, the late King of Poland, came up with his Army to their Relief, which being join'd with the Imperialists, set upon the Turks the 10th of September, and totally routed and destroy'd their Army, which was said to consist of 100000 Men, and took their Cannon, Camp and Baggage, and so rescu'd the City, which was reduc'd to the last extremity.

The Suburbs, call'd Leopoldstadt, is divided from the Town by a fair Plain of a good breadth, and the River Danube; and before the last Siege was almost as considerable as the Town, being fill'd with the Houses of Nobility and Gentry very magnificently built; but this was quite burnt down in the Siege.

The City stands on the South-side of the River Danube, which running through low Grounds, is here divided into several Streams and makes many Islands, one of which call'd Peters, lies just before the Gates, and is large enough to lodge a considerable Army for their defence; near the Town a small River call'd the Wien falls into the Danube, over which last here is a Bridge. It is distant 26 German Leagues or 104 English miles from Lintz to the East, 6 Leagues from the Confines of Hungary, and 10 from Presburg to the West, and seated in the Lat. of 48. 20. Long. (reckoning from Teneriff according to the old Maps) 36. 10. but according to Sarson, 31. 19.

Lintz, Aurelianum, Lyncia or Lyncium, the next considerable City, as being the Metropolis of the Upper Austria, is situate upon the Danube, over which it has a Bridge, 100 miles from Vienna to the West, 30 from Passaw to the East, and 50 from Salzburg to the North-east; it stands in a very pleasant Country, and therefore much resorted to by the Nobility, who have their Houses of pleasure in its Suburbs on the other side the Danube, and in the Neighbourhood. The Emperor has a Palace here, to which he retir'd during the Siege of Vienna in 1683. Dr. Brown says, This is not a great, but very near City; the whole Town is built of Stone, the Market-place very large, and not a bad House in it; the Castle stands upon a Hill, is very large and of modern Building. The Imperial Army rendezvous'd here when the Turks came to Vienna in 1532. Here was for some time a Church and University of Lutherans in so flourishing a condition, that in 20 Years time there were no less than 3000 Counts, Barons and Noblemen had been educated in it; but it was put down by the Austrian Family when the Emperor Mathias resided here for almost a Year together, A. D. 1614. The Church and the Palace in the City, and the Monastery of the Capucins in the Suburbs, are the things chiefly worth a Travellers sight. There are two Fairs held here yearly, which brings great resort of People.

Ens, Anasium, Ensum Civitas, a fair strong and well built City, stands on a River of the same name, which 2 miles North of it falls into the Danube, and is distant 15 miles from Lintz to the East; this Town was built in the place where formerly stood the City Laureacum, considerable in the Romans time, having been the Seat of some of their Emperors, and since Christianity, was an Archbishop's See; but that City was destroy'd by the Huns, A. D. 903. and this of Ens built, which was formerly govern'd by its Count, till the Emp. Rodolph I. bought it, and annex'd it to the States of Austria.

Steyr, a neat handsom Town at the Conflux of the two small Rivers, the Steyr and the Ens, about 10 miles miles from Ens to the South. It is inhabited by Smiths, Cutlers, and other Iron-workers, who, by the Danube, furnish the neighbouring parts with their Ware, and much enrich themselves.

Wels, a neat Town upon the River Traume, 4 German miles from Linex to the South, not considerable.

Everding or Efferding, about 12 miles from Linex to the West, and near the banks of the Danube, is a strong fortified Town, and defended with two Castles, one within the Walls of the Town, and another without, which is call'd Schaumburg, and gave Title to a Count of the Family of Gulbach, to whom this Town belong'd; but the Count of Stavenburg is now Lord of it, his Ancestor having married the Daughter of the last Count Schaumburg, about A. D. 1560.

Freystat, on the North-side the Danube near the borders of Bohemia, is a well built Town, but not very strong; it stands 25 miles from Linex to the North. A Fair is held here once a Year which lasts 14 days, and brings great Concourse of People to it.

Newstadt, the chief Town next Vienna of the Lower Austria, is seated on a Bog in the middle of a Plain, at the distance of 30 miles from Vienna to the South; it is fortified with two Walls and a Ditch, which makes it so strong that it resisted the main force of the Turks, who were content to retreat if the Town would give them some Trophy to carry to Constantinople, who thereupon sent 'em their Whipping-post.

Krembs stands on the North-side of the Danube near a small River of the same name, about 40 miles from Vienna to the West. It is a neat well built wall'd City, and has a good Trade, especially at two yearly Fairs, which last 14 days.

Stain is a small City on the North-side of the Danube also, not above two miles from Krembs to the West, and has a Bridge over the Danube.

Baden, called so from the natural Baths that rise here in so many Springs as to supply two Baths within the Town, five without the Wall, and two beyond a Rivulet call'd Swechet, the Waters of which are commended for curing many Distempers, and therefore much resorted to. This Town stands in a plain about 18 miles from Vienna to the South, and as far from Newstadt to the West.

Tuln is an ancient Town about 20 miles Westward from Vienna, upon a small River of the same name, which falls into the Danube about 5 or 6 miles below it. The Country about it is reckon'd the fruitfullest and healthiest part of Austria, but the Town however not very well furnish'd with Provisions for Travellers.

Hainburg or Haimburg, Hamburgum Austria, was anciently the Metropolis of Austria and the Seat of the Dukes, and one of the greatest Mart-Towns in these parts, but decay'd upon Duke Leopold's removing to Vienna about A. D. 1200. It is situate on the South-side of the Danube 30 miles East from Vienna, and near the borders of Hungary, from whence it has been frequently disturb'd by the Rebles of that Country. They have plenty of Wine and Corn, which is now the chief Trade of the Town. There are still to be seen some Remains of strong Walls and Fortifications round the Town.

The Dukedom of STYRIA, call'd in High-Dutch Steyrmark, with the County of CILLET, lies between Austria on the North, Carinthia and Carniola on the South, Hungary and Sclavonia on the East, and Salzburg on the West: Its extent from East to West is about 110 miles, and from North to South in some parts 30. in others 80 miles. The Soil yields Corn, Wine, Fruits, Mines of Iron and Salt-Springs. Some part of the Country is mountainous and barren, but the Vallies afford Pasture for great Herds of Kine. The Air of the Lower Styria is somewhat unwholsom. The Disease mention'd by Travellers to be found among the People that dwell at the foot of the Alps, viz. a strange swelling under the Chin, is very frequent here, which grows incredibly large, occasion'd 'tis judg'd, by drinking the Snow-water that comes off the Mountains, which the poorer People are fain to be content with.

Styria is divided, with respect to the course of the River Mur, into the Upper, wherein are, Judenburg.

Bruck or Fruck.
Lawben.
Seckaw.
Eisenartz.
Gracx, Capital.
Rakelsburg.
Pettau.
Markzburg.

The Lower, whereof the chief Towns are,

Cilley.
Rain.

The Earldom of Cilley lies on the South side of the River Drave extending to the Banks of the Save.

GRACX, Gracium, the Capital of Styria, is a neat well-built City, standing in a pleasant and fruitful Country, on the Banks of the River Mur, 80 miles South from Vienna, 20 from the Drave, and 40 from Cilley to the North, and about 50 from the borders of Hungary to the West. It is defended by regular Fortifications, that render it almost Impregnable, and hath a stately Castle standing on a high Hill, which is a Palace of the Arch-Duke, and is adorn'd with fine Furniture, particularly a good Library, and a Repository of Rarities. The Jesuits College here is well Endowed, and hath the Privilege of Conferring Degrees, which makes it to be reckon'd amongst the Universities of Germany, and well fill'd with Students.

Judenburg, a handsome and well-built Town, Famous for two great Fairs for Cattle yearly held in it. The Duke of Styria has a Palace here, in which his Deputy sometimes Resides: It stands on the River Mur, 50 miles from Gracx to the West, in a very pleasant and fruitful Country.

Lawben is also on the Mur, 25 miles North-east from Judenburg: It is a neat pleasant City, and the Capital of a Barony; but was sold to the Duke of Carinthia, in 1246, and fell to the House of Austria with that Dutchy. It was taken and Plunder'd in 1292, by the Arch-bishop of Salzburg, then at War with the Duke of Austria.

Bruck or Fruck an den Mur, is an old Town, and has nothing considerable in it, only that the Emperot has sometimes assembled here the State of these three Dukedoms of Styria, Carinthia and Carniola. It stand on the Mur, 25 miles North-west from Gracx.

Seckaw, a small Castle on the River Gays, 40 miles from Gracx to the West, and 60 from Stain to the South, is an Episcopal See, Erected in 1219, under the Archbishop of Salzburg, who has the power of Electing and Investing, and receiving an Oath of Fealty of this Bishop; and he has no Voice in the Diet.

Eisenartz, famous for Mines and Forges of Iron, (from whence it has its Name) which employ a vast number of Labouring-men, which therefore live here and supply the Neighbouring parts with this Metal, and all Germany with Steel. They have an annual Fair for Hemp, Leather, Tallow, and all Necessaries. The Mines were discover'd in A. D. 712, and have wrought ever since without any sensible Decay. This Town stands near a little River call'd Salza, that falls into the Ens, is distant 12 miles from Lawben to the North-west, and 24 from Judenburg to the North-east

Rekelsburg, is a strong Town seated on the Mur, 28 miles from Gracx to the East, in a Country plentiful of all sorts of Fruit, especially Grapes. A Custom-house is kept here to receive Tolls upon Merchandise carried to and from Hungary. This Town has been a notable Bulwark against the Turks.

Pettau, Petovium, stands upon the Banks of the Drave, but 10 English miles from the Borders of Scelavonia, 16 from Rekelsburg to the South, and 30 from Gracx to the South-east, altho' it be an ancient Roman Town, it is not very large nor considerable, only that it is a Bishop's See, and has been so for 1300 years. Its Bishop is under the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Salzburg.

Markburg, a well-built Town, on the Banks of the Drave, 20 miles West from Pettau, and as many South from Gracx, formerly the Capital of a Country, till 1240: the last Count dying without Issue. It is now part of the Dominions of the Duke of Austria.

CILLEY, which gives name to a Territory formerly Govern'd by its own Earls, but now subject to the House of Austria, and united to the Duchy of Styria, is seated on the Banks of the River Soana, which a little below falls into the Save, at the distance of 8 miles from the Confines of Carniola to the North, 25 from the Drave to the South, and 25 from the Confines of Scelavonia to the West. It is a noble and ancient City and has been a place of good consideration, as appears by many Roman Monuments daily found here. It is Fortified with two strong Castles, and was strong enough to repulse the Turks, who Attacked it in 1492.

The Dukedom of CARINTHIA, call'd in High Dutch Herzogthum Karnten, is seated between Styria and Salzburg on the North, Carniola on the South, Styria on the East, and Tyrol on the West. Its extent from East to West is about 100 miles, from North to South about 30. It is a Mountainous Country, and of a barren Soil, and cold Air. The River Drave runs cross the Country, receiving a great many small Rivers that water several parts: Here are also many Lakes that abound with Fish.

Carinthia is divided into the Upper, } St. Veit.
 wherein stand } Villach.
 } Clagenfurt.
 And the Lower, wherein are these } Gurck.
 Towns, } Lavenmünd.
 } S. Andrews.
 } Freyfac.

S. VEIT, Fanum Sancti Viti, the principal Town of the Province of Carinthia, so call'd from a Saint of this name, who propagated Christianity here during the Persecution of Dioclesian; It is seated at the Confluence of the Rivers Wilitz and Glee, in a fruitful Valley, at the distance of 80 miles from Gracx to the West, and 80 from Ens on the Dumbe to the South; it was anciently a Bishop's See, but is now not at all considerable but for its Age. Near it are to be seen the Ruins of the ancient City Saal, destroy'd by Atrila in 451. and in a neighbouring Field stands an old Stone-chair, in which the Dukes of Carinthia were wont to be Infall'd.

Freyfac is a good strong Town, seated in a fruitful Soil amidst rows of Hills and Mountains, upon the River Mantitz, 15 miles North from S. Viet, and has a strong Castle built on a Rock: This place is by some reckon'd the eldest Town in this Dukedom; it is under the Jurisdiction of the Arch-bishop of Salzburg. In the neighbouring Mountains were formerly found Mines of Gold, but they are now exhausted.

Villach is seated near the Drave, where it receives the Geyla, 25 miles from S. Viet to the South-west; here is a large Bridge over the Drave, which brings the Town a great Trade, by the many Passengers that Travel over it in the way from Germany to Italy.

Gurck, a City that is a Bishop's See, instituted by an Arch-bishop of Salzburg, A. D. 1073. who reserved the Right of the Election and Investiture of the Bishop to his Successors; but they have lost part of that Power, for the Emperor has now a right of chusing twice, and the Archbishop the third time, and so by turns, as the See becomes vacant: But this bishop has no Vote in the Diet. This City stands on a River of the same name, 25 miles from Villach to the North-east, 8 from Freyfac to the South, and as many from S. Viet to the North.

Lavenmünd, Lavenmünd, or Lavenmünd, stands on the River Lavant, where it falls into the Drave, (whence it has its name) 30 miles West from Clagenfurt, and 10 miles East from the borders of Styria. It is a small City and an Episcopal See also, under the Archbishop of Salzburg, in a pleasant Valley call'd Lavantthal, in which also stands

S. Andrews, a neat Town, and the place of Residence of the Bishop. The Town and neighbouring Country belongs to the Archbishop of Salzburg.

Clagenfurt, the neatest Town in Carinthia, built in a square Figure, and enclosed with a Wall; here is a handsome Piazza, in the middle of which stands a noble Fountain, with a Dragon and an Hercules before it carv'd in Stone. This Town is distant 10 miles from S. Viet to the South, 20 from Villach to the East, and about 6 from the Save to the North.

The Duchy of CARNIOLA, in High Dutch, Herzogthum Karyn; with WIN-DISH MARCH and the County of GORITIA.

This Province is bounded on the North with Carinthia and Cilley, on the South by a ridge of Mountains, that part it from the Territories of the State of Venice, on the East by Croatia, and on the West by Carinthia. The length of it from East to West is about 110 miles, and its breadth 40 miles. It is very Mountainous, but has pleasant Valleys which yield store of Corn and Wine. The River Save hath its Source in the Western part, and runs quite thro' it, besides which here are other good Rivers.

LAUBACH, Labacum, ant Labiama, the Capital of Carniola, stands on the Banks of a small River of the same name, which falls into the Save 10 miles below it, and is distant 30 miles from the River Drave to the South, 50 from the Confines of Croatia to the West, and 35 from Trieste upon the Gulph of Venice to the North. It is a well-built City and very populous, the See of a Bishop, hath a large Castle for its defence, but it is commanded by a Hill, and the Town is not very strong; however endured a Siege in 1440. when Frederick III. being Crown'd at Aken, his Brother Albert and Count Ulric attack'd this City, but it held out till the Emperor came to its Relief.

Crainburg, seated on the banks of the Save, 20 miles from Lawback North-west, and 24 from Clagenfurt to the South-east, on the top of a Hill, and fortified with a strong Castle. The Town has three Churches in it, and in the Suburbs is a Monastery of Capuchins. It once gave Title to a Marquess.

Lack, or Bishops Lack, is a handsome well-built fortified City, standing upon a small River, 10 miles South from Crainburg, and 20 East from Lawback. It is subject to the Bishop of Freyzing, to whom the Emperor Henry III. gave it, and the Governor of it is his Lieutenant. This Town was plunder'd and burnt in 1451. since when it has been Re-built and better fortified.

Zirknitz, a Town of no great bulk, nor considerable but for the Lake near it, to which it gives name.

This Lake is very wonderful; it is about 4 German miles in length, and 2 in breadth, and from September to June, is full of Water, but the other six Months is quite dry. In June the Water descends thro' many large Holes in the bottom, (at which time the Country People catch abundance of Fish, by lying Nets over the Holes) leaving the bottom quite dry, so that the neighbouring People sow Corn in it, which they have time to reap, and afterwards to put in their Cattle; and let in the Deer and Hares from the neighbouring Forests, which they Hunt in this Lake, and all before the Water returns; for the Earth is exceeding Prolifick: And in September the Water returns, spouting up with great Violence, and to a great height, out of these Holes, and soon makes that a Sea, that was before a Field for Corn, Pasture and Hunting; and this happens constantly every Year, and at this certain time.

Ober-Laubach, about 16 miles West from the Laubach, already described, and on the same River with that, is considerable by being a Mart for Italian Goods, which are brought hither in great quantities, and sent to all parts of Germany.

Metling, Metulum, the chief Town of the Windischmark, stands on the Frontiers of Croatia, 35 miles South-east from Gilly, and 25 East from the Lake of Zirknitz. It is a place of no great Consideration: The chief Trade of the Inhabitants lies in Swine, which they fatten in two neighbouring Woods of Chestnut-trees and Oaks. In the Year 1431 this Town was surpriz'd by the Turks and the Inhabitants massacred. And again, in 1578, it was plunder'd by 'em.

Rudolphswirth or Newstadt, stands upon the River Gurk 12 miles North-west from Metling: It is a very ancient Town, and honour'd with great Privileges, which were given them by the Emperor Frederick IV. about the Year 1435. for having oppos'd Albert of Austria and Ulric Count of Cilly. This Town is famous for the best Wine in these Parts.

GORITIA, a small County in Friuli, is subject to the Emperor. The rest of the Province, being subject to the Venetians, shall be describ'd with the rest of Italy. The Chief Town is,

Gortz or Goritz, seated upon the River Lizonzo, 20 miles from the Gulph of Venice and 15 from Aquileia to the North, 50 from Clagenfurt to the South, and as much from Laubach to the West. The Town is old and by some thought to be the old Roman Noricia or Noreia, Dieterich, King of the Gorbz, vanquish'd Odoacer, King of the Heruli, near this Place. The Slavonian Tongue, spoke in these Provinces, reaches no farther West than this Town, and here the common People speak a corrupt Italian. It was taken by the Venetians in 1608. but regain'd by the Emperor the year after; and in 1616 they attempted to surprize it, but were forced to retreat.

Trieſte, the chief Town of the small Province of Karstia, stands on the Adriaticque Sea, or Gulph of Venice, 30 miles from Aquileia to the East, at the bottom of a Bay, to which it gives Name. It is a small, but strong and populous Place, and a Bishop's See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia; it has a large but unsafe Harbour. The Emperor took this City from the Venetians, A. D. 1507. and has been ever since in possession of it.

S. Viet am Flaum, tho' situate in Iliria, which is accounted part of Italy, yet being subject to the House of Austria, must be described here. It is a strong Town, having a Castle, besides Walls and Ditches for its Defence, and is seated on the Adriatick Sea, 20 miles South from Czernickz, and 30 South-west from Metling, and at the Mouth of the River Flaum. The Italian Tongue is here spoken in its Purity, and therefore the Austrian Gentry send their Children here to be taught in it. In the Suburbs stand a Monastery, famous for a Treaty of Peace concluded in it between the Emperor and the Venetians, in the Year 1618.

The County of TYROL, with the Bishoprick of BRIXEN.

TYROL is one of the largest Counties of the Empire, its extent being 120 miles from East to West, and 60 from North to South. It is bounded by Schwaben and Bavaria on the North, the Grisons and Trent on the South, Carinthia on the East, and Switzerland on the West. The Country is very mountainous, and the Soil barren in many parts; however, the Valleys are very fruitful and afford good Pasture. Here are divers Springs of mineral and Salt Waters, and Mines of Silver, Iron and Copper. The chief Rivers are the Eiseck or Laisock, the Inn, which crosseth this Province from South-west to North-east, and the Adige or Eisck, which takes its rise here, and passeth through the Territories of Venice.

Tyrol is said to be the Rhetia inferior of the Romans, and upon the decay of their Power was seized by the Princes of Bavaria, and the Governors of it were appointed by them, with the Titles of Margraves; this Margrave was afterwards made hereditary, and a Count of the Empire, by Frederick I. about the Year 1350. The Bishoprick of Trent was added to it by Ludowick, Son to the Duke of Bavaria and Count of Tyrol, who took that Bishop Prisoner. This Ludowick dying without Issue, his Widow settled this County upon the Duke of Austria; in which Family it has ever since continued.

It is divided into

Tyrol, proper, wherein stands	}	Inspruck , Capit.
		Ombraz ,
		Tyrol ,
		Hall .
The Bishoprick of Brixen .	}	Brixen .
The Counties of		Meran ,
		Pludentz ,
		Bregentz ,
		Feldkirck ,
	Montfort .

INSBRUCK, or Enipons, is seated in a pleasant Valley, at the Foot of the Mountains of Venden, and on the Banks of the River Inn, which separates the City from its large Suburbs. It is 64 miles distance from Munchen to the South, 80 from Salzburg to the South-west, west and 70 from Trent to the North. Though it be not large, it is well built, and adorn'd with curious Fountains, spacious Market-places, and a magnificent Castle, wherein the Arch-Dukes of Innsbruck used to reside, and has since been the Seat of its Princes of the House of Austria; it is a noble Palace, furnished with a Cabinet of curious Rarities in Art and Nature, and adorn'd with pleasant Gardens. Innsbruck was Wall'd by Otto the Great Count of Meran, about the year 1234, but is now destitute of that Defence. But Ombrias, about an English mile distant from it, is a very strong Fort: this was the Summer Seat of the Dukes, being exceeding pleasantly situated. The Armory here is very fine; amongst the Arms and Pictures of several Princes, the Statue of Francis I. on Horse-back, representing him as he was taken Prisoner at Pavia, is to be seen in it. And in the Duke's Closet of Rarities, there is a Trunk of an Oak with a whole Deer enclosed in it.

Hall, call'd Im'ball for distinction, is seated on the River Inn 10 miles from Innsbruck to the North-east, and is famous for its Salt-pits, which afford the Inhabitants a profitable Trade. The Pits are about 4 miles from the Town, where the Salt is dug up like Copper Ore, then laid to soak in great Trenches fill'd with Water, and afterwards boil'd up in great Pans here in the City, of which they have four made of Iron that are each 48 Foot long, 34 broad, and 3 deep.

BRIXEN, Brixino, stands on the bottom of Mount Brenner, upon the River Eschach, 30 miles South-east from Innsbruck and 30 from the Confines of Carinthia. It was formerly an Imperial City, but it is now the See of a Bishop, who hath Jurisdiction over it, and is a Count of the Empire. The City is small, and not very populous; it lies upon the Road to Italy, and is therefore the Station of some Merchants that hand the Commodities of that Country and Germany to and again. Here are mineral Waters of good Fame, especially one call'd the Virgin Well, which is much relorted to.

The Diocess of this Bishop is about 40 miles long, and 30 broad.

Meran, once the Capital of this County, and gave Title to an Earl, is a small City seated on the River Eschach, 50 miles South of Innsbruck. Near it is Tyrol, an ancient Castle, which gave name to the whole Country. It is seated in a pleasant Country, but has nothing considerable in it.

Pludentz, stands at the foot of the Mountains upon the bank of the River Ill, about 75 miles West from Innsbruck.

Bergentz stands at the East-end of the Lake of Constance, 80 miles West from Innsbruck.

Montfort stands about the mid-way between Bergentz to the North, and Pludentz to the South.

Felkirck stands upon the Ill, and near the Rhine, about 12 miles West from Pludentz.

The Bishoprick of TRENT.

This Country is by some Geographers made part of Italy: But the Bishop of it being a Prince of the Empire, the Germans reckon it into the Circle of Austria. It lies among the Alps, between the County of Tyrol on the North, the Dominions of the State of Venice on the South and East, and the Grisons on the West. The extent of it is about 70 miles from East to West, and 50 from North to South. The River Adige runs thro' it from North to South, and receives several smaller Rivers that rise in the Mountains on each side this Country. The Soil here produces Wine, Oil, Fruit and Pasture, but not much Corn.

TRENT, Tridentinum, is seated upon the River Adige, in a pleasant Vally, between three very high and steep Mountains, 45 miles South-east from Brixen, 35 North from Verona, 30 from the Confines of the Vateline to the West, and 70 from Innsbruck to the South. It is adorn'd with many stately Palaces, and several beautiful Churches, whereof the Cathedral dedicated to S. Vigel, is reckon'd a fine piece of Architecture: Its Chapter consists of Noblemen, who chuse the Bishop. Here are also a great number of Religious Houses. The Inhabitants speak both the German and Italian Tongues very perfect, and are observ'd to be exceeding Civil to Strangers, whereof a great many pass thro' this place in Travelling into Italy and Germany. It was formerly an Imperial City, but is now subject to its Bishop, on whom the Emperor Conrad II. bestowed the Sovereignty of this Territory, which had before been subject to its own Lord, under the Protection of the Duke of Bavaria. This Donation was ratified by the Emperors Frederick I. and II. and the Count of Tyrol made Protector of it. The Bishop is suffragan to the Patriarch of Aquileia, and as we have said, a Prince of the Empire. The Council held here in the last Age hath made this City famous: It began in the Year 1545, but was not ended till 1563, during most of which time there are said to have been in this City 7 Cardinals, 3 Patriarchs, 33 Archbishops, 235 Bishops, 7 Vicars General, and 146 Divines, besides many Ambassadors, who with their Attendants, were provided with Lodging, Victuals, and all Necessaries. This Council was Asssembled by Pope Paul III. at the instance of many of the Princes of Europe, for the Reformation of the Discipline of the Church, but by the contrivance of the Pope and Cardinals, so many Italian Bishops were brought to it, that they over-ruled the Endeavors of the rest, and permitted nothing to be Decreed but what the Pope directed, which was so notorious, that it was a common Jest, that the Holy-Ghost was sent from Rome to Trent in a Cloak-bag. And so little was done of what was expected during all this long Session, that not only the Protestants, but the whole German and French Nations refused to receive its Decrees. This Council began on the 4th of January, 1545, and continu'd all the Reign of that Pope who dying in 1549, it was resum'd by Pope Julius III. in 1551. He dy'd in 1555, and a War broke out in Germany, which interrupted it till Pius IV. re-assembled it on the 8th of January, 1562; from which time it continu'd till the 3d of December, 1563, when it finally broke up, after having with the utmost Partiality establish'd the Pope's Authority, and ratified the Doctrines of Purgatory, Invocation of Saints, Indulgences, &c.

POZEN, call'd by the Italians Bolzano, is seated on the Adige, 25 miles North from Trent, and near the Confines of Tyrol. It is pleasantly situated, and is a place of good Trade, especially at its four yearly Fairs, that hold 15 days each, to which great numbers of Merchants come from several parts of Germany and Italy; for whose sake great Privileges have been granted to the City. Tho' it be seated in the Diocess, this place is not subject to the Bishop of Trent, having been taken from him by the Earl of Tyrol, in 1295.

The Kingdom of BOHEMIA, with the Dukedom of SILESIA and Marquisate of MORAVIA.

Under the name of Bohemia in general are comprehended Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, which altogether lye in form of a Lozenge, between Austria on the South, Brandenburgh and Lusatia on the North, the Palatinate of Bavaria, with part of Saxony on the West, and Poland on the East, and extends 69 German Leagues, or 276 English miles from North to South, and 65 Leagues, or 260 miles from East to West.

Although this Kingdom be compriz'd within the compass of Germany, and the King is an Elector of the Empire, it hath several peculiar Constitutions and Customs, and a Language different from the Germans . The Kingdom is Elective; but the House of Austria, by claiming it as Hereditary, occasion'd bloody Wars in the beginning of this Age, between the Emperor Ferdinand II. and Frederick Count Palatine, who being Elect'd, had accepted of this Crown. But this Prince being overcome by the Emperor in the famous Battle of Prague, A. D. 1620. the Kingdom hath been ever since entirely subject to that Family.

The Reformation of Religion was begun very early here by John Huss and Jerom of Prague, and their Converts were numerous long before Calvin and Luther appear'd; whose Doctrines also being brought hither, prevail'd much, and the number of Protestants were very great, before by Persecutions and Wars they were harass'd and subjected to the Roman Catholics, which Religion at present is only predominant in this Kingdom.

The ancient History of this Country is very obscure; the best account that remains is, that the People of the more Northern parts came hither for a warmer Climate, and at first liv'd in a sociable Community, distributing all things in common, but differences arising, they were forc'd to Elect a Governour, who had at first the Title of a Judge only, afterwards honour'd with that of Duke, and at length King. The Succession of these Princes, as well as can be made from the imperfect Chronicles of this Nation, is as follows.

A Chronological TABLE, shewing the Succession of the Dukes and Kings of BOHEMIA.

BOHEMIA proper, is bounded on the East by Moravia and Silesia, on the West by Misnia and Bavaria, on the North by Lusatia, and on the South by Austria; it is almost entirely encompass'd with Mountains, out of one of which springs the River Elb. In these Mountains there are Mines of Silver, Copper and Lead, and in them are found certain preci-precious Stones, which the Jews send into foreign parts. The River Muldaw rises in the Mountains on the South-side, as the Elbe does in those on the North, both which join a little below Prague, and make a good Navigable Stream. Many other small Rivers water this Country. The Soil is good, affording Corn, Pasture and Saffron, and some Wine; as also abundance of Hops, whereof they make Beer that is much esteem'd. The People are generally Strong and Courageous, reckon'd strict observers of their Word, but much addicted to Robbing.

MORAVIA, call'd Morawa by the Inhabitants, and Mabern by the Germans, lies between Silesia on the North and East, Austria on the South, and Bohemia on the West. The North and West parts are woody and mountainous, but the rest is fair, champaign and good Soil, yielding much Corn, and on the South part Wine. Out of the Earth is dug a sort of Myrrh and Frankincense in gerat pieces. The Pastures are fill'd with Oxen, Horses, Sheep and Goats, and the Woods with Hares, Foxes, Wolves and Bevers. Here are many Pits of standing Waters of a poisonous and pestilential Quality, which hurt the Vines and Fruits, and make the People subject to Epidemical Diseases: But there are other Waters which make amends, having the Virtue of Curing many Distempers. Moravia was anciently the Seat of a Kingdom, including also Bohemia and Silesia, which being conquer'd by the Romans, was parcel'd out into four Dukedoms; this of Moravia was afterwards reduc'd to a Marquisate, which Title it still bears, but is mostly subject to Bohemia. The River Morawa, which rises in the Mountains on the North part, passes through the middle and gives name to this Province.

SILESIA, or SLISKO, lies between Bohemia on the South-west, and Poland on the North-east: Its utmost length from North-west, to South-east, is about 225 miles, and its breadth 65 miles. On the side next Bohemia are many Mountains, but the rest of the Country is good Soil, and produces Corn, some Wine, Madder and Flax. Here are Mines of Silver, Copper, Lead and Iron, and plenty of Saltpetre. The River Oder takes its rise in the Southern bounds of this Province, and traversed it from South to North-west. The Vistula, which is the chief River of Poland, springs in the South-east Confines of Silesia: Many smaller Rivers rise here, and fall into the Oder, encreasing it to a large Navigable Stream before it passes into Brandenburg. The Meadows have Cattle, the Forests Venison, and the Rivers Fish in good plenty. Silesia was part of the Kingdom of Poland for many Ages, but revolted under the Reign of Uladislaus Lorbius, and is now part of the Kingdom of Bohemia: but several Princes have Sovereign Dominion over small parts of it.

The chief Cities and Towns of this Kingdom are these, viz.

P R A G U E, Praga, olim Marobundum Rubienum, and Cisfurgā, is seated on the River Muldaw, in a very fruitful Country, and is encompass'd with stately Courts and pleasant Places, appearing as it were in the midst of an Amphitheatre; it may be divided into three parts, viz. the Alt Stadt, or Old Town, the Nieue Stadt, or New Town, which is the chief, and wherein the Royal Palace stands, and the Kleine Seiten, or lesser Town on the other side of the Moldaw: All these together form one of the largest Cities in Germany, wherein Dukes, Princes and Emperors have for a long time kept their Court. In the lesser Town stands the Cathedral Church, dedicated to S. Vair, wherein are magnificent Tombs and a strong Castle. A stately Stonebridge of 24 Arches over the Moldaw, joins this to the other Town. The Town-house, the College and Church of the Jesuits, and the University, are stately Buildings, which, together with several other beautiful Edifices, make this so fine a Place, that Æn. Sylvius compares it to Florence; but our ingenious Country-man Dr. Brown says, this City is larger and more populous than that; that the River Maldaw is much better than the Arno at Florence, but that the Dukes Palace and the Cathedral at Florence, exceed any thing in Prague. It is the See of an Archbishop, and the Seat of a flourishing University, Founded by the Emperor Charles VI. in the year 1358. The Bohemians brag much of the great number of Students that have been in this University, and say, that in the year 1409. J. Huss alone had above 20000 Scholars. This City was often taken during the German Wars; and near its Walls was fought that famous Batel between the Bohemian and German Protestants, under Frederick Prince Palatine, chosen King of Bohemia, and the Forces of the Emperor Ferdinand, on the 8th day of November, 1620, wherein the Emperor obtain'd the Victory, and forced the unfortunate Prince to quit his Royalty. Prague stands in the Latitude of 50 deg. and in the Longitude of 34 deg. 15 min. and at the distance of 100 miles from the Damibe to the North, 145 miles from Vienna to the North-west, 50 from the Confines of Saxony to the East, 180 from the borders of Poland to the West, and about 40 from the bounds of Lusatia to the South.

Ægra, called by the Bohemians Cbelbe, is a great City at the borders of Bohemia, towards the Palatinate, 80 miles distant from Prague to the West; it stands upon the River Eger, and is Fortified with a double Wall &c.

Koningratz,

Königratz, or Kralovitzrades, Gradium Regine, Regine Gradecium, is a good City, seated upon the River Elbe, at 50 miles distance from Prague to the East, and 35 from Glatz to the South-west: It is now the See of a Bishop, who is a Suffragan to the Arch-bishop of Prague, being lately made to by Pope Alex. VII. in the year 1664.

Glatz is a small City, built at the Foot of one of the Hills that part Bohemia from Silesia, and water'd by a small River call'd the Mizza. It is the Capital of a very rich and fruitful Country of the same Name (in which are nine great Towns and 100 Villages) is very well fortified, and has a strong Cattle which stands on the Top of a Hill: It is distant 85 miles from Prague to the East, and 55 from Olmutz to the North-west.

Eihbogen is a very strong Town upon the River Eger, 16 miles from Egra to the West, and near the Borders of Misnia; it is call'd the Bohemian Key to the German Empire.

Pilsen is a large strong and well fortified City, standing upon the Confluence of the River Meß and Caburz, 40 miles from Prague to the South-west, and 40 from Egra to the South-east, was besieged in vain by the Hussites, but was taken by Count Mansfield, and was afterwards the last Town of Bohemia that yielded to the Imperialists. The Market place is spacious, and is seated at the meeting of 4 or 5 Streets of very good Building. They have two very fine Churches.

Czassaw, a small City, but the Head of a considerable Prefecture, 40 miles distant from Prague to the East, and 25 from Königratz to the South. This was the Burial-place of John Zizca, the famous General of the Hussites, who, to revenge the Death of John Huss and Jerome of Prague got an Army together of 40000 Men, with which he obtain'd many Victories over the Papists. At his Death he order'd; That a Drum should be made of his Skin; saying, The Enemy would fly at the Sound of it: Which was done accordingly, and had a strange effect upon the Enemy, who, being raw Soldiers, fancied themselves bewitched by this Drum, and shamefully run away without fighting. He flourish'd about the year 1420. And built Tabor, which the Hussites fortified, and made the seat of their War; from whence, for 20 years together, they ravaged the Imperial Countries; and thereupon were call'd Taborites. It stands upon the River Lausnitz, 45 miles from Prague to the South, 35 from Czassaw.

BRIN, call'd BRINO by the Bohemians, Lat. Brinum aut Bruna, is situated at the Confluence of the Rivers Schwarta and Zwitta, at the distance of 50 miles from Vienna to the North, and 120 from Prague to the South-east. It is by some reckon'd the Capital of the Marquisate of Moravia, and is defend'd by strong Fortifications; by the help whereof it sustain'd a vigorous Siege of the Swedish Forces in 1645.

Olmutz, Olomutium, is not very large, but a neat and well-built City, and has a good Trade with the Merchants of Bohemia, Poland, Hungary, &c. for which it is conveniently seated upon the River Morawa, which falls into the Danube, 80 miles below it. It is the Metropolis of this Marquisate, and the only Bishop's See in it, of which S. Cyril was the first Bishop, about the year 890. This Bishop was formerly a Suffragan to Mentz, but in the year 1346, was alter'd, and made subject to the Arch-bishop of Prague: It is distant 30 miles from Brinn to the North-east.

Iglaw, otherwise Giblaw, is a pretty large well-built and strongly fortified Town, on the Border of Bohemia on the Road from thence to Hungary, and therefore much frequented by Travellers: It is water'd by a River of the same Name, which springs in Bohemia, about 20 miles from hence, and is distant 50 from Brinn to the West, and about 70 from Prague to the South-east. The chief Trade of the Town is in Beer and courfe Wollen Cloath. The chiefest Building in it is the Jesuits College, and Gymnasium, which with two Monasteries of Dominicans and Franciscans are worth seeing. In the Hussites Wars this place was oblate to the Popish side, but very early receiv'd the Augsburg Confession. In the year 1645, it was surrendered to the Swedes, who defended it for a whole year against all the Emperor's Forces.

Znaim or Zuoyno, Zuogma, stands upon the River Taya, not above 5 miles from the Borders of Austria, and 20 miles South from Brinn, in a pleasant Soil and wholesome Air, and is well fortified by a strong Cattle, but with the inconvenience of being overlook'd by a Mountain, within Cannon-shot. This City is also on the Road to Vienna, which brings a good Trade to it. It was burnt in the year 1145, by Uladislaw King of Bohemia, but rebuilt by Primislaw Ottacar, about 1222.

Hradisse or Hradisch, a City situate upon the River Morawa, 30 miles from Olmutz to the South, and as far from Brinn to the East.

Cremfir or Kremsier, and by the Bohemians Kyomeritz, on the River Morawa, in the middle between Olmutz and Hradisse, is now become a very fair City, though not many Ages ago a poor Village; which was occasion'd by a fine Palace, that Bruno Bishop of Olmutz built here; which drew to many People together, that in a little time he wall'd it, and made it a City.

BRESLAW, Uratistia is the Metropolis of Silesia, and of a particular Duchy, to which it gives Name; is seated upon the River Oder, at the distance of 120 miles almost North-east from Prague, 110 North from Brinn, and 35 miles West from the Confines of Poland. It is a very large, well-fortified, and fair City the See of a Bishop, established in 1033, and the Seat of an University. It is a Free City, being govern'd by a Council of 15 Senators, whereof 11 are Noblemen, and the other 4 chosen out of the Corporations of Drapers, Mercers, Brewers and Butchers. The Citizens are rich, and have a good Trade.

In the most North-east part of Silesia is the Dukedom of Crossen, which was anciently part of the great Duke of Silesia's Dominions, but was several times pawn'd to the Marquels of Brandenburg and redeemed; but in the year 1391, it was deliver'd to John III. Elector of Brandenburg, with the Consent of Uladislaus, King of Hungary and Bohemia; which was confirm'd, and the sole and entire Possion of it granted to Joachim and John, Marquels of Brandenburg by the Emperor Ferdinand I. King of Bohemia, and is still enjoy'd by that Elector.

Crossen, the chief City of it, is seated upon the River Oder, where it receives the Bober in a Pleasant Plain, and good Air, and is distant a few miles from the Frontiers of Brandenburg to the South, and 40 from Glegaw to the North-west. It is a neat old City; the Dukes Palace, the Town-houle, and some Citizens Houses are built with Stone. The neighbouring Hills are covered with Fruit-Trees of many sorts, and the Country yields some Wine but not very good.

Glegaw, call'd the Great, to distinguish it from a small Town of the same Name, is also the Capital of a Dukedom, some time govern'd by its own Lords but now subject to the Emperor, as King of Bohemia. It was made a City by Conrade its Duke, in the year 1260. at which time the Wall and Cathedral Church were built: It was taken by the Swedes in 1647. but being restored, is now regularly fortified, and has a strong Castle. It stands on the River Oder, near the Frontiers of Poland, 40 miles from Crossen to the South-east, 55 from Breslaw to the North-west.

Sagan, Zeitzan, the chief City of another Dukedom, of a small extent, is seated upon the River Bobor, near the Frontiers of Lusatia, 25 miles S. from Crossen, and as many W. from Glogaw; it was once one of the most populous and largest Cities of Silesia, but is now much decay'd, having been often taken by the Swedes, and retaken by the Imperialists in the German Civil Wars.

Lignitz, the chief City of a Dukedom also, is a fair City, on the banks of the little River Katsbach, 35 miles from Glogaw to the South, and 36 from Breslaw to the W. About the year 1170 this Town was much enlarg'd and fortified, which was afterwards so improved in the year 1532. by Frederick its then Duke, that it became one of the best Fortifications, next Breslaw, in Silesia. The Castle is a very strong and noble Building, and the Hospital and Town-house are worth a Stranger's seeing. The Country of this Dukedom yields much Corn. In the year 1675. the last Duke dying without Heirs, it fell to the Emperor.

Wolaw, a small inconsiderable City on the North side of the Oder, 26 miles distant from Lignitz, formerly part of the Dukedom of Lignitz, but now gives Title to a Duke of its own.

Oesse is a neat uniform well-built City, formerly well strengthen'd with Walls, Gates, Turrets and other Fortifications, but in the year 1648 they were demolish'd by the Swedish General, and not since rebuilt; here is a fair Church, College, Town-hall, and Market-place, which is exactly square. This City had also a Duke of its own, till in the year 1492 it was given to the Duke of Munsterberg, who is still Lord of it, and some other small Cities its dependences. Oesse is situated about 15 miles from Breslaw to the N. E.

Fauer and Schweidnitz, are two small Dukedoms, (both now in the Emperor) extended on the South-side of the Oder between Lignitz on the North, Breslaw on the East, and Munsterberg on the South.

The City Fauer stands in a pleasant Valley, and is fortified with high Ramparts, deep Ditches, and a Castle, in which resides the Lieutenant of these two Dukedoms.

Schweidnitz stands South east from Fauer, and South-west from Breslaw, about 20 miles distant from the former, and 30 from the latter. It is fortified with Walls and Ramparts, and beautified with many fair Buildings, so that it may be esteem'd one of the finest Cities in Silesia. In the Armory here, is a Gun of an extraordinary size, being able to carry a Bullet of 320 pound weight. Besides these two Cities, there are 22 Towns in these two Dukedoms.

Munsterberg, the Capital of another Dukedom, is a small City seated in a fruitful Plain, 30 miles South from Breslaw. It is an old Castle, which, with the Town-hall, is all worth noting in this Town. Five other Towns are in this Dukedom.

Oppelen stands on the Northern banks of the River Oder, over which it has a Bridge, 40 miles above Breslaw. It has very thick Walls and strong Gates for its defence. Ever since 1647 it has been subject to the King of Poland, and all the People here and in the neighbouring Villages speak the Polish Language. This is a Dukedom also, and has 13 Towns its dependences.

Gretkaw, a small City that stands between Munsterberg and Oppelen, is the Capital of another Dukedom subject to the King of Bohemia; wherein stands also Neiffa a City of good Trade, seated on the River of the same name, and 11 other Towns.

Fagenzdorf, call'd by the Moravians, Carnomf, stands upon the River Oppa, 35 miles from Oppelen to the S. It is a small City, and not considerable except that it is the Capital of a Dukedom, which with the City, was, by Lewu King of Hungary and Bohemia, given to George Marquess of Brandenburg, who built a Castle and erected some other Fortifications about it.

Trappaw, a small City upon the River Oppa, 10 miles from Fagenzdorf, has nothing very remarkable in it, nor in its Dukedom, which has 8 other Towns in it.

Ratibor is a pretty good City, having in it a Cathedral and the Duke's Palace; the Houses are of Wood, as they are generally all over Silesia, but handsome enough, and the publick Buildings are of Stone: It stands in a pleasant Plain on the banks of the River Oder, 35 miles above Oppelen. The Dukedom of Ratibor, containing 5 other Towns, fell to the King of Bohemia in the year 1516. at the death of Duke Va-lentinus its last Prince.

CHAPTER XI.

The Marquisate and Electorate of BRANDENBURG, with MAGDEBURG and HALBERSTADT; and the Dukedom of POMERANIA.

THIS Country, included within the Circle of the Upper Saxony, is bounded on the North by Pomerania and the Duchy of Mecklenburg, on the South by Silesia and the Upper Saxony, on the East by Poland, and on the West by the Lower Saxony. It is extended from North to South for the space of about 100 miles in its greatest breadth, and 50 else where; as also about 200 from East to West. Its principal Rivers are the Elb, the Havel, the Sper, and the War. The Northern situation of this Country makes the Air cold, and the Winters continue very long, nevertheless the Soil brings forth every thing necessary for Sustainance. Here are very good Pastures, wherein great Herds of Cattle are fed; and large Forests abounding with Venison.

The first Inhabitants of this Country were the Varni and Naitones, part of the great Nation of the Suevians, after whom some Tribes of the Slaves possessed it. About the year 920. the Emperor Henry conquer'd these rude People, and planted Christianity among them, and bestow'd the Country upon Sigifrede Earl of Ringelheim, with the Title of Margrave, or Lord of the Marebes, obliging him to defend it against the Slaves; which Honour was at first conferr'd on whom the Emperor pleas'd, and was not Hereditary till the time of Albert of Anhalt, Successor to Henry the Lyon; to whom the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa gave it, and entail'd it upon his Issue: But this Family failing in the year 1323. several Families succeeded in it, till Anno 1417. the Emperor Sigifmund conferr'd it upon

Frederick

Frederick Burgraf of Noremberg, in whose Family it still remains.

The Elector of Brandenburg is Lord of larger Territories than any other Prince of Germany, except the Arch-Duke of Austria; for besides this Marquifate, he possesseth many Estates elsewhere, viz. in the Lower Saxony, the Principalities of Magdeburg and Halberstadt, with part of Pomerania: In Westphalia, the Principality of Minden, the Duchy of Cleves, and the Counties of Mark and Ravenspurge; as also the Lordship of Crossen in Silesia, and part of Prussia in Poland. The Lutheran Religion is predominant, the Princes, Bishops, and most of the People being of that Persuasion; and the rest Calvinists, here being few or no Roman Catholics.

Brandenburg is divided into three Parts, call'd Markts: The chief Towns whereof are these, viz.

In the Middle Markts, which lies West of the River Oder, extending to the Havel and Elb.	}	Berlin.	}	The Lordship of Prenz- nitz, wherein are,	}	Havelburg, Bish.
		Coh.				Neustar.
		Brandenburg.				Wistock.
		Francfort upon the Oder.				Dalmin.
		Spandaw.				Rupin.
		Oranenburg.				Prenslow.
		Rosenaw.
		Lebus.

The New Markts lies to the North-east on the Banks of the Oder and Warta. Stretching Northward into Pomerania, and hath these Towns of chiefest note,

The Old Markts lies on the West-side of the Elb. between that River and Lunenburg.	}	Landspers.	}	The Lordship of	}	Sernburg, Soltwedel.

				Tangermund.
	Sechausen.
	Osterburg.

To which may be added, being subject to this Elector, The Duchy of Magdeburg, and, The Principality of Halberstadt.

Of these Towns, those that deserve a particular description, are these that follow.

BERLIN, Berolinum, is pleasantly situated on the River Spree in a very fruitful Country, being environ'd on one side with Vineyards, on another with Marches, and on a third with Woods full of all sorts of Game. It is esteem'd the capital City of the whole Marquifate of Brandenburg, and is the usual place of Residence of the Elector. The River divides it into 2 parts, the larger whereof, towards the North, retains the name of Berlin, and the other to the South, is call'd Cohn, in which stands the Elector's Palace; the Statelines whereof, the Grandeur of the Courts, together with the Largeness of the Streets, and the regular Architecture of the Houses, render this a very noble and magnificent City. It is distant 68 miles from Magdeburg to the North-east, 45 from Francfort on the Oder to the West, and 150 from Prague to the North-west in the Latitude of 52. 30. It was first built by Albertus Ursus Prince of Anhalt, A. D. 1142.

BRANDENBURG or BRANDEBURG Brandeburgum, was so called, as it were The Town of Fire, or took its name (according to the opinion of others) from its Founder Brennus, General of the Gauls. It is seated in the midst of a moorish Ground, and on the banks of the River Hamel, which divides it into two parts, viz. the Old or Upper Town, and the New, being distant only 26 miles from Berlin to the West, and 40 from Magdeburg to the North-east, is a very ancient City, and hath given its name to the whole Country, as also a Title to the Elector of Brandenburg. It was erected into an Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Magdeburg, by the Emperor Otho, surnam'd the Great, A. C. 946. Its Bishops have adher'd to the Anglican Confession of Faith ever since the year 1563. In the great Churches are many Monuments of Princes, and in the Market-place a Statua Rolandina, of which an account is given in our Description of Bremen.

Francfort upon the River Oder, and for distinction sake usually is express'd, is seated in a fruitful Country, at the distance of 44 miles from Berlin to the East, 70 from Stetin to the South, and not above 10 from the borders of Lusatia. It is divided into two parts by the River, over which they have a large Bridge of Wood. It is a place of reasonable good Trade, and hath two Fairs yearly held in it. The Marquises of Brandenburg have, at several times, granted the Citizens great Privileges. The City was once free and imperial, as also one of the Hanse-Towns, but now, exempt and less considerable than it hath been. In the year 1506, Johan Marquise of Brandenburg founded an University here, which is now considerable.

Havelburg is seated on the River Havel, which a little below falls into the Elb, 50 miles from Berlin to the N. W. It is the See of a Bishop, who was Suffragan to the Archbishop of Magdeburg but since the year 1555, the Bishops have been of the Lutheran Persuasion.

Stendal, a Hanse-Town, the Metropolis of the Ar-Markts, is seated on the River Uche, in a pleasant Plain, and on the side of a large Forest; it is a neat well-built City, and strongly fortified. The Inhabitants have a pretty good Trade in Corn and Linnen Cloth. It lies upon the Road from Magdeburg to Hamburg and Lubock, by which the Inhabitants make good profit. The Courts of Civil Jurisdiction for the Old Markts are held here. It is distant 32 miles from Brandenburg to the West, and 20 from Havelburg to the South.

Soltwedel, a large Town, 35 miles from Stendal to the North-west, 50 from Zell to the N. E. and on the Road between Stendal and Lunenburg. It is seated on the River Geze, and divided into the old and new Town: Its chief Trade is in Beer. This was formerly the Capital of a Marquifate subject to its own Lords, but was long since united to that of Brandenburg.

Tangermunde or Angermund, seated on the Elb at the mouth of the Anger or Tinger, 8 miles from Stendal to the South. It was at first a Castle built by the Emperor Charles IV. in the year 1376, but is now a place of pretty good Trade in Corn and other Commodities convey'd by the Elb to other places.

Landspers stands upon the River Warta, 20 miles East from the Oder, and 35 North-east from Francfort; Its convenient situation makes it a place of good Trade, which consists much in casting of Iron Ordnance, &c. This City was often taken and re-taken in the German Wars.

Kustrim on the River Oder, near the mouth of the Warta, 50 miles from Berlin to the East, formerly an inconsiderable Village, now a very strong Town, and esteem'd esteem'd the Key of the New Marckt, having been walled with Stone, and otherwise strongly fortified in the last Age by John Marquels of Brandenburg, and in 1631 was strong enough to baffle Gustavus Adolphus, who was forced to raise his Siege, and withdraw his Army from before it. The Houses are neatly and well-built, and the Market place is the handsomest in all the M^agistrate.

MAGDEBURG, a Territory of about 60 miles in length from East to West, and in some part 30 from North to South, situate between Brunswick on the West, Saxony on the East, Brandenburg on the North, and Anhalt on the South, the Elb running through; it was formerly an Arch-bishoprick, being made so by the Pope at the instance of the Emperor Otho I. and its Prelate Primate of all Germany, in which state it continued till the Reformation; when the Canons having embrac'd the Doctrine of Luther in the year 1566. chose the Son of the Elector of Brandenburg Administrator of their Arch-bishoprick, after which it remained in the Administration of a secular Prince; till, at length, in the Treaty of Munster, A. D. 1648. it was agreed, That after the death of the then Administrator, the whole Country should devolve on the Elector of Brandenburg as a secular Estate and a Dukedom, which, together with the Bishoprick of Halberstadt, were given him as an Equivalent for the hither upper Pomerania, by the same Treaty granted to the King of Sweden. It is accordingly now subject to that Elector, and is thought to have advanc'd his Annual Revenue at least 600000 Rix Dollars.

The City of Magdeburg, Magdeburgum, call'd in old writing Parthenopolis, is seated on the Banks of the Elb, 45 miles below Wittenburg, in a pleasant Country abounding with Corn, but wanting Wood; as on the contrary the Land on the other side of the River wants Corn but has plenty of Wood. It is distant 30 miles from Brandenburg to the South-west, 60 from Brunswick to the East. and as many from Leipsick to the North. It was built, or much enlarged at least, and wall'd round, by the Emperor Otho, about the year 940. at the desire of his Wife Edgitha, Daughter to our English Saxon King Edmund; and being made a City he endowed it with large Privileges, made it Imperial, built also the stately Cathedral yet standing, and translated the Bishoprick of Vallersleben thither, and obtained the Dignity of Primacy to be added to it: By which means it grew exceeding wealthy and powerful, and continued so till the year 1631. that barbarous Count Tilly having taken the City, massacred the Inhabitants in a most bloody manner, and burnt and destroy'd the whole Town, except the Cathedral, and some few considerable Houses; the Slaughter was so great, that of 40000 Citizens, its laid not above 400 were left alive, which Loss it has never been able to recover; and tho' the Electors of Brandenburg have much assisted it, and repair'd the Fortifications which are very strong, yet it still remains far less considerable than it has been. The Cathedral is a very noble Structure, and worth a Stranger's view; in it are forty nine Altars; and in one of the Chappels is the Tomb of the Emperor Otho and his Wife Edgitha, the Foundress of this Church.

There are 23 Towns more in this Dukedom, but none of them contain any thing worthy of a particular description.

The Province of HALBERSTADT is a small Country of about 30 miles in length and 25 in breadth, being bounded by the Dutchy of Magdeburg on the N. E. the Principality of Anhalt on the South, the Bishoprick of Hildesheim on the West, and Brunswick Wolfenbutel on the North. The Soil of it is good and yields plenty of Corn, and the Forests contain store of Venison. The Bishoprick, which was first founded in the year 780. by the Emperor Charles the Great, and planted at Osterwick, a Town in this Province, being in a little time remov'd to Halberstadt, gave name to this Country, which continued subject to its own Prelate till the Civil Wars of Germany, when the Bishop Leopold William having restor'd Popery, which had been abolish'd in 1591. the Sweeds besieg'd and took Halberstadt, restor'd the Lutheran Religion, and kept the Town and Country till the Treaty of Munster, by which this Bishoprick was Seculariz'd and given to the Elector of Brandenburg, and now bears the Title of a Principality, Halberstadt, the chief Town, is seated upon the River Hotheim, 32 miles from Magdeburg to the S. W. It was heretofore an Imperial City, but afterwards exempted and subject to its Bishop, and now under the Elector of Brandenburg; it is reasonably well-built, the Streets are even, and the Houses neat and uniform. There is an Inn in this City that is thought the largest, and will accommodate the greatest number of Persons of any in Europe.

Osterwick, once call'd Salingslade, in which this Bishoprick was first planted, is seated on the River Isse, about 15 miles from Halberstadt to the West.

Gruningen, a small Town with a Castle, re-built in 1593. formerly the Seat of the Bishop, stands 10 miles from Halberstadt to the East. There is a remarkable Wine-fat in it of vast bulk, containing near 1000 Hog-sheads, Queidlingburg is also reckon'd in the Limits of this Principality, but belonging to the Houle of Saxony, is described with the rest of that Elector's Estates.

SECT. II.

The Dutchy of POMERANIA, call'd Pommern in High-Dutch.

Pomerania is the most extreme North east part of Germany, being bounded by the Baltick Sea on the North, and Prussia on the East, Brandenburg on the South, and Mecklenburg on the West. It is about 80 miles broad, and 250 long: The Air is very cold, but the Soil however yields Corn and Fruits, also good Pasture, which is fill'd with Cattle, and Forests which abound with Venison. The River Oder falls into the Sea, after it has run through the middle of this Country: Besides which, the Rivers Pen, Rega, Persant, Wiper, and the Stolp, water this Dutchy.

Pomerania was long Govern'd by its own Dukes, of whom Parnirius at his Death in 1277. divided it between his two Sons; and the Sear of the eldest being Wolgast, and of the Younger Stetin; but the Houle of Stetin failing of Issue in 1464. that part of Pomerania was conferr'd on the Marquels of Brandenburg, by the Emperor. This the Duke of Pommern Wolgast oppos'd with all his might, and at length forced the Brandenburger to surrender it, but with this condition, that if the Houle of Wolgast should fail, the whole Dukedom should descend to the Houle of Brandenburg; which happening in the year 1637. when Bugislaus died with out Issue, the Elector of Brandenburg claim'd the whole Country: But the Sweeds in the mean time had got footing here, being call'd in by Bugislaus to assist him against the Imperialists in the German Civil Wars, and could not be perswaded to leave a Province which they esteem'd so convenient to them. This caus'd a War between the King of Sweden and the Elector of Brandenburg, which was ended in 1648. by the Treaty of Ofsnaburg and Munster, wherein they agreed to share it betwixt them; the Sweed having all on the West-side of the Oder, and the Brandenburger that on the East: And as a Compensation sation to the Elector, the Dukedom of Magdeburg and the Principality of Halberstadt were assign'd him by the same Treaty; which however did not satisfy him, and therefore when the rest of Europe were in Arms, the Elector of Brandenburg assumed his for the recovery of this Country, and entering the Swedish Pomerania, took Stetin in 1677. and Straelsund, and other Places, soon after: But at the Treaty of St. Germain, what then remain'd in his hands was restor'd, and the Country is still divided, as we have said above.

Straelsund. It was formerly, as we have said, the Capital of a Dutchy, but now subject to the Sweed. It is strengthen'd with a noble Castle, and hath the most convenient Haven, except Straelsund in Pomeran. It was taken by the Sweeds in 1630. after by the Brandenburgers in 1675. and restor'd to the Sweeds in 1679.

Straelsund, a Free City, is near the banks of the Sea, over against the Island of Rugen, 80 miles from Stetin to the North, and 40 from Rostock to the S. E. It is esteem'd the largest and wealthiest City in Pomeran, and enjoys many great Privileges, which the Citizens have maintain'd against several Princes that have endeavour'd to subject them, wherein they have been remarkably Brave, having at once oppos'd the united Force of the Kings of Denmark and Sweden. and Ten other Princes. It is govern'd by its own Magistrates, who judge all Causes as well Criminal as Civil. The Buildings are beautiful, the private Houses being of Stone and uniform: It is a place of very great Trade, (particularly for Corn) having an excellent Haven, the Ships coming up into the very Town. This City was Founded or Re-built at least in 1230. and soon grew populous, and was strongly fortified; by the help whereof, in 1629. it oppos'd Count Waldeck, who besieged it: After which, they put themselves under the Protection of Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, whose Successors have ever since held that Title. In 1678 it was besieg'd and taken by the Elector of Brandenburg, but restor'd at the Treaty of S. Germain, in 1679. The Fortifications consist of regular Bulwarks and large Ditches, besides natural Marshes, through which there is no passing but by Causeys that are well fortified.

Bard stands in a fruitful Country, 12 miles West from Straelsund, upon a little Arm of the Sea, which would be a good Haven, but that the Water is shallow, and so the Town cannot be traded to. It was sometime the Metropolis of the upper Pomeran.

CAMNIN, esteem'd the Capital of the Ducal Pomerania, is seated on the East-side of the mouth of the Oder that it call'd Drawenow, 30 miles North from Stetin, 40 East from Wolgast, and 5 South from the Coasts of the Baltick. It was formerly a Bishop's See, but by the Treaty of Munster it was Seculariz'd and given to the Marquess of Brandenburg.

Colberg, at the mouth of the small River Persant, and near the Banks of the Baltick Sea, 30 miles N. E. from Camnin, is a strong Town with a convenient Haven. It is pretty much resort'd to for Salt, which is made in great plenty near it; and being hence Transported, makes the Town Rich and considerable.

The Three Islands lye in the Baltick Sea, before the Coast of the Upper Pomeran. That of RUGEN is the largest and most considerable; it is 30 miles in length, and as many in breadth, but with several Arms and Creeks of the Sea within it: It is situate to the N. E. over against Wolgast and Straelsund, between which last place and it, the Sea is not above a League broad: The Land of it is exceeding fertile, yielding Corn in great plenty, and very good Grass, whereby great Herds of Cattle are fed. It was formerly govern'd by its own Princes, who assist'd by the notable Valour of the People, long defended it against the neighbouring Kings: But the Straelsunders opposing the Authority he pretended over the Strait that leads to their City, occasion'd Prince Wislaw to besiege it; but the City defended it self so well, that not only he could not take it, but in a Sallie he was slain, and being the last of his Family, that Government afterwards was subjected to the Duke of Pomeran, from whom it descend'd to the King of Sweden: But the Danes, having some old pretensions, in the War of STETIN, Stetinum, is a very considerable City, the Capital of all Pomerania, and a Hans-Town. It is seated on the River Oder, at the distance of 18 m. from the Frontiers of Brandenburg, 40 from the Coasts of the Baltick Sea, and 70 from Berlin to the N. E. It is a large, strong and well-built City, and a place of great Trade, to which the River Oder much contributes; for it self flows from Silesia, and the Warta falls into it about 50 miles above this City; and about 40 miles below it both together fall into the Baltick Sea; so that this is a good Centre for exchanging the Commodities of Germany, Poland and the Baltick. The Palace which was formerly the Seat of the Duke, and is now the place where the Swedish Governor resides, is an old magnificent Building. This City is exceeding populous, and the Inhabitants are noted for Civility and Valour; an instance of the latter they effectually gave in the gallant defence they made against the Elector of Brandenburg in 1677. when tho' he brought a great Army before this City, and very vigorously attack'd it from the 7th of July, he was not able to take it before the 26th of December, and then too gave them very honourable Terms: In the succeeding Peace it was restor'd to the Sweed, under whom it still continues.

Wolgast is seated near that mouth of the Oder call'd Pin about 5 miles from the shoar of the Baltick Sea, 50 North-west from Stetin, and 30 South-east from 1678. Invaded and Took the whole Island; but in 1679. by the Treaty, restored it to the Sweeds, to whom it is still Subject. The chief Town is Bergen, which is a place of no great Note, being not fortified nor even Wall'd, though call'd a City. It contains about 400 Houses; and is distant about 25 miles from Stralsund to the North-east, and as many from Wolgast to the North.

The Island denominated from the Town WOLLIN, call'd anciently Julium, is the Western of the 2 Islands that make the three Mouths of the Oder. The Town is seated on the Mouth of the Oder, call'd Drienow, 25 miles North from Stetin, and 25 South-west from Wolgast. It was anciently one of the largest Cities of Europe, and resorted to by Merchants of all Nations, and said to have been so Powerful, as alone to maintain a War against Denmark, and three several times took their King Prisoner: But it was partly destroy'd by Lightning, and finally by the Arms of Woldemar King of Denmark, in 1170. totally demolish'd. Since when it hath been only a small inconsiderable Town.

USEDOM, which gives name to another Island that lies West from that of Wollen, and makes the other two Mouths of the Oder, one whereof runs between these two Islands, and is call'd Swine, and the other beyond Usedom, which is nam'd Pfin. Upon the Destruction of Wollen, this Town was resorted to by the Danish and Polish Merchants, and became a place of good Trade, but in 1473 it was all burnt down by an accidental Fire, which destroy'd its Trade; and it hath since been only a small Sea-port Town, and not considerable.

S E C T. I.

A short Account of the History of Saxony in General.

THE Saxons were anciently a vast Nation, and Possessed all the Northern Parts of Germany, from Franconia and Bohemia in the South, to the Baltick Sea and Denmark in the North; and from the River Elb on the East, to the Rhine on the West; whereby not only the present Upper and Lower Saxony, but also all Westphalia and Holstein were part of their Country: Nay, also Futland, now reckon'd part of Denmark was inhabited by them.

Concerning the Etymology of the name Saxon, the Learned differ; some are of opinion, that they were deriv'd from the Saci, a People of Asia, to which our Learned Country-man Mr. Camden inclines. Others say, they were deriv'd from Saxum a Stone, as being a hardy strong People. Vestegan and others affirm, that they had their name from a Weapon they wore, call'd a Seax, which was a short Sword of different form from those commonly worn, and peculiar to this Nation.

They were Men of a large Bulk and great Strength, renown'd Warriors; and so notorious for Piracy, that the Romans were oblig'd to keep Forces all along the Coast of Gaul and Britain to hinder their frequent Incurfions.

It was this Warlike People that K. Vortigern invited to Britain to assist him against the Picts and Scots, who upon the Romans forsaking them, much annoy'd the Britains: But of what part of this great Nation those were that he invited, is somewhat uncertain; ancient Histories tell us they were Angles and Jutes: Futland is suppos'd to have been the Country of the latter, but from what part the former came is more Disputed: Mr. Camden is of Opinion that they dwell in Sleswick, which was sometime call'd Angel; though others affirm they came from Westphalia, and were accompanied by the Frisons. For the Reader's farther Satisfaction, he may consult Camden's Britannia, where he will find this Matter most learnedly and ingeniously Discussed.

They were Pagans, and Govern'd by Twelve Noblemen, chosen by the Commons, out of whom in time of War they chose a King; which Government continued till the time of Charles the Great, who made War upon them, and was long oppos'd under the Conduct of Witiking their King; but the Power of Charles prov'd too strong in time, and Witiking was oblig'd to submit and receive the Christian Faith, which by the great care of Charles was Planted and Propagated over the whole Nation, and Witiking was by him created Duke of Saxony.

The Race of Witiking continued Dukes of Saxony till Oslo III. who being chosen Emperor in 984. gave his Country to Barnard Lord of Lunenburg, whose Grandson Magnus was depriv'd by the Emperor Henry III. and Hemy Guelph, Duke of Bavaria, made Elector of Saxony, whose Son Henry, surnam'd the Lion, siding with the Pope against the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa about the year 1170. was Proscrib'd, and by the Emperor's Command depriv'd of his Estates by the neighbouring Princes. The Electoral Dignity was Anno 1180. given to Bernard Earl of Anhalt, Son to the Marquis of Brandenburg, and descended from Magnus above mention'd. who had conquer'd Lawenburg from Henry, to which the Emperor added the City of Wettinberg and the little Country that lies between the Elb and the Sala on the North of Misnia, and gave it the name of the Upper Saxony. The Posterity of Bernard enjoy'd this with the Title of Duke and Elector of Saxony, till 1422. when Albert III. dying without Issue, Frederick Landgrave of Thuringen and Marquis of Misnia, who was the Heir of the Family of Witiking, by the Emperor's favour, succeeded; in whose Family it still remains. His Successors have been zealous Defenders of the Reformation, especially D. John. who was one of the Princes who protested against the Decree of the Diet at Spire, in 1529. as we have elsewhere said, and was the Author of the Smalcalden League: But in the War that ensu'd thereupon, his Son and Successor Frederick John had the Misfortune to be taken Prisoner by the Emperor Charles V. and depriv'd of his Honour and Estate, which in 1547 were given to his Cousin Maurice, Grandson to the Landgrave Frederick above-mentioned, from whom the present Duke and Elector is Descended.

S E C T. II.

The Upper SAXONY.

The upper Saxony is bounded on the North by the Principalities of Magdeburg, Halberstadt, and the Marquisate of Brandenburg, on the South by Franconia and Bohemia, on the East by Silecia, and on the West by Hesse and Brunswick. Its Extent is, from North to South about 130 English miles, and from East to West 200. The Air is cold but healthful, and the Soil fertile, producing much Wheat but very little Wine; here are Mines of Lead, that are very profitable, and some of Silver, that yield the Elector above 100 thousand Pounds a year. The chief Rivers are, the Elb, the Sala, the Elster, the Unstruck, the Spree and the Neisse.

The Religion of the Inhabitants is generally the Lutheran, though there are also some Calvinists and Roman Catholics.

The Elector of Saxony is the wealthiest Prince of Germany, except the Archduke of Austria, his yearly Income being reckon'd to be 400 thousand Pounds Sterling; which is raised by the Silver Mines above-mentioned, and by Excise upon Beer, Corn, Wine, Fruit, &c. The Splendor of his Court is very great being attended by a vast number of Servants, among whom are several Gentlemen of great Quality. 'Tis said of the Elector Christian II. that he had, besides a great number of the Gentry of his own Country, three Dukes, three Earles and five Barons of Foreign Nations his Pensioners at the same Time. The Dominions of this Prince were increased in the year 1620. by the Emperor's Donation of the Marquisate of Lusatia to Duke John George, in reward for the service he did him in the Bohemian War.

So that his present Dominions are, the Dukedom of Saxony, and the Marquisates of Misnia and Lusatia, &c. The chief Towns whereof are seen in this Table, together with those of the other States, that compose the rest of the Circle of the Upper Saxony, viz Anhalt Thuringen, &c.

The Duchy of Saxony is but a small Country, lying between Brandenburg on the North, Misnia on the South, Lusatia on the East, and Anhalt on the West. The chief Towns are,

The Marquisate of Misnia is bounded on the North by Brandenburg and Anhalt, on the South by Bohemia, on the East by Lusatia, and on the West by Mersburg, Naumburg and Altenburg. It's extent from North to South is near 100 miles and from East to West 80.

Meingland, the South part of Misnia.

The Marquisate of Lusatia lies Eastward from the Duchy of Saxony and Misnia, and is bounded on the North by Brandenburg, on the South by Bohemia, and on the East by Silesia. It is in length from North to South about 90 miles, and in breadth about 50 miles; the chief Towns in it are

Other smaller States belonging to several Branches of the House of Saxony, and lie Westward of the Countries above-mention'd, viz.

The Duchy of Sax-Hall, Hall.

Sax-Mersburg, Mersburg.

Sax-Naumburg, Naumburg.

Sax-Altenburg, Altenburg.

The Principality of Anhalt is a long but narrow Tract of Land lying on the North of Misnia.

The small County of Barby joins to Anhalt on the North.

THURINGEN, formerly a Kingdom, afterwards a County and then a Landgraviate, was govern'd by its own Princes for many Ages till 1124. when, upon the Death of Hermen, it descended to the Marquis of Misnia, and, with that Country, came afterwards to the Duke of Saxony; but is divided into several Lordships and Sovereignties, according to the following Table.

In Thuringen are these Chief Towns,	[Eurfurt Cap. subject to the Archbishop of Meinz ,
	Gorba , Dutchy,
	Erfanck Dutchy,
	Weimer , Dutchy,
	Mansfeld , County,
	Srlberg , County,
	Hohenstein , County,
	Schwarzenburg , County,
	[Mulhausen Imp.

WITTEMBERG, Wittemburga aut Vitarum Mons, the Capital City of the Duchy of Saxony, is seated on the River Elb, 40 miles South from, Brandenburg. as many North from Leipzig, 70 East from Hallestadt, and as many West from the River Oder. It is a fair large City, of an oblong square form with own great Street in the middle; adorn'd with an University, which was founded by the Elector Frederick III. in 1502. and made famous by the Preaching of Martin Luther. And well fortified both by Nature and Art, having Marshes on the North, and a great Canal to the Elb, also a very deep Ditch, good Rampart and 5 large Bastions on the Side that is most expos'd. This is the Capital of the Electorate, and was the Seat of the Elector, till that Honour came into the Family of Misnia, when it was removed to Dresden.

Torgaw is a fair City, built by John Frederick, the Elector, in 1535. and beautified with a stately Castle. It is seated on the West Side of the Elb, 20 miles South from Wittemburg.

DRESDEN, Dresda, is seated on the River Elb, which divides it into two Parts, at the distance of 53 miles from Wittemburg to the South-east, 25 from the Confines of Bohemia to the North, and 50 from Leipzig to the East. It is a large well-built City, and the usual place of Residence of the Elector of Saxony; whose Palace is a strong and magnificent Castle, adorn'd with many Curiosities, especially a Chamber of Rarities, and an Armory extremely well furnished, as also very fine Gardens and Stables. The City, as we have said, is divided by the River into two Parts, that on the South Side is call'd Alt Dresden or the Old Town; to which the New is join'd by a Stone-Bridge of 17 Arches, which is reckon'd a curious piece of Workmanship.

Meissen, Misnia, once a rich and populous City; and the Metropolis of the Province, but now not considerable, stands on the South Side of the Elb, 12 miles West from Dresden: It is a Bishop's See, and has a Territory belonging to it, which, with the City, was formerly subject to its Bishop, but now in the Hands of the Elector. Here was a wooden Bridge over the Elb, that was much admired, but was destroyed in the German Wars.

LEIPZIG or Leipsick, Lipsia, Lipsiadam, is thought to have been built by the Vandals (who were the ancient Inhabitants of this Country) about the year 700. It stands upon the River Plesse, and near the Elster, and is distant 50 miles from Dresden to the East, and 40 from Wittemburg to the South. It is a very large rich and populous City, the most considerable of any in this Elector's Dominions. It is very full of Houses, and those well-built and very high, many seven, and some nine Stories. S. Nicholas Church is very fine, and esteem'd the best of any Lutheran Church in Germany. The Citizens have a great Trade, especially by reason of three Fairs held yearly, which bring a concourse of Merchants from all Parts. A high Court of Judicature is held in this City, which hath great Power; even to summon the Elector himself. Here is also an University, which was establish'd in 1408. by Frederick Marquis of Misnia: It hath four Colleges and 24 Professors, and is well fill'd with Students. The Castle seated on the Plesse, and call'd Plessenburg, is a very strong Fort and well guarded. In 1520. Martin Luther disputed here with Eckius against the Pope's Supremacy, and quickly after this City imbraced the Reformation. It suffer'd much in the Civil Wars of Germany, having been several times besieged and taken.

Freyburg is a famous and pleasant Town, 20 Miles from Dresden to the West, very pleasantly situated, near the River Mulda, 16 miles South-west from Dresden. S. Peter's Church here is the usual Burial-place of the Electors, many of whose Monuments are there to be seen; but that of the Elector Murice is the most magnificent, not only of those, but of any in Germany. But that which makes this Town most considerable is the famous Mines that are found near it; out of which they dig great Quantities of Silver Oar, besides Copper, Lead, Brimstone, Vitriol, &c. and so much Silver is hereby produced, that the Elector's Profit out of it is esteem'd at 130000*l.* per annum, clear of all Charges.

Plawen or Plaven, a small City, is seated upon the River Eißer, 16 miles South-west from Zwickow, a small City, seated upon the River Mulda 40 miles South from Leipsick: It was a Free Imperial City till the year 1308, at which Time it was taken by Frederick Marquis of Misnia. This Country was the chief Seat of the German Civil Wars, and many Incampments were made near this City.

BAUTZEN or BAUDISSEN, Budissina ant Bubesia, the chief City of the Marquilate of Lusatia or Lausitz, stands on the River Spree, near the Frontiers of Saxony, 30 miles from Dresden to the East, 20 from Gorlitz to the West, and 70 from Prague to the North. It was formerly an Imperial City, but lost its Privileges. Before the last German Wars it was well built; but in 1634, the Imperialists having got Possession of it, were besieged by the Elector of Saxony, and intending to drive off the Enemy, set Fire to the Suburbs, which was unhappily driven over into the City, and burnt it to Ashes, and soon after it suffer'd much from the Sweeds; since when it has not been able to recover its former Lustre.

Gorlitz, call'd by some, the Capital of this Marquilate, is seated in a Marsh upon the River Neisse, which rises on the Borders of this Country, and after it has run quite cross, it falls into the Oder. This is a good City, having many stately Dwelling-houses and several neat Churches; it's Trade lies chiefly in Brewing and making Linnen and Woollen Cloth: It is 20 miles distant from Bautzen to the East.

Liebau, Löbau, Liben, or Lubben, is a small Town, seated in a Plain among pleasant Meadows in the middle between Bautzen, and Gorlitz: It was formerly so rich, that when the Sweeds Plunder'd it, in 1639. they confess'd that they got 70000 Rix Dollars in Money, besides much rich Booty.

Soraw, call'd by some, the Capital of the lower Lusatia, is a small City 30 miles North from Gorlitz, and very near the Borders of Silesia. It was often taken and retaken in the German War, but is now subject to the Elector of Saxony.

Luben on the River Spree, 50 miles North from Bautzen, and 30 miles West from the River Oder. This is generally esteem'd the Capital of the lower Lusatia. The Elector of Saxony has a Palace in it.

Guben, a small but well fortified Town, stands in the lower Lusatia, on the River Nisse, 30 miles from Luben to the East, 10 from the Oder to the West, and 45 from Gorlitz to the North. It was taken by the Imperialists in 1631. and endur'd a Siege of three Weeks by the Sweeds, in 1642.

Cornitz or Corbuzi is a fair Town, seated on the small River Havel, where it falls into the Spree, 35 miles North from Bautzen, and 22 miles South from Luben. It is now subject to the Elector of Brandenburg, as are also Peytze, Somerfeld, and some other Towns of less note in this Marquilate.

MERSBURG, formerly a Bishop's See, under the Archbishop of Magdeburg, but now possess'd by the Elector, as Administrator of it; and with the Territory belonging to it, serves for the Portion for some of the younger Brothers, who are styl'd Dukes of Sax-Mersburg. The Town at present consists of a great number of old-fashion'd ruinous Houles, and hath nothing considerable in it, but the Cathedral.

NAUMBURG, a City once Imperial, now subject to the House of Saxony, is seated upon the River Sala, where it receives the Unstrut, 25 miles West from Leipsick, and 15 from Mersburg to the South. It is a Bishop's See, under the Archbishop of Magdeburg, and has a Territory of about 20 miles Extent, belonging to it, which was formerly govern'd by its Bishop: But it was yielded to the House of Saxony by the Treaty of Passaw, in 1552. one of which Family is Administrator of the Bishoprick.

ALTENBURG stands upon the River Pleisse, 24 m. from Leipsick to the South, and 46 from Dresden to the West. It was once an Imperial City, but was taken by Frederick Marquis of Misnia in 1308. and united to that Duchy. It has a Castle in which the Dukes of Saxony have some time kept their Palace.

HALL, call'd Halla Saxonum, for distinction, a considerable Town, on account of the profitable Salt-Pits near it. It was at first a small Village and call'd Dobredor, but by reason of the Salt-Pits, encreas'd much, and obtain'd a Charter in 981. from the Emperor Ordo II. and got at last to be an Imperial City; but it has been long exempted, and subjected to its own Duke, with a Territory belonging to it; since fallen to the Archbishop of Magdeburg. and so subject to the Elector of Brandenburg. This City is seated on the Bank of the River Sala, 24 miles North-west from Leipsick on the Side of a pleasant Hill, cover'd with Vines: It is neatly built, and the Inhabitants are civil. The Salt-Pits yield a Toll to the Administrator of Magdeburg, of 500 or 600 Crowns a Week.

The Principality of ANHALT is bounded on the South by the Counties of Hobenstein and Mansfeld, and on the North by the Principality of Halberstadt, and Duchy of Magdeburg, and is extended from East to West the space of 90 miles, tho' very narrow: It is subject to its own Prince, who is of a very ancient Family, from which spring both the Houses of Saxony and Brandenburg. The chief Towns in it are Zerbst, on the Eastern Side of the Elb, about 20 miles from Magdeburg to the West and 50 from Leipsick to the North; the Place of the Prince's Residence.

Bernburg, a fortified Town, seated on the Banks of the Sala about 8 miles from the Elb. This is another Residence of the Prince's; whose Palace is separated from the Town by the River Sala. In 1636. this Town was taken, and the Garrison put to the Sword by the Elector of Saxony.

Dessau, on the Elb, at the Mouth of the Mulda, a strong fortified Town, pleasantly seated, in a fruitful Country, 8 miles from Zerbst to the South, and 20 from Bernburg to the East; in which also the Prince has a Palace.

ERFORD, Erford or Erfurd, lat. Erfordia, aut Erfurtum, the Capital City of Thuringen, is seated on the the Banks of the River Gere, 60 miles West from Lipfick, 60 North from Bamberg, and 70 South from Habesftadt. It is a considerable Place, both on account of the Wealth of its Inhabitants and the Beauty of its Publick Edifices, especially the Churches and Abbeyes, the itarely Cattle call'd Griaxberg, and a famous University. This City hath a large Territory, wherein stand many Villages, all which were subject to the Archbishop of Mentz, but at the Reformation the Inhabitants embraced the Protestant Religion, and put the City under the Protection of the Elector of Saxony; which occasioned great Contentts between those two Princes: At length the Bishop of Mentz, with the Assistance of the French, took it by Force, and oblig'd the Citizens again to receive his Government. However, by the Treaty of Leipsick, 17 of the Villages, its dependencies, were granted to the Elector of Saxony, and the City, with the rest of the Villages, are still subject to the Elector of Mentz.

Mulhausen is an Imperial City, but under the Protection of the Elector of Saxony. It stands at the foot of a Mountain, upon the River Unstruc, near 30 miles from Erfurt to the North-west, 20 from Eysenack to the North, and 10 from the River Weser to the East.

Weimar, a neat, well-built, and a very ancient City, stands 12 miles from Erfurt to the East, in which is a stately Palace, where the Landgrave of Thuringen used to reside. This City gives Title to a Branch of the Family of Saxony.

Jena is a handsome City, seated on the River Sala, 25 miles from Erfurt to the East. It is famous for an University, founded her by John Frederick Elector of Saxony, to which was granted many Privileges by the Emperors Charles V. and Ferdinand; it is in a flourishing state, and has bred many Eminent Men, particularly J. Lipsius the great Philologer. The Town is well fortified, and stands in a pleasant Vale, in which grows plenty of Vines.

Gotha, 16 miles West from Erfurt, the Seat of another Branch of the Saxon Family, who is still Duke of Gotha, and is Lord of this Town, and the Counties of Alenburg, Coburg, Hornburg in Fraconia, and Osteland in Upper Saxony. It is a large wall'd Town, and has a good Trade in the Plant call'd Wood, which is sowed and dressed here, and exported in great Quantities.

Eysenack or Ifenack, Ifenacum, a small City, standing on the River Nesla, near the Borders of Hessen, and distant near 30 miles from Erfurt, and 15 from Gotha to the West. It gives Title to a Duke of the Family of Saxony, and hath an University in it, which was founded 1555.

The County of SCHWARTS BURG is a Tract of Land, of about 40 miles in length and 25 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the S. by Thuringen, on the W. by Naumburg, Mersburg and Hall; the chief Town is Sunderhausen, of which, as well as Frankenhausen, Hessingen, Kirderbruch and Regula, the best Towns in this County, there is nothing considerable.

The small County of HOHENSTEIM lies North of Schwartsburg: Its chief Town is Northhausen, an Imperial City, said to be built in 447. by Miroveis King of France. It stands upon the River Zorge, 40 miles from Erfurt to the North, and is under the Protection of the Duke of Saxony.

STOLBERG is a very small County, lying N. of Schwartsburg, between Hohenstein to the W. and Mansfeldt to the E. Its chief Town is of the same Name.

The County of MANSFELDT is bounded on the West by Stolberg, on the East by the River Sala, on the S. by Thuringen, on the N. by some part of Anhalt, and about 30 miles in length from N. to S. and 15 in breadth. This Country abounds with Mines of several sorts, but particularly of a Mineral, call'd Scheifferslein, which yields much Copper and some Silver. It's possess'd by its Counts, but now with some acknowledgment of Homage to the D. of Saxony. This Family is branch'd out into several Houses, who have divided the Country among 'em; by which means they are not now so considerable as they have been.

The Chief Town is Eisleben, a small City near the Lake call'd Suffe See, 40 miles from Weimar to the North, and 55 miles West from Wittenburg. It has its name from the abundance of Iron-Ore found hereabouts. In this Town Martin Luther was born, A. D. 1483. and died here Anno 1564.

Mansfeldt, whence the County has its Name, is an old and ruinous City, about 5 miles from Eisleben to the North-west. It has a strong Castle on the Top of a Hill, which, being much decayed, was repaired and fortified, A. 1547.

SECT. III. The Lower SAXONY.

The Lower Saxony comprehends, at present, the Duchies of Brunswick, Lunenburg and Lauenburg, the Diocels of Hildesheim, the Principalities of Magdeburg and Halberstadt, the Duchies of Bremen, Ludwig and Mecklenburg, together with that of Holftein, which partly depends on the Jurisdiction of the King of Denmark. Besides these nine principal Parts of the Lower Saxony, there are also many other Sovereign States of a lesser extent, viz, the Duchies of Hannover, Zell Gotingen, Grebenhagen; the Cities of Hamburg, Lubeck &c.

The whole Country is bounded on the North by the German Ocean, Denmark and the Baltick Sea; on the South by Hessen and the upper Saxony, on the East by Pomerania and the Margiuite of Brandenburg, and on the West by Westphalia. It is extended from North to South for the Space of about 200 miles, and from East to West about 220. The most remarkable Rivers are, the Elb, the Weser, the Aller, the Hamma, the Umenon, the Leme, the Ocker, and the Eide. Every Prince is absolute within his Dominions, and generally assumes a Title from thence, excepting the States of the Duchies of Bremen and Ferden whereof the King of Sweden is Administrator; those of the Principalities of Magdeburg and Halberstadt, which depend on the Jurisdiction of the Elector of Brandenburg, and the free Cities of Hamburg and Lubeck. The Lutheran Religion is generally predominant throughout the Lower Saxony, the Princes, Prelates, and even the Abbets of Quiedlinburg, professing it, except the Bishop of Hildesheim and some Abbots and Abbelles that profess the Romish. Tho' the Air be cold, the Land produces Corn and Pasture.

The Lower Saxony, with its Dependencies, hath these chief Cities and Towns, viz.

BRUNSWICK, including the Duchy of Hanover, Principality of Grubenhagen, and Counties of Blackenburg and Reinslein, is bounded on the South by Hesse-Cassel, on the West by the River Mefer, on the North by Lunenburg; and on the East by Magdeburg: The chief Rivers in it are the Leina and the Ocker, besides the Weser which washes its Borders. This Country was anciently part of the Herzian Forest, and there still remain great Woods and Parks, by which the Inhabitants are plentifully furnish'd with Timber and Fuel, and great store of Game. The Corn grows extream high, but there is not a great deal of it, nor is the Country very populous. The Inhabitants are of a large size and very robust, feed coarse and lodge hard; Swine's Fleth, with Wheat or Rye Bread, is their common Diet, inasmuch that they are, by the other Germans, call'd Bacon guts.

Upon the Division of Saxony before-mention'd, this Country and Lunenburg were left to Henry the Lion, whose Grandson Otho was created Duke of them by the Emperor Frederick II. A.D. 1235. But he leaving two Sons, these Duchies were divided in 1264, but upon the Failure of Issue, again united in the year 1368, in the Person of Duke Magnus; whose Sons, being ambitious, parted it again. In the year 1491, this Dukedom of Brunswick was divided by the two Brothers Henry and Erick into equal Shares, whereof Henry's part was known by the name of Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel. In 1584, Erick's Issue failing, the whole Dukedom was united in the House of Wolfenbuttel, and remained so till 1634, that Frederick Ulrich dying without Issue, this Dukedom of Brunswick fell to Augustus Duke of Lunenburg, and then the Duchy of Wolfenbuttel descended to the younger House of Lunenburg. The present Duke, Ernest Augustus, is descended from the House of Hanover, and has succeeded to all the Estates of that Duchy, as well as Lunenburg and Brunswick, and has been lately (Anno 1692) honour'd with the Title of an Elector of the Empire. He was born Anno, 1629, and in 1658, married the Lady Sophia, Sister to our Prince Rupert (being a Protestant) by whom he has had three Sons and a Daughter.

This Family is the only Relict of that famous one of the Guelphs, who were sometime Dukes of Bavaria and Saxony; of the original of which there goes a notable Story as follows. Ferninrudin, Countess of Altorf, upbraided a Woman with Adultery, and made her be punished because she had 12 Children at a Birth: It happen'd that shortly after, she her self was deliver'd of the same number, all Sons; at which she was much concern'd, as fearing the same scandal; and therefore (her Husband being then absent) commanded her Nurse to kill 11 of them; who, accordingly, carrying them secretly out in her Apron, was met by the old Count, and asked, what she had there? The Nurse replied Wolphen Whelps; he not contented with that Answer examin'd farther, and forc'd her to confess the whole Matter: Upon which he enjoy'd the Woman Secretive, and dispos'd of the Children, and six years after produc'd them all together to his Lady and all their Friends, at a Feast he had made for that purpose, and caus'd them all to be named Whelps, which after alter'd to Guelphs.

BRUNSWICK, Brunopolis, Talisvirgum, was first built by Tanguard and Bruno, Dukes of Saxony, A.D. 861. Since when it has been often enlarged, and is now one of the most considerable of the Hanse-towns. It is divided into five several Corporations, each of which hath its Court of Judicature, but unite in Matters relating to the common Interest. It is a rich and populous place, and drives a great Trade in Hides and Mum, which is brew'd here by certain Persons who have the Monopoly, and exported to several Countries. Brunswick claims to be a free, Imperial City, and has several times disput'd with the Duke, who all along claim'd the Sovereignty; on which account it has endur'd many Sieges, the last of which was in 1671, when it was taken by the present Duke, who has ever since kept a good Guard, and built a Citadel, and otherwise strongly fortifi'd it, thro' the Injury of the City; for the Merchants being displeas'd, have remov'd to other places. The Houses are well built, and the Town-houle is very magnificent: The form of the Town is almost square, the River Ocker running through the middle, and is 2 miles in circuit, and surrounded with 2 Walls and 2 Ditches. It is seated in a Plain, near the Northern Bounds of the Country, and is distant 100 miles Erfurd, and 40 from Halberstadt to the North, 70 from the River Elb to the West, 60 from the Weser to the East, and 60 from Magdeburg to the West. Lat. 52. 20.

WOLFENBUTTEL stands upon the Ocker, but 10 miles from Brunswick to the South. It is the ancient Seat of the Dukes of Brunswick. It is divided into two parts, viz, Aix Guelpica, the Duke's Palace, and Henrich Stadt, the Town. In the Palace is a Library exceeding well furnished with valuable Books, founded by the late Duke Augustus; in the Town, the new Church is remarkable, being an admirable Piece of Architecture, and in it are buried 21 Dukes and Dutcheffes of Brunswick. It is defend'd with strong and impregnable Fortifications, and secured by marshy Grounds.

HANOVER, Hanovera, call'd anciently Lawenroda, and Han-over, from a Ferry over the River Leina, on which it stands, 35 miles from Brunswick to the West, and 28 from Zell to the South. It is a strong and populous City, once Imperial, but has long been subject to its Prince. The Inhabitants are much Enrich'd by four yearly Fairs held here: It is the Capital of the Territory of Culenberg.

Göttingen, a City seated on the River Leina, near the Confines of Hesse, 10 miles from the Weser, 60 miles from Hanover to the South, and 20 from Cassel to the North-East.

Hamel, seated on the River Weser, over which it hath a Bridge at the Mouth of the Hamel, is a strong, fortifi'd and well-garison'd Town, being near the Con-finer of Brünswick toward Westphalia, and call'd the Key of this Duke's Dominions; it is distant 45 miles from Göttingen to the North, and near 30 from Hanover to the South. There is a Story of a strange Accident that, they say, happen'd in this Town on the 26th of June, 1284. of a Piper that undertook to rid them of Rats, with which they were very much annoy'd, which he did, it seems, by the power of his Musick; for at the found of his Tabret and Pipe, all the Rats follow'd him out of the Town to the River, where they were drown'd. When he had done his Work, he return'd for his Pay, which the Towns men refused him, pretending it was too much for so little Work: Upon which he went away in a great Rage; and a Year after came again, and playing as before, all the Children follow'd him into the mouth of a Cave, on the top of a neighbouring Hill, and neither Piper nor Children were ever after heard of. This Story the Towns-men relate with great confidence, and there is still to be seen, near this Cave's mouth, a Monument of Stone, with an Inscription expressing the loss of 130 Children, swallow'd quick in that Cave.

Grubenbogen, a Castle near the River Leina, and about 12 miles from Göttingen to the North, has a Territory belonging to it, which is a Dukedom, but subject to the Duke of Brünswick; it is very woody, having been part of the Heremian Forest, and abounds with Pine and Fir-trees. In this Province are rich Mines of Silver, Copper, Lead, and many sorts of Minerals. These Mines were first discover'd in the year 972, as the Germans relate, by a Hunter, who, having ty'd his Horse to a Bush and gone a little from him, at his return found a piece of Ore beat out of the Ground with his Hoof; this Hunter's name was Ramme, whence the Mountain in which this Mine is, was call'd Ramelsberg. In 1045, other Mines were also discovered in the neighbouring Hills; and here are now many Towns inhabited only by Miners. The chief Town of this Duchy is

Helmstadt, a City built by Charles the Great, Anno 782, seated near the Borders of Magdeburg, and 24 miles from Wolfenbüttel to the East, wherein is an University founded by Julius Duke of Brünswick-Wolfenbüttel, A. 1576, which is endow'd with large Privileges; particularly that its Rector should for ever have the Title and Dignity of Count Palatine, and has bred many eminent Men, particularly J. Hofsius Meibermannus, Reineccius, Conringius, &c.

Goslar stands upon the River Gisa, which falls into the Ocker near the Confines of Heildestheim, and is 40 miles distant from Göttingen to the N. and 25 from Brünswick to the S. it is a free and imperial City enjoying large Privileges. The Origin of this City was a Palace built by the Emp. Hen. I. The Trade of it is in cleansing, tempering and vending all sorts of Metals and Minerals dug in the neighbouring Countries.

The Counties of B L A C K E N B U R G, R E I N S T E I N and Q U E I D L I N B U R G, (together with Holenstein, Stolberg and Schwartzburg in the Upper Saxony, already described) were formerly one Province, and call'd Hartingow. It is a cold Country, and has Mountains, on which Snow lies till Midsummer; affords little Corn, but the Valleys are fill'd with Cattel and the Forests with Venison. The Inhabitants are thought the longest Livers in Germany, frequently arriving to the Age of 100 or 110 years. They have Mines of Iron in the Bowels of the Mountains, of which one here call'd Brocken or Braksberg, is esteem'd the highest in Germany.

Betwixt Blackenburg and Hillingrode is a remarkable Cave, call'd Buman's Hole, of which none can find the end, tho' many have travel'd very far in it. Large Bones are frequently found in it, and not many years since a Skeleton of a Man of prodigious Bulk was brought out among other Rarities. There goes a Story of a young Fellow, that seeking after his Cattel in this Cave lost his way, and wandering 9 days together in it, at his return his Hair was chang'd grey, and he told strange Stories of Spirits and Apparitions that he said he had met within it. Here are two great craggy Rocks not far from Blackenburg which naturally represent two Monks in their proper Habit, as exact as if they were carv'd out.

Blackenburg and Reinstein, are two small Counties which lie betwixt Halberstadt and Anhalt. They both receive their names from Castles of which that of Blackenburg stands 36 miles from Wolfenbüttel to the South, and 25 miles from Mansfeld to the North, and is the Hunting-seat of the Duke of Wolfenbüttel. That of Reinstein is old and not considerable: Many other Castles hewn out of Rocks are to be found in these Countries, but are not regarded.

Quidlinburg, a small City, formerly a Hanse-town, now not considerable but for a Lutheran Nunnery, the Abbess whereof is of the House of Austria, and Lady of the City and a small Territory belonging to it. It is distant 8 miles from Blackenburg to the East, and 10 from Halberstadt to the South.

The Bishoprick of H I D E L S S H E I M lying between the two Rivers Leina and Ocker, is surrounded with the Territories of the Duke of Brünswick, and therefore much in his power, tho' properly under the Elector of Cologne as Administrator of Hidelsheim, to whom it was restor'd by the Treaty of Brünswick A. D. 1653, having been for many years before in the hands of the Duke of Brünswick. His Strigan the Bishop, is the immediate Governor of this County, and Protector of the City of Hidelsheim, which is a Hanse-town, and considerable on account of the great Trade in Cora, which they maintain. The Buildings are old and venerable, but neat enough: The Inhabitants are most of them Lutherans, tho' the Bishop be of the Romish Church, and the only one in Brünswick. It is distant 15 miles from Hanover to the South east, 50 from Göttingen to the North, 30 from Zell to the S. and 25 from Brünswick to the South-west.

Peina, a small City, stands on the River Enfse, about 12 miles from Brünswick to the West, and has a strong Castle, the Bulwark of this Bishoprick, on a Hill; a remarkable Battel was fought near it in 1553 between Maurice Elector of Saxony and Albert Marquess of Brandenburg, in which the former lost his life.

The Dukedom of LUNENBURG,

Is bounded on the South with Brünswick on the North with the River Elb, on the East with Brandenburg, and on the West with the Duchy of Bremen and County of Hone; it is full of large Woods and Forests, which abound with Deer and other Game; other parts of the Country are Heath, barren and desart Lands of vast extent. The Inhabitants are the most ritulical of all Germany.

The Government of the Duchy of Lunenbourg as has been already said in the description of Brünswick, hath been all along enjoy'd by the Descendants of Hierri the Lyon and is at present united with that of Brünswick, under the illustrious Prince Ernst Augustus, Duke and Elector of Hanover, Brünswick and Lunenbourg.

LUNENBURG or Luneburg, Lunenburgum, a Hanse-town, and the principal City of this Sovereign Dutchy, is seated on the River Ilmenow, at the distance of 8 miles from the Elb, and 35 from Lubeck to the South, 60 from Bruswick to the North, and 30 from Hamburg to the East. It is a fair City, of an oblong Form, and about two miles in circumference; the Streets are broad, and the Houses well built. The Town hall is a handsome Building, over against which stands the Duke's Palace; the Bridge over the River is a very stately one. There are famous Salt-springs near the Town, out of which great store of Salt is made, and affords the Inhabitants a considerable Trade. The Castle that stands on an adjacent Mountain, call'd Kalchberg, they say, is 124 years older than the City, which was built by Henry the Lion, in 1190.

ZELL, the Capital of a Dutchy possessed by a Branch of the Family of Lunenburg, is seated on the River Aller, where the Fuhse falls into it, 35 miles S. from Lunenburg, 28 N. from Hanover, and 29 N. E. from Bruswick. The Duke's Palace is a square Building, adorn'd with very pleasant Gardens, Orchards and Grottos. It is more round and was built A. D. 1485. In it are held the chief Courts of Judicature.

Bardewick, but 5 m. distant from Lunenburg to the N. was anciently a strong and very populous City, but now a Poor Village only. The Cathedral Church is the only one now left of 9 that were formerly in this Town, in which is still a College of 8 Residuary Canons.

Harburg is a strong Town upon the Elb, 30 miles West from Lunenburg; it has a Castle, and is the strongest Frontier of this Country: The Town is but thinly inhabited, and not considerable.

Ulzen, a little neat Town in the midway between Lunenburg and Zell, was formerly call'd Lewenwald, and had this name of Ulzen from a Monastery in the neighbourhood call'd Olden Stade. In the year 1646. it was destroy'd by Fire, but is the greatest part rebuilt more splendid than formerly. The Inhabitants pretend, That the English Saxons went from hence, and that a Ship of Tin gilt, that was to be seen in the Market-place before the Fire, was hung up in remembrance of it, by some of them that return'd.

Walsbrode, at first only a Monastery, built by one Walo Prince of Anhalt, A. 986. but now a considerable Town, driving a good Trade in Honey, Wax, Wool and Beer; it stands in a pleasant Valley encompass'd with Mountains and Woods, 25 miles from Zell to the East, near the Borders of Ferden. The Counties of Hoey and Diepbolt, already described, are subject to the Duke of Lunenburg,

The Dukedom of BREMEN and FERDEN.

Eastward from Lunenburg, and between the Rivers Elb and Weser, lies the Dutchy of Bremen, which was formerly an Archbishoprick, and the whole Country subject to its Prelate, till about the year 1644. this Country was conquer'd by the Sweed, and by the Treaty of Munster the Archbishoprick of Bremen, with the Bishoprick of Ferden, were granted to that King, and turn'd into a Dukedom: But tho' this is spoken of the Country in general, it is not meant of every part of it; for the City of Bremen is free and has a Territory of its own, the Citizens of Hamburg have the two Forts of Ritzentutel and New Werck, and a part of it belongs to the Dutchy of Sax-Lawenburg, as will be seen more particularly in our Description.

The Soil of this Country is in the middle Parts sandy and barren Heath, but the outer part towards the two Rivers is very fertile, and abounds with pleasant Fields and Meadows.

The Inhabitants are reckon'd as good Soldiers as any in Germany; and 'tis said of the Wustlanders, the Inhabitants of that part of the Country that lies to the Sea-side, that they will Fight and Drink with the best Men in Germany.

BREMEN, Brema & Bremenfis Civitas, which gives name to this Dukedom, is a very considerable, large and well-built City, seated in a fruitful Plain on the Banks of the Weser, 70 miles from Zell to the West, and 60 from Emden to the East, 90 from Munster to the North, and 60 from Hamburg to the South-west. It is very strong, for besides the Walls and Castle, the situation affords them a good Defence, the low Grounds about it being easily overflowed from the Weser.

It is a free, imperial City, and reckon'd the third of the Hanse-towns. Charles the Great founded the Archbishoprick, and made it the Metropolis of the North. The Emperor Henry V. A. 1111. granted the Citizens great Privileges in reward of their valiant Performances in the Holy War. It receiv'd the Reformation in 1552. and zealously defended it against their Archbishop. Upon which account it was besieged by order of the Emperor Charles V. in the year 1547. but the Citizens so valiantly defended themselves, that Goenghen Governour of Zeeland, who commanded in chief, was kill'd, and the Duke of Bruswick, who succeeded him, was forc'd at last to raise the Siege, after near a year's labour in vain. It is govern'd by four Burgo-Masters and 24 Common-Council men, who also judge all Law-suits between the Citizens. The River Weser divides it into two parts, of which that on the North-side is the Old City, and the other is call'd the New; these are join'd again by Wooden Bridges, the biggest of which has a curious Engine on it that raises the Water and distributes it all over the Town. The Streets of the old Town are large and center in the Market-place, wherein stands an old Image of Gigantick Bulk, call'd Statua Rolandina, on which is an ancient Inscription importing it to be a Testimonial of the Liberty granted by Charles the Great and other Emperors, to this City. These Statues have been set up in many Cities, and by the Germans (tho' with little reason) said to be the Image of a certain General nam'd Roland, employ'd by Charles the Great in the Conquest of these Countries; in whose Honour he order'd these Statues to be set up, and made the Condition of their Tenure of certain Privileges. In the old Town stands also the Town-house and the ancient Cathedral Church dedicated to S. John, wherein they shew the Tomb, as they say, of Wilhelm, an English Priest, who was sent over into Germany by Egbert Archbishop of York, at the request of Charles the Great, to convert these Infidels; who, after he had labour'd many years with great success, was made the first Archbishop of this See, and died A. D. 790. In the new Town are the Arsenal and the Gymnasium or small University; at first a Free-School, built soon after the Reformation, and endow'd by the Citizens; which encreasing by degrees, is now a noted University, and has educated several famous Men, particularly Chytraus, Pezelius, Pierius, Mat. Martinus, and Jo. Cocceius. This City, by means of the River, is much frequented with Merchant Ships from Holland and other Nations, by which they export their own Commodities, Corn, Minerals, Wool, Timber, Fish, Leather, &c. and receive those of other Countries, which they, by the same River, transmit to the other Provinces of Germany. The Territory of this City extends about 8 or 10 miles round.

Stade, the next considerable City in this Dukedom, is situated on the River Zwina near the Elb, in a fruitful Country and wholesome Air, about 50 miles from Bremen to the N. and 25 from Hamburg to the W. It is a very strong Place, being fortified with vast Ramparts, Bulwarks, and a strong Castle: It has a commodious Haven, into which larger Ships can enter than are able to get up to Hamburg. This City hath been endow'd with great Privileges; particularly it was an Asylum, or place of refuge for all Offenders, and had a right to demand a Toll of Ships passing up the Elb; besides, it is a Hanse-town: By all which means, no wonder it was once rich and populous. But it seems Hamburg out-strip'd it, and this place became so poor, that they were forc'd to sell its great Privileges to that City, and put themselves under the Protection of the Archbishop of Bremen, and it is now subject to the King of Sweden. It was anciently the Capital of a County subject to its own Earl, which was annex'd to the Archbishoprick by Philip Duke of Schwaben and Earl of Stade, about the year 1240. After its decay above-mentioned, our English Merchants, upon some Abuse offer'd them at Hamburg, remov'd hither; which reviv'd its Trade, and in a little time made it again rich and populous, and it is at present in good condition. The Town is well built, and the Market-place, Town-hall and Churches, are worth a Traveller's sight.

Buxtehude, another Hanse-town, is seated on the River Essa near the Elb, in a very fruitful and pleasant Country, 15 miles from Stade to the W. and as many from Hamburg to the E. It is a Granary to Hamburg, that City receiving a great part of its Provisions from this.

Bremesfırde, a wall'd Town, on the Road betwixt Bremen and Stade, being distant 25 m. to the N. from the first, and 15 to the S. from the latter. It was once the Palace of the Archbishop, and has a Castle, wherein, because it commands the neighbouring Plains, the Sweeds keep a good Garrison. The Town is otherwise not considerable, having little or no Trade.

Otersberg, a small fortified Town defended by a strong Castle, which was for sometime the place of Residence of the Archbishop, stands 16 miles from Bremen to the East.

Ruzzenbittel is a strong Fort at the mouth of the Elb, 32 miles to the North-west from Stade, and not 10 miles from the utmost point of Land of this Country. It belongs to the Hamburgers, who have also another small Fort near it, call'd New-Werck, and a small Territory round them.

The Duke of Sax-Lawenburg is Lord of that part of this Country call'd Hadelland, which is the most N. E. part of it, but contains nothing considerable enough to deserve a particular Description. The extent of it the Reader may judge by the Map, when he knows that Nubenbuys on the Elb and Carlsfıade on the Weser belong to the Sweed. Hadler, which gives name to the Country, and Otersfıorp, are the two best Towns in it.

The Principality of FERDEN or VERDEN, formerly a Bishoprick, and now subject to the Sweed, as above-said, is situate next to Lunenburg, and bounded on the W. by the Weser; it was made a Bishoprick by Charles the Great. The chief Town of the same name stands upon the River Aller, which falls into the Weser, and is distant 42 miles from Zell to the W. and 27 from Bremen to the East. It is supplied with all Foreign Commodities by Barges from Bremen: The City has nothing very considerable in it. It has been several times taken, viz. by Count Tilly, in 1626. by the Imperialists, in 1631. In 1676, it was seized by the Duke of Lunenburg, but restor'd to the Sweed, in 1629, to whom it still remains.

Rotenberg, a small City on the River Wein, stands in the Bounds of this Principality and near the borders of it, 15 miles from Ferden to the North. It was at first the Bishop's Palace, which was fortified in the year 1500. and the small Village near it wall'd in and made a City; which since is considerably encreas'd and grown a place of some Trade and well inhabited.

The Cities of HAMBURG and LUBECK.

HAMBURG, that flourishing rich and populous City, is seated on the North-side of the River Elb, at the distance of 40 miles from Lubeck to the S. W. and 65 from Bremen to the N. E. and 30 from Lunenburg to the N. W. 60 from Zell to the N. and 72 from the mouth of the Elb; which River makes it a most commodious Haven, being so deep that Ships of very great Burden can come up to the very Walls of the Town, and the Tide flows up 16 miles above it. It is the chief Port and hath been long the greatest Mart-town of Germany: The Haven is continually full of Ships, and the Exchange daily crowded with Merchants. The Town is divided into two parts, the old and the New, but both close together and parted only by a Wall, and both well fortified. The Buildings are of Brick, and exceeding high and stately; the chief Church, formerly a Cathedral, is dedicated to S. Peter, and was built about 830. Several of the Earls of Holfstein and Schwabenburg lie buried in it. In S. Catherine's Church is a Pulpit of white Marble curiously carved, and adorn'd with Figures of Alabaster and Ornaments of Gold. The Poor and Sick are extraordinarily well provided for in Hamburg, by the many Hospitals liberally endow'd, of which there are no less than 6 for the maintaining old, decrepit, poor People; for curing the Sick, for educating poor Childring, to receive poor Strangers fallen sick in Travelling, and for the maintenance of maimed Seamen: Besides which, care is taken of the Widows and Children of those that lose their Lives in the Service of the Publick.

The Trade of the City consists in all manner of Foreign Goods, as well as those of the product of Germany, the former being receiv'd by Ships from all parts of the World, and from hence convey'd up the Elb to the heart of Germany; and the Commodities of the several parts of the Empire return'd by the same River, and transported to other Nations, to the great Profit of the Inhabitants, who are the Managers of this vast Traffick. Our English Merchants having brought great Profit to this City, are treated with great Civility and Respect, and have the Privilege of trying and deciding Controverties among themselves, before their own Resident; and are permitted the free Exercise of their Religion, which is denied to other Nations. The Inhabitants, being Lutherans, forbid the Exercise of the Romish Religion.

This rich and powerful City is a free and imperial State, and independent of any power but the Emperor's, to whom they pay a small Homage. They enact Laws, punish Criminals even to death, levy Taxes, make League and War as they please, by a Grant of the Emperor Frederick I. and confirm'd by Ferdinand II. The Citizens of Hamburg are exempted from all Tolls and Customs upon the Elb, betwixt their own City and the Ocean; notwithstanding which, the King of Denmark has sometimes compell'd their Ships to pay Toll at his Castle of Gluckfıadt, which occasioned great Content. This was made up in the year 1645, and the Hamburgers permitted to re-assume their ancient Privileges, upon the payment of 120000 Rix Dollars to that King.

The Government of this City is in its own Magistrates, who are 4 Burgomasters, 20 Schepins or Aldermen, and 12 Common-council, call'd die Oboralten, or chief Elders. These upon extraordinary Occasions call to their Assistance 60 more eminent Citizens, call'd, The Elders of the City; and if it be too difficult a matter for them to determine, the whole Commonality of Freemen are assembled. This City is able to arm 75000 Men.

It was taken by Waldemar Duke of Sleswick about the year 1200. who gave it Albrecht Earl of Orlimumd, of whom the Citizens bought their Liberty, and so became a free State; which was several times confirm'd by the Earls of Holfstein and Schawenburg, his Posterity, to the last of that Family, who died A. 1459. after which, the Province of Holfstein falling into the Hands of Cristian I. King of Denmark, the Hamburgers contracted a League of Friendship with that Prince, whose Successors have often endeavour'd to have the Protection of this City, but could never obtain it. In the year 1510. the City of Hamburg was declared Free and Imperial by the Emperor Maximilian in the Diet, and the Duke of Holfstein summon'd to make good his Pretensions to it, or renounce them for ever. In fine, the City has to this day preserv'd its Freedom, which it has been the better able to do, by reason of the continual Jealousies between the two Northern Crowns; for the Sweed being Master of the South-side of the Elb, as the Dane is of the North, what mischief this does them from Gluckstadt, will be reveng'd by the other from Stade. However, the Dane has several times fleec'd them; in the year 1679 he got 220000 Rix Dollars of them, to take them again into his Favour, as 'twas term'd in the Treaty; and in the year 1686. he again brought an Army and besieg'd it, but was bought off.

LUBECK, Lubeca & Lubecum, an Imperial City, and the Capital of all the Hanse-towns, is conveniently seated near the Sea and on the Banks of the Trave, which having receiv'd the Waters of a lesser River into its Channel, form a kind of Marsh round about the Walls, and passing through the City conveys Vessels of as large size as any that sail upon the Baltick, up to the Town, which by that means, is a place of great Traffick. It was heretofore only a small Town, built by Adolphus Count of Holfstein, under the Reign of the Emperor Conrad III. from whom it was taken by Henry the Lyon Duke of Saxony, afterwards conquer'd by Waldemar Duke of Sleswick; but being ill treated by the Danes, the Citizens expel'd them, and put themselves under the Protection of the Emperor Frederick II. who constituted it an imperial and free City, A. 1209. and it is at present one of the principal ones of Germany. It is distant 10 miles from the Coasts of the Baltick Sea, 37 from Hamburg to the North-east, and as many from Wismer to the West. The Streets are very fair and adorn'd with divers magnificent Buildings, the chief whereof are the Cathedral dedicated to S. John, the Collegiate Churches of the Virgin Mary, S. James, S. Peter, &c. It's Episcopal See under the Metropolitan of Bremen, was translated hither from Oldenburg, A. D. 1162. but the Bishops have been Protestants ever since the year 1561. when the Reformed Religion was introduc'd here by Dietlerus of Revenlon, and a Custom hath prevail'd, That the Administration of the Bishoprick of Lubeck should devolve as an Appenage or Inheritance on the younger Sons of the Duke of Holfstein Gottorp, the shadow of an Election being only left to the Chapter, whence they are stiled Dukes of Eutin, from a Town about 4 miles from hence so called, wherein this Prelate usually Resides, and which was annexed to the Episcopal See by Adolphus II.

Count of Holfstein, when it as yet retain'd the name of Oldenburg. The City is Govern'd by twelve Burgomasters, who are Civilians and Gentlemen. The Common-Council are compos'd of Lawyers and Merchants, Mechanicks being excluded. A remarkable Treaty of Peace was concluded at Lubeck. between the Emperor and the King of Denmark, A. D. 1629.

The Duchy of LAFFENBURG lies on the Banks of the Elb, between the Dukedoms of Holfstein, Mecklenburg and Lunenburg, and is subject to its own Duke, who is of the Family of the ancient Dukes of Saxony. The chief Town of the same Name is seated on the River Elb, 25 miles from Lubeck to the S. 35 from Hamburg to the East, and 15 from Lunenburg to the North. It is said to have been built by Henry the Lyon Duke of Saxony, and thence call'd Looburgum; but in the Wars against that Prince it being much damaged, Bernard of Anhalt, who succeeded him, re-edified, enlarg'd and strengthened it, and gave it to John his Second Son, with this Duchy; from whence the last Duke of Sax-Lawenburg was descended, who dying in the year 1692. and leaving no Issue Male, the Succession to this Duchy hath been claim'd by the Elector of Saxony and other Princes.

Ratzeburg, seated on a Lake of the same name, 15 miles from Lawenburg to the North, and 12 from Lubeck to the South, is the See of a Bishop, under the Archbishop of Bremen, planted by Henry the Lyon, when he conquer'd these parts. It was subject to its Bishop before the Treaty of Westphalia, A. D. 1648. by which the Jurisdiction of it was divided between the Dukes of Mecklenburg and Lawenburg, the Town being given to the former, and the Cattle to the latter. This Town receiv'd the Augustian Confession, A. 1566. It is the Capital of a Country of the same name, and the ancient Burial-place of the Dukes.

To this Duke, as hath been already said, some part of the Dukedom of Bremen is subject, as are also, Frankenhausen, Sassenhausen, and some other Towns on the Elb.

The Dukedom of MECKLENBURG.

The Dukedom of Mecklenburg is situate between the Duchies of Holfstein and Sax-Lawenburg to the West, the Baltick Sea to the North, Pomerania to the East, and Brandenburg to the South. It is a County reasonably large, and stor'd with Corn, Fruits, Fish and Fowl, but in an unpleasant Air, being not wholsom in the Summer, and extream Cold in the Winter: The ancient Inhabitants were the Vandals. At present the Country is divided between the two Dukes of Swerin and Gustrow. This Division was made in the year 1592. for the sakes of the two Sons of John III. the Eldest seated in Swerin, and the Youngest in Gustrow.

Swerin, seated upon a Lake of the same name, is distant 40 miles from the River Elb to the North, 20 from the Baltick Sea to the South, and 35 from Lubeck to the East: It was built by Henry the Lyon, A. D. 1163. who bestow'd it on Guntzel one of his Generals, with the Lordships belonging thereto, and made him Earl of Swerin, but his Family ending in 1355. it was annex'd to Mecklenburg. The Bishop's See, which had before been at Mecklenburg, was about the year 1260 remov'd to this City, at the request of Henry, who built the Cathedral and Library and endow'd it, since which time there was a continual Succession till the Treaty of Munster, when the Bishoprick was Seculariz'd. In this City the Duke of Mecklenburg Swerin keeps his usual Residence.

Mecklenburg is at present a small inconsiderable Village near Wismer, tho' anciently a large City, and gave name to this Dukedom. There are some little remains Remains of Ruines to be seen for some miles round.

Gustrow, the place of Residence of the Duke of Mecklenburg Gustrow, is a strong well fortified Town, and stands 35 miles from Swerin to the East, and 18 from Rostock to the South.

Rostock, a Free Imperial City and Hanse-Town, but under the Protection of the Duke of Mecklenburg, is seated on the River Warna, which 8 miles below it falls into the Baltick Sea, and makes it a reasonable good Port, which was well frequented by Merchants Ships; but since the Treaty of Munster the Sweeds have built a Fort at the mouth of the River, and exact a Toll on all Ships that pass by, to the great decay of the Trade of this Town. An University was founded here by the Dukes of Mecklenburg, Anno 1419. which is now one of the most flourishing in Germany. It stands 16 miles from Gustrow to the North and 36 from Wisnar to the East.

Wisnar, a Hanse-Town, is seated at the bottom of a Bay of the Baltick Sea, 12 miles from Swerin to the N. Henry de Mecklenburg about the year 1266. establish'd the same manner of Government here as was at Lubeck, by which it quickly grew rich, and the Haven being convenient, it was made the Harbour of the Men of War belonging to the Hanseatick Society, and the Town very strongly fortified. This City was granted to the Sweed by the Treaty of Munster, and was taken from him by the Dane in 1675. By the last Treaty of Peace between those two Princes, it was agreed to be deliver'd to the Sweed upon payment of certain Sums of Money, which it seems are not yet paid, for the Town still remains in the hands of the King of Denmark.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Circle of WESTPHALIA.

THIS Circle lies on the West-side of the River Weser, from the German Ocean on the North, to the Province of Hessen on the South, and between the Lower Saxony on the East, and the Netherlands on the West. The utmost extent of it may be reckon'd about 200 miles from North to South, and from East to West in some parts 100. in others 150 miles; which Extents comprehends many Sovereignities, viz. the Principality of East Friseland and Bishopricks of Munster, Osnabrug and Paderborn; the Dutchies of Cleeve and Fuliers, with several Smaller States, as is more particularly express'd in the Table annex'd.

It was anciently inhabited by the Saxons, and by them call'd Westvoelden, from its situation on the West-side of the Weser, as the Country on the other side was call'd Oost-velden: From hence, some affirm, the Saxons came that Invaded England; and many Arguments, not altogether improbable, have been made by some Learned Germans to prove it. But since Mr. Camden, who was so indefatigable an Enquirer into, and so excellent a Judge of Antiquity, enclines to the common Opinion, that they came from the most Northern part of Saxony, it is most reasonable to be concluded by him, and reject the Arguments of others, how plausible soever they may seem.

When Charles the Great had conquer'd the Saxons, and planted Christianity among them, he erected several Bishopricks, to which he gave Lands for their support. In the part we are speaking of, we find three very considerable ones, besides that of Liege, who have Sovereign Princes; they were not made altogether so potent in his time, but encreas'd their Dominions at the general Partition that was made of the great Dukedom of Saxony, when Henry the Lyon was Proscrib'd; 'twas then that the Bishop of Munster enlarg'd his Country, and that the Archbishop of Cologne obtain'd that part of Westphalia which he still holds, and by that part of it stiles himself Duke of Westphalia. The other Sovereignities are the County of East Friseland, the County of Oldenburg, the Principality of Minden, the Counties of Hoye, Lippe, Ravensburg, &c. together with the Dutchy of Cleeve, Fuliers and Berg; all which have been erected at several times, upon several occasions, which we have not room here particularly to shew.

The Air, especially in the Northern part, is very Cold, and great part of the Ground is Marshy, or Barren; however Corn and Pasture is produc'd in plenty; but the Fruit is very ordinary, and serves chiefly to feed the Hogs, whereof this Country hath good store, and of an excellent Kind; so that the Bacon which they send abroad, is very much esteem'd. The chief Rivers are the Weser, the Emms, the Lippe, the Roers, the Aa, &c. The Accommodations a Traveller may meet with here, is prettily enough express'd in this Distick, very common in Germany, viz.

Hopitium Vile, Groof Broot, dun Bier, lange Milen,
Sunt in Westphalia: Qui non vult credere, Loop daer.

That is,
Who Travels in Westphalia's sure to find, vile.
Long Miles, small Beer, course Bread and Lodging

The Circle of Westphalia is thus divided;

The Bishoprick of Munster, wherein the chief Towns are

}	Munster,
	Kloppenberg,
	Vecht,
	Meppen,
	Tilzig,
Koesfeldt.

The Dutchy of Westphalia, subject to the Elector of Cologne. See the Division of it in the account of the Dominions of that Prince.

The Bishoprick of Osnabrug,

}	Osnabrug,
	Iburg,
	Paderborn,

The Bishoprick of Paderborn,

}	Lippesburg,
	Warburg,
	Hoxter.

The Abbey of Corbey,

	C

The County of Bentham, Bentham.

The Dukedom of Clevee,	{ Clevee, Orsoy, Embrich, Calsar, Rees, Santen, Wesel, Meurs, C. Genep, Duisburg, &c.
The Dutchy of Juliers,	{ Juliers, or Gulick, Aken, or Aix la Chapelle, Duren.
The Dutchy of Berg,	{ Dufeldorp.
The County of Mark,	{ Dortmund, Unna, Ham, Soest.
The County of Lippe,	{ Lippe, Ditbhold, Horn, Lemgow.
The County of Ravensburg,	{ Ravensburg, Herwoden, Bilevelt.
The County of Schaumburg,	{ Schaumburg, Saxhagen, Buckenburgh, Oldendorp.
The Counties of	{ Hoya, Diepholt, Lingen, Delmenborst, Tecklenburg, Steinfurt, Ravestein.

The BISHOPRICK of MÜNSTER is stretched out on both sides the River Eems, from the Borders of the County of Emden on the North, to the Dutchy of Clevee, County of Mark, and Dutchy of Westphalia on the South, being in length near 100 miles. On the East it is bounded by the Counties of Delmenborst, & Diepholt, the Bishopricks of Osnabrug and Paderborn, and the Counties of Ravensburg and Lippe. On the West it hath the Province of Overissel, the County of Bentem, and the County of Zurphen, containing in breadth in some parts 60. in others 40. and in some parts not above 20 miles. This Province is entirely subject to the Bishop, who is a Count of the Empire, and a powerful Prince, being able to maintain an Army of 15000 Men. The chief Cities and Towns in his Dominions are these, viz.

MÜNSTER, Monasterium, olim Miningroda, which is reckon'd the Capital of the Circle of Westphalia, takes its name from a Monastery built here by Charles the Great. It is pleasantly situated in a large Plain, on the Banks of the River Aa, which falls into the Eems, a little below the Town. This was an Imperial City and Hanse-Town, but hath been subject to the Bishop since 1661. It is adorn'd with a stately Cathedral, a College belonging to the Jesuits, and other fair Buildings; and is Fortified with a strong Castle and regular Out-works. An Insurrection of the Anabaptists here in the last Age was very remarkable; for these furious Enthusiasticks, under the Conduct of a Sanctified Taylor, call'd John of Leyden, seized the City, turn'd out the Magistrates, and Lorded it at pleasure for a Year's time: But at last their doughty Prince was taken Prisoner, and duly rewarded with a publick Execution, whereby the publick Peace was restor'd in the Year 1534. And in this Age, this City hath been made famous by a memoorable Treaty in it held, and a Peace concluded between the Emperor and Princes of Germany, which put an end to the Civil War first began between the Emperor and the Elector Palatine, but had at last engag'd most of the Princes, and miserably harras'd all Germany, from about the year 1618. till 1648. in which year this Westphalian Peace was made. Munster stands 90 miles South from the German Ocean, 60 miles West from the River Weser, as many East from the Rhine, and 120 North from the Maine, in the Lat. of 52 deg. and Longit. 27 deg.

Kloppenburg stands at the head of the little River Soeste, near the borders of the County of Oldenburg, 65 miles North from Munster. It is a strong Fortified Town, but was taken by the Sweeds in 1635. and recover'd soon after by the Bishop, to whom it is still subject.

Vecht, the Capital of a small Barony, formerly govern'd by its own Lord, stands near the borders of the County of Deipholt, 15 miles S. E. from Kloppenburg. Meppen, a strong fortified Town, stands on the River Hase, where it falls into the Embs, 25 miles S. E. from Kloppenburg. It was taken by the Dutch in 1587. but regain'd, and since, together with Kloppenburg, and another Fort call'd Hafelmuinen, made over to the Bishop of Munster, by the Counts of Tecklenburg, to whom they then belonged.

Tilligt, which stands near the Embs, 10 miles West from Munster, was made famous by a Convention of the States of Munster, held in it, in 1532.

Koelsfeldt is a small Hanse-Town on the River Berkel, 20 miles East from Munster.

The County of Emden, Emmerland, or EAST-FRIESLAND, is bounded on the North and East by the German Ocean, on the West by the County of Oldenburg, and on the South by the Bishoprick of Munster. This was part of the Kingdom of the ancient Frisons; but this part was made a Province of Germany by Charles the Great, and in 1453. Ulrich the Governor of it was made Count, and his Family have since been Princes of it to the present Count Christian Everard.

EMBDEN, Embda, Amasia aut Amisia, the Capital of East Frizeland, is seated near the mouth of the River Embs, and on the Bay call'd Dollaert, at the distance of 25 miles from Groningen to the East, 60 from Bremen to the West, and 100 from Munster to the North. It hath a very convenient and deep Haven, and the People are of an industrious nature, it is therefore a place of good Trade, and much resorted to by Merchant Ships from Foreign parts: Our Merchants, upon their removal from Antwerp, brought hither the Staple, or chief Ware-house for Englisch Cloth, but being ill-us'd, remov'd it to Hamburg. The Houses here are generally well-built, and the Stadthuys, or Town-hall, is very Magnificent. This City was formerly subject to the Count of Frizeland, but it hath thrown off his Authority, and is now a Free-State, under the Protection of the Hollanders. It is defended by two strong Castles, a Wall with Battions and regular Bulwarks, and a double Ditch round about.

Norden, a pleasant Port-Town, about 15 miles N. from Emden, is well-built, but not fortified. The Harbour is not deep enough to receive Ships of any great Burden.

Aurich, in the middle between Emden and Norden, is the place where the Supream Court of Judicature for this County is held. Here is a Castle belonging to the Count, and a slight Wall round the Town.

Efen, 12 miles North from Norden, is defended by a strong Castle.

Münster is a good large Town, about 7 or 8 miles West from Efens, both formerly Baronies, but devolved on the Count of Friezland. This was once a place of good Trade, but now much declined.

Jever, about 10 miles West from Efens, is a fair Town, and gives Title to a Baron. It has a good strong Castle, and by means of the River Hoek, which falls into the Ocean 10 miles below, it hath acquir'd a pretty good Trade. This Barony is now subject to the Count of Oldenburg.

On the West of Emdden lyes the Country of OLDENBURG, a poor barren Country, extend'd along the Banks of the Weser, near 50 miles in length, and 25 in breadth. Its chief Town of the same name is seated on the River Hunte, at the distance of 35 miles from Emdden to the West, and as many from Bremen to the East. It is well Fortified with Walls and Ditches, and a strong well-built Castle, which is the Seat of its Earl. The Houses are very mean, but the place hath a pretty good Trade by the means of the River, which falling into the Weser, Ships of Burden can come up into the Town.

DELMENHORST, the Capital of a small County, lying next to Oldenburg on the South-east, is a strong fortified Town, but otherwise not considerable. It stands upon the River Dilma, 16 miles West from Oldenburg, and 10 East from Bremen.

DIEPHLOT, a small County, lyes on the South of Delmenhorst, and between Munster on the West, and Hoye on the East. It is now subject to the Duke of Lunenburg. The chief Town of the same name is seated near the Lake call'd Dummor, out of which the River Hunte arises, and passes by this Town, which is distant 40 miles from Oldenburg to the South, and 35 from the Weser to the West.

HOYE, a County on the Banks of the Weser, East of Diepholt, and South of Bremen, was Govern'd by its own Lords, til 1582. when the last Count dying, it was parted among several Princes. Hoye, the chief Town, (a small place, but well Fortified) with Nieburg, Lavenaw, and Bruchausen, became subject to the Duke of Lunenburg; & the Forts of Selzenaw, Ezenburg, and 5 more Towns, to the House of Brunswick; and Freudenburg and Uebe to the Landgrave of Hesse.

MINDEN, the Capital of a small Principality, is a large rich Hanse-Town, standing on the Weser, 55 miles from Bremen to the South, and 35 from Osnaburg to the East. This Principality was given to the Elector of Brandenburg at the Treaty of Munster. It is a good Country, and produces plenty of Corn; the extent of it is about 25 miles in length, and 20 in breadth.

The Bishoprick of OSNABRUCK lyes between Minden on the East, and munster on the West, Diepholt on the North, and Ravensburg on the South, and in the middle between the two Rivers Weser and Embs. Its extent from North to South is 45 miles, and from East to West 25 miles. It is a fruitful Country, and subject to its Bishop, who is a Count of the Empire.

Osnabruck, Osenburg, Osnabrugum, aut Osnabrucum, the Capital, is subject to the Bishop, though call'd a Hanse-Town. It stands upon the River Hase in a fruitful Valley, 30 miles from Munster to the North-east, and 60 from Oldenburg to the South; it has a Fort for its defence call'd S. Peter's Castle. This City was Honour'd with a Treaty of Peace between the Emperor and the King of Sweden, in the year 1648. wherein an Agreement was made concerning all the Affairs of the Protestants, and the Bishopricks made alternative between the Roman Catholicks and Lutherans, in favour of the House of Brunswick.

Iburg, stands about 12 miles South from the City, and is the place where the Bishop resides.

TECKLENBURG, a strong Castle and Fort, stands about 10 miles West from Osnaburg, and is the Capital of a small County, formerly under its own Counts; now subject to that of Bentham.

SCHAUMBERG, or Schaumburg, an old Castle on the top of a Hill, on the North-side of the Weser 45 miles from Hoye to the South, and 50 from Osnaburg, and 16 from Minden to the East, gives name to a County of 25 miles extent from North to South, and 18 from East to West, which lies on the East of Minden, and South of Hoye; the River Weser passes cross it; besides which it is water'd with the Rivers Hunne, Awe, Cassaw and Exter; these yield the Inhabitants abundance of Fish, and the Country plenty of Corn, Hay, Timber and Venition: Here are also Quarries of Stone, which they send abroad, and some Mines of Allum, Coal, &c. This County is subject to the house of Lippe.

Saxenbagen, or Sassenbagen, a Fort and Town in the most Northern part of this County.

Buckenburg, the Seat of the second Branch of the House of Lippe, who are thence still'd Counts of Lippe Bukenburg.

Oldenburg, on the banks of the Weser, a small but strong Town, 5 miles from Schaumburg; it repell'd the Imperial Forces in 1633. but was taken by them in 1639. The Counts of Lippe have a Custom house here to receive Duty paid by all Vessels that pass this way.

LIPPE, or Liepladt, is a very strong and well fortified Town, seated on the River Lippe, 45 miles from Osnaburg to the South, and 35 from Munster to the East. This place was besieg'd by the French in the War of 1674. but defended it self so well that they were forc'd to raise the Siege. It is the Capital of a Country which lies between Ravensburg to the North, and Paderborn to the South, a narrow Tract of Land, in length from East to West about 50 miles, and in breadth 15 or 20. Its Counts are of a very ancient Family, and are not only Lords of this County, but of several other places in the Neighbourhood.

Diethmold, or Dietmelle, as 'tis writ in the Maps, 30 miles from Lippe to the North-east, and 25 from Minden to the South, is the place of Residence of the Eldest House of Lippe, but not considerable on any other account.

Horn, an old Town near Diethmold, once subject to Counts of its own, now to the Count of Lippe.

Lemgow, a rich and near Hanse-Town on the River Pega, 7 miles North from Dietmelle, once subject to the Bishop of Paderborn, by whom made over to the Counts of Lippe, on whom it hath still some dependence, but hath obtained many Privileges.

The Bishoprick of PADERBORN is bounded on the North with Lippe, on the South with Hesse, Cassel and Waldeck, and on the West with Munster and Westphalia, and contains in it 24 Market-Towns, 20 Castles, 54 Parishes, and 16 Monasteries, which are all subject to the Bishop.

PADERBORN, Paderborna, aut Padrabranna, stands near the source of the River Lippe, from whence it is distant only 16 miles to the South, 30 from Corn, 45 from Cassel to the North west, and 50 from Munster to the South-east, and is handsomely built and well fortified. The Emperor Charlemagne made it an Episcopal See, under the Metropolitan of Metz; and held a Convention or Parliament there. A. C. 777. It was a free City, and one of the Hanseatick Society; but the Bishop hath been Temporal as well as Spiritual Lord of it, and of the whole Diocess, ever since the year 1604. Theodore of Ewstemburg, Bishop of Paderborn, built the adjacent Castle of Neubaus or Nienbus near the confluence of the Lippe and the Alme, A. D. 1590. which serves as an Episcopall Palace; he also founded an University in the City, in 1592.

Lippeburg, about 5 miles from Paderborn, standing on the edge of a great Heath call'd die Senne, has a stately Cattle belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Paderborn, who are Lords of the Town. The River Lippe springs near this Castle.

Warburg, a Hanse-Town, is seated in a fruitful Country on the River Dymel, 25 miles South-east from Paderborn. Some neighbouring Mines of Iron and Lead afford this Town a good Trade, Between the Bishoprick of Paderborn and the River Weser, lies the Territory of the Abbey of CORBET, founded by the Emperor Lewis I. It is about 15 or 16 miles in length, and in it, besides other Towns, stands Hoxter, a fair City on the Weser, 25 miles North from Cassel, and directly West from Paderborn, which by the means of the River, is a place of good Trade.

Besides this Territory, the Island of Rugen in Pomerania was given to this Abbey by the Emperor Lotharius, A. 844.

And now having survey'd all the Countries on the East of Westphalia, we must cross Munster, and before we come to Cleeve and its Dependances, view

The Earldom of BENTHEM, which lies on the West-side of the Bishoprick of Munster, stretching out into the Province of Overissel, wherewith it is surrounded on all the other sides. It is in length near 40 miles, and in breadth about 15. The chief Town Bentem, stands near the South-border of the County, 30 miles North-east from Munster, 36 East from Osnaburg, and 40 West from Deventer. It is fortified and has a Castle, but is a place of no Trade, being seated in a Wood and far from a River.

LINGEN, a strong Town on the River Embs, 40 miles North from Munster, is subject to the Prince of Orange; tho' the County, of which it is Capital, be under the Bishop of Munster.

STEINFURT or Borchstendorf, is also a small County, lying South of Bentem, to whose Earl it is now subject, tho' formerly it had Lords of its own. The chief Town stands 20 miles North from Munster.

The Dutchies of CLEEVE and JULIERS, with their dependencies the Counties of MARCK; BERG, RAVENSBURG and RAVENSTEIN, lie mostly on the banks of the Rhine, but are so intermixt with other Countries, that it is difficult to give the particular Limits. In general, they are bounded on the North by Guederland and Munster, on the South by the Archbithoprick of Trier, on the E. by Hesse and Westphalia, and on the W. by Brabant, Liege and Limburg. The principal Rivers here are the Rhine, the Roe, and the Lippe; which two latter fall into the Rhine, the first at Duisburg, and the last at Wesel. The Air is cold, but the Soil is fruitful in Corn, and yields some Pasture.

The Right of succeeding to these Territories, upon the death of John William the last Duke, without Issue, in 1609, gave occasion to great Commotions in Germany; for the Elector of Brandenburg, the Duke of Neuburg, the Duke of Deuxponts, the Duke of Saxony, and the Marquiss of Burgaw, having all married Sisters or Daughters of the Sisters of John William, all claim'd to succeed. But the Elector of Brandenburg and the Duke of Neuburg only maintain'd their Claim by Force of Arms; the former, by the Assistance of the Hollanders, and the latter by that of the Spaniards. Until, at length, an Agreement was made, That Juliers and Berg, with the small Territory of Ravenstein should be granted to the Duke of Neuburg, and that the Elector of Brandenburg should for ever enjoy the Duchy of Cleeve and the Counties of Marck and Ravensburg; under which Princes they at present remain.

The Duchy of Cleeve is a Country generally woody and hilly, but however produces divers sorts of Grain. It lies on both sides of the Rhine, between Munster on the East, Guederland on the West, Zutphen on the North, and Juliers on the South, extending about 40 miles from North to South, and 25 from East to West.

The City CLEEVE, call'd Cleef by the Germans, and Clivis aut Clivis in Lat. which gives name to the Country, (a very ancient Place, and supposed to have been founded by the Romans) stands on a Hill, among craggy Cliffs, between the Rhine and the Maes, about 12 miles South-east from Nimeguen, 70 West from Munster, and 60 North-west from Cologne. It is small, but well Peopled; near it are seen an old square Tower and other remains of Buildings, which shew it to have been formerly much larger. The Castle is old and not very strong, but pleasantly seated, and affords a delightful Prospect from the top of Swar-tower. The private Houses are but mean, and the chief publick ones are the great Church and two Monasteries. On the West-side of the Town is a very pleasant Park call'd Prince Maurice's, wherein are many Ponds and Water-works above which is the high Hill call'd Steenberg, from whence Utrecht with 4 more Cities and several great Towns may be seen, through 12 Vists or strait Walks cut through the Wood. On the East of the Town stands the Prince's House, in which are many Rarities and Monuments of Antiquity.

Embrick, on the Eastern banks of the Rhine, 8 miles from Cleeve to the East, and Rees, on the banks of the same River, about 10 miles higher, are both well fortified.

Gennep, at the mouth of the Niersse, where it falls into the Maes, near the borders of Guederland, 10 miles South-west from Cleeve, was anciently a large and populous City, and well fortified; but in the late Wars its Fortifications were demolished, and the Town is much decreas'd and now of small moment, tho' conveniently seated for Trade.

Goch on the Niersse, 6 or 7 miles above Gennep, a small Town of no great Strenth nor Traffick. All these four, tho' seated in the Duchy of Cleeve, have been taken from it at several times by the Dutch, and are now subject to them.

Calcar, a place of great Strength, and built by the Dukes of Cleeve for a Refuge againt any sudden approach of an Enemy, is seated near the Western Bank of the Rhine over against Rees, about 10 miles distant from Cleeves to the South-east. It quickly grew populous and rich by a Linnen-trade which they managed, and since they have been noted for making Malt, which is now a great Trade in this Town. The Town-houfe, S. Nicholas Church, and the Monastery of the Dominicans, are stately Buildings.

Santen, on the Western Bank of the Rhine, is a Town of very great Antiquity, but not considerable on any other account; it is laid to be the place where the Theban Legion suffer'd Martyrdom under the Emperor Maximianus, and therefore call'd Santen, Holy.

Wesel, call'd Nether-Wesel for distinction, seated in a fair Plain on the Eastern Bank of the Rhine near the mouth of the River Lippe, 25 miles distant from Cleeve to the South-west, and near 10 from Santen to the West, is a strong, populous and well-built City, reckon'd the largest and best in this Duchy. It is a Hanse-Town, and was Imperial, but exempted by the Dukes of Cleeve, of whose Dukedom it was always always a Member. It was taken and plunder'd by the French in the late War; and, the Burgers being rich, they exacted intolerable Contributions from them. Here is an Hospital for decrepit, old People, founded by H. Oliver Biers, and nobly endow'd by him and his Son.

Duisburg, a small City on the Roer, which a little lower falls into the Rhine, and on the Confines of Cleeve and Bergen, 15 miles above Wesel, 35 South-west from Cleeve, 15 from Duiseldorp, and 35 from Cologne to the North-east. It was once an Imperial City, but now subject to the Elector of Brandenburg, as Duke of Cleeve, tho' the Burgers still claim their former Liberty. Here were formerly Fairs held yearly, which brought great Trade to the Town. An University is establish'd here by the D. of Brandenburg, which was open'd Oct. 14. 1655.

Meurs, a small City, the Capital of an Earldom, lying between the Duchy of Cleeves and the Archbishoprick of Cologne, belongs to the Prince of Orange, to whom it was given in 1600. by the last Countess; but is claimed by the Duke of Brandenburg, as part of the Duchy of Cleeve. In this Earldom stands also Orfoy, a small but strong Town, taken from the Dutch in 1634. by the Prince of Orange, and by the French in 1672. but abandon'd by them in 1674.

The Dukedom of JULIERS lies between the Rivers Maes and Rhine, bounded on the North by the Spanish Guelde and Cleeve, on the South by Luxemburg and Trier, on the East by the Bishoprick of Cologne, and on the West by Liege and Limburg, extending about 60 miles in Length and 30 in Breadth. The Country is fruitful in Corn, Hay and Wood, and yields also Wood for Dying, whereof the Inhabitants make great Profit; and an excellent Breed of Horses.

JULIERS, or GULICK, as the Inhabitants call it, Juliacum, the Capital of this Duchy, is an ancient City seated on the River Roer, at the distance of 50 miles from Cleeve to the South, 25 from Cologne to the West, and 25 from Maastricht to the East. It is a small place, but neatly built; the Houses are of Brick, and the Streets broad and even: The Citadel is large, and render'd as strong as the best Engineers of Germany could make it: Notwithstanding which, it has been often taken in the present Age, but at last restor'd to the Duke of Neuburg, according to the Articles of the Pyrenean Treaty.

Aken or Aquisgranum, call'd AI XL A C H A PELLE by the French, anciently a very considerable Place, having been the Seat of the Emperor Charlemain, stands near the Borders of this Duchy of Juliers and that of Limburg; it is distant 15 miles from Juliers to the South-west, 16 from Maastricht to the East, and 36 from Cologne to the West. It is an Imperial and free City, and a very large beautiful Place; and, by reason of the hot Baths in it, which cause a great Resort thither, very populous and rich. The chief publick Buildings are the Collegiate Church and the Senate-house; the former was built by Charles the Great, who was buried in it, and is a very curious piece of Architecture of the Gorbick Order: At the West-end stands a high Steeple with several Pyramids, and in the middle a Cupola, the inside whereof is adorn'd with a great number of Pillars of white Marble and of Brass gilt; also many gilded Statues, Bras'dors and Partitions; and the Roof is beautified with Mosaick Work. In this Church are kept many Relicks, which are visited by zealous Pilgrims. The Senate-house is a very stately Fabrick, built A.D. 1533. and adorn'd with the Statues of all the Emperors; the upper Story of it is only one Room of 162. foot in length and 60 in breadth, wherein the Emperors used to receive their first Crown of Iron, and entertain the Electors and others that attended at their Coronations.

The Baths are much esteem'd for their Virtue in curing Chronical Distempers. It is said they were first found out by Serinius Grenim, Lieutenant-General of Gallia Belgica, about the year of Christ, 53. who beautified them, and built a Palace near 'em. But the Place being afterwards destroy'd by Attila, the Baths lay buried till the time of Charles the Great, whose Horse (as he was Hunting here) accidentally trook his Foot into one of them, which the Emperor observing, caus'd them to be search'd out and rebuilt, and being much taken with the Pleasure of the place, built a Royal Palace and a large Town. Of these Baths there are Three, the chief of which is the very fame that Charles the Great used often, with his Sons and Attendants, to swim in: It is now divided into many Apartments. These Waters rise so hot, that they cool them in 12 Houes before they are used. There are also others in the other part of the Town, but not so hot. Near the Town are many Mines of Lead, Sulpher, Vitriol and Iron, &c. In 1656 a great Fire happen'd in this City, which burnt down 20 Churches and 5000 Dwellings, (by which the Bignets of this Town may be guess'd at) which were quickly rebuilt, and it is now more large and beautiful. In 1663. a Treaty was held here, and Peace concluded between the Kings of France and Spain.

In the Village Borsell or Poserum, about a Furlong South from Aken, are many other hot Springs, which are by Pipes convey'd into 28 Baths; these Waters are even hotter than those at Aken.

Duren on the River Roer, 15 miles E. from Aix la Chappelle, and 10 S. from Juliers, is a small City, the Building neat and uniform, with a clear Stream of Water running in the middle. It was made Imperial by Charles IV. and burnt by Charles V. but being rebuilt, is now subject to the Duke of Neuburg. This place pretends to great Antiquity, and according to Cluverius, it was the ancient Marcodorum.

DUSELDORP, Dusseldorpium, is a very pleasant and well fortifi'd City on the Banks of the Rhine, 5 miles below Cologne to the North, and as many from Juliers to the North-east. It is the Metropolis of the Dukedom of BERG, which is extended along the banks of the Rhine, about 50 miles in length, and in breadth about 20. being craggy and mountainous, and therefore not very full of Inhabitants. The City is pleasantly seated upon the Rhine, and adorn'd with some publick Buildings, which make a delicate shew to the River, especially the Palace of the Duke of Neuburg, who commonly resides here. It was anciently an Imperial City and a place of much Traffick, and the yearly Fairs, since remov'd to Francfort, were kept in it.

DORTMOND, Tremonia, aut Dormania, is seated on the River Empfer, almost in the midst between those of the Lippe and the Roer, scarcely distant 6 miles from both, as also from the Territories of the Bishoprick of Munster to the South; 30 from the City of Munster, 26 from Soest to the West, and 35 from Duiseldorp to the North-east. It is a free Imperial City, and one of the Hanse-Towns under the Protection of the Elector of Brandenburg; and is a small, but rich and populous Place. It is the Metropolis of the County of MARK, a Country of about 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth, bounded on the North by the Rivers Empfer and Lippe, which part it from Munster, on the West and South by the Duchy of Bergen, and on the East by Westphalia. The Soil is like that of Westphalia, not very fruitful.

Ums, a poor Hanse-Town, but formerly a place of good Trade, till the War between the Dukes of Brandenburg and Neuburg, for the Right of these Countries, disturb'd and spoil'd it, stands 10 miles from Dortmund to the East.

Ham, another poor Hanse-Town, stands 10 miles from Uma to the North, on the Road between Holland and Brandenburg. The Country about it yields store of Corn, Hemp and Flax.

Soest, a large and populous City, seated in the neck of Land belonging to this County that shoots into Westphalia, 30 miles from Dortmund to the East, and as many from Munster to the South. It is esteem'd the largest City in Westphalia, except Munster, fortified with a double Wall, whereon are 30 Watch-Towers, and a large deep Ditch. In it are 10 Parishes and many Churches, one of which is a Collegiate, and under the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Cologne. This City has many Privileges and a Court of Judicature within it self, but under the Protection of the Elector of Brandenburg, to whom this County is subject.

RAVENSBURG, Ravensberga, a small Town, the Principal of a County, lying between Osnaburg, Minden, Munster and Lippe, stands on a Hill at the distance of 16 miles from Osnaburg to the South, about 25 from Paderborn to the North-west, and 30 from Munster to the East toward Minden.

RAVESTEIN, Ravasteinum, is a small Town seated on the River Maes, 20 m. W. from Cleeve, 20 N. E. from Bolduck, and 15 S. W. from Nimeguen; the Capital of a small Territory bearing the Title of a Lordship, appertaining to the Jurisdiction of the D. of Neuburg, but is at present possess'd by the Hollanders.

The Bishoprick of Liege is usually reckon'd part of this Circle, but being spoken of already in the Description of the Netherlands, it must be omitted here.

SWITZER-

SWITZERLAND.

By Rob. Falconer.

CHAPTER I.

Switzerland, Helvetia, or the Swiss-Cantons, together with their Allies and Subjects, in general.

For a Map, consult that of Germany, wherein Switzerland is comprehended.

THIS Country was anciently inhabited by the Helvetii, a People, according to Pliny, Strabo, and Tacitus, of Gallia Celtica; who were divided into the Ambryones, Tigurini, Tugeni, and Urbergeni; and were bounded on the North by the Rauraci, and Vindelicia, on the East by Rætia, on the West by the Sequani, and on the South by the Allobroges, Seduni, and Veraaggi. Their Chief Towns were Aventicum, now Avenches, Eburadunum, now Yverdun, Salodurum, now Soleurre, Vitodurum, now Winterthur and Urba, now Orbe.

They were a very warlike People, and having join'd themselves with the Cimbri, had a considerable share in the Victories which those Barbarians obtain'd over the Consuls Manlius Servilius Cepio, and Lucius Crassus; but after the bloody Battle which they lost against Marius, the Helvetii retir'd into their own Country, and lived peaceably until the Time of Julius Cesar; and having then form'd a Design of making themselves Masters of Gallia Celtica, they spent two Years in making the necessary Preparations for that Expedition; and having burnt all their Towns and Villages, to cut off all Hopes of returning, took the Field, in conjunction with the Rauraci, Twingi, and Latobriges, their Neighbours, making in all a Body of above 90000 fighting Men, besides old Men, Women and Children. But Cesar, by his good Conduct and Valour did so terrifie them that they were willing to come to Articles with him; and afterwards did gain such a signal Victory over them in a pitch'd Battle, that they humbly beg'd Peace, which he granted them, on Condition that they should return to their own Country, and re-build their Towns and Villages which they had burnt. This they punctually put in execution, and were afterwards faithful and true to the Roman Interest.

After the Declining of the Roman Empire, they put themselves under the Protection of the Kings of Burgundy, and afterwards under that of the Kings of France, who sent Governors to Rule them. Raoul Duke of Stirlinguen taking advantage of France, when it was engaged in War with the Normans, made himself Master of this Country in the Reign of Carolus Crassus. Raoul the Third dying without Issue, in the Year 1027, the Emperor Coward the Second, whom he left his Heir, did incorporate it with the Empire, as a Free-State; but during this Union, which was about eighty Years, the Dukes of Zeringhen, who were descended of Sigebert King of Austria, acted rather the part of absolute Masters than Governors.

This People having been for a long time kept under, and grievously oppress'd by their Governors, resolv'd at last rather to venture all than live in perpetual Slavery. The first that began were the three small Cantons of Uri, Switz, and Under-Walden, commonly call'd the three Forrest Towns. They enjoy'd very ancient Privileges, which they pretend'd to have been granted them by the Emperor Lewis, firnam'd the Pious, Son of Charles the Great; yet so that the Emperor us'd to send a Judge or Vicar thither, who had the supreme Jurisdiction in Criminal Affairs. During the Differences between the Emperors and the Popes, the Noblemen (of whom there were a great Number in that Country) got the ascendent over the Common People, and did mightily oppress their Liberty. The Divisions betwixt the Nobility and the People (the former siding with the Popes, the latter with the Emperor) grew very high, especially during the great Interregnum which happened after the death of the Emperor Frederick the Second, which breaking out into an open War, the Nobility was driven out of the Country; but by the Emperor Rudolph's Authority, a Reconciliation was made betwixt them, and the Nobility restor'd to their Estates. Thus these Countries did enjoy their former Liberty 'till the Reign of Albert the First, about the Year 1300, who having conceiv'd a hatred against them, because they had sided with his Rival Adolph of Nassaw, was very desirous to annex them to his Hereditary Countries. The Monasteries, and most of the Nobility having, upon his desire, submitted themselves to the Jurisdiction of the House of Austria; and the three above-mention'd Places refusing to do the like, they had Imperial Vicars set over them; who, contrary to ancient Custom, began to reside in strong Castles; and greatly oppress the People, whose Petitions and Complaints found no manner of Redress from the Emperor; which so encourag'd the Tyranny and Insolence of those Vicars, that Geister, the Judge of Under-Walden, was so ridiculous as to set his Hat upon a Pole at Alorff, and demanded the same Respect to be paid to it as to himself; which one William Tell refusing to do, was ordered to shoot an Arrow through an Apple which was placed upon his own Son's Head; but this Man making his Escape, stirr'd up the Hatred of the People against the Judges; and so the three foremention'd Places entred into a Confederacy to rid themselves of this Tyranny, and restore their ancient Liberty, An. 1307. In the Year 1315, Leopold Arch-Duke of Austria, the Son of Albert the First, march'd against them with an Army of 20000 Men, but was defeated near Morgarten. After which, they renew'd their Confederacy, and confirm'd it by solemn Oaths, that it should continue for ever; which was done at Brun, on the 7th of December, 1320. But tho' they administer'd their own Affairs at Home, and did not send Deputies to the Diets of the Empire, they were not declar'd Independent of the Empire 'till the Westphalian Peace, An. 1648. In the Year 1332, Lucern, and in the Year 1351, Zurich entred into this Confederacy. Immediately after Glaris, in the Year 1352, Zug and Bern, in the Year 1481, Fribourg and Solothurn, in the Year 1501, Basel and Schaffhausen; and at last all Appenzell, were united with this Confederacy; which made up the whole Body of the Swiss-Cantons, consisting of thirteen Common-wealths: Whereof Zurich, Bern, Lucern, Zug, Basel, Friburg, Solothurn, and Schaffhausen, are Cities; Ury, Switz, Under-Walden, Glaris, and Appenzell, are Countries, in which are a good number of Towns and Villages. The Switzers (which is a general Name for them all) have also some other Confederates, viz. the Abby and City of St. Gall, the Grisons, the Vallesins, the Cities of Retweil, Munshusen, Bienne, the Biel, Geneva, and Newburg on the Lake; besides several Cities and Countries (which we shall treat of particularly afterwards) that are either subject to the whole Confederacy, or to some particular Common-wealths: Every one of these Cantons is absolute within it self; but they differ as to the Nature of their Government and Constitution, some being more Aristocratical, others more Democratical.

The Christian Religion is said to have been planted in this Country pretty early; and the Reformation was begun here by Zuinglius, who was afterwards slain in a Battle against the Roman Catholics. The Cantons of Ury, Switz, Under-Walden, Lucern, Zug, Friburg, and Solothurn are Popish; Zurich, Bern, Basel, and Schaffhausen Protestant; but tho' the number of the latter be lesser, their Power is greater. The Catholics hold their Conventions at Lucern; the Protestants at Araw; and the General Assemblies are held at Baden, where they meet every Year about the end of June, to deliberate about the Affairs of the whole Body of the Swiss. This Diet is compos'd of two Deputies from each Canton; those of Zurich have the first Place, and the antienter of the two Presides; and it is his part to send circular Letters for convocating the Diet. And however they may differ in Religion and Form of Government, yet they all agree in the defence of their Liberty and common Interest.

The SOIL in these Countries is different; for in the mountainous Parts scarce any thing but Pasture Grounds is to be met withal; but the Vallies and flat Country produces good store of Corn and Wine, tho' scarce enough for the number of the Inhabitants; and Foreign Commodities cannot be imported without great difficulty, and what is deficient in the Soil is not repair'd by Traffick and Manufactures. They enjoy this benefit by the Situation of their Country, that by reason of the high Mountains and narrowness of the Passages, it is almost inaccessible, especially on the Italian Side, and in the midst of the Country; but some of the outward Parts are of a very easy access.

As to the Genius of the People, they are generally Honest and True to their Word, Simple and Plain-dealing, without any great Cunning or By-designs, Stout and easily Provok'd, Steadfast in their Resolutions, and abundantly Valiant; which together with their Talents and Strength of Body, has so recommended them to a great many Princes, that they have chose them for their Guards, particularly the King of France, who maintains a considerable Number of them. They do not care for undergoing much Hardship and Labour, and expect to have their Pay duly, otherwise they are ready to make good the Proverb, No Money, No Swiss.

The main Strength of this Commonwealth (as the Judicious Puffendorf observes) consists in the number of its Inhabitants. For the Canton of Bern, which has the greatest Territories, pretends alone to be able to send into the Field 100000 Fighting Men, and the rest proportionably. So that their not having extended the Bounds of their Dominions beyond what they are, seems to be owing, partly to their Inclination, which does not prompt them to encroach upon their Neighbours; partly to the Constitution of their Government, which seems to be unfit for great and sudden Enterprises; and partly to the difference of Religion among them. So they are the best Neighbours in the World; as being never to be fear'd, and always ready to assist you in case of Necessity, if you pay them for it.

The most considerable Rivers in Switzerland are, the Rhine, the Aar, the Rufs, the Inn and the Tessin; but the Rufs and Inn are the most serviceable. The Principal Lakes are those of Geneva, Constantz, Zell, Neufchatel, Biel, Moral, Thun, Briestz, Lucern, Zurich, Zug, Ocarin and Riva.

The modern Bounds of all that Country which goes under the Name of Switzerland, especially if you take in the Allies and Subjects of that State are different from those of the ancient Helvetia. It is extended from South to North for the Space of about 180 Miles, from the Bailliage of Mendrisi to the Frontiers of Schwaben; and 280 from West to East, from the County of Bormio to Mount St. Claude. It is bounded on the North with Alsace and Schwaben, on the South by Lombardy and the Lake of Geneva, on the East by the County of Tyrol, and on the West by Burgundy. The whole of it may be divided into four Parts, viz. The 13 Cantons, the Allies, the Subjects, and Stipendiary Towns; as is to be seen in the following Table, where the Cantons are set down according to their Precedency in the General Diets.

CHAP. II.

The SWISS CANTONS.

THE Canton of ZURICH, Tigurinus Pagus, is bounded with Scaffhausen on the North, Appenzell on the East, Zug and Switz on the South, and Bern and Lucern on the West. Its Extent South and North is about 60 Miles, and 48 from East to West. This Canton is very powerful, and richer than that of Bern, altho' it be not so large. It is so well Peopled, that in Twenty four Hours it is able to raise Fifty thousand Men: And comprehends One and Thirty Bailiages; whereof there's Nine that are call'd Great Bailiages, and the rest Chatellanies. The Bayliffs and Chatellans that are sent to them have full Power to Judge both in Matters Civil and Criminal, and are chose out of the Grand Council. The People of this Canton enjoy greater Privileges, and are more highly Tax'd than in most others, where the Bayliffs are in a manner absolute Matters. The great Bailiages are those of Griffencee, Gruningen, Wadischnwil, Regensburg, Eglisow upon the Rhine, Andelfingen along the River Thur, Lauffen, below the Cataracts of the Rhine, and Kiburg. The most considerable Chatellanies are those of Stein upon the Rhine, and Wintenthur, upon the Eulac. The most considerable Towns and Villages in this Canton are,

Zurich, Tigurum, Cesar and Livy place it in Gallia Celtica, and it is call'd Turegum by the Authors of the Middle Age. It lies in the midt betwixt Scaffhausen and Lucern, about 25 Miles from either, 11 from the Rhine to the South, 30 South-West from Constance, and about 60 North from the Alpes, and is divided into two Parts by the River Simath, where it comes out of the Lake of Zurich. It is thought to be one of the most ancient Towns in that Country; for according to an ancient Tradition it is said to have been built sixteen Years after Treves. It shook off the unsupportable Yoke of its Lords in the Year, 1218. After the Death of Berthold 5th Duke of Zerlingen, and put it self under the Protection of the Emperor, upon Condition that it should never be alienated; which was confirm'd by the Emperor Richard, in the Year, 1262; but 68 Years after, the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, being drain'd by an expensive War, and not in a Condition to Pay, after the Battle of Muldorf, to Frederick Duke of Austria, the Sum which he had promis'd him to renounce his Pretences to the Empire, offered to give him the Towns of Zurich, Schaffhausen, Rhinfeld and Neuburg; but the Inhabitants of Zurich opposing that Alienation, he was fain to give Brifac in lieu of it; which so enraged the Dukes of Austria, that they turn'd its mortal Enemies, and made as many others so as they could, which was the principal Cause of their entering into Alliance with Vry, Switz, Underwalden and Lucern. There is in this City a noble Library, a Strong, regularly Fortified, and well furnish'd Arsenal; and several other Things very well worth the observation of a curious Traveller, particularly a fine Collection of Medals. The Lake of Zurich is about 24 Miles long, and 2 or 3 broad: And the River is very useful for carrying away to the Rhine their Manufactures, whereof that of Crape is the most considerable, and turns to the best Account.

Kiburg, Kiburgium, stands upon a Hill, near the River Tefs, about 7 Miles from Zurich to the East, towards Constance, and about half a Mile from the Ruins of Vitorius or Winterthur. It was once famous for its Counts, who were Men of great Note.

The Canton of BERN, Bernensis Pagus, is bounded on the North with that of Solothurn, and a part of the Bishoprick of Basil, on the East with Lucern and Underwald, on the South with the Vallis or Wallisland, and the Lake of Geneva, and on the West with the Franche Comte, and the County of Neuchâtel. It is very large, and comprehends almost a third part of Switzerland, being in length from South-East to North-West about 172 Miles, in breadth, from West to East, about 132. It contains 72 Bailiages, which comprehend the greatest part of Nuitland, Argow, and the Pais de Vaud. Those which lie within Argow and Nuitland do make that which is call'd the German Territory, and the Pais Vaud, the French Territory, or the New Conquest. The first contains 300 Parishes, the other 150. The Bailiffs who govern these Bailiages are nominated by the Council of 200; and are at once both Judges and Governors, and their Office continues six Years. They choose their Assessors in the Country under their Jurisdiction, and to them Appeals may be made from the Charellanies; but after they have pass'd Sentence of Death, it cannot be put in execution, before it be confirm'd by the Grand Council. The Towns of greatest note in this Canton are,

Bern , Ch.	}	Bruk .
Lausanna .		Nicu .
Theim .	}	Sana .
Avberg .		Aubone .
Vangen .	}	Brienz .
Lansburg .		Walen .
Erlach .		Yverdon .
La Serre .

Bern, Berna, is seated on the Banks of the River Aar, between Solothurn and Friburg. It is not a large City, but very neatly built, and is said to owe its Name to a Bear which Berthold the 4th Duke of Zeringhen kill'd as he was laying the Foundations of it; for Bern in the Language of the Country signifies a Bear. Berthold the 5th finish'd it, Ann. 1191. The Emperor Frederick II. did incorporate it with the Empire, 1229. and granted considerable Privileges to it. It did afterwards own for its Superiour Philip Earl of Savoy, to whom it sent Commissioners, in the Year, 1268. to swear Fealty to him. Philip's Successors did afterwards restore them to their ancient Liberty, in recompence of the good Service they had done them against the Bishop of Lausanna, the Earls of Neuburg, and Charles the Terrible, Duke of Burgundy. This City stands in a Peninsular wash'd on three sides of it by the Aar, the fourth being well Fortified with Bastions and Trenches. The Streets are very neat, and watered with clear Brooks running through the middle of 'em, and adorn'd on each side with Portico's, Arches and Pillars of Free-stone. The principal Church is a very noble Structure, as are also the Town-House, the Court of Chancery, the Arsenal and publick Library. In one of the Apartments of the Arsenal, which is furnish'd with Arms for 40000 Men, is to be seen the Statue of William Tell of Schwitz, whom the Governor commanded to shoot an Apple off his Son's Head, with an Arrow; which with other Grievances provok'd the Switzers to take up Arms for asserting their Liberty.

Lausanna, Lausonium or Lausanna, is the chief Town of the Country of Vaud, and has its Name from its Situation between the Brooks Laus and Anna. It stands near the North-side of the Lake of Geneva, which because of the Situation of this Town is often call'd the Lake of Lausanna. It is 30 Miles from Geneva to the North-East, 64 from Bern to the South-West, 28 from Friburg, 20 from Yverden to the South, and 70 from Lucern to the West. The Situation of it is pretty odd, it being built on three Hills; and that part of it which they call The Old Town enjoys great Privileges, especially that of the Power of Life and Death. It was formerly a free and imperial Town, but has been under the Jurisdiction of Bern since the Year, 1536. It was also an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Besanzon, but after the Protestants had made themselves Masters of the Town, it was translated to Friburg. There is an old Tradition pass'd among the Inhabitants, that Hercules in his Passage from Spain into Italy, finding the Country adjacent to this Place so Fruitful and Pleasant, left some of his Troops under the Command of Arpontinus, who they say was the Founder of Arpentina; upon the Ruins of which Lausanna (as they say) is Built: But the Reader may believe as much of this Story as he thinks fit.

Yverdon, Ebrodunum, lies in the Country of Vaud, upon the Lake of Neuchâtel, where the Tibie runs into it, about 10 Miles from the Confines of the County of Burgundy, and 15 from Friburg. Formerly both it and the adjacent Country was under the Jurisdiction of the Duke of Savoy; but in the Year, 1536. it was taken by the Bernois, who are still Masters of it.

The Canton of LUCERN, Lucernensis Pagus, borders with those of Bern, Zug, Schwitz and Underwald. It was anciently the Country of the Ambrones, who having join'd the Teutoni, were defeated by Marius in the Plains of Porriers in Provence. It is divided into 12 Bailiages, which are governed by the Counsellors of Lucern, except those of Wiken and Sempach, whose Bailiffs are chosen from among the Burgers of these Towns, by the Grand Council of Lucern. This Canton is extended from North to South for the space of about 48 Miles, and from West to East 32, and was united to the other confederated Cantons in the Year, 1332. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Lucern,

Lucern, Ch. } Sualbusen.
 Sempach. } Wiken.
 Sursee. } Willisow.
 Rot. } Hohburg.

Lucern, Luceria or Lucerna, is situated on the Lake of Lucern, at the Mouth of the River Rufs, 36 Miles from Bern to the East, and 40 from the Rhine to the South. Some Historians say, That it was call'd Lacucerna, as if one should say, Quod vicinum lacum cernat; but there is more reason to believe, that it was so call'd from a Lantern, which was set up there in the Night-time to direct Travellers; for one may now see an old Tower near the Bridge, which seems to have been design'd for that use; and to confirm this Opinion, there is to be seen another Tower of the same kind near Zurich, which is call'd Vallenberg. This Town owes its Original to an Abbey which Vigard Brother of Robert, Duke of Swabia, founded there. Pepin gave it to the Abbey of Murbach; and this Donation was confirm'd by Lorbarius, An. 850. The Abbots of Murbach gave it great Prerogatives; but one of their Successors sold it for 2000 Marks of Silver to Albert Duke of Austria. This Town is the ordinary Residence of the Pope's Nuncio: And from hence Goods may be carried down the Rufs into the Rhine, and so to the Ocean. It was once a free and imperial City, but united it self to the other Cantons, An. 1332. The Things most remarkable here are, the great Church, adorn'd with two large Steeples, an Altar beautified with fine Marble Columns, an excellent pair of Organs and fair Cloyster. The Market-place also is both large and stately; and so is the Town-house and College of Jesuits, and two Bridges about 500 Paces long.

Sursee, stands on the Lake of Sempach, about 20 Miles from Lucern to the N. W. The Avoyer or Governor of it takes an Oath of Fidelity to this Canton. There is one thing peculiar to this Place from all the rest of Switzerland, which is, that they only make use of a brass Cornet instead of a Trumpet; because, as they say, they had one of these presented to them by Charles the Great, in Recompence of the good Service they did him in the Wars against the Sarazens.

The Canton of URI, Pagus Uranius, or Oriensis, lies between the Mountains of Crispaltberg and St. Gothard, and the River Rufs; having the Canton of Schwitz to the North, those of Underwald and Bern to the West, the Valley of Verzasco to the South, and the Grison League with the Canton of Glaris to the East. It is in length, from South to North, about 60 Miles; and in breadth from West to East, about 20. This Country belong'd anciently to the Abbey of St. Felix, and St. Regulus of Zurich, by the Donation of the Emperor Lewis the Debonaire, whose Daughter Hildegade was first Abbess of it; but it was transferr'd from the Abbess of St. Felix to the Abbots of Vertinger; having afterwards purchas'd its Freedom by a Sum of Money, did put it self under the Protection of the Emperors, who sent Governors to it, from whose Sentence there was no Appeal in Matters Criminal, there being other Judges for Civil Causes who were assist'd by certain Counsellors chosen from among the People of the Country: And thus they continued so long as the Emperors let them enjoy their ancient Privileges; but so soon as the Dukes of Austria began to encroach upon them, and endeavour to make themselves absolute, they took up Arms for the defence of their Liberty and Privileges, as we have said before. This Canton is divided into 10 Parts, which the Inhabitants commonly call Gnoszaminen, and has under its Jurisdiction these Towns, Altorf, Ch. } Ariola.

 Altinghusen. } Gessinen.
 Fornike. }

Altorf, or Altdorf, Altorsum, that is to say, the old Village is seated in a Plain, near the River Rufs, at the Foot of the Alps, about 12 Miles from Lucern to the South East, and about 24 from Schwitz to the South. It is a very fine and delightful Place, the Houses being very neat, and the Streets well pav'd; and there being so many Gardens and Country-houses round about it, it affords a most lovely Prospect; and which contributes to its greatness, and helps to encrease its Riches, is, that the Courts of Justice for the whole Canton are held in it. But it is a Place of very difficult Access, by reason it stands at the bottom of the dangerous Precipices of the Mountain St. Godard; near to which four considerable Rivers, viz. the Rufs, the Tessin, the Rhine, and the Rhone have their Source. Besides this, there are under the Jurisdiction of this Canton, that which the Ancients call'd Leopontiorum Vallis, and now by the French call'd la Vallee de Liviner, situated at the Foot of those Hills which the Italians call Monte di San Bernardino, which is govern'd by a Bailiff, that is chang'd every third Year, and is Judge in all the Affairs, together with Assessors, who are chosen from among the Inhabitants. The Inhabitants of Mont St. Godard are also subject to this Canton.

The Canton of SCHWITZ, Suitionis Pagus, is bounded on the North with those of Zurich and Zug, on the West of Lucern and Underwald, on the South by that of Uri and part of Glaris, and on the East by the same Canton of Glaris, and the Bailliage of Gasteren and Ulzenach, and is extended from North to South about 28 Miles, and from East to West about 36. The whole Country that now goes under the Name of Switzerland, has its Denomination from hence; either because the Wars which these People began for recovering their Liberty took their Rise here; or because they first entered into a Confederacy for that end in this Place. The Inhabitants of it pretend to be descended from the Cimbri; but I am apt to believe that it is much easier for them to say than to prove this. This Canton is divided into 6 Parts, and the most considerable Towns it is are,

Schwitz, Ch. } Wag.
 Kufsnach. } Grinow.
 Ehrifelden. } Euenben.

Schwitz, Suitia, is only a large Village standing on the Banks of the River Muse, in a Valley surrounded with Hills, which for the most part are covered with Snow; about 2 Miles from the Lake of Lucern, 10 from the Town of the same Name to the East; and as many from Glaris. This little Town was once an imperial and free one; but it ceas'd to be so in the Year 1315.

The Canton of UNDERWALD, which by Geographers is commonly call'd Sylvania, or Sylvandensis Pagus, from a Forest of Oak Trees which divides it into two Parts, viz. Above and Below the Wood. The whole Canton has its Name from the latter, Underwald being no other than sub Sylva, or under under the Wood. It lies between Schwitz and Lucern to the North, between the Provinces of Lucern and Bern to the West and South, and that of Uri to the East; and is extended North and South 32 Miles, East and West 24. Leopold Duke of Austria invaded this Country, An. 1336. and was defeated: Nevertheless he attempted it again, with an Army of 15000 Men, and marched as far as Navalia, but was again worsted by a handful of the Inhabitants of Glaris and Schwitz, and forced to leave the Field, with the loss of 300 Men. Since which time these People have retain'd their Liberty. This Canton contains no very great Towns; but those of greatest Note are,

Stantz , Ch.	}	Liungeren.
Kyontz .		Bakerriet.
Sanen.		Hamsfadt.
Engelberg.

Stantz, Stanzia, is no more than a large Village near the Lake of Lucern, at the Foot of the Mountains, about 12 Miles from the Town of Lucern, to the South East. In this Place the Great Seal of the Canton used to be kept.

The Canton of ZUG, Tuginis Pagus, is bounded with that of Zurich on the North, that of Schwitz on the East and South, and that of Lucern on the West. Its breadth and length are much about one, neither exceeding 12 Miles. It was anciently governed by Lords of its own; but afterwards came under the Jurisdiction of the Dukes of Austria; whose insupportable Yoke it threw off with the rest, in the Year 1352. that is 44 Years after Schwitz, Uri, and Underwald had done so. It comprehends 6 Bailiages, and the most remarkable Towns in it are,

Zug , Ch.	}	Egen.
Cham.		Rijcht.
Bar.		Oberwil.

Zug, Tuginum, is a pretty little Town, standing on a Lake of the same Name, at the Foot of a Hill, some part of which produces good store of Grapes, the rest is Pasture Ground and Wood, which affords plenty of Game. It is 12 Miles from Lucern to the East, and 18 from Zurich to the South.

The Canton of GLARIS, Glarenensis Pagus, is bounded with the River of Limath on the North, the Grisons on the East and South, and the Cantons of Schwitz and Uri on the West. It is about 30 Miles North and South, and 25 East and West. Ursus and Landolph, who were Lords of it, gave this Country to the Abbey of Seckingen; to which the Inhabitants paid the tenth and hundred parts of their Rents; but the Mayoralty depended on the Emperor. The Emperor Barbarossa gave it to Otto, Count Palatine of Burgundy; and from his Posterity it pass'd to the House of Hapsburg; and from thence to that of Austria. This Canton is partly Popish, partly Protestant; which is the cause of frequent Squabbles betwixt them; and therefore it is appointed that such Differences shall be decided by Judges, two thirds of whom are of the Defendant's Persuasion. The most considerable Towns in this Canton are,

Glaris , Ch.	}	Nessel.
Wesen.		Elin.
Urnen.		Quart.

Glaris, Glarona or Clarona, stands in a Valley of the same Name, upon the River Sarneff, surrounded by the Mountains call'd Glarenselberg, 18 Miles from Altorf to the North East, as many from Schwitz to the South East, and 30 from Chur or Cboir. The Inhabitants are reckon'd the wisest People in Switzerland.

The Canton of BASIL, lies betwixt Briskow, the Canton of Lucern, the Bishoprick of Basil, and Sungtow. It is of no great extent, containing only five Bailiages, and about 30 Parishes, and is intirely Protestant. The most considerable Towns and Villages are,

Basil , Ch.	}	Veltemburgh.
Dugst.		Grolingen.
Dornach.		Dimenach.
Augst.		Belingen.
Leichstall.		Videstein.
Manchstein.		Ramstein.
Hamburgh.

Basil, Basilea, stands upon the Rhine, on the Confines of France and the Empire, about 24 Miles from Friburg, 64 from Constance to the West, 48 from Zurich, and 56 from Strasburg to the South. It is thought to have rise from the Ruines of the old Augusta Rauracorum, or Raurica, some Vestige of which are still to be seen near the Village Augst, about 7 Miles distant from it to the East. Cluverius thinks it was formerly call'd Arialbinum; but it owes its Name of Basilea to Julian the Apostle, who would have it call'd so in honour of his Mother Basilina. The Romans sent a Colony to it under the Conduct of Manatus Plancius, and the Emperor Gratian did greatly enlarge it. The Hungarians having ruin'd it, the Emperor Henry the Second, caused it to be re-built, An. 1010. and granted such Privileges to those who would set up there, that in a little time it became considerable. There was a Council held here, An. 1431. under Pope Eugenius the Fourth, and was adorn'd with an University, 1460. The Rhine divides it into two unequal Parts. That which lies on the German side, is call'd the Lesser, and is not much above the fourth Part of the whole Town, and is join'd to the other by a large Stone-Bridge. It was formerly an Episcopal See, suffragan to the Bishop of Bizanzsen; but since the Protestant Religion got footing there, the Bishops have been oblig'd to live at Brentrut, or Porentru (as the French call it) upon the Confines of the Higher Alsace. The most remarkable Things in this City are, the Cathedral Church of St. Mary, the Arsenal, and their Guildhalls, and the curious Paintings in the Dominicans Cloyster, and the University; where, besides many others, Des. Erasmus, Amerbachius, and John Buxtorf were educated. There are also several considerable Libraries, and some fine Collections of Medals, particularly that of Mr. Sebastian Fisch. The Repository also of Erasmus and Amerbachius, belonging to the University, in which are preserved 20 Original Draughts of the famous Painter Holben, a Native of this City. There is also in the Publick Library a rare Manuscript Copy of Virgil, and another of the Alcaron, written on China Paper. Ordinary Paper is said to have been first made here by Antony and Michael Galician, An. 1417. And Printing was first began here by Bernard Ribbel, 1478: And the Reformation advanced by Oecolampadius, 1522. Erasmus died, and was buried here in July, 1536. aged 70 Years. This Town is well fortified, as you may see by the following Draught.

The Canton of FRIBURG, Friburgensis Pagus, is surrounded almost by that of Bern, and is divided into into two Parts by the River Sane. It comprehends 19 Bailiages, 5 of which are about Friburg, the rest are in Nuisbland; among which is that of Gruyeres, which was once the Residence of the Counts of that Name; the last of whom sold it to Bern and Friburg, who divided it, An. 1554. And it is to be observ'd, that the Earls of Gruyeres were Vassals of the Duke of Savoy, and always paid him Homage for the Lordships of Louanel, Gingin, Granges, Chatelard, Molon, and Treves. It join'd in Confederacy with the rest, An. 1481. The Towns of greatest Note are,

Friburg , Ch.	}	Corberet .
Romont .		Rut .
Gruyeres .	}	Peterlingen .
Tavonnach .		Montenach .

Friburg, Friburgum, stands upon the River Sane, in a very pleasant Country, about 28 Miles from Solothurn to the South, 24 from Lausanne, and 9 from Bern to the South West. It was built in the Year 1179, by Berthold the Fourth, Duke of Zerzingen, who also built Friburg in Brissgaw. It was for some time possess'd by those descended from him; but after the death of Berthold the Fifth, who was the last of that Race, An. 1218. it came into the Hands of the Earls of Kiburg. Eberhard Count of Hapsburg became Master of it, An. 1260. and in the Year 1277. sold it to the Emperor Rodolphus, for four thousand Marks of Silver. Some time after, it did redeem it self from under the Sovereignty of the House of Austria, and put it self under the Jurisdiction of the Duke of Savoy, by an Act of the 10th of June. 1450. upon Condition that he should preserve and maintain them in the full use of their Privileges; but afterwards there hapning some Difference betwixt Yoland Dutchess of Savoy and them, upon the account of some Money which she was obliged to pay them, they shook off that Yoke, An. 1477. and for the better securing of their Liberty, entered into a Confederacy with the rest, An. 1487. The most remarkable Things in it, are its Piazza's and publick Buildings, as, the Cathedral with its high Altar, the Town-house, and high Tower, the Fountain with its Basin and Foot, a Commendary of Malta, and several Churches and Convents of Jesuits, and a College of these founded by Petrus Canisius, who died, An. 1597. The 2d of May and the 22d of June are observ'd as great Festivals in this Place, for two signal Victories obtain'd over Charles Duke of Burgundy on these days. But the Reader must not confound this Town with another of that Name in Brissgaw, which was taken by the French, under the Conduct of Mar. de Crequi, from the House of Austria, An. 1677. and restor'd by the Treaty of Nimiguen, An. 1679.

The Canton of SOLOTHURN, or Soleure, Salodorusensis Pagus, is bounded on the North by that of Basil, and part of Alsace, on the West by the Bishoprick of Basil, and on the South and East by the Canton of Bern. It is divided into 12 Bailiages, and the most considerable Towns in it are,

Solothurn , Ch.	}	Leingen .
Osten .		Balslem .

Solothurn, which the French, and Inhabitants commonly call Soleure, stands upon the River Aar; and as it is a delightfully situated Town, so it is thought to be one of the most ancient in that Country. It stands betwixt Basil and Friburg, about 28 Miles from either, and 20 from Bern. It is said to have been built at first by some of the ancient Kings of Gaul; but this Opinion has no other Foundation than that of an old Inscription, which calls it The Sister of Treves. Some Historians do say, That it owes its Name to an old Tower, which is still to be seen there, call'd Solutun; that is, the Tower of the Sun. Queen Bertha gave this Town to a Chapter that she founded there. It came afterwards under subjection to the Bishop of Geneva; and after that was an Imperial Town, and then subject to the Empire, whose Yoke it at last shook off, and entered into a Confederacy with the other Cantons, An. 1481. In the Year 1531. the People of this Place were pretty well dispos'd to receive the Protestant Religion; but a popular Commotion arising on that account, the Mass was re-establi'd, and to they still persist in their Superstition. Bishop Burnet gives an account of them and their Religion in his Letters. In their great Church they have God the Father represent'd as an old Man with a black Beard, with Jesus Christ on his Knees, and a Dove over his Head. Stupidity equal to, if not exceeding, that of the wildest Heathens. The Houses of this Town are very fair, and the Streets large, adorn'd with many Fountains. There is also a stately Church, and a College of Jesuits, towards the building of which, the present King of France, Lewis XIV. gave 10000 Livres. The Fortifications likewise are very strong, and have cost a vast Sum of Money, being all of very fine and large Stones.

The Canton of SCHAFFHAUSEN, Scaphusanus Pagus, is bounded on the West with the Black Forest, on the South with the Canton of Zurich, on the East with Targaw, and on the North with Schwaben. It is but of small extent, not exceeding 12 Miles North and South, and about 20 East and West. The Chief Towns in it are,

Schaffhausen , Ch.	}	Newkilch .
Herblingen .		Halaw .

Schaffhausen, Scaphusia, stands upon the Rhine, on the German side, about 4 Miles from Constance to the West, 2 from the Lake of Zell, 6 from Basil, and 4 from Zurich to the North. It is sometimes call'd Probalopolis, because it has a Sheep for its Arms, which is also stamp'd on its Coin. It owes its beginning to an Abbey founded there by Eberard Count of Nellenberg, about the Year 1052. in honour of All Saints. The Emperor Frederick II. made it a free and imperial City, in which the Abbey enjoy'd great Privileges. In the Year 1320. the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria engag'd it, together with Rhinfeild, Newburg and Brisac, to Frederick le Bel Duke of Austria; but about 80 Years after the Emperor Sigismund restor'd it to its Liberty. It entered into a League with Zurich and St. Gall, An. 1424. and with Zurich, Bern, Lucern, Switz, and some other Cantons, An. 1501. The Reformation was carry'd on by Jacobus Riegius and others, An. 1520. The Cataracts of the Rhine oblige the Vessels that come from the Lake of Constance to unload their Merchandise in this Town; which are put on Board again below it, where the Stream becomes more gentle. The Streets of it are broad, and the Houses for the most part painted without, as in many Places of Switzerland. At the upper end of the Town stands a large Tower, which, they say, the French King keeps in Repair according to a Treaty of Alliance with the Swiss; it has a good number of Guns mounted on it; but serves more for Ornament than Defence to the Town.

The Canton of APPENZEL, Abbatifellenfis, lies betwixt the Abbey of St. Gall, and the Rhine, which separates it from the Grisons, having the Republick of Leitkensteig on the West, and the County of Rhental on the East, about 30 Miles long and 24 broad. It is divided into 12 Communities; which they call Roden. There are 6 of 'em call'd by the French, Les Ordres du dedans, that is, the Inner Appenzel; the other are nam'd, Les Ordres du dehors, or Outer Appenzel. This Country is so called from a Town of that Name. Both Papiſts and Proteſtants are tolerat'd in this Canton, as that of Glaris. It formerly depended on the Abbey of St. Gall, and entred into the general League with the other Provinces, An. 1513. The Proteſtants poſſeſs the Outer and the Papiſts the Inner Appenzel. It is the laſt in order of all the 13 Cantons, and contains theſe Towns, Appenzel, Ch.

Gonten.
Urnaſchen.

Appenzel, Abbatifcella, is a rich and populous Town, ſituated near the Source of the ſmall River Sinera, near 30 Miles from Chur, about 16 from St. Gall, and 30 from Conſtance. It was formerly the Reſidence of the Abbots of St. Gall; but the Inhabitants redeem'd themſelves from under the Jurisdiction of thoſe with a good Sum of Money, at a Treaty concluded at Conſtance with Canon de Stoufen, Abbot of St. Gall, by the Emperor Roberr's Mediation; and for the better ſecurity of their Liberty, entred into a League with the Cantons of Uri, Schwitz, Underwald, and Lucern. The Abbots of St. Gall, proteſted againſt this Alliance; and Henry of Mandorf renew'd his Pretenſions, at the Emperor's Court, An. 1425, and had them declar'd Enemies to the Empire. The People of Appenzel were not much troubled at this; but march'd into the Territories, demolish'd ſome Caſtles, and oblig'd him to make Peace. Not long after the Abbot of St. Gall entred into a Confederacy with the Nobility of Conſtance againſt them; but their Troops were beat; and the Appenzelins made themſelves Maſters of Rhental, and oblig'd the Lords of Rangevil, who held that Valley by Engagement, to paſs from their Right for ſix thouſand Crowns. In the Year 1457. they made a perpetual Alliance with the ſeven other Cantons, and did conſiderable Service againſt the Dukes of Auſtria and Burgundy; and at laſt in the Year 1513. they were received into the number of the 13 Cantons.

The G R I S O N S.

THE Country of the Grisons is a part of the ancient Rhetia, (the old Inhabitants of which, a Savage People, were ſubdu'd by Drusus and Tiberius, in the time of Augustus) and was call'd Rhetia Prima by the Romans, who govern'd it by a Preſident that depended upon the Præſectus Prætorio of Italy. This Province was ravag'd by the Germans, and afterwards expoſ'd to the Irruptions of the Barbarians, ſubmitted it ſelf to the Emperors of the Weſt. The People of this Country, being born Soldiers, have often liſted themſelves in the Service of foreign Princes, eſpecially the Kings of France. In the Year, 585. they aſſiſted Chilperic againſt the Lombards: And ſerv'd Thierry King of Burgundy in the Year, 616. Charlemain had many of them in his Service, in his War with the Saxons: And under the firſt Kings of the third Race, we find them in many Battles againſt the Enemies of France. Lewis XI. employ'd them in his Conqueſt of Burgundy. Charles the VIII. in the Kingdom of Naples. Lewis XII. when he attack'd the Dutchy of Milan. Francis the I. did comprehend them in the Treaty of Perpetual Peace, which he made with the Swiſs, An. 1516. and was renew'd by ſome of his Succeſſours; but Lewis XIV. excluded them, An. 1663.

This Country is bounded with Suabia on the North, Tirol on the Eaſt, the State of Venice and the Milanez on the South, and the Swiſs on the Weſt. It is a mountainous and barren Country, which obliges them to bring Corn from the Milanez for their Subſiſtence (altho' they might have as much as they have occaſion for from Alſace and the State of Venice) which makes them adhere ſo much to the Intereſt of Spain.

The Grisons in general make up a Commonwealth, which is commonly call'd the Griſon Leagues; becauſe it is compoſed of Three leſſer Leagues; each of which has its own Laws and Jurisdiction, and forms a particular State, whoſe Government is popular. The Firſt is that which the French call La Ligue haute, or Grife, the Upper League, which comprehends 28 Communities; whereof 18 are Popiſh, and 10 Proteſtant. Each Community is a little ſort of State by it ſelf, and the People of it meet every Year to chooſe their Judges, whom they call Ammans, who determin in all Matters Criminal and Civil, and from whom there is an Appeal to the Aſſembly of the League. The Second is the League of the Hoſe of God or Cadee, which the Germans call Gottbuſpunt, which comprehends 24 Communities, almoſt all Proteſtant. The Third is the League of the ten Jurifdictions, which the Germans call Zehen Gerichtrenpunt, and the French, les dix Droitures. Theſe three Leagues entred into a perpetual Alliance in the Year, 1437. and the Sovereignty is reſented by a Diet, which meets ſometimes at Planx in the Griſon League, ſometimes at Chur in the Cadee, and ſometimes at Davos in the Ten Jurifdictions. It conſiſts of 67 Deputies, viz. 28 from the firſt League, 24 from the Second, and 15 from the Third, who muſt all be Men known to be true to their Country, and who have no Penſion from, or are in the Service of any Prince. When any Affair of great Importance happens, which requires ſpeedy Diſpatch, it is remitted to the Senate, which is made up of the principal Magistrates, and the chief Men of the three Leagues, viz. The Grand Prevot of the Grison League, the Burgomaster of Chur for the Cadee, and the Amman of Davos, for the Ten Jurisdictions; but their Resolutions must be confirm'd by the Communities.

The Grisons possess likewise the VALTELINE, and the Counties of Chiavenna and Bormio, ancient Dependences of the Duchy of Milan; which Maximilian Sforza, Duke of Milan gave them in recompence of their good Service done him; and which Francis I. afterwards confirm'd to them. Of these we shall treat particularly afterwards.

The GRISON League, is bounded with the Canton of Glaris on the North, that of Uri on the West, the 4 Governments of Italy on the South, and the ten Commonalties on the East, and has within it these Towns, Ilantz, Cap. } } Flinz.

Dissentis. } } Splagen.

Ilantz, a small Town upon the Rhine, about 15 Miles from Chur to the South-West, wherein the Assemblies of the three Leagues meet.

The League of Cadee or Gottshpint, is bounded on the North with the Ten Commonalties and the Province of Tirol, on the South with the Country of Chiavenna, on the West with the Grison League, and on the East with the County of Bormio. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Chur, Cap. } } Vesprum.
Cassaccia. } } Bergon.

Chur, Curia, by the French call'd Coire, is the Chief City of this League, and the most considerable Town in the Grison Territories, seated at the foot of two Mountains, on the Banks of the little River Plejur, about a Mile and a half from the Rhine, 26 Miles from Chiavenna to the North, 41 from Altoy to the East, and 60 from Constance to the South. It was formerly defended by the Castles of Marsfol and Imburg, and was a free imperial Town till the Year, 1498. The Bishop of Chur is a Prince of the Empire: And his Revenues were formerly very considerable, the greatest part of the League of Gottshpint depending on him. But the most part of the Commonalties of that League redeem'd their dependance with a Sum of Money, and the rest shook off the Yoke upon the change of Religion; so that his Revenue is not now above Sixteen thousand Livres per Annum.

The League of the TEN JURISDICTIONS, Fædus decem Jurisdictionum, viz. Taffas, or Davos, Alfenau or Belfort, Churwalden, Langwis, S. Peter, the Abbey in Perigow, Schiens, Languart and Maysenfeld. The first Eight of these belong'd to the House of Austria, by a Donation made in the Year, 1489. by Gaudens Count of Amat, who was Heir to the Counts of Toggenburg, who succeeded the Barons of Vatz. The other two belong'd to the Counts of Toggenburg, from whom the Counts of Brandis did purchase them. Their principal Town is Davos, which stands on a Lake about 20 Miles from Chur, to the North-East.

The VALTELINE, Vallis Tellina, or Volturana Vallis, is a part of Rætia propria, anciently inhabited by the Vennonnes. It is a long and pleasant Valley, stretch'd out betwixt the Lake of Como and Tirol. It owes that name to the Castle of Tell, situated on the top of a Hill, whose foot is wash'd by the Adda. It is bounded by the Grisons on the North, Tirol on the East, the State of Venice on the South, and the Milanæz on the West. The Soil of it is very Fertile, and the Country well Peopled. It is ordinarily divided into 3 Parts, or Tertiavia, which the Italians call, il Terzero di Sopra, the upper third Part, Terzero di Mezzo, or the middle, and Terzero di Sotto, or the lower. In the First of these is Tirano, in the Second Sondrio, and in the Third Morbegno.

Tirano, Tiranum, the chief Town of this Province, is seated on the Banks of the River Adda, about 6 Miles from the Frontiers of Italy and Territories of Venice, 85 South-East from the Lake of Constance, and 50 from Chur to the South-East. It has eleven Communities depending on it.

Sondrio, Sandrium or Sondrisium, the chief Town of this Part of the Valteine, stands also upon the Adda, where it receives the Brook Maler, almost in the middle between Tirano to the East, and Morbegno to the West, 37 Miles from Chur to the South, and 40 from the Head of the Rhine to the East. It is the Place of greatest Strength in all the Valteine; and the Captain of the Valteine, who is both first Administrator of Justice and Commander in chief of the Forces, keeps his ordinary Residence there. He can substitute a Deputy to determin Causes both Civil and Criminal, but there lies an Appeal from him to the General Diet of the Grisons.

Morbegno, Morbonium, a little Town, in this Valley, about 8 Miles from the Lake Como, and 16 from Sondrio to the North-East, on it there depends eleven Communities.

The Spaniards have, since the beginning of this Century, attempted several times to make themselves Masters of this Valley, that they might the more easily bridle the Grisons, and secure the Communication betwixt the Territories of the House of Austria in Germany, with those of that House in Italy, but the French have not suffer'd them to keep possession of it.

The County of CHIAVENNA, Comitatus Clavennæ, which is of no great extent, is bounded on the North and West by the Grison League, on the South by the 4 Governments of Italy, and on the East by the Valteine. It is divided into two Bailiages, viz. Chiavenna and Pleury.

Chiavenna, Clavenna, is a little Town upon the River Maira, at the foot of the Mountains, which a little below falls into the Lake of Como; it is delightfully Situated, and very well Built. It was once much larger than it is now, but about Five hundred Years ago, all the north Part of it was Buried in the Ruins of a Mountain. The like sad Accident befel the Town of Pleurs, on the 25th of August, 1618. It was not so large a Town as Chiavenna, but the Houses were finer, inasmuch that it pass'd for one of the finest Towns in Italy; but the Inhabitants were horribly leud and debauch'd, and so drew down that heavy Judgment upon themselves.

The County of BORMIO, Bormiensis Comitatus, by the Italians call'd il Contado di Bormio, is bounded on the North and West by Cardee, on the West by the Valteine, on the South by the Venetian Dominions. It is surrounded with inaccessible Mountains, and divided into 5 Bailiages, which they call Communities, or Neighbourhoods.

Bormio, Bormium, is the Chief Town of the County of that name, and is otherwise call'd Vorms by the Germans: It stands on the Adda, 3 Miles from its Spring, near the entrance of the Valteline, and the South side of the River Oglio, 40 Miles from Chiavenna to the East, near 50 West from Trent to the West, and 50 from Chur to the South-East.

The ABBEY OF S. GAL, Fanum Sancti Galli, or Republica Sancti Galli. This Abbey, from which the Country has its name, was founded in Turgow, in the Reign of Dagobert, by one Gal, a Scotchman, who having successfully preach'd the Gospel in those Parts, about the Year, 630. refused, as they say, the Bishoprick of Constance, and retir'd into a Desert, and was followed by a great many People, and founded this Monastery, or rather it was built afterwards in Honour of him. Sigebert King of Austrasia bestowed great Revenues on it. About 80 or 100 Years after, the King of France erected it into an Abbey, and gave the Monks the Privilege of choosing their own Abbots. Omer having been chose Abbot, and finding St. Gal's Rules to be a little too rigid, chang'd them for those of St. Benedict. Several of the Bishops of Constance enjoy'd that Dignity, till the Monks growing jealous of the Bishops Authority, resolv'd to own none for their Governour, but their own Abbots. Ulric of Alesax was made a Prince of the Empire by the Emperor Philip, and extended his Dominions considerably. Cunon of Stauffen had great Differences with the People of Appenzel, who had redeem'd themselves from under his Sovereignty. Henry of Mandoiff renew'd his Pretensions at the Emperor Sigismund's Court, Ann. 1425. But Gasperd of Landenberg, a Man of greater Temper and Moderation than his Predecessors, knowing very well that those Pretensions would be the ground of a perpetual War, did renounce them, by the Alliance which was made with the Cantons of Zurich, Lucern, Schwitz and Glaris, in the Year, 1454. This Territory lies on the North of the Cantons, and on the Banks of the Lake of Constance.

The Town of S. GAL, has its Name from an Abbey, which we have describ'd. It stands in Turgow, 3 Mile from the Lake of Constance, and 12 from Lindaw to the West. The Emperor Frederick I. made it an Imperial City, and bestow'd upon it great Privileges, which were confirm'd by the Emperor Frederick II. Ann. 1220. it redeem'd it self with a Sum of Money, and entred into Alliance with the Cantons of Zurich, Bern, Lucern, Schwitz, Zug and Glaris, in the Year, 1454. The Government of this Town is in the Hands of a Society of the Nobility, and six Companies of Tribus of the People; the first of which is that of the Weavers, because Linnen Cloth is the greatest and most profitable Commodity of that Country. Out of all these Companies there are 90 Chosen, 66 of whom make up the Grand Council, and 24 the Lesser. The former meets five times a Year; the other every Tuesday and Thursday, except Holy-days and Fair-days. There are several other Courts of Justice, particularly one for inspecting the Cloth; which as we have said, is their greatest Manufacture.

Besides this, the Abbot of St. Gal possesses the Country of Toggenburg, the Seigniorie and Town of Gottshauszult in Turgow, and several other places in Rhinval.

The County of VALAIS, Valllesia, by the Germans called Wallerterland and Valinfa, by some Writers of the middle Age, the ancient Seat of the Seduni and Veragri, a People of Gallia-Narbonensis; lies among the Alps, between Switzerland on the North and East, the Milanez and the Dutchy of Aoust on the South, and Savoy on the West. It is divided into the Higher and Lower; the Higher is divided into 7 Parts, call'd Dixaines by the French, Zenden by the Germans. The Lower, which lies to the West of the other, is divided into six Parts or Communities, called Bannieres, according to Plantina. They entred into Alliance with the Cantons of Lucern, Ury and Underwald, in the Year, 1446. and with that of Bern, 1475. at last the Bishop of Sion and the other Dixaines, have entred into and confirm'd a particular Alliance with the seven Popish Cantons, by the Treaties made in the Years 1583, 1600 and 1634. This Country is a large, pleasant and fruitful Valley, surrounded with Hills and Rocks, having but one Passage into it, where there are two Gates and a Cattle. It produces plenty of Corn, Safron, Grapes and other Fruits; also some Mines, and Springs of Mineral Water. It is reckon'd to be 80 Miles long, and between 10 and 20 broad. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Sion, Cap.
Martinach.
St. Maurice.

Sion, Sedunum, anciently a Town in Gallia-Narbonensis, possess'd by the Seduni, and now call'd Sitten by the Germans, stands upon the River Sitte, which throws it self into the Rhone a little below. It is situated in a delightful Plain, overlook'd by a Hill of a moderate height, on the East-side. The Hill rises up with two Tops; upon the highest of which Majoria, as they call it, there is a Fortrefs, where the Bishop for the most part resides. Upon the other top is the Fortrefs call'd Valeria, and the Third call'd Turbilion, is a Fortrefs built upon the top of the Majoria. This Town is distant from Bern to the South about 55 Miles, from Geneva 65, to the East, and 100 from Milan to the West. It belongs to the Bishop ever since the Donation made by Charlemain to Theodosius, who then govern'd that Church. Adrian of Riebmal made an Alliance with the Seven Catholick Cantons, in the Year, 1533, chiefly for the sake of their Religion.

Martinach, or Martigny, the ancient Othodurum or Othodurus, as Rhenanus and Simlerus think, a Town in Gallia-Narbonensis, according to Cesar, tho' there was another Othodurum in Hispania-Tarraconensis. It stands upon the little River Dranse, which falls into the Rhone a little below. There is to be seen the Ruins of a strong and very fine Cattle; and here they say it was that the Theban Legion call'd Fu/minatrix, whereof St. Maurice was Chief, was first decimated, and afterwards cut in Pieces, under the Emperor Dioclesian, for not assisting at the Pagan Sacrifices, and embracing that Religion. It lies 12 Miles to the West from Sion, 30 to the North from Aouste in Piedmont, and 20 East from the Lake of Geneva.

The County of NEUFCHATELL, called Neu-Stat by the Germans, lies extended for the space of about 22 Miles, between the Mountains Fura on the West, which separates it from France and Burgundy, and the Lakes of Neufchatell and Bien on the East, which divide it from the Canton of Bern, and between Basil on the North, and Lausanna on the South. Memphis was Count of Neufchatell chatell about the Year 815; but to trace down the Succession from him to this present time, would be tedious; and therefore we shall only put the Reader in mind, That Johana of Hochberg, Heiress of Neufchatell, having married Lewis of Orleans Duke of Longueville, about the Year 1504. translated that Country into this Family. Francis his Son dying without Issue, 1551. Leonor of Orleans, Marquis of Rotelin, his Cousin, succeeded him; James of Savoy, Duke of Nemours, Son of Philip and Charlotte of Orleans, Sister of Lewis Duke of Longueville, laid claim to the half of the County, which Leonor would have consented to, but the States of that Country would not allow it, because they could not endure to have two Masters. Thus the Matter stood undecided for some time, 'till the Year 1557. that the Estates summon'd the Dukes of Longueville and Nemours before the Council of Bern, where it was concluded, That the County of Neufchatell should remain intirely in the Possession of the Duke of Longueville; and that the Duke of Nemours should have 2000 Livres a Year in Land, in the Duchy of Burgundy, and 2000 Crowns from the Town of Neufchatell. Leonor left by Mary of Bourbon, Henry I. who had by Katharine of Gonzague, Henry II. who died, An. 1663. leaving by his first Marriage with Louisa of Bourbon, Daughter of Charles of Bourbon, Count of Soissons, Mary of Orleans, who was married to Henry of Savoy, Duke of Nemours, in the Year 1657. Henry II. took for his second Wife Ann Geneveve of Bourbon, Daughter of Henry of Bourbon, Prince of Conde, by whom he had John-Lewis-Charles, and Charles-Paris; the former of whom gave the County of Neufchatell to his Brother, in the Year 1668. upon Condition that if he should die without Children, the County should return to him; which case happening in the Year 1672. he entred again into the Possession of his Estate; and so the Duchess of Nemours his Sister, putting in for his Successor in the County of Neufchatell, the Matter was brought before the Estates of the Country, who rejected her Pretensions, and adjudged the Sovereignty to his Brother.

The Town of Neufchatell, is seated on a Lake of the same Name, and so call'd from a Castle built on a Hill that commands the Town, being distant 30 Miles from Lausanna and the Lake of Geneva to the North, 28 from Bern to the West, and 30 from Solothurn to the South West.

MULHAUSEN, Mulhusia, stands in the upper Alsace, upon the River Ell, about 10 Miles from Pfirt to the North, as many from Basil to the North West, and Newburg to the West. It freed it self from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Strasbourg, An. 1261. and was made an imperial City, and has been in Alliance with Switzerland since the Year 1515. There is another City of this Name in Thuringen under the Protection of the Duke of Saxony.

ROTWEIL, Rotevilla, a Town in Schwaben, and one of the Allies of Switzerland. It stands on the River Necker, near the Mountains of Altenov, about 40 Miles from Brisac to the East, and 42 from Schaffenhauzen to the North. Duke Covrade III. erected a Court of Justice here for the whole Province of Schwaben, An. 1147. and Mr. de Guebriant Marshal of France, being mortally wounded in the Siege of this Place, died in it after it was taken by the French, 17 Nov. 1643.

BIENNE, Bienna, is a small Town on the Banks of the River Tjebus, which encries it self into the Lake of Bienna, a little way from the Town. It lies within the Bishoprick of Basil; but is free and independent. The Bishops of that See have had great Pretensions to it; and therefore finding it self like to be hard put to it, allied it self with the Canton of Bern, An. 1552. and afterwards more strictly, An. 1567; which it confirm'd with Solothurn, An. 1597. and not long after with the Canton of Friburg. However, notwithstanding this Alliance, it does in some measure own the Bishop's Superiority, since it is obliged to furnish him a certain Number of Men in the time of War, and to pay him Tithes. The Valley of S. Immer, otherwise call'd the Lordship of Largue, belongs to this Town. It is divided into several Communities, who have each of 'em their Amman, from whom there lies an Appeal to the Council of the Town.

GENEVA, Geneva, or Genuensium Civitas, anciently a City of the Allobroges in Gallia Narbonensis, stands on the River Rhone, where it comes out of the Lake Leman, commonly call'd the Lake of Geneva. In the Latitude of 46. 20. Long. 26. at the distance of about 80 Miles from Bern to the North West, as many from Lions to the East, and 110 from Basil to the South West. The Rhone divides it into two Parts, the South part of it, which stands upon a rising Ground, and is the greater, is call'd Geneva; the other, which properly belongs to the Country of Gex, is call'd Gervais. This City is very considerable, for its Antiquity, advantageous Situation, the great number of its Inhabitants, and its Commerce. It was here that Cesar, to prevent the Irruptions of the Helvetii, caused an Entrenchment to be made 19 Miles long, and 16 Foot high, from the Lake of Geneva to the Mountains Jura; some Vestigia of which are still to be seen near Gingin. It was almost burnt to Ashes in the Time of Heliogabulus, and ordered to be re-built by Aurelian, who would have it nam'd after him; but after his death it resum'd its former Name. The Burgundians are said to have driven the Romans from hence, and after the fall of their Kingdom, it became an imperial Town; and a long time after the Bishops of it were both Spiritual and Temporal Lords; but it was with great difficulty that they preserved their Sovereignty, by reason it was disputed by the Counts of Geneva, after they became Vicars of the Empire. Peter dying without Children, An. 1392. appointed Humbert de Villars, his Nephew, his Heir; who died, An. 1400. Odo de Villars, his Uncle succeeding, sold the Country of Geneva to Lewis Count of Savoy, An. 1401. But the Male Race of the House of Geneva failing, this Prince was forc'd to desire a new Investiture; which the Emperor Sigismund granted him, An. 1424. and Maximilian I. confirm'd it, An. 1519. as did also Charles V. An. 1530. The Dukes of Savoy pretended that the Town of Geneva was under their Jurisdiction. It is true, they did appoint Judges and Notaries in it, and coin'd Money; but all this was owing to the weakness of the Bishops, who were not able at that time to oppose such Incroachments. The Publick Cries were made always in Name of the Bishop or his Vidame; the inferior Officers did so much depend upon him that he could depose them when he thought fit: And the Magistrates received Power from the Bishop to judge in Criminal Causes, when the Person was not an Ecclesiastick. Nor need it be brought as an Argument gument against their Sovereignty, that before they entred upon Possession of their Bishoprick, they took an Oath to maintain the Liberty and Privileges of the City, since that it is no more than what most Kings and Princes do at their Coronation. At last, in the Year 1535. the Reformation prevailing in this City, the Bishop, Peter de Beaum, together with the Roman Catholicks, was obliged to leave the City; nor has he or any of his Successors ever been able to return, but live in the enjoyment of their empty Title at Anney, about 26 Miles from Geneva. After this Revolution, the Form of Government was chang'd, and a new Constitution establish'd, which is popular, and not much different from that which is in most of the Swiss Cantons; for the Sovereignty is lodg'd in the Council of 200, out of which Number 25 are chosen to make up the lesser Council; both are for Life, and serve as Checks on one another; the Sovereignty residing in one and the Magistracy in the other. The lesser inspects into the great, when they choose the Counsellors; and the great examines all that the lesser does. Besides these two, there is a third Council, consisting of 60 Persons chosen out of that of 200, which is properly the Council of State; and it is they who direct and advise the lesser Council, in Matters of Importance and Difficulty. The Syndicks are the Chief Magistrates of this little Commonwealth; and are elected by the whole Body of the Burgeses on the first Sunday of the Year. There are several other inferior Courts and Judges, appointed by the grand Council, whose Office is annual.

This City is pretty well fortified, and their Ramparts might secure it against any sudden Surprise or Scalade, but are not sufficient against the vigorous and frequent Attacks of a numerous Army; and therefore they place their greatest Strength and Security in that firm Alliance which they preserve with the Cantons of Zurich and Bern. The most remarkable Things in this City, are the Arsenal, which is very well furnish'd, and (as Doctor Burnet says) the best in the World in proportion to the State, there being Arms in it for more Men than there are in the State; with good store of Cannon. In the Arsenal are also to be seen the famous Scaling Ladders, which the Savoyards made use of when they attempted to surprize the Place, An. 1602. and the Petard, with which they design'd to have broken the new Gate.

The Town-house, which has a Stair-Cafe of singular Workmanship, and is a very fair and stately Building. The publick Library, which is, at the College, and consists of about 3000 Volumes; but it is not in very good order, by reason here is no Fund for augmenting the number of Books or maintaining a Library-keeper. The Academy; which is furnish'd with able Professors; but since the Protestants were expelled France, the number of Students of Divinity is much less: But to make amends for that, especially during the late Wars, many come to this Place to learn their Exercises, especially Protestants. The principal Church is dedicated to St. Peter, and in it is to be seen the Tomb of Hen. 11. Duke of Roban. There is also a Dutch and Italian Church, and there was an English one.

The Streets of this City are very large and beautiful, and the greatest part of their Houses, especially such as have been built within these 20 or 30 Years are of free Stone; but the Town is neither large nor very fine, yet it may (according to Misson) be call'd a very lovely Town. It has the advantage of pleasant Walks, and the Conversation of the Inhabitants is very familiar and easie. The common People are clownish, but honest; and the Persons of Note are extremely kind, civil and ingenious. The vulgar Tongue here is Savoyard, but People of Quality and Breeding speak French. The Revenues of this little State may amount to about 100000 Crowns: And they keep some Gallies on the Lake, and so does the Duke of Savoy and the Switzers.

The Lake is above 50 Miles long, and 12 at most broad, but its depth is not equal or easily found in some Places, as exceeding 500 Fathoms. It is very well stockt with great Variety of good Fish, especially Trouts, some of which weigh above 50 Pound. Which tho' it looks a little strange to us here, Mr. Misson says, he saw one in one of the Halls of the Arsenal of Munick, that weigh'd 73 Pounds. The Water of the Lake is extremely clear and fresh, except when it is disturb'd by the Winds, then it rages like a little Sea. Nor is it credible, that the Rhone passes through it without mingling his Waters, as Polybius, and after him other Authors have maintain'd; for considering the length and crooked Figure of the Lake, that seems absurd and impossible.

CHAP. IV.

The Subjects of the Switzers.

THE Cantons of Switzerland having entred into Alliance with one another, not at the same, but at different times, they must have their particular and separate Subjects; because when a new Canton was receiv'd into the Society of the perpetual League, they did not at the same time enter into the Participation of what the rest possess'd, but only those that they should hereafter acquire. So the Bailiages of Utsnach and Gustal belong to the Cantons of Schwitz and Glaris, and Rhineral to the seven first Cantons, and that of Appenzel. These Bailiages and Places are all govern'd after the same manner, without derogating from their Laws or encroaching upon their Privileges and Customs.

The Cantons to whom they belong send once a Year or once in two Years sometimes, Governors, who are Judges in all Matters, who receive the Revenues and Customs, and make account of their Managements to the Dier of Baden. Nevertheless those Governors are not look'd upon as such in the Bailiages before they take an Oath for maintaining inviolable the Privileges of the Country, which they call their Municipal Laws. In Switzerland these Governors are call'd Bailiffs; but in Italy, Captains. In Criminal Cases they make the Country Magistrates their Assessors, and give an account of their Administration to the Deputies who are sent by the Cantons to Lugan to determin Appeals. In the time of War these Bailiages Bailiages are oblig'd to send their Militia to be litted under the Banners of the Cantons to which they belong.

The Bailiages of Ufnach and Gustal lie between the Lakes of Zurich and Wesen, and because they depend upon the Canton of Schwitz as well as that of Glaris, they have a Governor from each Canton by turns.

Rhinal, Rhingovia, has its Name from the Situation of it along the Rhine, extending from the Lake of Constance to the Barony of Sax. It is divid'd into two Bailiages; that which lies on the right Bank of the Rhine belongs to the House of Austria, that on the other side belongs to the 7 first Cantons and that of Appenzel; and in it there are two little Towns, viz. Alteft and Rhinec upon the Rhine, in the latter of which the Bailiff keeps his Residence. The Inhabitants of this Valley are chiefly employed in spinning Flax, the greatest part of which is employed in the Manufacture of St. Gall.

The County of Sargan, Sargantia, is separated from the Grifons by the Rhine, and owes its Name to the River Sarn, which divides it into two; tho' others are of opinion that it is so call'd from the Sarnutes, People of Rhetie, who dwelt about the Source of the River Inn; but it is not worth the while to debate it. This County was sold to the 7 first Cantons by the Count of Montfort, in the Year 1488. There are in it, besides Sargan, which is a pretty little Town, and enjoys several Privileges, Valbenstat, upon the Lake of Riva, Ragatz, and the Abbey of Pfuers, of the Order of St. Bennet, founded, An. 720.

The Free Provinces, Provincia Libere, consist in certain Villages and Castles lying along the River Rufz, above and below Bremgarten on the left Bank of the River. They are call'd Free, because the Villages of Mayenberg, Richensea, and Argow, set themselves at Liberty, and choose their particular Magistrates. These Provinces formerly made up the County of Rore, the Lord of which resided at Arow. The Lucernois made themselves Masters of it in the time of the Council of Constance, and would have appropriated it to themselves, in prejudice of the 7 old Cantons; but the Canton of Bern being made Umpire to decide the Matter, condemn'd the Lucernois, and made the other Cantons Sharers. Within this Country is the Abbey of Muren, which is the ordinary Residence of the Bailiff.

The Country of Turgow, Turgea or Turgovia, is of a pretty large Extent, reaching from the Lake of Zurich to that of Constance, and takes its Name either from the Taurisci, who inhabited it, or the River Thur, which washes it. The 7 old Cantons possess only a small part of it, viz. that where Dissenbowlies, upon the Rhine between Stein and Schaffbousen; which the Swiss made themselves Masters of, An. 1460. The rest is possess'd by several Proprietors, some of whom are Lay-men, some Clergy-men. The Bishop of Constance possesses the Lordships of Arbon, Tanneg, Guttingen, Gottliebe, and Bischoffzell. The Chapter of Constance that of Alnaw; the Abbot of St. Gall, a considerable part of it. Among the Lay-mens Possessions may be reckon'd, the Seigniories of Pfin, Winfilden, Burglen, Wingi, and Spiegelberg.

The County of Rore, comprehends the Burroughs of Meimberg, Richsee, Mury, Bremgarten and Vilvergen.

The Bailiage of Morat, lies between the County of Arbeg, the Canton of Friburg, and the Bailiages of Louppen and Avenxel. It is the first of the 4 Bailiages that depend on the Cantons of Bern and Friburg. Which they made themselves Masters of during their Wars with Charles the Terrible, Duke of Burgundy.

The Town of Morat, Moratum, or Muratum, lies in the Country of Romont, on a Lake of the same Name, about 6 Miles from Friburg to the North, and 12 from Bern to the West. It is famous on the account of a signal Victory which the Switzers obtain'd over the Forces of Charles Duke of Burgundy on the 22d of June, 1476 in which they slew above 18000 of his Men; and as a Monument of their Victory, built a Chapel in the Field of Battle, in which they put the Bones of the slain. At Friburg they renew the Memory of this and another Battle, by solemn Feasts and publick Rejoicing, twice a Year, viz. the 2d of March, and 22d of June.

The Bailiage of Orbe, is so call'd from a little Town of the same Name, which stands on a Hill, near the little River Orbe, about 5 Miles from Iverdun to the West, and 18 from the Lake of Geneva to the North. It is said to be the ancient Urba, where the Urbigeni dwelt. In this Bailiage also stands the Borough of Efchalen, near the little River Talen.

The Bailiage of Granson, is likewise so call'd from a Town of that Name, near the Lake of Newschatel, about a Mile from the Town of Newschatel to the South, and 3 from Friburg to the West. It is also famous for the Battle which the Bernois and Friburgois gain'd over Charles Duke of Burgundy, An. 1476. on the 2d of March; where this Prince left all his Baggage, which consisted in Money and other Things of great Value.

The Bailiage of Schwartzenberg, is upon the Confines of the Canton of Friburg, and is very well peopled, having many good Villages in it; the chief of which are Valeren, Albingen, and Guggisberg.

The Bailiage of Lugan, Lucarn, Mendrisè, and Valmedie, belong to the 12 first Cantons, by a Donation, which Maximilian Sforza made, in the Year 1512. which was confirm'd by Francis I. after the Battle of Marignan. The Governors of these Bailiages are sent from the several Cantons to which they belong, by turns. They are very well peopled; that of Lugan comprehending 90 Villages, Lucarn 5 Parishes, and the rest proportionally.

The Bailiages of Belzone, Valbrun, and Riviere, belong to the Canton of Uri, Schwitz and Underwald. They did depend on the Duchy of Milan, but were given to these Cantons in the Year 1422. The Dukes of Milan took Possession of them again; but by the Treaty of Alliance which was made between Francis I. and the Cantons, it was agreed, That they should return to the Cantons of Uri, Schwitz, and Underwald, to be enjoy'd by them for ever.

The Stipendary Towns of the Switzers.

THE Towns of Baden, Bremgarten, Mellingen, Rapser, *servi*vil Frawensfeld, are under the Dominion of some of the Cantons, and are call'd Stipendary, because they enjoy some Immunities, as, to live according to their own Laws and Customs, and to choose their own Magistrates; but are oblig'd in the time of War to raise a certain number of Troops, and maintain them at their own Charges.

Baden,

Baden, Castellum Aquarum, or Thermarium, anciently call'd Aque Helvetiae, stands upon the River Limath, which a little below falls into the Aar. It is distant 6 Miles from the Rhine to the South, 30 from Basil to the East, and about 12 from Zurich to the North West. It was the chief Town of a County which pass'd into the Hands of the Counts of Kyburg, An. 1180. by the death of Henry last Count of Baden. Herman of Kyburg leaving no Children, and the Succession being disputed by several Pretenders, Radolph Count of Hapsburg made himself Master of it; and his Successors kept it 'till the time of the Council of Constance. This Town, on the account of the Conveniency of its Situation, several Houses in it being fit for great Assemblies, was chosen for the ordinary Place of the Meetings of the General Diets of the Cantons, and for entertaining Foreign Ambassadors. It is famous for a Conference that was held in it about Matters of Religion. An. 1526. and the mutual League made with the Cantons the same Year. It is call'd Ober Baden, or Upper Baden, to distinguish it from another Town of that Name in Schwaben. Both of them are famous for their hot Baths, and each of 'em are defended by a strong Castle built on a Hill.

Breingarten, Bremocartum, is a little Town upon the Banks of the River Rusz, 15 Miles from Baden, towards Lucern, and 3 from Zug to the North. It was once an imperial Town, afterwards subject to the Counts of Hapsburg, from whom it pass'd to the Dukes of Austria, and from them to the Swiss, and belongs to the 8 first Cantons.

Mellingen, Mellinga, stands upon the same River, about 12 Miles from Zurich to the West, and about 28 from Lucern to the North. The Emperor Sigismund sold it to Zurich, and it now belongs to the 8 old Cantons.

Raperswil, Rapersville, or Ruperti Villa, stands upon the Lake of Zurich, where it is divided into the Lake of Zurich, properly so call'd, and the Upper Lake. It formerly belong'd to the Counts of that Name, who were succeeded by the Counts of Hapsburg. The People of Zurich having ruined it, it was re-built, An. 1351. by Albert Duke of Austria. It is 26 Miles from Zug to the East, and 15 from Zurich to the South East, towards Chur.

Trawenfeld, stands upon the River Murg, about 20 Miles from Constance to the West. The Swiss made themselves Masters of it, An. 1460. in the time of Sigismund Duke of Austria.

S A V O Y,

SAVOY, Sabaudia.

By Rob. Falconer.

THIS Country was anciently inhabited by a part of the Allobroges, the Centrones, the Nantuates, Garocelli, the Veragri and the Sallassi. The Allobroges possess'd that part of the Country which lies between the Rhone where it comes out of the Lake Leman, the Country of the Nantuates, that of the Centrones and the Sere. The Centrones lived in the Vallies of the Alpes Graie (le Mont Joux) now call'd Tarantaise; The Garocelli, in the Country now call'd Maurienne; The Nantuates in that

that which is now Chablais and St. Maurice; The Veragri, in that part of the Valais where Martigni is; And the Salassii, in that which is now the Valley of Aoust. Terentius Varro subdued the Salassii, and Augustus vanquished the rest of those People. After the Roman Empire became a Prey to the barbarous Nations, this Country was possess'd sometimes by one, sometimes by another of 'em. The Burgundians remain'd Masters of it for a long time, and incorporated it into the Kingdom which they establish'd of a part of Gallia Celtica and Gallia Narbonensis. Beson, Count of Ardenne, who married Ermengarde, Daughter of Lewis II. Emperor of Italy, caus'd himself to be chosen King of Provence by the Estates of that Country, assembled at Mentol, in the Month of October, 879. Lewis his Son, surnam'd the Blind, who was likewise King of Italy, left by Adelias, Charles Constantine Prince of Vienne, who had by Theberge, Amadeo Father of Humbert, surnam'd White Hands; from whom some Authors derive the Succession of the Princes of Savoy; tho' others, considerable both for their Authority and Number, will have them come from Berold of Saxony, as the more honourable Stock. And therefore since Historians are so much divided about it, we must desire the Reader to have recourse to those Authors, and go on to that which more properly belongs to a Work of this Nature.

Savoy, is bounded on the North by the Lake of Geneva, and Valais, on the East by the Vallies of Sesia and Piedmont, on the South by Dauphine, and on the West by the Rhone; which separates it from Bugey. The Soil of this Country is generally very good; the Vallies affording plenty of Corn and Grapes, and the Mountains Pasture for great Numbers of Cattel, and good Variety of Game. The Lakes afford good store of Trout, Pikes, and Carps, and several other sorts of Fishes. This Country is very well provided with Timber, especially Walnut and Chestnut Trees. The Air is also cool and temperate, by reason of the great number of Mountains that are always cover'd with Snow. The Isere, Arche, and Arve, are the most considerable Rivers, as those of Binnet and Annecy, are the most noted Lakes. The Savoyards are an industrious and courteous People, and of a gentle Disposition, especially the Persons of Quality, who have something of Greatness in their Looks and Mien. They are all of the Roman Catholick Religion.

The chief Commodities of this Country are Paper, Fustians, raw Silks, Hides, Cloths, Linnen, Thread, Iron-work, Fir-trees for Masts of Ships, and other valuable Things.

JUSTICE is administr'd in this Country very regularly and orderly. There are three Senates to whom Appeals are made from the Bailiages and inferior Tribunals. The first is for Savoy, the second for Piedmont, and the third for the County of Nice and its Dependencies. The Seat of the first is at Chambery; and it is compos'd of 4 Presidents, 15 Senators, without reckoning the Abbot of Hautecomb, who is a Senator born, one Advocat General, one Procurator General, two Registers, and two Secretaries. It was instituted by Amadeo VIII. 1430. The Senate of Piedmont was establish'd by Lewis I. Duke of Savoy, who resolv'd to reside in Piedmont, did by his Ordinance of the 15th of May, 1459. create a Council, in the City of Turin, to determine Affairs in that Country without Appeal; which afterwards assum'd the Name of Senate. It consists of 4 Presidents, 2 Knights, 18 Senators, an Advocate General, and a Procurator General. The Senate of Nice was instituted by Charles Emanuel; and it is compos'd of 2 Presidents, 6 Senators, an Advocat General, and a Procurator General.

Besides these Sovereign Courts, there are two Chambers of Accounts, and a Council of Finances. That of Savoy was instituted by Amadeo the Green, An. 1351. and Philbert Emanuel declar'd it Sovereign and Independent of the Senate of Chambery, by an Edict, dated at Mondovi, 6 Oct. 1630. and at the same time created that of Turin, with the same Prerogatives. The Superintendent of the Finances presides in the Council of that Name, and appoints the Meetings of it. He examines all the Accounts of those who have the Management of the publick Money; and it is here that all Affairs relating to the Finances are examin'd and determin'd.

Altho' the Duke of Savoy be a Vassal of the Empire, he governs his own Dominions with an absolute Authority. His Revenue in all may amounts to about 5000000 Livres; and his Army in time of Peace is very small, but in time of War about 10 or 11 thousand Men. The Situation of his Dominions upon the Confines of France, and at the entry to Italy, renders this Prince considerable, if he be so wise as to know his true Interest. The Alps were formerly a Rampart to them against the Attacks of their Enemies; but after the French King took Pignerol, those Mountains were found not to be inaccessible. Savoy is defended by several strong Places, the best of which is Montmelian. Nice, when it is in the Duke of Savoy's Hands, secures the Communication with the Mediterranean; and towards Lombardy there are several well fortified Places, to oppose the Insults of the Spaniards, who questionless would most willingly have Piedmont, which without doubt is one of the finest Countries in Italy.

Earls and Dukes of Savoy.

Savoÿ is commonly divided into 8 small Provinces, as you may see in the following Table, Savoÿ, properly so call'd,	Montmelian, Ch. Town.

The County of Geneva,	Anncy.
The County of Chablais,	Tonnou.
The County of Aouste,	Aouste.
The Tarantaise,	Mouffriers.
The Valley of Morienne,	St. Jehn de Maurienne.
The County of Foffigny.	Bonneville.
Part of Bugey,	Tenne.

S A V O Y in particular, or properly so call'd, is bounded on the North with the County of Geneva, on the East by Tarantaise and Maurienne, on the South by Dauphiny, and on the West with Bugey and the Rhone. The Chief Towns in it are,

Chambery, Ch. } Rumily.
Montmelian. } Aix.

Chambery, Cameriacum, or Camerium, stands on a Plain, at the Confluence of the two little Rivers Laisse and Albans, 10 Miles from Montmelian to the South, 7 from the Lake of Bourget to the North, about 60 from Lyons to the East, and 30 from Grenoble, and 70 from Geneva to the South. It is a rich and well peopled City; and some rake it for the ancient Forum Voconii, which Pliny and the Itinerary of Antoninus make mention of; tho' Cluverius and others think Draguignan in Provence has a better Title to that ancient Name: And some think it is Cicero that Cicero speaks of in his Epistles; but whatever may be of that, it is now the Chief City of the Duchy of Savoÿ, and a very well built Town. The publick Buildings are very beautiful, particularly an ancient Castle, the principal Church dedicated to S. Leger, the Jesuits College, and some Monasteries. Divers Channels of the River Albans run through the City, as do several little Streams of Springs rising in St. Martin's Hill. In this Place the Emperor Sigismund erected the County of Savoÿ into a Duchy, 19 Febr. 1416. It was taken by the French, 1690. and restor'd by the Treaty of Peace at Turin, 1696.

Montmelian, Montmelianus, is a little City on the right Bank of the Isere, defended by a Citadel, whose principal Strength consists in its Situation, being founded on a Rock; in which is cut out a large Well which supplies the Garrison with fresh Water. The French under the Command of the Constable of Lesdiguières, took it 9 Nov. 1600. And again it was Belieged by the French, under the Command of M. Catenat, 1691. and taken, after a vigorous Resistance; but restor'd by the Treaty of Peace at Turin, 1696.

Aix, Aque Gratiæ, is the chief Town of a Marquisat, and famous for the hot Baths, which were the Work of the Romans; as the Town was rebuilt by the Emperor Gratian. It stands at the Foot of the Mountains between Chambery, Anncy and Rumily. Its Waters are impregnated with Allom and Sulphur, and are very much frequented.

The County of GENEVA, Genevensis Tractus, lies between Bugey, the County of Gex, Foucigny, Savoÿ, properly so call'd, and the Rhone, about 45 Miles long. It was formerly possess'd by its own Lords, who did bear the Title of Counts, and were Vassals to those of Savoÿ. Pope Clement VII. was the last of that Family: After whose Death, his Sisters, the eldest of whom was married to the Sire de Villars, the other to the Prince of Orange, pretended to succeed him; but the Emperor Sigismund adjudg'd it to Amadeo the 8th Duke of Savoÿ, and with it all the Right the Empire could pretend to that Country, and came to an Accommodation with the House of Villars for their Pretensions: And after he was in peaceable Possession of it, gave it to his Son Amadeo, who died without Children, as Fanus Son of Lewis Duke of Savoÿ also did. Philip youngest Son of Philip Duke of Savoÿ got it for his Appenage, or Portion, together with Foucigny and Beaufort; and so it has been handed down from one to another, and at last to this present Duke. The Chief Towns of this County are,

Anncy, Cap. } Tonnes.
Albi. } Clairmont.
La Roche. } Chaumont.

Anncy, Anneckium or Anneckiacum, stands on the Lake of the same name, at the foot of the Mountains, about 20 Miles from Geneva to the South, 24 from Chambery to the North, and about as many from Bellay to the East. There are several little Streams flowing from the Lake through the Town, which form themselves into a River call'd Tioud, and render the Situation of the Town very delightful, and is a great convenience to the Inhabitants. It was formerly a very large and well Peopled City; but since the Fire that happened in it, An. 1448. it has hardly recovered its former greatness, or number of Inhabitants. It has been the Residence of the Bishop of Geneva ever since the Year, 1535. that the Reformers drove him out of Geneva: And here, in the Cathedral Church is preserved the Corps of S. Francis Sales, Bishop of Geneva. There are here also two Collegiat Churches, a Seminary of Priests of S. Lazarus, a College of Barnabites, a Convent of Dominicans, a Monastery of Capuchins, and one of Benedictins, and several others, some of which are very Magnificent. This Place was taken by the French in the Year, 1630. and again by them in the Year, 1690. but restor'd Ann. 1696. by the Treaty of Peace at Turin.

The Country of CHABLAIS, Caballicus Ducatus, is bounded on the North with the Lake of Geneva, on the East with the Valais, on the West by the Counties of Foffigny and Geneva. The Emperor Conrad-Sali gave it to Humbert White Hands; and the Emperor Frederick the II. erected it into a Duchy, Ann. 1233. Formerly it reached as far as S. Maurice: The Valcse made themselves Masters of this Country, Ann. 1536. when Bern and Friberg were engaged in a War with Charles III. Duke of Savoÿ. They were ordered, by an Arrest of the Imperial Chamber to restore it; and Charles V. sent an Herald to Summon them to do it; but they mock'd the Emperor's Threatnings; and by the Treaty of the fourth of August, 1569. they yielded only all that lies between the Rivers Morfes and Dranse; and the Bernois having before, in execution of the Treaty of Lausanna 15 Oct. 1564. surrender'd all that they possess'd in the Bailliage of Tomon, Terricer and Galliard. This Province is about 30 Miles long, and 12 broad. The Chief Towns in it are,

Tonnou, Cap. } Ternier.
Eviand. } Galliard.
Aups. } Ripaille.

Tonnou, Tunonium, stands upon the Lake of Geneva, about 25 Miles from the City of that Name to the East, 30 from Anncy to the North-East, and 15 from Lussanna to the South; and is a very delightful Place.

The Duchy of AOUSTE, Augustanus Ducatus, is bounded with Valais on the North, Vercellois and the Valleys of Sesia on the East, Maurienne on the South, and Savoie and Foucigny on the West. It is a mountainous but fertile Country, and is divided commonly into 7 Parts or Valleys. It was anciently inhabited by the Salassii, and afterwards had its own particular Masters, till the Marquiss of Susa took possession of one part; and the Bishops of Aouste became Proprietors of a part of their Diocess under the Emperor's Sovereignty. This Duchy was united to Savoie by the Marriage of Adelaide of Susa with Amadeo the II. Count of Savoie, together with the Marquisate of Susa, and the Duchy of Turin. The Emperor Frederick the II. erected it into a Duchy in the Month of February, 1238. in favour of Thomas. The chief Towns in it are,

Aouste , B. Cap.	}	Chantillon .
Morges .		Cour-majour , anciently
Issogne .		Curia Major .
Montjouxet .		Donas .
Bardfort .

Aouste, Augusta Prætoria or Augusta Salassorum, stands in the middle of a Valley of that Name, upon the Banks of the Dovea, where the Rivulet Baugteggio runs into it; 25 Miles from Furea to the South, 50 from Turin to the North, and but 10 from the Confines of the Milanæse to the West. Augustus (as it is commonly believed) sent a Colony here, and would have it nam'd after him, Augusta Prætoria, whereas before it was call'd Cordella by the Salassii, from one Cordellus Stæstelus, who, they say, was the Founder of it. There is still to be seen here a Triumphal-Arch rais'd in honour of Augustus, in Memory of the Victory he obtain'd over the People of the Alpes; and 'twas for this Reason that it was call'd the Tropæe of the Alpes; which some less knowing Writers have placed at Turbie near Monaco. The Bishop of Aouste is Suffragan to the Archbishop of Tarentaise. St. Anselm Bishop of Canterbury was Born here.

The TARENTEISE, Tarentasia, is bounded with the Alpes, and the Duchy of Aouste on the East, Tossigny on the North, Savoie proper on the West, and the Valley of Maurienne on the South. It was anciently inhabited by the Centrones, and for a long time was governed by Lords of its own; from whom it pass'd to the House of Briançon. Amery did treat his Subjects so cruelly, that Humbert II. Count of Savoie, being invited by Heraclius, Archbishop of Tarentaise, made himself Master of this Country, and united it to his Dominions. It lies extended between the Village S. Gervain, which is at the Foot of the Hill call'd little S. Bernard, to Mount Sapey and Regnez, about 36 Miles in length. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Moustriers , Ch. Ar. B.
S. Maurice .
Briançon .

Moustriers, Ministerium, or Forum Neronis, stands upon the Iserè, where the Brook Doron runs into it, 43 Miles from Chambery to the East, towards Aouste, 60 from the Lake of Geneva to the South, and 60 from Turin to the North West. The River Iserè divides into two Parts, and the Avenues to it are extremely difficult, by reason there is no way to come at it but by defiles, or narrow passes betwixt Torrents and Precipices. Some Geographers have taken this for the ancient Tarentia, which had been formerly call'd Forum Claudii; but they mistake it; for after this Town was ruined, the Archbishoprick was transfer'd to Monstiers. The Bishopricks of Aouste and Sion are Suffragan to it.

The County of MAURIENNE, Mauriana, lies between the Alpes and the Iserè, between Tarentaise on the North, and Dauphiny on the South. It is a Valley of about 50 Miles long, beginning at Chamoux, a little below the Confluence of the Arche and Iserè, and ending at the foot of Mount Genis. It is a fertile Country, particularly of Saffron and Pasturage, and contains about 100 Parishes: And is a part of the ancient Estate of the House of Savoie; for Humbert White Hands, had for his Patrimony the County of Savoie and that of Maurienne, together with Chablais and Valais. The only considerable Town in it is St. John Maurienne, altho' there be several others of less note, as,

S. Andrew .	}	La Chambre .
S. Michael .		St. Julian .
Modane .		Issè .

St. John Maurienne, Emman S. Johannis Mauriani, stands upon a Plain in the middle of a Valley, upon the Banks of the little River Arche, 10 Miles from the Frontiers of Dauphine to the East, 65 North West from Turin. It is a very fair Town, but not Fortified: And is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Vienne. In the Cathedral Church of S. John are to be seen many Tombs of the Dukes of Savoie.

The Province of FOSSIGNY, or Foucigny, Fociniacensis Tractus, lies at the Foot of the Alpes, between the County of Geneva on the West, of which it was formerly a part, and that of Valais on the East. For a long time it was governed by particular Lords, descended from Emerard, who lived in the 10th Century, and whose Posterity fail'd, Ann. 1200. in the Person of William, whose only Daughter and Heiress married Thomas Count of Savoie. It has been the Portion of the Brothers of this Family, but was re-united to the Dukedom of Savoie, 1659. The most remarkable Towns in it are,

Bonneville , Cap.	}	Salanches .
Passi .		Cluse .
Vieu .		Tanning .

Bonneville, Bonopolis, stands in the Low Foucigny, at the foot of the Mountains, on the River Arve, 16 Miles below Cluse, 15 from Amcey to the North, and 20 from Geneva to the South East. It is defended by an old Castle, and is the Seat of the chief Justice of the Country.

That part of Bugey, which remains in the possession of the Duke of Savoie, by the Treaty of Lions, comprehends only that which lies on the other side of the Rhone, and is 24 Miles long, and 6 broad; from the Mountain Chal to the Rhone. The most remarkable Towns in it are, Yenne, a little Town, surrounded with a Wall, Loiffey, a considerable Burrow, and chief Town of a Barony, and the Suburbs of Pont-Beauvoisin, a Town in Dauphiny upon the River Gue, which is the Bounds betwixt this Province and Dauphiny.

The County of NICE, &c.

THE County of Nice is bounded on the North with the Marquisate of Salusse, the County of Tende and the Genovesat on the East, the Mediterranean ranean Sea on the South, and the County of Bueil and Provence on the West. The Vediantri were the ancient Inhabitants of it. Amadeo the Red, Duke of Savoy, got it by a voluntary offer of the People of Nice, in the Year, 1388. Ladislas Son of Charles de Duras not being in a Condition to give them Succour. Ladislas is said to have confirm'd this Alienation by an Act made at Viterbo, the 18th of January, 1402. And by the Treaty of Chambery, the 5th of October, 1419. Yoland of Aragon, Mother and Tutors to Lewis III. King of Naples, and Count of Provence, did resign to Amadeo the VIII. all the Right that her Son could claim to that County, and the Principality of Barcellona; in recompence of which Amadeo did discharge the Sum of a Hundred and sixty thousand Livres, which Amadeo the VI. his Uncle had lent to Lewis the I. Uncle of Lewis the III. for his Expedition into Naples. But this Cession of Yoland's, as most think, was contrary to the Fundamental Laws of the Land, and the express Acts of the Counts of Provence, and consequently of no Force. However the Case may be, we must leave it to be decided by others, and go on to that which is more properly our Business. The most considerable Towns in this County are Nice and Ville franche.

Nice, Nicea, from whom the County takes its Name, stands on the Sea, and is defended by a good Citadel, which also may command the Port; which is none of the best, the Anchorage not being good. This Town was built by a Colony of the Marsilians; from the Ruins of the ancient Cemenelum, a City of the Vediantii. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Ambrun: And is distant about 2 Miles from the Mouth of the River Varo, and 7 from Monaco, and 15 from the Frontiers of the Genouevse to the West, and 60 from Pignerol to the South. It was taken by the French in the Year, 1691. and restor'd, Ann. 1696. by the Treaty of Peace at Turin.

Ville Franche, Olivoula, stands upon the Sea of Genoua, about 2 Miles from Nice. It is thought to be the ancient Olivoula Portus, by some; but others, particularly Petrus Jofredus, think that Olivoula Portus stood 5 Miles to the East of Nice; but whatever may be of that, Charles II. King of Naples and Count of Provence caus'd it to be built, Ann. 1295. It stands in a Bottom among high Hills, which render its Harbour an excellent Shelter from Winds, and the entry to it is defended by a Castle, and within by a Citadel; which Emanuel Philbert Duke of Savoy caus'd to be built. It was restor'd to Savoy by the King of France, Ann. 1696. by the Treaty of Peace at Turin.

The Principality or Valley of BARCELLONET, Barcino, is bounded on the North with the Marquisar of Salusse and Ambrun, on the East by the County of Nice, and on the South and West by Provence. The Inhabitants of it acknowledg'd Amadeo the VII. Duke of Savoy for their Lord, in the Month of May, 1388. The Town of Barcellona is no very large one, tho' it be the only one of any Note in this Valley. It stands upon the little River Hubay, near the Frontiers of Dauphine, and 20 Miles South East from Embrun; and was built by Ramond Berenger, Count of Provence, Ann. 1230. There are besides in this Principality Poget, and the Valley of Erienne, which has its own particular Governour, and is properly an Annex of the former.

The County of Tende, Comitatus Tendensis, is bounded on the North by Piedmont, on the East by the County of Genoua, and on the South and West by the County of Nice. It was formerly in the Possession of the Family of Lascaris, who were descended from the Emperors of Constantinople by the Mother's side. It pass'd into the Family of Savoy by the Marriage of Ann, only Daughter of John Antony last Count of Tende, with Reue of Savoy, natural Son of Philip Duke of Savoy; who in consideration of this Marriage, gave his Son all his Estate; which was done the 28th of January, 1501. The Town of Tende is a pretty little Burrow, in the Appenines, upon the Confines of the County of Genoua, about 30 Miles from Nice to the North, and near 50 from Turin to the South.

The County of Bueil or Boglio, Bolcensis Comitatus, is bounded with Barcellona on the North, the County of Nice on the East, and Provence on the South and West. For a long time it belong'd to the Family of Grimaldi; who had a very just Title to it; but the Senare of Nice having condemn'd Hannibal Grimaldi, Count of Bueil as guilty of Treason, under the Reign of Charles Emanuel, confiscat'd all his Estate. Andrew Grimaldi his Son, was restor'd to it by Prince Maurice; but by some secret Article of the Accommodation, agreed upon between this Prince and the Dutchess of Savoy the 14th of July, 1642. She, without either approving or disapproving what Maurice had done in favour of this Andrew, promis'd to allow him 30000 Livres per Annum during the Minority of the Duke of Savoy, her Son: And that, till he should be of Age to do him Justice, he should remove out of the Dominions of Savoy with all his Family: Since which time, neither he nor his Children have been able to obtain Satisfaction for this Usurpation. The Town of Boglio or Bueil, stands on the Frontiers of Provence, about 30 Miles from Nice to the North, and 40 from Pignerol to the South.

The Principality of Oneille or Oneglia, Onelia Traëtus, is almost enclosed within the West part of the Genouevse. It formerly belong'd to the Family of Doria; till Ferom Doria, either exchang'd it for some other Lands, or sold it to Emanuel Philbert Duke of Savoy, in the Year, 1576. Charles Emanuel erected it into a Principality, by his Letters Patents dat'd at Turin, the 17th of December, 1620. It comprehends the Lordships of Marro and Prela, which are very fertile and well Peopled Countries. The Town of Oneglia or Oneille, stands upon the Sea, about 10 Miles from Nice to the West, 20 from Vintimiglia, and as many from Mondovi to the South: And drives a great Trade in Oyl.

ITALY.

By Rob. Falconer.

CHAP. I. Of ITALY in General.

ITALY, as it was anciently the most famous Country in the World, being the Seat of the glorious Roman Empire, from whence Laws and Decrees were issued our almost over all the then known World, for the Government of those mighty States and powerful Kingdoms which it had swallowed up and brought under its Subjection; So it is at this time one of the most Fertile, and on many Accounts

Accounts most delightful Countries on Earth. If one does consider the vast number of valiant and prudent Generals, as, Camillus, Fabius Maximus, the Scipio's, Pompey, Caesar, &c. The famous Orators, as, Cicero, Hortensius, Antonius, &c. the Admirable and almost inspir'd Poets, as, Virgil, Ovid, Catullus, Tibullus, Plautus, Terence, Horace, Juvenal, Persius, &c. all excellent in their kind; & the renown'd Historians, as, Livy, Tacitus, Sallust, &c. I say if one should consider all these, and besides, the stupendous and lasting Monuments of Power and Wealth, such as, particularly, their Publick Buildings, Causeways, and such like, he must necessarily confess, that never any Country had more advantages than this has had; inasmuch, that the Gods and Muses seem to have been emulously concern'd to make it the Glory and Envy of the World in those days, as it is the Wonder and Admiration of all who see it in these. And altho' the Art of War and Arms flourish'd more in this Country anciently than it does now, when the softer Arts, of Painting, Architecture, Musick, &c. seem to be the chief Study and Employment of the Inhabitants; yet it cannot be said that the former has been quite neglected, or that the Muses have forsaken this Country. Thomas Aquinas, Bellarmine, and Baronius, were great Divines in their way: Rodolphus Volterranus, and Picus Mirandula, were good Humanists; Ficino, Cardan, Galileo, Torricelli, Malpoggi, Borelli, Redi, &c. good Mathematicians and Philosophers; Panigarole and Loredano good Orators; Guicciardine, Benivoglio, Davila, and Strada, excellent Historians; Tasso and Arosto, famous Poets, and Raphael, Michael Angelo, Titian, &c. admirable Painters.

As for the NAMES of this Country, it has had several, as, Hesperia, Saturnia, Ausonia, Oenatria, and Latium, which, tho' they were but the Names of particular Parts of it at first, were used by the ancient Grecians to signify the whole; and in that they were imitated afterwards by the Latin Poets. How it came to be call'd Italia, is much (and perhaps too nicely) disputed among the Antiquaries; some deriving it from the Greek word Ἰταλῶς , which signifies the same as Taurus, a Bull; because this Country abounded with such, of an extraordinary size, and very beautiful. Others, with greater probability, bring it from one Italus, King of the Siculi, who first inhabited Sabina and Latium; and that this Name afterwards was given to the whole Country betwixt the Alpes and the Streights of Messina, or Il Faro de Messina. There are several other Accounts of it, but we hope the Reader will excuse the omitting them here; or if he has a mind to know more of this Matter, he may consult Bochart and others, who have labour'd abundantly in that sort of Criticism.

Nature seems to have had more than ordinary care of this Country, in giving it so convenient a Situation; it being bounded on the North with the Alpes, on the East with the River Arfa, in Histria, and the Gulf of Venice, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, on the West by the Alpes and the River Var. Its length (according to Cluverius) from Aouste, a Town at the Foot of the Mountain call'd Great S. Bernard, to Regio, and the Capo del Armi, is about 900 Miles. Its breadth is different, but under the Alpes it is about 560 Miles broad. It lies between 26 and 38 degrees Longitude, and 37 and 46 Latitude; the figure of it resembling a Man's Leg; and some, who trace this Comparison a little nicely say, that the end of it serves to kick Sicily into the Sea; tho' indeed I should think this Island deserved better Treatment from Italy; for it was very useful to the ancient Romans, by reason of its Fertility and great Product of Corn; and the modern Italians, no doubt, are often beholding to it. They say farther, that the Toes of it appear at the Faro of Messina, the Heel about Otranto, the Soal towards Mount S. Angelo, the Calf about Ancona, the Ham about Ravenna, the Knee towards Piombino and the Port of Lighorn, and the Thigh towards the Alpes.

The SOIL, generally over all Italy is very good, and watered with a good number of Rivers, whose Courses are not long by reason the Country is not very broad; and the Air (some Places in the Ecclesiastical State excepted) healthful and pretty temperate; but after hot Days the Nights are found to be very cold in comparison. The Product of Italy is, Corn, Grapes of several kinds, of which many sorts of Wine are made, Oranges, Citrons, Lemons, Pomegranates, and Olives, whose Oyl turns to good account. And in the South parts of it, are some Sugar, Almonds, and abundance of Mulberry-Trees, which have render'd that Country famous for its Silk Manufactories. Their Meadows are well stock'd with Buffles and other sorts of Cattle, as their Forests are with great variety of Game. There are likewise in this Country Rocks of Alabaster, and a rich kind of Asper; also Mines of Iron, Alom. Sulphur, Gold and Silver.

The most considerable Rivers are, the Po, the Tyber, the Arno, the Adige, the Adda, and the Tesin. The chief Lakes are those of Como, Isco, Lucano, Garda, that of Trafimenus, Uulsin, Braciano, Tusinas, Fundi, Lago di Castello, Gendalpo, Celano, Andora, Varan, Lesine, and that of Bolsano. The most remarkable Mountains are, the Alpes, the Appennines, Mount Masso, Mount Barbaro, Vesuvius, and Mount S. Angelo.

Italy hath been differently divided by the Ancients, according as Nations shifted their Habitations or mingled with one another. After vast Numbers of the Gauls, who liv'd betwixt the Ocean, the Rhine, the Alpes, the Mediterranean Sea and the Pyrenees, had cross'd the Alpes, and taken Possession of that part of Italy which lies between the Alpes and the Appennines, as far as the River Æsis, or Esino, the Romans call'd that Country Gallia Italica, and Gallia Citerior, and Cisalpina, and Gallia Circumpadana, and also Togata, because they had assum'd the Roman Habit as well as their Customs; whereas that on the other side was call'd Gallia Comata, because the Inhabitants used to wear their Hair long. The Emperor Augustus, as Pliny relates, divided Italy into 11 Regions, viz. Liguria, Herruria, Latium, Campania Felix, Samnium, Picenum, Umbria, Gallia Togata, Gallia Transpadana, Venetia and Istria. Strabo divided it into 8 Regions or Parts, viz. Venetia, Liguria, Picenum, Lucania, Tuscia, Roma, Campania, and Apulia. Antoninus the Emperor in his Itinerary, divides it into 16 Provinces; and Ptolemy into 45 Nations or People. After the Dignity and Seat of the Roman Empire was translated to Germany, Italy was at several times frangely haras'd and torn in a great many little Pieces, which were establish'd into Principalities, Duchies, Counties, and Marquises, as the Marquise of Istria, the Duchy of Friuli, the Duchy of Milan, the Duchy of Mantua, and a great many more. Italy, as it is now, may be very fitly divided according to the several Sovereignties in it; of which we shall treat afterwards. Who

Who the first Inhabitants of Italy were, is a very hard matter to tell, it being so long ago since it was first peopled. Whether any one People sometime after the Flood came into this Country and in time spread themselves over it all, or whether different People at different times came into it and possess'd themselves of such Parts of it as they found uninhabited, and gave different Names to the Places where they settled, is more than can be well determin'd. The Aufones are said to be the most ancient, and to have possess'd the most Southern Parts of Italy, where the Brutii and Lucani liv'd afterwards; next to these the Opici and Ofci, who liv'd in Campania and Sannium; then the Siculi, in Sabina and Laium; the Umbri, whose Territories reach'd between the Mare Superum, or Hadriatick, and Inferum, or Tyrrhenian Sea; next to these the Tusci, whose Country reach'd as far as the Alpes; and next to them again the Ligures, whose Dominions reach'd as far into Gallia as the Rhone; beyond these were the Veneti, whom some will have to be come from Illyricum, others from the Hereti, a People in Paphlagonia. The Gauls drove out the Tusci, as these did the Umbri out of their Territories. A certain People, call'd Oenotrii from their Leader, drove the Aufones out of their foresaid Habitations, and forc'd them to seek themselves a new Seat as far North as the River Luis or Borigiano, and Vulturum, or Volturno; and not satisfied with that, they likewise expell'd the Siculi out of their Country, and assum'd the Name of Aborigines, as they did afterwards that of Latini. The Sabini were descended from the Opici, of those came the Picentes, Vestini, Marsi, Prentani, Peligni, Mavuccini, Sammites, and from these the Campani Lucani, and the Brutii. In the mean time several Families arriving from Greece, at different times, fill'd all the Sea Coast along the Mare Superum and Inferum, and built many good Towns; and by this means, as Strabo and Trogus relate, Italy and Sicily came to be call'd Magna Græcia. But other People having expell'd the Grecians out of most of their Possessions, forc'd them to confine themselves within that which afterwards was call'd Magna Græcia, and is now call'd Calabria Superior. But after the Roman State was become powerful, and had subdued all Italy, it continued under the Roman Jurisdiction, divided and distinguished into Regions and People, as we've said already, 'till the time of Honorius the Emperor; when the Goths, Vandals, and Heruli, People of Germany, and the Huns passing the Alpes, invaded this whole Country, and divided it into several little Kingdoms and States. Justinian having driven out all these, establish'd the Exarchat of Ravenna, whilest Rome lay in its Ruins. At last the Longobards having taken Ravenna, establish'd their Kingdom in Gallia Togata; but they were rooted out by the Valour and Conduct of Pepin King of France, and his Son Charlemain, who had been call'd into Italy for that end by the Pope; to whom he gave a great part of the Revenues of that Country, reserving to himself the Sovereignty. Pepin died in the Year 768. and Charlemain was Crown'd Emperor in 800.

I am hopeful the Reader will not think himself abus'd, or look upon it as a thing foreign to a Work of this Nature, if we refresh his Memory a little here with some few Hints concerning the Rise, Progress, and Fall of the Roman Empire. Every Body almost knows that the first Inhabitants of Rome were a sorry Rabble of indigent People, and the very Dregs of Italy; who might, justly be call'd a Den of Wolves, since they liv'd by continual Robberies, and thirsted after their Neighbours Goods and Blood. The hand-breach of Ground which they first possess'd, was too little to maintain a considerable number of People; and therefore they must either have always remain'd Beggars, or cut out their Fortunes with their Swords. As mean and inconsiderable as their beginning was, by the Valour of some of their Kings, and prudent Management of others, and afterwards by the good Qualifications of their Generals, and Wisdom of their Senate, they grew up to such a Pitch of Power and Glory, that never any State on Earth was able to equal, much less to excel them. One good Politick of theirs was, that they no sooner conquer'd a Nation, than they transplanted the best and richest Men of it to Rome, and sent Romans in their Places. Athens and Lacedæmon seldom naturaliz'd Strangers; but Rome observ'd that good Politick; Romulus its Founder having set the Copy; for 'tis said of him, That he us'd to receive as Citizens of Rome in the Evening, those with whom he had fought in the Morning. Sevius Tullius did prudently correct a considerable Mistake in the former Reigns; for under them it was allow'd that every Body without distinction should serve in the Wars; whereas he ordered that only the ablest and most wealthy Citizens (except upon extraordinary Occasions) should serve as Soldiers, who were to equip themselves according to their Ability; wisely considering, that their Wealth was a Pledge of their Fidelity; and by fighting valiantly for their Country, they secur'd their private Possessions; whereas a poor Man carries all his Wealth with him; and if he has a Prospect of being better with the Enemy, 'twill be no hard matter to persuade him to desert his own Party. And after this Custom grew out of fashion, in the time of the Emperors, yet they us'd to keep part of the Soldiers Arrears behind, to secure the Fidelity of the Army, which was never clear'd 'till they were dismiss'd.

Never any but Porfenna and the Gauls were able to bring them to dishonourable Conditions of Peace; the first having oblig'd them to give Hostages, that they should make no Iron-work, but what was requisite to Till the Ground; the other, forcing them to prevent the utter Ruin of Rome by a Sum of Money. For the Story of Camillus's coming up just at the time of weighing out of the Gold, and driving the Gauls from the Capitol, is look'd upon by many as fabulous. The former of these the Roman Writers have cautiously avoided to speak of, as they have taken care to disguise the other. These, I think, are the only Instances. Upon all other Occasions they did bear their Misfortunes and Losses with the greatest Fortitude and Constancy imaginable, and sometimes rather deliver'd up their Generals, and suffer'd their Soldiers to be made Slaves than agree to base and disadvantageous Conditions. It is very well known that their Form of Government was various. They began with the Kingly, which lasted 242 Years, 'till Sixtus Tarquinius gave some sort of Pretence for altering it, by his ravishing Lucretia. The Fact was abominable, 'tis true, and Junius Brutus had good reason to be angry; but whether his and the Peoples Resentment ought to have been carried so high, is more than I will say. For (as the judicious Puffendorf observes) a Fact, tho' never so criminal, committed by a Son, without the Knowledge and Consent of his Father, ought not to be prejudicial to the Father and Family; much less could be a pretence to depose a King from a Throne which he lawfully possess'd; especially since to take Vengeance of Criminals belongs to the King, and not to the Subjects. After the Expulsion of the Kings, an Aristocratical Form of Government was introduc'd, which prov'd as heavy a Yoke to the Necks of the People as the former. For at that time there were no written Laws in Rome; and the Nobility being in Possession of all publick Offices, give Sentence more according to Favour and Affection than Justice. And the Citizens being obliged to serve in the Wars at their own Charge, became miserably exhausted, and were forc'd to borrow from the richer sort; and not being able to pay their Debts, were grievously oppress'd by their Creditors, and at last reduc'd to that degree of Despair that they unanimously left the City. Neither could they be persuaded to return, before the Senate had agreed to constitute Magistrates, call'd Tribunes of the People, who were to protect the Commons against the Nobility; which, as it form'd a new Division in the State at that time, did afterwards afford perpetual Fuel for Civil Dissentions, 'till at last they broke out into Civil Wars, and sheath'd their Swords in each others Bowels.

After this Common-wealth, notwithstanding all those intestine Commotions and Divisions, had arriv'd to its highest Pitch of Greatness, it return'd again to a Monarchy, tho' not of the best kind. Augustus, as he laid the Foundation of it, so by his wife and prudent Management he seem'd to have settled it pretty well; but the Nobility not being able to brook the Government of one Person, who was rais'd by the Soldiers, without their Consent, was always for recovering their ancient Liberty; which obliged the succeeding Emperors, first to weaken, and afterwards extinguish the Power and Splendor of this Order, insomuch that within the space of 200 Years, few of 'em were left, and upstart Favourites put in their Places. Thus the Senate and People became empty Names; and the Emperors were no more than the Creatures of the Army: And as double Pay and great Presents purchas'd them the Favour of the Soldiers, and procur'd them the Title; so the want of Money to support themselves withal, was thought sufficient ground for taking away their Lives, to make way for another whose Coffers were fuller. Hence came nothing but Misery and Confusion in the Roman Empire: And oftentimes the bravest Princes were basely murder'd, and some of the lowest Rank and meanest Capacity set up in their Room: And sometimes two or more were declar'd Emperors, by several parts of the Army, who made horrid slaughter among the Citizens in deciding their Titles to the Empire. As this did mightily weaken the Strength of this vast Body, so Constantine the Great hasten'd its Fall, by transferring the Imperial Court to Constantinople, and sending away the veterane Legions which guarded the Frontiers of the Empire along the Danube and Rhine, to the Eastern Parts, whereby the Western Provinces, destitute of their Guards, became a Prey to other Nations. After the Western Empire had fallen into the Hands of the Germans, Goths, Vandals, Suevians, Franks, and others, the Eastern Provinces remain'd for a great many hundred Years after, 'till at last the City of Constantinople being storm'd and taken by the Turks, in the Year 1453. this part of the Roman Empire also was brought to its fatal Period, and Constantinople made the Place of the ordinary Residence of the Ottoman Emperors.

The Roman Emperors who resided in Italy.

472. 13. Glycerius.
14. Julius Nepos.
473. 15. Augustulus, vanquish'd by Odoacer King of the Heruli, &c.

As to the Forms of Government and Administration of Justice in Italy, the Reader is to expect that in the particular Descriptions of the several Sovereignties in it; and so we go on to the GENIUS and CUSTOMS of the Italians. They are generally very Ingenious, ready Witted, and of great Application in Study and Business: Of a middle Temper, between the Starch Gravity of a Spaniard, and the Levity of a French Man. They have a great Sense of Gratitude, and are willing and ready upon all Occasions to return a Favour done them, tho' never so inconsiderable; but on the other Hand, they are revengful in the highest degree, and cannot forget Injuries. They have a great Affection towards their Kindred and Alliance; and are very Ambitious of Honours and Preferment. To keep the World and themselves in Mind that they are the Successors of the old Romans, they mightily affect their ancient Names with a little variation, as, Camillo, Scipione, Julio, Mario, Pompeio, &c. For all their Gravity, there's no People on Earth that can Act a Buffoon, Mimick or Scaramouch, comparable to them. They shun all occasions of Quarrelling, especially with Strangers; to whom they are very Civil and Courteous, after once you have got their Acquaintance. They are great Lovers of Liberty; and therefore in many Places Discourses and Books about former Revolutions are forbid. The Italian Nobility and Gentry live most in Towns, and lay out their Money more upon fine Houses and Gardens, Pictures, Statues, and such Things as may contribute to the adorning their Houses: And upon fine Coaches and a handsome Retinue of Servants (who are for the most part on Board-wages) than on luxurious Tables and strong Liquors; which is too common in other parts of Europe. If there are two or more Brothers in a Family, it often happens that only one of them Marries, commonly the Eldest; and the rest live upon Purchase. In many Places they have Hospitals for entertaining Pilgrims and poor Travellers; and others for Nursing and bringing up Children, whom Fear or Shame obliges the Parents to expose. When they lay them down, they have no more to do but ring a Bell, and tell the Officer that comes for the Child, whether it be Baptized or not. The Italians are the most scrupulously nice upon all the little Punctilios of Civility of any People in the World, and profusely lavish of their Complements and high Titles: And know exactly how to receive and entertain Persons of all Ranks and Conditions. They never Whisper in a Company, or Talk in another Language, or interrupt any Man before he has done what he had a mind to say; and nothing is thought more odious among them than Slandering and Backbiting. They never visit Persons of Note without first sending them Word. The right Hand is more Honourable than the Left, when two Walk together, and the middle when Three. Their Conversation is very Civil and Obliging, nor does the greatest Familiarity make them forget their courteous Carriage.

They have some Customs more peculiar to themselves, such as their reckoning their Hours from Sun-set to Sun-set, as the Athenians of old did. They Sleep commonly two Hours after Dinner. They make their Children go Bare-headed till they are five Years old, to harden them and prevent Catarrhs when they come to be old. Their Women affect yellow Hair, as the Roman Ladies and Curtezans did of old, and have a particular Wash for it. After the Men have been abroad visiting or so, they throw off their Hat, Bands and Cuffs; and put on a Gray Coat and a Cap, which they commonly Dine in. When they call one at a distance, they point to him with their Finger downwards, looking upon it as an Affront to do it upwards. At their Meals, they begin with their roast Meat and end with their Porrage; and roast their Meat very dry. Boy'd Snails serv'd up with Pepper and Oyl, and fry'd Frogs serv'd up the same way, are in great esteem. They commonly eat Kites, Hawks, Maggies, Jackdaws and several other lesser Birds which are not us'd here: And drink their Wine in Winter as well as in Summer out of Snow.

The Italian Language is the old Latin corrupted by the Goths, Vandals and other Nations. In Savoy and Piedmont the French is generally Spoke. There are in Italy above 30 Archbishopricks; and the inferior Bishoppicks, as they are generally small, so they are almost innumerable. There are also 12 Universities, viz. Padua, Venice, Turin, Pavia, Siena, Bovina, Rome, Ferrara, Maccrata, Fermo, Naples and Salerno. Bononia was formerly Famous for the Study of the Roman Laws, as Salerno was for that of Medicine. There are several of the most considerable Cities and Towns in Italy that have peculiar Epithets commonly given them, as, Rome, the Holy, because it is the Seat of the Pope; Naples the Noble, because of the great Number of Nobility and Gentry that are in it: Florence the Fair, because of the stateliness of the Houses, and the broadness and cleanness of its Streets; Venice the Rich, because of its power and great Riches; Genoua the Stately, because of its Magnificent Buildings; Milan the Great, because of its largeness and great number of Inhabitants; Ravenna the Ancient, because it is so; Padua the Learned, because there Learning flourish'd; Bononia the Fat, because of the Excellency of the Soil about it; Leghorn the Merchandizing; Verona the Charming; Lucca the Jolly; Casal the Strong, &c.

As we have laid already, Italy cannot be more fitly divided, considering the present State of it, and by whom it is now possess'd, than according to the several Dominions and Sovereignties that are in it, viz. Those of the King of Spain, the Pope, the Republick of Venice, the Great Duke of Tuscany, the Republick of Genoua, the Duke of Parma, the Duke of Savoy in Piedmont, the Swissers beyond the Lakes of Maggiore and Como. The Grisons in the Alpes, the Arch-Duke of Austria in Tirol, Friuli and Istria, the Duke of Modena, the Duke of Mantua, the Duke of Urbino, the City of Lucca, the Count of Mirandula, and the Republick of S. Marino. But because, throughout all this Work we have observ'd one Order of describing the Kingdoms and Countries according as they are situated next to one another, (tho' perhaps describing the Dominions of particular Princes all together, however they may be dispersed, as those of Spain are in Italy, would be no ill Method) we shall begin with that part of Italy that lies next to France, and so go on to the most southern Parts of it, in the same Order as you see in the following Table.

- I. The Dominions of the Duke of Savoy in Piedmont.
- II. The Coasts of Genoua.
- III. The Marquisate of Montserrat.
- IV. The Duchy of Milan.
- V. The Duchy of Parma.

CHAPTER II.

PIEDMONT.

Piedmont, Pedemontium, owes its Name to its Situation, at the foot of the Mountains. It was anciently called Gallia Subalpina, and is bounded (according to Baudrand and others) with the Duchy of Milan and Monferrat on the East, the Genouisy and the County of Nice on the South, Dauphiny and Savoy on the West, and the Duchy of Aouste and a small part of the Duchy of Milan on the North: And divided into two Parts by the River Po. It is about 140 Miles long South and North, and 100 broad East and West. Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, divided it into 12 Parts or Provinces, to which his Successour Duke Victor Amadee added 4 more: So that now (according to Franciscus Augustinus, Bishop of Saluzzo) it is divided into 16 Provinces.

Theodorick, King of the Goths, having vanquish'd Odoacer King of Italy, gave this Country to the Heruli; who were subdued by the Lombards; whose 17th King, Aripert, gave it to the Church of Rome; but it lying far off, and not being confirm'd by his Successours, at the Subversion of that Kingdom, it fell into the Hands of the Kings of Italy, of the House of Charles the Great. Thomas and Peter, Counts of Savoy, made themselves Masters of the greatest part of it by force of Arms; the former in the Year, 1210. the latter in the Year, 1256. since which time the eldest Son of Savoy is stil'd Prince of Piedmont. The Marquisate of Saluzzo (which we shall have occasion to speak of afterwards) was annex'd to it by the Marriage of a Daughter of this Family, with Charles Duke of Savoy, An. 1481.

Piedmont as it is a very fertile and rich Country, so it is also one of the most pleasant and plentiful in all Italy. It produces plenty of Corn, Wine, Fruit, Hemp, Flax, Metals, and affords good store of Cattle, and every thing fit for the use and delight of Man; and is so populous, that the Italians us'd to say, That the Duke of Savoy had but one City in Italy 300 Miles in Compass.

Norwithstanding the different Divisions that have been made of this Country at several times, as we said before, it may not improperly be divided now into 10 Parts: Although one of them, call'd the French Piedmont, was restor'd to the Duke of Savoy by the Treaty of Peace at Turin, An. 1696. The 10 Parts are,

1. Piedmont, properly so call'd.
2. French Piedmont.
3. The Lordsh. of Vercell.
4. The Prin. of Masseran.
5. The Marq. of Turea.
6. The County of Asti.
7. The Marq. of Susa.
8. The Marq. of Saluzzo.
9. The Valleys of the Vaudois.
10. The Principality of Boglio.

Piedmont, properly so call'd, is bounded with Monferrat on the East, the Territories of Genoua on the South, the Marquisate of Saluzzo on the West, and that of Susa and a part of Monferrat on the North. The principal Cities and Towns in it are,

Turin , Ch.	{ Ceva .	{ Chieri .
Fossano .	{ Savillano .	{ Moncallier .
Mondovi .	{ Coni .	{ Orbasfon .
Carignan .	{ Cherasco .	{ Vigon .

Turin, Augusta Taurinorum, and Taurinum. Pliny and Ptolomey place it in Gallia Subalpina. Livy and Appianus Alexandrinus call it Taurasia, and Stephanus Taurenica. This City is seated at the end of a Charming Plain, upon the River Po, which furnish it abundantly with all Necessaries and Conveniences of Life. It is enclosed with strong Walls, and surrounded with broad, deep, and well lin'd Ditches. The Cittadel is a Master-piece of Fortification; and the present Duke has done all he can to make it Impregnable. The Streets of the new Town are broad and straight, but the old Town is very irregular, the Streets narrow and crooked, and the Houses not worth looking at. The publick Places in the new are Spacious, the Palaces are the noblest Improvements of Architecture, the Paintings, Guilding and other Ornaments of the Churches are suitable to the beauty of the Buildings, the Shops are all well Furnish'd, and the Academies for Riding, Dancing and Martial Exercises, well provided with Masters; and in short, hardly any thing wanting to make it a most glorious City. And to compleat the Glories of the Place, there is a Court, that, notwithstanding its smallness, may be justly reckon'd the Seat of Gallantry and Politeness. All the Ornaments of this City are Modern; except what's to be seen in the Duke's Gallery, there's scarce any thing of Antiquity here. It is full of all Sorts of fine Paintings, rare Manuscripts, Medals, Vases, and other Curiosities of that Nature. There is lately added to the Cathedral Church, dedicated to St. John, a Chappel of surprizing Beauty and Riches. It was Built on purpose in Honour of the Holy Sheet, or Cloth (as they say) in which our Saviour was wrapt at his Burial, and upon which the Image of his Face was miraculously Stamp'd. The University was erected here under the Pontificate of Benedict XIII. An. 1405. and the Cittadel built by Emanuel Philbert, Duke of Savoy, An. 1565. which, notwithstanding its great Strength was taken by the French, under the Command of Count Harcourt, An. 1640. It stands in the Lat. of 44. 40. about 12 Miles from Pignerol to the North East, 76 from Vercelli, 27 from Asti to the West, and 80 from Genoua to the North West, 70 from the Mediterranean Sea to the North, and 100 from the Lake of Geneva to the South East.

Fossano, Fossanum, so call'd from the wholesome Springs that are in its Neighbourhood. It was built in the Year, 1236. and stands upon the River Seura, between Saluzzo to the West, and Mondovi to the South West, 6 from Coni, 24 from Turin to the South, and 26 from Pignerol to the South East. Pope Gregory XVIII. founded an Episcopall See here, under the Arch-bishop of Milan.

Mondovi, Mons Realis, or Mons Vici, stands at the Foot of the Appennines, 2 Miles from the River Tanaro, 13 from Coni to the East, 26 from Finnal to the North West, and 37 South from Turin. It was once a part of the Marquisate of Monferrat, till at the Solicitation of Theodore II. Marquis of that Name, it was erected into a Bishoprick, An. 1388. subject to the Archbishop of Turin. Pope Pius V.

Pius V. was sometimes Bishop here, call'd then Cardinal Michael Gisleivius. There was formerly an University here, which was translated to Turin. In the beginning of the Year 1699. the Inhabitants of the flat Country, about Mondovi, join'd with the Banditti, who were the Ringleaders of it, formed a formidable Rebellion against the Duke, and in several Skirmishes wasted his Forces, and killed several Officers of Quality, and a great many of his Soldiers. 'Tis true, the Mondovi in general, are no better than the Banditti; but whether His Royal Highness's Rigour toward his Subjects was to blame for this, or no, we leave to others to decide: He at last extinguish'd this Flame, by the Blood of such of the Offenders as were taken.

Cavignana, Carinianum, stands on the Po, about 5 Miles from Turin to the South, and near as much from Carmagnole; and did bear the Title of a Principality, with which Thomas Francis of Savoy, fifth Son of Charles Emanuel I. and Catharine Michelle of Austria, was honoured, as he was likewise with that of Great Master of France. It is defended by a strong Castle, and has the Advantage of a stately Bridge over the Po. It was taken by the French, An. 1691. and regain'd the same Year by the Duke of Savoy.

Ceva, Ceba, or Ceva, stands upon the River Tanaro, near the Confines of the Duchy of Montferrat, about 7 Miles from Mondovi to the East, and 40 from Turin to the South East. It had formerly Marqueffes of that Title, and from it the neighbouring Country was call'd the Marquisate of Ceva.

Savillano, or Savigliano, Savillanum, stands upon the River Magra, in the middle between Fossano to the East, and Saluzzo to the West, about 5 Miles from either, and 20 directly South from Turin. It is most advantageously situated between 2 Rivers, inasmuch that 'tis said that Philbert Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, design'd to make it the Metropolis of his Dominions.

Coni, or Cunio, Cunenum, is a strong Town and Castle built on a Hill, at the Confluence of the Rivers Stura and Ges. It held out against Francis I. King of France; but was taken by Count Harcourt in the Year 1641. in the Reign of Lewis XIII. of France. In the Year 1691. the French attempted to take it; but were forc'd to raise the Siege. It stands about 11 Miles from Fossano, and 30 from Turin to the South, and is said to have been built in the Year 1150.

Cherasco, Carrea, stands in the County of Asti, upon the River Tanaro; but this old Name, according to Francis Augustin Bishop of Saluzzo, belongs rather to Chieri in Piedmont; which was once a considerable free Town, before it fell into the Hands of the Duke of Savoy. It stands about 5 Miles from Turin to the East.

The Country which of late has been call'd FRENCH PIEDMONT, does not now deserve that Name; since by the Treaty of Peace between France and Savoy, concluded at Turin, An. 1696. it was agreed, That the City and Cittadel of Pignerol, after the Fortifications should be demolished, at the King's Charge, together with the Forts of St. Bridget, the Perouse, &c. as well as the Territories and Dominions compris'd under the Name of the Government of Pignerol (which did belong to the House of Savoy, before the Cession or Surrender, that Victor Amadeo, the first Duke of that Name, made to Lewis XIII. of France) should be restor'd to the Duke of Savoy. This Country lies between Piedmont properly so call'd, and the Vaudois; and contains these Places, Pignerol, Cap.

Perouse.

Brigueras.

Pignerol, or Pinarolo, Pinariolum, stands upon the River Chisius, commonly by the Italians call'd Il Chiese, at the Foot of the Alps, near the Confines of Dauphiny. It was lately a very well fortified Town; and the Cittadel, as it was before the demolishing of it, might have been justly reckon'd one of the Strongest Places in Europe; and a terrible Thorn in the Duke of Savoy's Foot while it remain'd in the French King's Hands; which one day might have made him halt, if he had not taken care to pluck it out by the late Treaty. It was formerly under the Jurisdiction of Savoy, and was commonly an Appenage of the younger Sencs of that Family, 'till it was taken by the French Forces, under the Conduct of Armand John de Pleffis, Cardinal of Richelieu, in the Year 1630. and afterwards sold by Duke Victor Amadeo, together with the Fort and Valley of Perouse, for the Sum of 494000 Crowns to the King of France; who, besides this Sum, resign'd to the Duke the City of Alba in the Duchy of Montferrat, with the adjacent Territories, by a Treaty concluded at Cherasco, 31 March, 1631. In the Year 1693. the Duke of Savoy, at the Head of the Confederate Forces, laid Siege to it; but afterwards his Royal Highness thought fit to leave it and go meet General Catinar, who then lay encamp'd with 12 or 14000 Men between the Mountains of Fenestrelle and Bossà, about 20 Miles North West of Pignerol; but finding it hard to come at him, went back and opened the Trenches before Pignerol, in September. In the mean while Catinar's Army was re-inforc'd with several Detachments from Germany and Catalonia; and the Confederates rais'd the Siege, blew up the Fortrefs of St. Bridget (which has a Communication with the Cittadel by a cover'd Way, and a Passage under Ground) and set forward to meet him, near Orbessan in the Plains of Muscellano; where a bloody battel was fought on the 4th of October, 1693. in which the French won the day, but lost above 6000 Men, and the Confederates about 5500. The City of Pignerol (as we said before) was surrendered to the Duke of Savoy, and all its Fortifications demolished, by the Treaty of Turin, 1696. It stands about 20 Miles from Turin to the South West, 24 from Susa to the South, 15 from Saluzzo to the South, above 40 West from Casal, and 350 from Paris to the South East.

Perusa, (or Perouse by the French) Perusa, stands near the River Clivius, or Il Chiese, at the Foot of the Hills, and gives Name to a Valley. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Savoy; but fell into the French King's Hands, An. 1631. and was restor'd by the Treaty of Turin, 1696. It stands 4 Miles from Pignerol to the North; and must not be confounded with another Town in the Pope's Dominions, which the French call Perouse, but the Italians Perugia; in Latin Perusia, of which we shall have occasion to treat afterwards.

Brigueras, or Bricherasco by the Inhabitants, Briguerascum, stands near the little River Peles, on the Confines of Dauphiny, about 5 Miles from Pignerol to the South. In the Year 1592. it was taken by the French, under the Command of M. de Lesdigueres, who caus'd it to be well fortified, but Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy afterwards re-took it.

The Lordship of VERCELLI, or the Vercellese, Vercellese Dominium, is bounded on the North and East with the Dutchy of Milan, on the West with the Biellese and Canavese, and on the South with Montferrat. By the Treaty of Turin, 1427. Philip Maria Duke of Milan resign'd it to Amadeo Duke of Savoy, reserving to himself only that part that lies between the Novareffa and the River Sesia. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Vercell.

Bielia.

Santia.

Vercell, or Vercelli, Vercelle, stands on the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, upon the River Sesia, or Sessite, which 10 Miles below, falls into the Po, about 12 Miles from Casal to the North, in the midst between Milan and Turin, about 40 Miles from each, and 30 from Furuea. It is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Milan. It has a Castle and Citadel, and is pretty well fortified; and contains several fine Churches, and a good Hospital. Pope Leo IX. conven'd a Council in this Town against Berengarius Arch-deacon of Anger, who was cited, but did not appear. The Spaniards made themselves Masters of the Town, An. 1638. and restor'd it to the Duke of Savoy by the Pyrenean Treaty.

Bielia, Biella, and Bugella, stands at the Foot of the Mountains, 25 Miles from Vercell to the West, about 12 Miles from Furuea to the North East, and gives Name to the adjacent Country, call'd the Biellese.

Santa, Fanum Sancte Agathe, gives Name to the adjacent Country, in the Vercellese; and is distant about 16 Miles from Vercelli to the West, and 20 from Furuea. Francis d'Este, the second Duke of Modena, that famous Warrior died here, 14 Octob. 1658.

The Principality of MASSERAN, or Masserano, Masserani Principatus, lies near the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, between the Vercellese and the Biellese. It had formerly Princes of its own of the Family of Filisca; but by Adoption fell into the House of Ferrera, and so now its Princes are call'd of the Family of Ferrera Filisca. It is a Vassalage of the Pope's, and has under its Jurisdiction Crevacore adjacent to it, and some other Places of little moment. The only remarkable Town in it is, Messeran, or Messerano, Messeranum, seated on a Hill, in the Confines of Milan, about 18 Miles from Furuea to the East, about 20 to the North West of Vercelli, and 36 from Turin to the North East.

The Marquisate of TURRA, Eporrediensis Marchionatus, was anciently a considerable part of Gallia Subalpina. About 400 Years ago it was a considerable Country in Italy, lying along the Foot of the Mountains, between them and the Po, and was under the Jurisdiction of its own Marqueffes; but afterwards came to be divided into several Parts and so lost its old Name, as Baudrand says; who mightily blames some modern Geographers, for placing this Marquisate in part of Italy, now call'd Il Canavese. The only Town of Note in it is,

Furuea, a Town anciently belonging to the Salassii, which Pliny calls Eporredia, Strabo, Eporadia and Antoninus, Eporedia, stands on the River Derea Baltea, where there is a stately Stone Bridge; and was built, as some say (particularly Buno) about 100

Years before the Birth of Christ. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Turin, and is a Place of great Importance to the Duke of Savoy, into whose Hands it came, according to Baudrand and others, in the Year 1313. being well defended by a Citadel and Castle. It was taken by the French, An. 1554. and restor'd sometime after. It is distant from Turin about 25 Miles to the North, 30 from Aoste to the South, and as many from Vercelli to the West. It is famous for the excellent Chefcs that are made in and about it.

The County of ASTI. Contado d'Asi, Asiensis Comitatus, anciently a part of the Dutchy of Milan; but has been subject to the Duke of Savoy since the Year 1531. by the Concession of the Emperor Charles V. who had taken it from the French two Years before. It is bounded on the West by Piedmont, and on all other Parts by the Dutchy of Montferrat. The Towns of any Note in it are,

Asi.

Verrua or Verua.

Asi, Aste, by the French, Asia. Ptolomy makes it the Name of a Town and Colony of Gallia Cisalpine in Liguria. It stands on the River Tenaro, about 15 Miles from Alba to the North East, 16 from Casal to the South West, and 26 from Turin to the East. It was once a considerable Republick, but afterwards fell into the Hands of the Viscounts, and so became a part of the Dutchy of Milan; from which, after many Turns and Revolutions it fell in to the Duke of Savoy, by the Gift of the Emperor Charles V. to Charles III. Duke of Savoy, An. 1531. It consists at present of several Parts, viz. the City, the Burrough, the Citadel, the Fort and Castle of St. Peter; all which are pretty well fortified. The neighbouring Fields are very Fertile, and produce, particularly, a fine sort of Melon, very much esteem'd.

Verrua or Verua, Veruca, is a Fortrefs, built on a Rock, on the Banks of the Po, over against Crescentino, near the Confines of Montferrat and the Canavese, about 16 Miles from Turin to the East, and somewhat less from Casal, and 12 from Asi to the North. It was strongly fortified by Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, and in vain attempted by the Spanish Forces, An. 1625.

The Marquisate of SUSA. Segusinus Marchionatus, lies along the Foot of the Alpes, between Piedmont, properly so call'd, on the East, and Dauphiny on the West. It was formerly of greater Extent and inhabited by the Segusini, according to Cluverius; and is now subject to the Duke of Savoy. The only Town of Note in it is,

Susa, Suse by the French, Segurium. Is a little City seated among the Mountains, by which it is commanded almost on every side, on the River Doria. It gives Name to the Marquisate; and is distant about 3 Miles from the Confines of France and Dauphiny, 24 from Turin to the West, and as many from Briançon. Here, they say, is to be seen a Triumphal Arch erected in Honour of Augustus, A. U. C. 740. (which Mr. Misson, I think, takes no notice of) And some think this is the Town where that Emperor set up his Trophy 14 Years before the Birth of Christ; tho' others are of opinion it was not here, but at a Place call'd Tourbie at the Foot of the Maritime Alpes, because there is a Stone to be seen in that Place with this Inscription, Sentes Alpina devictæ. At this Place was found the Sepulchre palchre of Cottus, from whom the Alpes Cottie took their Name. The French took this Place, An. 1630. and fortified it strongly; but afterwards restor'd it. They took it again in the Year 1690. and restor'd it, An. 1696.

of Saluces on the South, and is commonly divided into 5 remarkable Vallies, viz.

Pragelas or Cluson } Angrogne.

The Marquifate of SALUCES as the French call it, and the Italians Saluzzo, Salutarum Marchionatus, lies at the Foot of the Alpes, having Piedmont on the East, Dauphiny on the West, and the County of Nice on the South. It formerly belong'd to France, 'till Henry IV. gave it to Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, in Exchange for Bresse, Bugey, and other Places on this side the Rhone, in the Year 1601. That River takes its Rise near this Country, from the Mountain Vife, which is thought to be the highest of the Alpes. The Marquesses of Saluzzo have caused a famous Vault 4 Miles long to be hewed out of the Rock, near this Place, through which Mules may easily pass with Goods from Italy into France. This Family deserves its Original, they say, from one William, an Italian Count, who flourished about the beginning of the tenth Century. The most remarkable Towns belonging to this County are,

Carmagnola } Roguispariero.
Stafforda. }

Saluzzo, or Saluces, Salutie, and Augusta Vagienorum, stands on a Hill, at the Foot of the Alpes, about a Mile from the River Po, 10 from Fossano to the West, 24 from Turin to the South, and 12 from Pignerol. It has been an Episcopal See, under the Archbishoprick of Turin since the Year 1511. and the Cathedral Church is very Magnificent and Rich. It was taken by the French, An. 1691. and re-taken the same Year.

Carmagniola, Carmaniola, is seated above 2 Miles from the Po, and 8 from Turin to the South. It was taken in the Year 1588. during the Civil Wars of France, by Charles Emanuel Duke of Savoy, and had it confirm'd to him by a Treaty of Peace, 1600. The French took it in the Year 1691. but lost it again that same Year.

Stafforda, is a small Town, no other way remarkable than for the Victory which the French obtain'd near it over the Duke of Savoy, in the Month of August, 1690. where the French were said to lose 500, and His Royal Highnesses near double that Number.

Cental, Centale, is a little Town, not long ago fortified, upon the Rivulet Malea, in the midst between Coni and Savigliano.

The Country commonly call'd the THE VAL LIES OF THE VAUDOIS, lies between French Piedmont on the West and North, Piedmont properly so call'd, on the East, and the Marquifate of Saluces on the South, and is commonly divided into 5 remarkable Vallies, viz.

Pragelas or Cluson } Angrogne.
Perouse. } Lucern.
St. Martyn. }
 The People commonly call'd the Vaudois, owe their Name, as it is said, to one Peter Valdo or Vaud, a rich Merchant of Lyons in France, about the Year 1160. who seeing a Friend of his die suddenly, became mighty serious upon't, and fell a reading the Bible; and by that means discover'd the Errors of the Church of Rome, and communicated what he had learned to a great many of his Friends and Neighbours, who very quickly grew up to a considerable Party. Whereupon Peter was excommunicated by the Clergy, and several of his Disciples persecuted; which obliged them to retire into the Vallies of Piedmont. They have suffer'd many Persecutions, and particularly in the Year 1688. the Duke of Savoy persecuted the poor Inhabitants of those Vallies; who having in vain endeavour'd to preserve their Religion and Liberties, many of 'em were made Prisoners, and the rest, at the Solicitation of the Protestant Cantons, permitted to go where they would. In the Year 1689. a great many of them put themselves in Arms in the Cantons of Bern and Switzerland, and with a Secrecy that prevented even the Suspicions of their Enemies, form'd two Bodies, one of 1200 and the other of 3000 Men; and imbarking on the Lake of Geneva, forc'd their way through Savoy into their own Country, in spite of the united Forces of France and Savoy, who oppos'd their Passage, and obliged them to five or six little Battles, in which the Vaudois had still the Advantage: And all this without any Officers, except one Mr. Arnauld, a Minister; and under him a Mason, nam'd Turel, for their Lieutenant General. In the Year 1690. the Duke of Savoy, by the Mediation of King William, re-call'd these Refugees, and restor'd them to their former Privileges and Immunities. But by the Treaty of Peace between the King of France and the Duke of Savoy, concluded at Turin, 1696. it is agreed, That the Inhabitants of the Vallies of Lucern call'd the Vaudois, shall have no Communication in Matters of Religion, with that King's Subjects: Nor shall His Royal Highness suffer any of His Majesty's Subjects to make any Settlement in the Protestant Vallies, under Colour of Religion, Marriage, or any Pretence whatsoever; nor any Protestant Ministers to come from thence into any of His Majesty's Dominions, without incurring the severest Corporal Punishment. Since which time His Royal Highness has been very severe upon those poor People, and driven them all out of his Dominions into the Protestant Countries of Europe, and England since the beginning of this Year 1699. has had its share.

As to the Counties of Boglia, Oncile and Tende, they are treated of already in our Description of Savoy.

CHAP. III.

The Coasts of Genoa, or Genoua, Ora Genuentis.

WHEN we speak of the Coasts of Genoua, we do not mean only the Places and Towns on those Coasts belonging to that Republick, but also several other little Towns and Countries along the Coast of that Sea, commonly call'd the Sea of Genoua, in the Possession of several Princes and States: Extending in length from the River Var that separates Provence from Italy, to the Magra, which falls into the Mediterranean Sea near the Ruins of the City Luna, now call'd Luna Destrutta. Its length is computed to be about 150 Miles, from West to East, and its breadth about 30 at the broadest, and not above 6 or 7 at the narrowest. It is bounded on the South by the Mediterranean Sea, on the North by the Duchies of Parma, Milan and Montferrat, on the East by Tuscany and Massa, and on the West by the River Var and Provence. It makes up the greater part of the ancient Liguria; which was divided into Liguria, Littorea and Liguria Mediterranea; the former of which seems to have been the Country we are now treating of; which (as we said before) comprehend several Places besides what belong to the Republick of Genoua, as you may see in the ensuing Table.

Subject to divers Sovereigns,	{	Nice, Villefranche, Maro, Donas, Monaco, to the Prince of Monaco. Final, to the King of Spain.	} belonging to the D. of Savoy.	}	Eastern and Western Coasts.	{	St. Remo. Ventimiglia. Albenga. Noli. Savano. GENOVA. Sarzana. Brugnnetto. Rapallo. La-Vegna. La-Pezza. Torreglia.

We have already treated of Nice and Villefranche in the Description of Savoy; Donas and Maro are so inconsiderable that we find very little said concerning them, only that the latter is both the Name of a Town and a Marquisate, belonging to the Duke of Savoy.

Monaco, Herculis Monaci Portus, call'd by the People of Provence, Mourgues, is a little Town, but well fortified, with an old Castle, and a very safe Harbour. It stands upon the Confines of the County of Nice, 6 Miles from the Town of that Name towards Albenga. This Town gives Name to a little sort of Principality, governed by its own Princes of the Family of Grimaldi, who are also Peers of France; and having expell'd the Spaniards in the Year 1641. were obliged to crave Protection of the French King, and receive a Garrison of his Soldiers. This Principality is so little that besides the Town of Monaco, it comprehends only a little Town call'd Menton, and a Village Roccabruna. The present Prince is the French King's Minister at the Court of Rome.

Final, Finalium or Finarium, stands in the midst between Savona and Albenga, on the Coasts of Ge- noua, and is dignified with the Title of a Marquisate. It was formerly govern'd by its own Princes of the Family of Carlo; but has been under the Jurisdiction of Spain since the Year 1599. that Andreas Sforza, the last Marquis, sold it to the Spaniards. The Town is at present pretty well fortified, and hath a strong Castle on the top of a Hill; the Avenues of which are guarded by 2 Forts.

San Remo, Fanum Romuli, stands on the Coast of Genoua, (to which Republick it belongs) about 9 Miles from Vintimiglia to the East, about 30 from Nice, and 15 from Monaco. It is a Place of Importance, and stands in a very fertile and pleasant Valley, that produces Oranges, Citrons, Olives and other Fruits.

Vintimiglia, Albintemelium, (the same with Vintemelium and Albintimilium, mentioned by Tacitus, Varro, and other Authors) stands on the Sea-Shoar, near the Frontiers of Savoy and the County of Nice, 14 Miles from the Town of Nice to the East, 7 from Monaco, 30 from Coni to the South, and 80 from Genoua to the West. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Milan, and has been under the Jurisdiction of Genoua ever since the Year 1238.

Albenga, Albigaunum, or Albingaunum, stands on the Sea-Shoar, on the West part of the Coast of Genoua, over against a little Island, or rather a Rock in the Sea, call'd l'Isolotto d'Albenga, 50 Miles to the West of Genoua, 35 from Ventimiglia, and 40 from Alba to the South. It was erected into an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Genoua, in the Year 1179. It was formerly a considerable and rich Town; but of late has begun to decay.

Noli, Naulum or Naulium, stands in a pleasant Plain on the Coasts of Genoua, not above a Mile from Final, between Savona to the North East, and Albenga to the South West, 10 Miles from the former, and 12 from the latter. It is a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Genoua, and was formerly a free Town, but is now under the Jurisdiction of Genoua; and has not the advantage of a Harbour.

Savona, Savona stands on the West Coasts of Genoua, about 3 Miles from Vado to the North East, 8 from Noli, 30 from Albenga, as many from Genoua, and 22 from Acqui to the South. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Milan, and is defended by a Citadel and 2 Fortresses. It had once a very large and good Harbour, but it was stopt up by the Genouese, upon jealousy of its being too much favoured by Francis I. King of France.

Genoa or Genoua, Genua, is a very ancient Town in Liguria in Gallia Cisalpina, according to Pliny, Strabo, and others. It was sack'd by Mago the Carthaginian, 549 Years after the building of Rome; and afterwards re-built by the Romans. There has been a great deal of Dust rais'd about the Etymology of this Word, some maintaining it came from double-sack'd Tanus; others, that it was derived from Fanua, because it was, in a manner, a Gate into Italy; some from Fanus first King of Italy, or Tanus King of the Teians; but 'tis not worth the while while to examin who has the most Reason for his Assertion, only this is plain, that the fore-cited Authors call it Genoa, and so does T. Livius, and a Stone that was found by a Peasant as he was Tilling the Ground, An. 1507. has an Inscription on it, where the Genoese are call'd Genuates. It was dignified with the Title of an Archbishoprick, by Pope Innocent II. An. 1132. It was burnt by the Saracens in the Year, 935. all the Citizens being either Kill'd or carried away Prisoners; but they were brought back by the Means of the Doge of Venice, and the Town Rebuilt, and made more Magnificent than it was before. It is now the Capital City of Liguria, and Head of a Republick; and Seated at the Bottom of a little Gulf, on the declivity at the Foot of a Hill, seeming to consist of several Stories. The Port lies very open towards the Sea, and therefore cannot afford safe Anchorage for Ships. The City contains 35 Parishes, the Streets are for the most part uneven and very narrow; and the Houses are six or seven Stories high in the lower part of the Town; but by degrees as the Ascent rises, the Houses are lower, and built at a greater distance. The Situation of it affords a very fine Prospect; but is very inconvenient for those that would ride in Coaches; and therefore Persons of Quality use Litters and Chairs. It is absolutely false that this City is built of Marble as most People believe; Brick and Stone, or both mixt together, are the ordinary Materials of its Houses; and the Walls are generally covered with Plaster. There are some Houses, among those more lately Built, that are richly adorn'd with Marble; but there's a good Reason for saying London is built of Stone, as Genoua is built of Marble. But tho' the City is not built of Marble, it may justly boast of some very Beautiful Structures; for the Houses are extremely large and fair in five or six Streets that are of a considerable Breadth, and in the Magnificent Suburb of S. Pietro d' Arena. This City suffered very much by the Bombardment in the Year, 1684. but few of the most beautiful Edifices received any great hurt by the French Bombs, private Persons, and those of inferior Rank having suffered most by it.

The Government of this Republick is Aristocratical. The Doge (whose Government lasts two Years) is the supream Magistrate, assisted by 8 Senators or Governors, a certain Number of Procurators, and a Grand Council consisting of a certain Number of the Nobility, who are in all 700. The Doge cannot be continued above two Years, but may be Chosen again five Years after the end of his Government: And none of his Relations can be elected immediately after him. He is stil'd His Serenity, as the Senators are Their Excellencies, and the Noblemen Most Illustrious. The Power and Grandeur of this Republick is extremely decreased since those glorious Days, when they extended their Conquests to the Tanais, and made themselves Masters of all the Coasts of Asia, and the Islands of Cyprus, Sicily, Lesbos, &c. They still retain the Island of Corsica, with the Title of a Kingdom, and are extremely proud of it; for the Doge is crown'd with a Royal Crown of Gold, and a Scepter is put into his Hand, because of it. The Trade of Genoua is very much decay'd. It consists particularly in Velvet, Point, Gloves, Dry Confections, Anchoves, and several sorts of Fruits. There are some private Persons very Rich, but the Republick is Poor. Neither Corn or Wine are Sold in the Markets; for the Government reserves that Trade for it self, and the Bakers must fetch their Corn from the Publick Granaries. This City stands 270 Miles from Rome to the North West, 75 from Turin, 135 from Florence to the West, 220 from Venice to the South West, and 80 from Milan to the South. Latit. 44. 50. Longit. 27 0.

Sarazana, Serezana or Sergianum, stands near the Mouth of the River Magra, in the midst between Massa and Spetioia; about 34 Miles from Lucca to the North West, and 18 from Brugnetto. It is defended by a strong Castle, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Pisa. It's rise is from the Ruins of a Neighbouring Town called Luna; and Pope Nicolas the V. a Native of this Place, translated the Bishoprick of Luna hither, with the Title of both Sees, in the Year, 1450.

Brugnetto, Brunetum, or Bruniacum, stands upon the River Verra, at the foot of the Appenines, nine Miles to the West of Ponciermoli, as many from Spetioia to the North, and 50 from Genoua to the East. It is but a small Town, and not well inhabited, but is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Genoua.

Rapallo, Rapallum, is a little Town, under the Jurisdiction of Genoua, upon that Coast, with a Harbour, about 23 Miles from Genoua to the East, and 3 from Portofino. Near to it is the little Bay call'd Golfo di Ripallo. The Reader must take notice that Rapolla in Basilicata in the Kingdom of Naples sounds very like this, tho' the Latin Word for that is Rapallo, as Rapallum is for this.

Lavagna, Lavania, or Lebonia, a little Town on the Coast of Genoua, at the Mouth of the River Entella, belonging to the Republick of Genoua, between Chiavari to the West, and Cestre di Levante to the East.

La Spezza, or La Spetia, Spedia, is a little Town, belonging to the Republick of Genoua, standing at the bottom of the Golfo della Spetia, 7 Miles from Sarazana to the North West, as far from Lumadesfrutta, 4 from Porto Venere, and 11 from Brugnetto.

C H A P. IV.

The Dutchy of Montferrat.

Montferrat, Monserratus, or Monserranus, so call'd from the fruitful Soil of the Hills and rising Grounds in it, as if it were Monsiferax, is bounded on the East by the Dutchy of Milan, and a part of the Dominions of Genoua, on the North by the Vercellese and Bugellese and the Canavese, on the West with Piedmont, properly so call'd, and the County of Asti, and on the South by the western Dominions of Genoua, from which it is separated by the Apennines, and comprehends a great part of the ancient Liguria Mediterranea. It fell into the House of Mantua, in the Year, 1535. by by the Marriage of Margaret, Wife of Frederick I. Duke of Mantua, after the Death of Boniface her Brother, last Marquis of the Family of the Paleologi. It was formerly of greater Extent, comprehending a part of the Canavese, and of the Higher Langhe; which were given to the Duke of Savoy by the Treaty of Cerasco, in the Year 1631, together with a part of Montferrat beyond the Po; so that after that it was divided into twoparts, viz. into Montferrat, properly so call'd, which lies to the East and South, and is under the Duke of Mantua, (except Casal; of which afterwards) and Montferrat near Piedmont, which lies towards the West and North, under the Duke of Savoy. So that the whole of this Dutchy is now divided into three parts, as you may see in the following Table.

Casal, belonging to the French.	} Alba, Bianza, Salugio, Verolunso,	} belonging to the D. of Savoy.
			} Acqui, Ripalia, Occimian, Belzola,	} belonging to the Duke of Mantua.

CASAL, Casale, called by the Ligurians Bodincomagus, by the Romans, Industria, afterwards Sedula, as appears by the Annals of the City. It is also call'd Casale di S. Vaso, from S. Evasius, its Patron, to distinguish it from other Towns of the same Name.

It stands on the Po, 4 Miles from Trino, to the East, 15 from Asi to the North, 40 from Turin to the East, and about as many from Milan. In the Year 1474, Pope Sixtus IV. erected it into a Bishoprck, under the Archbishop of Milan, at the Request of Gulielmus Paleologus Marquis of Montferrat. It is famous for the many Sieges which it has sustain'd. Gonzales at the head of the Spanish Forces Invested it in the Year 1629, but was forced to leave it in the Night time, on the approach of the French Forces. The Spaniards attempted it next Year after, under the Command of Ambrosio Spinola; but the Marquis de Torlas defended it so Vigorously that they lost their Labour. In the Year 1640, they came before it again, under the Command of the Marquis de Leganez; but Count Harcourt drove them away, taking several of their Standards, their Baggage and Ammunition, and above 2000 Prisoners, and Kill'd as many. In the Year 1652, the Spaniards taking advantage of the Commotions of France, made themselves Masters of it, and afterwards Surrendr'd it to the Duke of Mantua; who kept a Garrison in it, till he Sold it to Lewis XIV. King of France, on 30 September, 1681. The Duke of Mantua receives still some inconsiderable Duties from it. It was lately a very well Fortified City, with a Castle and Citadel, which was of great Importance; The French having corrected all the Irregularities of the Fortifications, and added a great deal more to what there was formerly; but in pursuance of the Articles of Capitulation with the Duke of Savoy, who besieged it with the Confederate Army, 1695, it was Demolish'd.

Alba, Alba Pompeia, stands on the River Tanaro, 12 Miles from Asi to the South, 7 from Cerasco, and 28 from Turin to the South West. It formerly belong'd to the Duke of Mantua, but was yielded to the Duke of Savoy by the Treaty of Cerasco, Ann. 1631. It has suffered several Changes and Revolutions, and is in a Decaying condition, and indifferently Inhabited. It is however an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Milan.

Acqui, Aque Statelle, or Statelle, or, according to Pliny, Aque Statyelle, stands on the River Barnio, near the Appennines, 16 Miles from Allesandrias della Paglia to the South, as many from Savona, somewhat more from Asi to the South East, and Alba to the East. It is famous for its hot Sulphurous Waters, to which great Numbers of People come to be freed from their cold noxious humours, as Ferrarius relates; and to the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Milan.

CHAPTER V.

The Dutchy of Milan, Mediolanensis Ducatus.

THE Dutchy, commonly call'd the Milanese, is the North Part of Liguria, and was anciently Inhabited by the Insubres. The Longobardi, a People of Germany, having over-run Pannonia, in the Year of Christ 526, made IncurSIONS into Italy in the Year 552, and having expell'd the Goths in the Year 572, Establish'd a new Kingdom, which lasted about 206 Years, till Charles the Great abolish'd it. About the Year 1389, the French first laid claim to this Country; and upon this account, Lewis Duke of Orleans, Brother of Charles VI. Married Valentina, the Daughter of John Galeaceo, Viscount of Milan, with this condition, that he should receive immediately as a Dowry, not only a great Treasure of Money and Jewels, but also the County of Ass; and in case her Father should die without Issue, the whole Country should be devolv'd to Valentina and her Children: Which Contract has not only furnish'd France with a pretension to Milan; but has also been the occasion of great Calamities. In the Year 1499, Lewis XII. pretending a Right to this Dukedom by his Grandmothers side, Conquer'd it in 21 Days, and forced Lewis the Black to fly into Germany; but the Inhabitants of Milan not being able to endure the too free Conversation of the French with their Wives, recall'd their Duke, who being assisted by an Army of Swifs, Regain'd the whole Country, except the Castle of Milan, and the City of Novaro; but Lewis sending timely Relief from France, and the Swifs proving Treacherous to the Duke, and refusing to Fight against the French, he was forc'd to endeavour his escape in a common Soldiers Habit: and being taken, was kept Prisoner at Loches ten Years, where he died; and so the French were absolute Masters of Milan; but in the Year 1512, they were forc'd to leave Italy, and Maximilian, Son of Lewis the Black, was restored to the Dutchy of Milan by the help of the Swifs. Afterwards Francis I. Invaded Italy, and beat Maximilian, having Kill'd 10000 Swifs, with the loss of 4000 of his best French Troops. After which Maximilian surrendred himself and the whole Country to the King, on condition of an Annual Pension of 30000 Ducats to be paid him. In the Year 1521, Francis was led out of Milan and Francis Sforza Restor'd, by the means of the Emperor and the Pope; but at last atter for many Changes and Revolutions, by the Peace Concluded at Cambray, in the year 1529. Francis renounced all his Pretensions to Milan, and afterwards the Emperor Charles V. annexed it to the Crown of Spain for ever.

This Country is well Watered, and very Fruitful, producing abundance of Corn, Wine, Flax, and several sorts of good Fruit. It is Ruled by a Governor sent from the King of Spain; who Rules the Inhabitants with absolute sway, and Queeces great Sums of Money out of them, besides the King's Revenue; which some say amounts to 3000000 Livres, besides a Million more in time of War. The Country is commonly divided into these Parts or Territories, viz. il Territorio di Milano, il Paese, il Novarese, il Comasco, il Lodigino, il Cremonefe, il Tortonese, l' Alessandrino, il Conrado di Augbiera, and la Laumellina: and the Chief Towns in it are,

Milan.	Lodi.
Alessandria.	Novara.
Bobbia.	Pavia.
Como.	Vivegano.
Cremona.	Mortara.
Torrona.

Milan, Mediolanum, is Situated in a pleasant Plain, and Watered by the little River Olon, and has also the advantage of two Canals, one of which is call'd Novalia Delle Martezano, which begins at Trerra, and reaches in a strait Line, within half a Mile of Milan, being 20 Miles in Length; and supplied with Water from the Adda. The other is call'd Novalia Tefinello, and comes from the Tefin. This City is said to have been Built by the Gauls, 395 years after the Building of Rome: and tho' it hath been often wasted, and even destroyed by the terrible Scourges of War and Pestilence, having been Besieged 40, and taken 22 times; and particularly Raz'd and Sowed with Salt, by Frederick Barbarosa, Ann. 1162; yet it is so well recovered at present, that it justly deserves the Name of Great, and may be reckoned among the best and finest Cities in Europe. Its Figure is round, its Walls are Ten Miles in Compass, and its Inhabitants are thought by some to be 250000, by others 300000. It is divided into 6 Parts or Regions, which have their Names from so many Gates. The Citadel is a regular Hexagon, well lin'd and stored with Canon, and surrounded with a great Ditch and Counterscarp. The Principal Buildings in Milan, without mentioning the Churches and Convents, (which are very many) are the Archbishops Palace, the Houses of the Marquis Homodeo, Count Barth. Arefe, and Signior T. Marini; the Seminary, a noble Structure, Founded by Charles Boromeo; the Colleges of the Switzers of Breva, and of the Jesuits; the Town-house, and the Chief Hospital; The Lazaret, or place appointed for those that are Sick of Pestilential Distempers, begun Ann. 1489, by Duke Lewis Sforza, call'd the Moor, and finish'd by Lewis XII. 1507, consisting of 4 Galleries joynd in a Square, each containing 92 Chambers, the Doors of which are so contriv'd, that all the Sick Persons may see the Mass said from their several Beds; the Altar being in the middle of the Square, under a Dome, supported by Columns. The Cabinet of the late Canon Manfredi Settula, a Person of great Learning and Ingenuity, as well as a dextrous Workman in several things, is very well worth seeing; for there are several sorts of very ingenious Machines, contriv'd for finding out the perpetual Motion, Looking-Glasses and Dials of all sorts, Ancient and Modern, Musical Instruments, Books, Medals, Seals, Rings, Pictures, Indian-works, Mummies, Arms, with an infinite variety of all sorts of Antiquities, a great piece of Cloth made of the Stone Amiantus, and several Monsters, a Dish of yellow Amber, two Foot in Diameter; also several rough pieces of the same sort of Amber, enclosing Ants, Spiders, Grasshoppers, Flies and other Insects, which appear distinctly in the middle of them; a piece of Crystal also, in which several sorts of Substances are enclosed, particularly an Olive Leaf, and a drop of Water, which seems to move. The Cathedral Church likewise deserves the particular notice of a Traveller, being a prodigious Work, beyond St. Peter's in Rome, for the labouriousness of its Structure, tho' a Sixth part less. The Ambrosian Library, so Nam'd by Cardinal Frederick Boromeo, Archbishop of Milan, who Founded it, and Dedicated it to St. Ambrose, is said to contain 14000 Manuscripts, besides Printed Books; which some say are in Number 72000. There is also adjoining to the Library an Academy for Painting, in which are a great many curious Pictures: Besides all these, there are an infinite number of Curiosities, and things worth an Ingenious Man's particular notice, too many to be inserted here, and therefore those who have not had the advantage of Travelling and seeing them, must have recourse to the late Travellers, for a more full account of them. This City is distant 43 Miles from Casal to the East, 65 from Genoua to the North, 72 from Parma to the N. West, 80 from Turin, 28 much from Modena to the West, and 192 to the N. West of Rome.

Alessandria della Paglia, or Alexandria, Alexandria Stratefforum, is divided into two parts by the River Tanaro, above 52 Miles from Milan to the South West, and in the midst between Genoua to the South, and Turin to the West 44 Miles from either, according to Philippus Ferrarius, who was Born in this place. The Emperor Frederick Barbarossa call'd it Casarea; but Pope Alexander III. would have it nam'd Alexandria. 'Tis false that ever any Emperors were Crown'd in this City with a Crown of Straw, (as Mr. Misson observes) and it will be pretty hard to prove that Frederick in derision call'd it Alexandria of Straw; However it retains that name to this Day. The City is but little, and the Fortifications at present are but indifferent. The foresaid Pope Erected it into a Bishoprick, subject to the Archbishop of Milan, in the year 1175.

Bobio, or Bobì, Bobium, is a little Town upon the River Trebia, Situated in a Plain, upon the Confines of the Duchy of Parma, and not far from those of the Genuefe. It was anciently only an Abbey Built by St. Columbanus, through the Liberality of Theodolinda Queen of the Longobards; but afterwards grew up to a considerable Town under those, the Monastery still remaining. It gives name to a Country call'd after it il Bobiese: and is a Bishops Seat Suffragan to the Archbishop of Genoua. It stands 35 Miles from Dertona to the South East, 35 from Genoua, 23 from Piacenza to the North, and 35 from Pavia.

Como, Comum, or Novocomum, stands upon a Lake of that name, about 25 Miles from Milan to the North, as many from Burgomo to the West, and 80 from Turin to the North East: and gives name to the adjacent Country, call'd il Comasco; the People of which Livy calls Comenses. Pomponius Trogus says it was Built by the Gauls, as Milan, Trent, Verona, and several other Towns were. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Milan, in the Patriarchat of Aquileia. This City has given Birth to several Illustrious Persons, particularly Pliny the younger, Paulus Jovius, and Pope Innocent XI. of the Family of Odeschalchi.

Cremona, Cremona, is Seated on the left Bank of the Po, on the Confines of the Dutchy of Milan, in the midit between Povaia to the West, and Mantua to the East, about 40 Miles from either, 50 from Milan to the East, and 18 from Placenza. 'Tis a pretty large City, but Poorer and less Populous than Placenza. Their famous Tower, so much talk'd of, especially by some of their own Authors, is neither handson nor very high. The Cattle is an old, shapeless, and ruinous Mafs; which never deserved the name of a Fort, tho' it might have signified something in the days of Yore, when Cross-bows were in Fashion. The Tower is said to have been Built by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, Ann. 1184. The People of Cremona boast much of the Antiquity of their City, but want Proofs to confirm it. It is said to have been Built the 445th year of the City of Rome, and afterwards made a Roman Colony. It hath suffered many Changes and Revolutions, and hath often changed its Masters. Hanibal Pillaged it in his Passage into Italy, the Goths committed horrible outrages in it, and the Slavonians and Lombards entirely ruined it; and Frederick Barbarossa Rebuilt it. It was once Govern'd by its own Viscounts, but the French, Venetians, Duke of Milan, and the Spaniards have at different times been Masters of it; the last of which is still in possession of it. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Milan.

Tortona, Dertona, or Tordona, which Strabo calls Derton, is a Little, Ruinous and ill Fortified City, upon the River Iria, or il Staffora, about 8 Miles from the Confines of the Dominions of Genova to the North, as far from the Po, 10 from Alessandria to the East, 25 from Pavia, and 45 from Placenza. It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Milan. It is defended by a Citadel, which is regular and naturally Strong, but not kept in very good order. This Town as well as Milan, was destroy'd by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, and Rebuilt by the Milaneze; but has never recovered its former greatness. It was taken by the French in the year 1642, and recovered by the Spaniards the year following. It gives name to the adjacent Country called il Tortonese. The ancient Dertone stood on the Eminency where the Citadel stands at present.

Lodi, Laus Pompeia, was an ancient Town in Insubria, according to Strabo, and the name of a Colony. It is said to have been Built by the Gauls, call'd Boii, when they came first into Italy, according to Pliny; and call'd Pompeia afterwards, because Pompeius Strabo, Father of Pompey the Great, carried a Colony thither. It stood on the River Silaro; but was destroyed by the Milaneze, Ann. 1158, and is now only a little Village, call'd Lodi Vecchio and Lodive, by Abbreviation, that is, the old Laus. The new Lodi, which stands about 5 Miles from it, on the River Addua, in the Dutchy of Milan, was Built by Frederick Barbarossa, 46 years after the destruction of the other; and stands at the distance of 20 Miles from Milan to the West, and as many from Cremona: It is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Milan.

Novara, Novaria, the Chief City anciently of the Levi, in Insubria, stands about 25 Miles from Milan to the West, 16 from Casal to the North-East, and 14 from Vercell in Piedmont. There are several Inscriptions on Marble, which plainly shew its Antiquity. It is an Episcopal See, (whereof Benedictus Odeschalchi, afterwards Pope Innocent XI. was once Bishop) under the Archbishop of Milan. Lewis Sforza, Duke of Milan, was taken by the French before this place, Ann. 1500, and Petrus Lombardus, Master of the Sentences, (as he's commonly call'd) was Born here. This Town gives name to a very Pleasant and Fertile Country, lying about it, call'd ill Novarese by the Inhabitants.

Pavia, Ticinum, anciently Inhabited by the Insulvres, and said to have been Built by the Levi and Marici before Milan. It was afterwards call'd Flavia Pappia, and Papia by Paulus Diaconus, and other late Authors. It was Subdued by the Romans, Sack'd by Artilla in the 5th Century, and at last Ruin'd by Odoacer. It was taken by Albinus, King of the Lombards; and in the year 774, Charles the Great Storn'd it, and carried Didier last King of the Lombards away Prisoner. In the year 951, it was taken by the Emperor Otho I. and in the year 1004, it was almost entirely laid in Ashes by an accidental Fire. In the year 1059, it entred into a bloody War with Milan; and after that time was subject to several Masters, till it was annex'd to the Territories of Milan. Francis I. King of France laid Siege to it, Ann. 1525; but his Army years was Routed, and himself taken Prisoner: and two years after the French took it under the Command of Odede Lauree. At last the Spaniards made themselves absolute Masters of it. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Milan, but exempted from his Jurisdiction, and depends immediately on the See of Rome. The City of Pavia has lost all its ancient Lustre, in so much that one who sees it now will hardly be perswaded that it was once the Metropolis of a Kingdom, and the Residence of 20 Monarchs. The Castle and Fortifications are in a very ruinous condition: and the Univerfity (which as they say, was Founded by Charles the Great) is Decayed as well as the Town. The Cathedral is an old dark Structure, Built awry; over against which there is a Figure on Horseback of Bras, said to be the Statue of Antoninus Pius. This City stands upon the River Tesin, 4 Miles from the Po, 150 from Genova, and 34 from Placenza to the West, and gives name to that part of the Dutchy of Milan, which is call'd il Pavese, or Territorio di Pavia.

Vivegano, Viglebanum, is a little Town upon the River Tessin, with a Castle, about 20 Miles from Milan to the West, as many from Casal, and 12 from Pavia. It is so call'd, as Gaudentius Merula, conjectures from Villis Gleba, because of the bad Soil of the Neighbouring Country, to which it gives Name. It is an Episcopal See, of no long standing, under the Archbishop of Milan.

Mortara, Mortaria, is a pretty large Town and well Inhabited, upon the River Gogna, about 4 Miles from Vivegano to the South-West, 10 from Narvara to the South East, and 24 from Pavia to the West. It is the chief Town of a Country call'd Lumellina: and was anciently call'd Bellus Sylas; but afterwards Mortaria, on the account of the signal overthrow which the Lombards receiv'd by the Army of Charles the Great, when he took their last King Didier Prisoner, and put a period to their Kingdom. In the year 1658 it was taken by the French under the Command of Francis Duke of Modena, but restor'd to the Spaniard by the Pyrenian Treaty, Ann. 1660.

CHAPTER VI.

The Dutchy of Parma. Ducatus, or Ditiu Parmensis.

THE Dutchy of Parma, which the Italians call lo Stato del Duca di Parma, is Bounded with the Dutchy of Milan on the North and West, that of Modena on the East, and the Dominions of Genoua, and part of the Valley of Magra on the South: and was anciently Inhabited by the Anamani, a People of Gallia Cispadana, and a part of the Boii. The parts into which it is commonly divided are, the Dutchy of Parma strictly taken, the Dutchy of Placenza, the State of Buffeto, and a part of the State of the Valley of Taro, and formerly comprehended also the Dutchy of Castro and the State of Ronciiglione. After many Changes and Revolutions, this Country fell into the hands of the Pope. And Pope Paul III. before his Accession to the Chair, called Alexander Farnese, Created Pedro Luige Farnese Duke of Parma, in the year 1545. and so this Duke is a Vassal of the See of Rome, to which he Pays a yearly acknowledgment of 10000 Crowns. The Revenues of this Dutchy are said to be about 400000 Crowns, and his ordinary Forces 5000 Men. This Dutchy's being a Feif of the Pope's Demeans, had like to have prov'd Fatal to Prince Rannucio, Son and Heir to Alexander Farnese Duke of Parma, and Governor of the Netherlands; For Pope Sixtus V. having by repeated Orders forbid the carrying of secret Arms, was inform'd, that this young Prince ordinarily carried Pocket Pistols; and thereupon (this Prince being his Vassal) ordered him to be Arrested, and his Pistols taken from him in one of the Chambers of the Popes Palace, and afterwards to be carried to the Castle of St. Angelo. His Uncle Cardinal Farnese left no means unessay'd to procure his Liberty, but all in vain; for the Pope sent an Order to the Governor of the Castle to cause him to be Beheaded; but the Cardinal coming shortly after, (as if he had known nothing of the Fatal Order) to renew his Solicitations, the Pope to be rid of him, sent him away with a new Order to the Governor, to set Rannucio at Liberty, not doubting but it would come too late. The Cardinal having by Money procured all the Clocks in the City to be kept back, except the Pope's, and coming to the Castle in all haste, found his Nephew all in Tears, in the Arms of his Confessor; but quickly producing his new Order, and the Governor concluding that the Pope had at last been prevailed with, delivered up his Prisoner, who by his Uncles Command immediately took Post, without staying to thank his Holiness for his Life; which by chance had been rescued from the Jaws of Death. This Country produces plenty of good Wine and Oyl, and was famous for excellent Cheese; which they say is not at present made here, but in the Milanese about Lodi. The most considerable Cities and Towns in it are,

Parma, } § Borgo S. Domino,
Placenza, } § Fierenzuola.

Parma. Parma, Anciently a City Inhabited by the Boii in Gallia Cispalina, according to Strabo and Pliny, stands upon a River of the same Name, which divides it into two parts, about 10 Miles from the Po to the South, in the midst between Modena and Placenza, 35 Miles East of the first, and as many West of the other, 86 from Florence to the North-west, 60 South-East from Milan, and above 200 from Rome. It is a very pleasant City, and the Avenues to it are Broad and Straight. The most remarkable things in it are, the great Theatre, which is so rare a Structure, that neither Paris nor Venice, can boast of the like. It is extremely large, but so contriv'd that the least whisper can be heard thro' all the Parts of it. Instead of Boxes, the Floor is surrounded with Benches, rais'd after the manner of an Amphitheatre. It may be filled with Water to the Height of above 3 Foot; and this little Lake is cover'd with Guilt Boats; which make a very charming Spectacle, by the help of a fine Illumination. The Citadel of Parma was Built after the Model of that of Antwerp, and the Fortifications of the City are also very good. The Ducal Palace has nothing extraordinary in it; but that which was a building in the year 1688, is Larger and more Regular. Besides the ordinary Scholes of the Univerfity, there is a large College, call'd the College of the Nobility: and not only the Sciences, but also all manner of Exercises are taught here. There is abundance of good Company and Fine People, to be seen here at the Cours or Walk, especially handsome Women; but it is thought as grea a Crime, and would be as odd to see both Sexes in one Coach, as to walk naked about the Streets. This City is honoured with an Episcopall See, under the Archbishop of Bologna; but was formerly Subject to that of Ravenna.

Placenza, Placencia, Anciently a Town in Gallia Cispadana, Inhabited by the Anamani, now call'd by the Inhabitants Piacenza, stands upon a Plain, about half a Mile from the Po, 40 Miles from Milan to the South East, 35 from Parma, 30 from Pavia to the East, and 18 from Cremona. It is the chief Town of a Dutchy of that Name, Subject to the Duke of Parma, since the year 1540. It is a very ancient Town, and was Burnt and Pillag'd by the Cartbaginians, under the Command of their General Hamilcar, (as Livy informs us) and afterwards did Bravelly sustain a long Seige, which Attila King of the Goths laid to it. It is a pleasant Town, Bigger than Parma; the Houses are low and prettily Built. There is in the street which they call Stradon; a Foot-path next the Houses defended with Posts, as in London, about 10 Foot distance from each other. The Town is thinly Inhabited: and the Houses are generally of Brick. The Fortifications are not very considerable, tho' they are very much extoll'd commonly. The Statues of Alexander Farnese Governor of the Spanish-Netherlands, and of his Son Rannucio the First, are set up in the great Place.

Borgo S. Domino, Fidentia, Anciently a Town belonging to the Anamani, in Gallia Cispadana, according to Antoninus. It appears by an old Inscription that it was call'd Julia Fidentia; Livy calls it Fidentiola, and the Roman Martyrology Julia. It is now a little Disamantled Town on the Continues of the State of Buffeto, about 15 Miles from Parma to the West, and 20 from Piacenza. It had been an Episcopall See, but ceasing to be so for some time, was restor'd to that Dignity by Pope Clement VIII. Ann. 1601.

Fierenzuola, Florenziola, Anciently a Town in Gallia Cispadana, Inhabited by the Anamani, stands in the Country of Buffeto, about 13 Miles from Piacenza to the East, 6 from Borgo S. Domino, and 22 from Parma; it is the name also of a pleasant Valley, in a Barren and Desert Country, between Florence and Bologna. It was Built by the Florentines, Anno 1332. There are other Towns of this Name, viz. one in Tuscany, and another in Apulia.

C H A P. VII.

The Dutchy of Modena. Mutinensis Ducatus.

THIS Dutchy is made up of several little Dutchies and Principalities, viz. The Dutchy of Reggio, the Principality of Carpi, the Principality of Correggio, the Signiorie of Sassuolo, Frignana, and the greater part of Grafignana; and is Bounded on the North with the Dutchies of Mantua, and Mirandula, on the East with the Bolognese, and the Territories of the Church, on the South with the Dominions of Tuscany, and those of Luca, and on the West with the Dutchy of Parma. Its Length from South to North is about 60 Miles, (according to Baudrand) from East to West 45. It was anciently Inhabited by the Boii, People of Gallia Cispadana; and was formerly Subject to the Dukes of Ferrara, of the Family of Este; but the little Principality of Correggio was but lately annexed to the Dominions of Modena; being formerly Govern'd by its own Princes. The most considerable Towns in this Dutchy of Modena are,

Modena.	} Reggio.
Carpi.		} Bersello.
Correggio.

Modena, Mutina, Anciently a Colony and Town in Gallia Cispadana; but Ruin'd by the Goths, and Lombards, and afterwards Built at the Charge of the Citizens. During the distractions of Italy between the Emperor and the Pope, Guido the Pope's Legat and Bishop of this Place, consigned it to Azo, of the House of Este, Lord of Ferrara, Ann. 1304. upon the Payment of 10000 Crowns a year; since which time it hath for the most part continued in the Possession of that Family. It is Seated on a Plain, upon the River Secchia, about 20 Miles from Bologna to the West, 16 from Reggio to the East, 20 from the Po to the South, and 40 from Mantua to the South East. It is at present destitute of Trade, and consequently Poor. Its Fortifications are in a decaying condition. The Portico's with which the Streets are Bordered are low and narrow, neither are any of its Churches remarkable. In short, were it not for its ancient Reputation, and because it is the Residence of the Duke at present, it would hardly be taken notice of. It is an Episcopal Sec, under the Archbishop of Bologna, whereas formerly it was Suffragan to that of Ravenna.

Carpi, Carpum, Stands upon a Canal of the River Secchia, 12 Miles from Modena to the North, and near 4 from Correggio. It is but a little Town, with a pretty Strong Castle; but is Honour'd with the Title of a Principality, (which is no great matter in Italy) and was for a long time Possessed by the Family of the Pio's; but at last in the year 1550, it fell into the hands of the Dukes of Modena. The Collegiat Church in it was first Built by King Aistulphus, and afterwards Repaired with much Magnificence, by Albertus Pius, then Prince. It is in no Diocess, and is exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Neighbouring Bishops, by the Concessions, particularly of Pope Julius II. and Leo X.

Correggio, Corregium or Corrigium, is a pretty large and well Inhabited Town, with a Castle, about 10 Miles from Reggio, and 13 from Modena to the West. It was formerly under Princes of that Name; but since the year 1635, it has been Subject to the Duke of Modena.

Reggio, Reggio, Regium Lepidi, to distinguish it from Regium Julium, another Town of that Name in Calabria ulterior, (of which afterwards in its due place) is Seated in a pleasant Country, between Parma to the West, and Modena to the East, about 20 Miles from either. Mr. Misson tells us, that there is nothing particularly remarkable in this City, except that it is better Built, and more pleasant than Modena. Tho' they boast much of their Church of S. Profper; yet it is nothing in comparison with those at Rome or Naples. They thrive also (says this Author) to gain some Reputation by making Spurs, and working in Bone; of which they make Rings for 6d. a Dozen, Deaths-Heads, Shrines for Relicks, Agnus Dei's, &c. all very coarse. It is an Episcopal See, formerly Suffragan to Ravenna, but now to Bologna.

Bersello, Brixellum, Anciently a Colony and City in Gallia Cispadana, which Suetonius and Pliny call Brixillum, stands upon the Po, over against Viadana, 8 Miles from Parma to the North, 25 from Mantua, 23 from Cremona to the West, and 17 from Reggio to the South West. The Roman Emperor Orbo died here after the Battle of Bebriacum, (now call'd Corneto) which he Fought against the Forces of Vitellius, his Rival for the Empire.

Mirandula, Mirandula, is the name of a little Dutchy, and also of the Chief Town in it; which is said to have been Built in the time of Constantin, Son of Constantin the Great. The Dutchy lies between that of Mantua to the North, and Modena to the South. The Town (which is Fortified and Defended by a Castle) stands about 10 Miles from the Po to the South, and 22 from Modena to the North. This Place with the adjacent Country, hath for a long time been subject to the Family of the Pici (of which was Picus Mirandula, that Famous Scholar,) as also the County of Concordia.

C H A P. VIII.

The Dutchy of Mantua. Mantuanus Ducatus.

THIS Dutchy is bounded on the East with the Dutchy of Ferrara, on the North with the Territories of Bresciano and the Veronese, on the West with part of the Dutchy of Milan, near Cremona, and on the South with the Dutchies of Modena and Mirandola; where anciently a part of the Cenomani dwelt. A great part of the Dutchy of Montferrat belongs to this Duke; who is descended from the House of Gonzagua, in whose Possession these Territories have been ever since the Year, 1327 or 1328. that Lewis de Gonzagua a Nobleman, with the assistance of the People, kill'd their Tyrant Passarino Bonocosa, and took the Government upon him. The Emperor Sigismund created John Francis Gonzagua Marquis, Ann. 1431. and Charles the V. erected it into a Dutchy, Ann. 1530. This is a Fertile Country, affording Plenty of Corn and Pasturage, but the Wine is not so much commended: And the most considerable Towns in it are,

Mantua, Ch.

Guastalla.

Castiglione delle Stivere.

Mantua. Mantua, a very ancient City, Built before Rome, anciently Inhabited by the Cenomani in Gallia Cispadana. It stands on a spot of firm Land within a Marsh, made by the River Mincio upon a flat Country; which cannot properly be called a Lake; for in some parts of it the Water is always in Motion, tho' in others it Stagnates, which makes the Air so Infectious that few stay in the City during the great Heats, except such as cannot conveniently leave it. This City is not well Fortified, being only enclosed with a Wall, and defended by a Citadel: The City is indifferently large, and the Streets are broad and straight; but the Houses are very indifferent, and generally unequal. The Dukes Palace is a large and commodious Pile of Building, but has very little else to recommend it. It is said to have been very richly furnish'd, before Colalto, General of the Emperor's Forces, pillaged it in July, 1630. and however this Palace may be furnish'd at present, the Duke's Apartment is in very good Order: And the Hall of Antiquities is full of rare and fine Pieces; and the Cabinet of Curiosities is pretty well furnish'd. The Duke has Seven or Eight Pleasure-Houses, most of which are very lovely Seats. Besides the Cathedral, the Churches of the Jesuits, St. Barnabas, St. Maurice, St. Sebastian, St. Ursula and St. Barbara, the Town-House, Theatre, Manufactories, the Mill of the 12 Apostles, Synagogue and Shambles are all very well worth one's seeing, as is also the Palace of Justice: Near this City, in the Village Andes was the immortal Virgil Born; which is one of the most considerable Things that render this City Famous. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarchat of Aquileia, but exempted from that Jurisdiction ever since the Year, 1453. and stands about 5 or 6 Miles from the Po, 75 East North from the Mediterranean Sea, and 30 North East from Parma.

Guastalla, Guardistallum, or Vastalla and Guastalla, stands near the River Po, on the Borders of the Dutchy of Modena, in the midst between Mantua to the North, and Reggio to the South. It, with a little Country about it, is honoured with the Title of a Principality. There was a Council held here, under Pope Paschalis the II. An. 1106. It has been subject to the Duke of Mantua ever since the Year, 1677. that its last Duke died.

Castiglione delle Stivere, Castilio Stiverorum, is a little Fortified Town, with a pretty Strong Castle, on the Confines of the Dutchy of Mantua, 12 Miles from Peschiera, and almost in the middle between Mantua and Brescia. It gives Name to the adjoining Country, which together with the Town are subject to a Prince of the Family of Gonzagua.

Bozolo, Bozolum, is a little sort of a City, enclosed with certain Works, which pass for Fortifications: And stands 2 Miles from the River Olio, and almost in the middle between Mantua and Cremona. It gives Title to a Duke, who besides this Place, is Sovereign of a Territory that extends four or five Miles.

C H A P. IX.

The Republick of Venice. Dittio Veneta.

THE Dominions of the Republick of Venice, or the State of Venice, taken in a large Sense, may be divided into three Parts, according to the distinct Countries in which they ly, viz. The Venetian Dominions in Italy, which they commonly call la Terra ferma, in Dalmatia, comprehending their Dominions on that Coast and some adjacent Isles: And their Dominions in the Ionian and Aegean Seas, which the Italians call il Levante. We shall treat particularly of the first Two in this Chapter, and some of the Third, the rest being describ'd in that which treats of Turkey in Europe.

Whatever the Venetians may pretend for the Antiquity of their State, and the perpetual Freedom and Independency they have ever enjoy'd, this seems pretty clear, That their City, and consequently their State, owes its Original to that of Padua. For we are told by Authors of undoubted Credit, that the Scar of this City did belong to Padua before the Building of Venice; which was not till about the Year,

Year, 420. and that Padua had a little sort of Colony there, for the Conveniency of Trade and Commerce, before ever one Stone of this City was laid, or before the coming of Attila, King of the Huns into that Country. And in Testimony of Venice's depending on Padua, it is as certain that for a considerable time there were Consuls chosen in Padua, who were to go to Venice and there to exercise the Supreme Authority: And not only so, but as a further confirmation of this Dependency, they sent one Aegidius Fontana, a Man of singular Prudence, and eminently skilful in the Laws to frame such Laws and Constitutions for them, as he should think most fit and convenient for this Infant City; which (as we hinted before) ought to date its beginning to be a Town from the Day on which the Church of St. James de Rialta was Consecrated, which was (as Zul. Faroldus, a Man well enough affected to the Interest of Venice affirms) on the 25 of March 421. There is no Question but the number of its Inhabitants were mightily increas'd, and consequently the Bounds of their City enlarged after Attila's coming into that Country; for he having destroyed Aquileia, Altino, Oderzo, Concordia and Padua, the Inhabitants of those Cities fled to the little Islands upon which Venice now stands, about the Year, 453. which beyond all doubt as it did mightily encrease this City, so in many respects it began to look quite another thing from what it had been formerly, and to grow in Riches and Trade as well as Extent of Dominion, till it has at last arriv'd at that pitch of Grandeur which we now see it. Whoever desires to have a full and distinct, and at the same time a brief Account of this Republick, as to its Antiquity and Independency, he may, I suppose, find Satisfaction in a little Book written by Don Afonso de la Quevedo, (Ambassador from the Court of Spain to the State of Venice) call'd originally Spulino della Liberta Veneta: which tho' it may be thought the Product of his ill Will to that State, yet the Gentleman being one of the greatest Genius's of his Age, and a Man of Honour and Wisdom, 'tis not to be thought that he would invent both Authors and Citations from them; which the Reader is particularly concern'd in in that little Treatise. He clearly proves, First, That Venice was not originally a free State, nor has always been so in any Sense, but has been Subject to another. Secondly, That it has been Subject to the Emperors, to Odoacer, and the Gotbiffo Kings. Thirdly, That it came again under Obedience to the Emperor after the Destruction of the Gotbs, and continued so to be for the space of a hundred Years. Fourthly, That in process of Time it recover'd its Liberty in a manner; that is, not in respect of private Persons, but only of the Duke, in whose Hands solely the whole Administration was lodg'd. Fifthly, That afterwards it was restor'd to a full and intire Liberty, in which all the Citizens shar'd in common, and were equally capable of sitting in their Council. Sixthly, That afterwards this universal Liberty came to be restrict'd and confin'd to the Rank of those who now are only capable of holding the Reins of Government, that is, the Nobility, to the exclusion of all the rest of the Citizens. These Propositions being proved, as We think this Author does to the satisfaction of any unprejudic'd Person, they must certainly be in a vast Mistake who do with so much Passion and Heat maintain the original and perpetual Liberty of this State, as well as those who endeavour to prove its present Freedom and Independencie, in a large Sense, that is, including the whole Body of the Citizens, since it is plain that the Nobility only are so, the rest not having the least degree of Freedom, beyond what Padua, Verona, and the other Cities under the Obedience of this State enjoy.

The first Government then of this City was Consular, which lasted about 40 Years, and then was chang'd for that of the Tribunes; then came in the Dukes or Doges, who for a long time were either appointed or confirm'd by the Emperor, or the Exarch, by whom also this State was confirm'd in its former Privileges, and allow'd to Coin Money. Afterwards the Doges became absolute, and exercised arbitrary Power: And then the City was just as free as Rome was under the first Casars; but now the Case is quite altered; for the Doge of Venice is no more than a meagre gawdy Slave loaded with Fetters, which are not the less heavy because they are gilded; and his Authority extends no further than to nominate some Officers of the Palace, to have two Voices in the Great Council, and to create some Knights of St. Mark. He is as much Subject to the Laws as the meanest Person: And the Inquisition of the State is more severe upon him than upon others. He is chosen by the whole Body of the Nobility, and enjoys this imaginary Honour during Life. When he is Sick or Dies, a certain Counsellor takes his Place and represents his Person in publick Ceremonies, and other Occasions; but neither wears his Habit, nor sits in his Seat. The Doge cannot Pardon Criminals; nor take a Journey to the Continent without permission from the State; and when he goes, he leaves all his Honours behind him, and is no more than a private Nobleman: And the very Moment he's elected all his Relations who were in Offices are turn'd out. The Letters of Princes are directed and presented to the Doge, but he must not open them before they are communicated to the Council; that is, the Council receives them by his Hands. He gives Answer to Ambassadors; but must not alter one Syllable of what the Council has put in his Mouth, otherwise he must expect a Reprimand on the very Spot. As to what concerns Acts of State, he is but the Herald; the Senate Enacts, and the Doge Publishes them. His Revenue (according to Mr. Misson) amounts to near 6000 Sequins or 2700 Pound English. He has some Marks of seeming Honour put upon him; which in effect, are rather given to the Republick in his Person than to him. He is call'd Prince, and has the Title of Serenity bestowed on him. There are some Marks of Royalty in his Apparel also. When he marches in State he has a Torch carried before him, a Chair with two Arms and no Back, and a Cushion, 8 Silver Trumpets, some Hautboys, and 8 Standards, and a kind of Canopy like an Umbrella carried hard by him; tho' there's no Canopy in his Apartment, nor even in the Hall where he gives Audience to Ambassadors. He never pulls off his Corno, but either at the Moment of the Elevation of the Host, or when he receives a Visit from a Prince of Royal Blood, or from a Cardinal.

As to the Nobility of Venice, tho' they all bear the same Name, and are united into one Body, their Families are not equally Illustrious. The first Class or Rank consists of those Families who founded the Republick and were Nobles before that Time. The Second comprehends those who were elected before the shutting up of the Council; which was call'd Il Serrar del Consiglio. The Third contains those who obtain'd that Honour as a Recompence for for some eminent Services done to the State: And therefore call'd Gentlemen by Merit. The Fourth is made up of Nobili per Soldi, or Gentlemen by Purchase, who bought the Title. But notwithstanding these Differences, all of 'em, from the highest to the lowest, have an equal Right to give their Voices, and enjoy the same Privileges: All go to the Great Council, and are honoured with the Title of Excellency. The Order of Knighthood may be divided into these Classes or Ranks. The First comprehends the Knights of the Golden Star, who are all Noble Venetians, that owe their Dignity to their Merit, and wear a Star bordered with a Gold Gallow. The Second Rank consists of the Knights of St. Mark, who are call'd Knights of the Senate: And this Honour is usually confer'd as a Recompence, on Colonels, and even sometimes on Captains, who have signaliz'd their Bravery in an extraordinary Manner, or rendered some important Service to the Republick. The Captain-General recommends the Person to the Senate, who, if the balloting run in his Favour, receives the Order, and with it a Pension of at least a thousand Ducats a Year. These Knights wear a Medal at one of their Burton-holes, with the Figure of St. Mark on one side, and a Device on the Reverse, according to the Pleasure of the Senate. This Honour is indifferently bestowed on all, Noble or Ignoble, Venetian or Foreigner. The Third Rank is made up of the Doge's Knights, who confers this Honour on whom he pleases, and oftentimes on very mean Persons; who can buy it at any time for a hundred Chequins. This Classis consists chiefly of Foreign Officers, who besides the additional Respect it begets them, are by this means secured in their Places.

As to the Government and Administration of Justice, we are told, that there are 5 Principal Councils or Courts establish'd in this State. The First is the Grand Council, comprehending the whole Body of the Nobility, who are of Age to sit in Council, that is 25 Years old; whose Number is thought to be about 1400, tho' not above one half of 'em are at Home at one Time, being employ'd in other Places, either in Civil or Military Offices, or on Embassies to Foreign States. The Second, call'd Procuratori, determines all Matters relating to Peace and War, Alliances and Leagues. The Third is the College, compos'd of 26 Noble-men, that give Audience to Ambassadors, and report their Demands to the Senate, which alone hath Power to return Answers. The Fourth is call'd the Council of Ten, and decides all Criminal Matters. This Court is renew'd Yearly, and 3 Inquirors of State are chosen from among them every Month. The Fifth is the Spiritual Council, in which the Patriarch of Venice presides; who is always a Noble-man, and is elected by the Senate, and confirm'd by the Pope. His Dignity is very eminent, but his Authority is extremely bounded. He can only nominate to two Benefices, for the Clergy are chosen by the People, and can hardly be said to acknowledge any Superiority but that of the State.

The Forces of this Republick both at Sea and Land, hardly amount to four and twenty Thousand, and of these there are usually twelve or fifteen Thousand in the Field. The Captain-General who Commands 'em, is always a Noble Venetian, and has under him a General of the Land Forces, Lieutenant-Generals, and Sergeant-Majors, who are almost always Foreigners; for the Noble Venetians are not very Ambitious of Military Employments, because they must come to the highest Posts by degrees; and a Noble Venetian can hardly find in his Heart to stoop so low, as to carry a Musket, or even to accept a Captain's Commission. A Foreign Captain's Pay is a hundred Ducats, or 250 French Livres a Month, a Lieutenant's 30, and an Ensign's 25, but the Italian Officers have but half so much. The Common Soldiers have but 3 d. a Day, and out of that must furnish their own Cloaths; but those who serve at Sea have Cloaths given them.

We said before, that the whole Dominions belonging to the Republick of Venice, might be divided into 3 Parts, according to the several distinct Countries where they ly, as you may see in this Table:

TERRA FIRMA.

THE first of these, viz. The Terra firma, or Dominion of Venice, strictly taken, was Anciently a part of Gallia Cisalpina, Inhabited by the Veneti, Carni, Istri, and Euganei; and is Bounded on the North with the Valtelline, County of Tirol, and Carinthia, on the West with the Duchy of Milan, on the South with the Duchy of Mantua, the Ecclesiastical State, and the Gulf of Venice, which Bounnds it also on the East. Its greatest Length from East to West is about 240 Miles and greatest Breadth about 100. but in some places it is very Narrow.

ISTRIA, was Anciently a part of Gallia Transpadana, on the Confines of Illyricum. It is bounded on the North with Germany, and the Duchy of Carniola, from which it is separated by the Montidella Vena, on the East with the Golfo Carnero, on the West with the Gulf of Venice, with which also it is Bounded on the South. It is in Length from North-West to South-East, about 60 Miles, but not near so Broad. The Air of it is not very Healthful, especially on the Coast, but the Country is abundantly Fertile, producing Corn, Timber, Grapes and Olives. The Senate of Venice sends a Governor to it, and receives a considerable Revenue from thence. The chief Towns in it under the Venetians are,

Capo d' Istria. } Cito Nuovo.
Prenzo. } Pola.

Capo d' Istria, Fusiniopolis, from Fusini the Emperor, who Rebuilt it, whereas formerly it had been call'd Egida, according to Pliny. It stands in an Island, within three Arrow-shots from the Continent, to which it is joyned by certain Bridges, that may be drawn at Pleasure, which makes the place so strong that it is call'd on that account Castellum Leonis, or the Lion-Castle. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia, and stands on the Coasts of the Gulf of Venice, about 28 Miles South from Treiste, and 78 from Venice to the East.

Parentum, Parentum, which Pliny and Ptolemy make mention of, as a Town in Italy, is seated upon a Peninsula and Fortified, and has a pretty good Harbour; but is Inhabited by very few, by reason of the Unwholsom Air. It is however the name of an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia, about 7 Miles distant from Cita Nuova, 28 from Capo d' Istria as much from Pola, and 80 from Venice to the East.

Cita Nuova, Civitas Nova, is a little Town near the Ruins of Emonia, which was destroyed by the Hungarians. It stands upon the River Quieto, about 3 Miles from the Ruins of Emonia, 30 from Treiste to the South, and 8 from Parentum. It has the name of an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia; but the Air being so bad, no body lives in it but a few Fishermen in the Winter time; for in the Summer it is quite desolate and abandon'd.

Pola. Pola, was anciently call'd Julia Pata, according to Pliny, and Built by the Colchi. It is a little Ill-inhabited Town, near a Promontory of the same name, about 88 Miles from Parentum to the South, 60 from Treiste, and about 100 from Ancona, and is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

The County of FRUOLI, Forum Julium, or Julienfis Provincia, was Anciently Inhabited by the Carni; and is Bounded on the South with the Adriatick Sea, and the Gulf of Treiste, on the West by the Marcha di Teruigiano, and a part of the County of Tirol, on the North by the higher Carinthia, and the higher Carniola, and on the East by Carniola Sicca, and part of Istria. This Country comprehends several lesser ones, as il Cadovino, la Carnia, il Carso, which are Subject to the Venetians, the County of Goritia, and the Territories of Aquileia, that are Subject to the House of Austria. This Province was formerly given by the Emperors to the Patriarchs of Aquileia; from whom afterwards the Dukes of Austria and Carinthia took a great part of it: And after many bloody Battles between the Venetians and the Patriarchs of Aquileia, at last by a Treaty of Peace, in the year 1455, the Province of Friuli, excepting what we just now mention'd, was yielded to the Venetians. Besides Aquileia, which belongs to the House of Austria: The most Remarkable Towns in it, Subject to this State, are,

Udino. } Palma Nuovo.
Venezona. } Cividadi Friuli.
Marano.

Aquileia. Aquileia, of old the Chief City of the Carni, according to Livy and Pliny. Stands upon the River Natisone, not far from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea; about 50 Miles from Venice to the North-East, about 30 from Treiste to the West, and as many from Cencordia to the West. It was Anciently a Famous and very Rich City, by reason of its Commodious Situation for Trade and Commerce: and was the Bulwark of Italy on that side; and therefore it was that two noble Romans who had been Consuls maintain'd it against Maximus, as Constantinus did against his Brother Constantinus, and afterwards Maximus endeavour'd to possess himself of it against Theodosius the Emperor. Attila, King of the Huns, after a Three years Siege, took and Sack'd it, in the year 452. Narses afterwards Repair'd it; and in the year 590 it was reduc'd to Ashes by the Lombards; and afterwards Rebuilt by the Patriarch Pope; whose Successors were Possessors of it a long time, till at last it fell into the Hands of the Archdukes of Austria, who remain Masters of it. At present there's hardly any body living in it, except a few Fishermen, by reason the Air is so Unwholsome, and the Rubbish of the old City so lying scattered up and down. The Patriarch of it lives now at Udino.

Udino. Udinum, Anciently a City belonging to the Carni, Stands near the River Torre, 20 Miles North from the Shoar of the Adriatick Sea, as many to the North-west of Aquileia, 11 from Palma, 20 from Goritia to the West, and 8 from Ciudad di Friuli. It is now the Chief Town of this Country, since the Patriarch remov'd his Seat from Aquileia hither; whereas formerly it was an Episcopal See, but no great Town. It has been subject to the State of Venice, since the year 1420.

Palma. Palma, is a Place of great Strength and Importance, being Built upon the Confines of the Austrian Territories, in a Plain near the River Natisone, where formerly the Church of St. Laurentius de Ronchi stood, about 10 Miles from Udino to the South East, as many from Aquileia, 18 from Marano to the North, and 15 from Goritia to the South-West. The Foundation of it was laid on the 7th of October, 1593. and was design'd by the Venetians, as a defence to their Dominions against the Austrians.

Cividadi Friuli, Forum Julii, was Anciently a Colony and Town belonging to the Carni, according to Ptolemy and Tacitus, which Paulus Diaconus calls Castrum Julienfe. It stands on the River Natisone, about 7 Miles from Udino to the East, and 15 from Goritia. The

The Country of TREVIGIANA, or La Marca Trevigiana, lies betwixt the Territories of Friuli on the East, and those of Vicentino and Tent to the West. It was formerly much larger; but now comprehends only the Territories of Trevigiano, Bellunese and Feltrino, and is computed to be 48 Miles East and West, and 68 North and South. The most considerable Towns in it are,

|-----------------------|---|---------------------|
| Treviso , Cap. | } | Conegliano , |
| Belluno , | | Oderzo , |
| Feltri , | | la Mota , |
| Ceneda , | | Cadorà . |
| Saravalle , | | |

Treviso, or Trevisi, Tarvisium, Stands upon the Banks of the River Sile, about 18 Miles from Venice to the North-West, 15 from Oderzo to the South-West, and 20 from Padua. It is a pretty Large and Strong Town, especially on the account of its being almost surrounded with Water, which makes it almost Inaccessible and Impregnable. It has been subject to the State of Venice, since the year 1336; for tho' the Emperor Maximilian took it in the year 1509. yet it was restor'd to the Venetians shortly after. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

Belluno, or Croidal di Bel'uno, Bellunum, mentioned by Pliny and Ptolomy, is a little Town, but well Inhabited, on the River Piave, about 30 Miles to the North-West of Treviso, and 50 from Venice; and gives name to the adjacent Country. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

Feltri, Feltria, which Antoninus places in Venetia, in Gallia Cisalpina. Stands upon the River Aso, which a little below falls into the Piave, about 10 Miles from the Confines of the County of Tirol to the East, 15 from Ceneda, as many from Belluno, and 45 from Venice to the North. It is an Episcopal See and gives Name to the adjacent Country, and hath been under the Jurisdiction of Venice since the year 1404.

Ceneda, Ceneta, or Ceneda Agathie, and Anciently Acedum. Stands at the Foot of the Hills, near the Spring-Head of Mottegino. in the midit, between the Rivers Piave to the West, and Livenzo to the East, at the distance of 10 Miles from either, 13 from Belluno to the South, as much from Oderzo, and 15 from Trevigiana. It is a pretty little Town, and well Inhabited. The Episcopal See of Belluno, which was Subject to the Patriarch of Aquileia, was Translated hither; but the Bishop ordinarily Resides at Saravalle, a little Town about 2 Miles from this Place.

Oderzo, Opitergium, which Strabo places in Venetia, of Gallia Transpadana. Stands upon the little River Mottegano, about 12 Miles from Trevigiana to the North-East, 35 from Udino, as many from Ceneda to the South-East, and 24 from Aquileia to the West. It was formerly an Episcopal Seat; but was destroyed by Robarius King of the Lombards, and the Bishops Seat Remov'd to Ceneda, under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

The DOGADO or Dutchy of Venice, is a little Country lying along the Shoar of the Gulf; round the City almost, extending from the Mouth of the River Lisonzo, as far as the Adige, having Friuli, the Territories of Padua and Verona on the West and South, and comprehends the Lagune di Venetia, Lagune di Morano, and all betwixt the Village call'd Capo d'Argere, or Cavarzere, as far as Grado, for the space of about 34 Miles Long, and 7 or 8 Broad. The most considerable Towns in it are,

VENICE, Venetia, or Venegia, (of whose Beginning and Encrease we have spoken already, in our account of the Rise and Progress of the Commonwealth, whereof this City is the Celebrated Seat) is commonly said to stand upon 72 Islands, (tho their number is much greater) but whether they are Natural or Artificial is not agreed among Travellers; some thinking that the Venetians might dig their Channels, for the more convenient Carriage of their Goods, which by this means are brought to their Doors: And for the Embellishment of the City; which is the only Town in the World that can boast of such a Situation; others maintaining, that if Nature had not done it, the Venetians would never have thrown away so much of their Ground, which they have always taken so much care to Husband. And besides, that if they had cut out such Channels for their conveniency, why would they have left so many large spots of Ground entire; for tho' it is commonly Reported that a Man may go in a Boat to any House in the City, yet we are not to take that in a strict sense, since there are some Houses not within several Hundred Paces of a Canal. But whether this Account or that be the Truer, it is most certain, that no City on Earth affords a finer Prospect from without, or greater variety of diverting Objects within. At the distance of 30 Miles one begins to see the Spires of the Churches, and the Prospect is still enlarged the nearer one approaches, which gives the Ravisht Spectator the Idea of a great City Springing out of the Water; nor can one get free of the delusion before he has enter'd the City, for all the outer Houses of it are Founded on Piles in the midst of the Water, for it stands entirely separated from the main Land of Italy, but the distance is only Five Miles. And the Gondola's Pais from Mestre in the Paduano to Venice, in an Hour and half. The Port is a large Plain covered with Water, in which there are certain Islands, or Rising Grounds Level with the Water, on the biggest of which Venice is Built, most of the other Islands are covered with Buildings, and make particular Towns; the most considerable of which is call'd Judecca, or the Jews Quarter. These Islands are call'd Lacuna, or Lagunes. Two of them are set apart for the use of those who come from the Levant, where they are oblig'd to perform their Quarantine, in certain large Hospitals call'd Lazaretto's, one of which call'd Lazaretto Vecchio, is a Mile distant from Venice, the other 5. The design of these Places is to preserve the City from contagious Distempers: and those who keep them are so very nice and scrupulous, that they will not receive any thing from a Stranger that there's a Thread in, nor so much as a Letter till it be open'd and Smok'd.

The City of Venice has neither Gates, Walls, nor Citadel, and yet cannot be justly said to be Weak. Many Authors have esteem'd it Impregnable: and the Venetians themselves have told Strangers the Story so often, that now they are fully convinc'd themselves that it is so. The opinions concerning the extent of this City and Number of its Inhabitants are very different. It is commonly said to be 8 Miles in Compass; but Mr. Misson makes it pretty plain that it is not 5. The number of the Inhabitants have been said to be 2 or 3 Hundred thousand Souls, and some have advanc'd it to four; but whatever it might be when the Trade of Venice Flourish'd, it is thought at present not to contain above a Hundred and forty thousand Souls, comprehending the Isle of Giudeca. The World has been impos'd upon by some who have endeavour'd to make People believe that there were a vast number of Gardens and Places in Venice. As to the former, setting aside that towards Santa Maria del Orto, and about twenty more less considerable ones, all the rest will not be one with another, above ten Foot Square; and as for the latter, properly speaking, there is but one Place in Venice, the Famous and Magnificent Place of S. Mark; which is really the Soul and Glory of that City. 'Tis Two hundred and fifty Paces Long, and eighty Broad, or according to others 280 Long, and 100 Broad. The Church of St. Mark faces one end of it, and that of St. Geminain the other. 'Tis Bordered on each side with those stately Piles of Building call'd the old and new Procuraties, or Lawyers Offices and Lodgings. That on the right hand as you go to St. Mark's Church is call'd the new, and that on the left the old Procuraty. The first has two principal Fronts, one of which looks into the Place of St. Mark, and the other into the Broglio, over against the Palace of St. Mark; which is an Ancient and Magnificent Structure, where all the Councils meet; such as the grand Council, the Council of Finances, call'd the Ceza, the Marine Council, &c. Here the Money is Coin'd, and the publick Treasure kept in great iron Chests, secur'd with three Locks: the Keys of which are committed to three Procurators, who under pain of Death, dare not make the least attempt to open them till they are all met together. The Council sits twice a Week; which are the only days for all sorts of Payments. All the Streets of the City, without exception are narrow and crooked; but to make amends for these Disadvantages, they are so clean that one may walk a whole year in them without meeting with any Dirt, and besides they are Pav'd with large square Stones; which always after a Shower grow as white as Marble. One may go to most Houses in Venice by Water, as well as by Land; there being about 430 Bridges over the Canals, the Principal of which is that of Rialto, an admirable Structure, consisting of one Arch Founded on Ten thousand Piles of Elm, and is said to have cost two hundred and fifty thousand Ducats. Mr. Misson gives us the exact measure of this Arch, whose words are these, viz. The compass of the Arch makes exactly the third part of a Civele, and the Breadth on the Level of the Water, from one extremity of the Arch to the other is Ninety five Foot, and the height twenty four Foot. The Air of Venice is pretty wholesome, but the Water not so; for of an hundred and fifty Wells that are within the City, there are but two or three good for any thing; and the best they have is Rain-Water, which they preserve in Cisterns. Some have reckon'd the Palaces in Venice, to be about 400. but tho' this is a bold Assertion, one may venture to say that they are so numerous and Magnificent, that they are sufficient to Adorn Ten Cities; and the finest of them are upon the great Canal.

The most remarkable things in Venice, next to the Place of St. Mark, are, the Arsenal, which claims a particular observation. It is almost two Miles in compass; for within its inclosure are comprehended the Magazines for the Vessels, Melting-Houses, Rope-yards, Forges, Lodges for the Gallies, Gallies, and the Bucentaur, besides the Havens and Docks, for Building and Refitting of Vessels. The Ammunition with which the Arsenal is crowded, is said to be sufficient to Arm and Equip 15 Gallies, 4 Gallies, as many Ships, and 100000 Men. It is Govern'd by three Noblemen, and under them by the Pilot of the Republick, whom they call the Admiral, who is Entrusted with the Care and Inspection of the Stores; and Steers the Bucentaur on Ascension-day, when the Duke, accompanied by all the Nobles, performs the Ceremony of Wedding the Sea. The Treasury has been much Richer, but still contains a great deal of rare and valuable things, as the two Crowns of the Kingdoms of Candia and Cyprus, many fine Vessels of Agat, Emerald and Crystal, a Saphire of 10 Ounces, the Doge's Corno, Valued at 200000 Crowns, and many other rare and precious things, which the Reader may find in the latest Travellers. The Republick, as St. Didier says, had a Chain of Gold enough for 40 Men to Carry, to which there was a Link added every year and 15 Millions in Gold, which they kept as a reserve for extraordinary occasions; but this Treasure was partly Exhausted by the War of Candia, and partly by some Venetian Families, who have Enrich'd themselves with the Spoils of it. The Palace of S. Mark where the Doge Lodges, is a large Building, after the Gothic manner, but Magnificent. It has been Burnt 4 or 5 times, and the various Reparations of it, have spoil'd the Uniformity of the Structure. The Broglio is the Walk of the Nobles, who always take up one side of the Place. This is the general Rendezvous where Visits are made, and Business Dispatch'd. No inferior Person is suffer'd to Walk on that side where the Nobles are, but the other side is free. When a Young Nobleman is come to Age, and puts on the Gown, and is fit to sit in Council, he is Introduced by some of his Friends with a great deal of Ceremony into the Broglio. St. Mark's Church is a large Structure, Square on the out-side, cover'd with 4 Leaden Domes, without any Spire or Steeple. The Top is surrounded with Stone Balisters, for the convenience of Walking. The little Arsenal of the Nobles (which is the Parish of St. Mark) is full of the Noblemens Arms, which are always kept ready Charged, in case of a Surprize. The Library of the Procuratis, has several rare Greek Manuscripts in it, but no great number of Books, nor kept in good order, but has abundance of good Painting, of Titian's, and other Famous Masters doing; and several fine Greek Statues. There are several other good Libraries in Venice; and as many Paintings as there are at Rome.

The Carneval begins always the second Holy-day of Christmasc, that is, from that time People are permitted to wear Masks, and to open the Play-Houses, and Gaming-Houses. There is then an Universal Change in the Habits, Customs and Laws. All masks of Distinction and Superiority are forgotten, or at least neglected; All Persons are, or seem to be equal; Respect, Constraint, Ceremony, Care and Business, are Banish'd from Society; and are succeeded by Joy, Liberty, and an agreeable sort of Folly. During the Fair, the whole Place of St. Mark, and part of the Broglio, is cover'd with Shops: the other part is full of Jugglers, Tumblers, Puppet-Players, Dancing Bears and Mountebanks; which are frequented by all sorts of People, from the Nobleman to the Gondalier.

The

The Opera's and Comedies may be reckon'd one of the Principal diversions of the Carnaval. All the Beauty of the Opera's consists in Vocal Musick and Machines; for there is nothing in the Habits, Dancing, and even in the Plays themselves, that deserves a particular description. The Radotti or Gaming-Houses, are properly Academies of Basses; and are opened at the same time with the Theatres: and none but Noblemen keep the Bank. There are a great number of fine Churches in this City, particularly that Dedicated to S. Mark: and one of the peculiarities of Venice is, that some of them are Dedicated to Saints that were never Canoniz'd such as Job, Moses, Samuel, Jeremy, Daniel and Zachary, &c. There are also many rich Cabinets, particularly those of the Palace of Rosini, of the Procurator Fusini, of the Family of Capello, &c. There are a great many other Things which deserve particular Observation, but it would be tedious to insert them all; and therefore we must send the Reader to the lateit and best Travellers to be more particularly inform'd.

The Noblemen of Venice are variously represent'd by Travellers; some making them a parcel of proud, insulting, and cruel Men; but we have good reason to believe that it is otherwise. 'Tis true, they take care to maintain the Honour of their Birth, and their Authority over the Citizens and the rest of their Subjects; but they are so far from insulting or Tyrannizing over them, that they are always ready to grant their Protection to Honest Men: and as for Strangers, there is no City in the World where they meet with a kinder and more civil Entertainment. And however that Barbarous Custom of employing Bravo's to Murder and Abuse People, might have for a long time been too much us'd; yet the Government has taken such effectual ways for removing them, that now the whole Race of them seems to be almost extinguisht. The Noblemen never appear Publickly but in their Black Robes: nor must they meet in Cabals, or converse with the Servants of Foreign Ambassadors. A Nobleman may Poison his Wife for Adultery, and cause her Gallant to be Poinarded, without fearing to be call'd in question for so Bloody a Revenge. Which cruel Custom, if it were in Fashion in some other great Cities of the World, the Prices of Poison would quickly Rise, and Dagger-making become a considerable Trade. The Venetians in their Marriages regard only Kindred and Riches; and for the most part, the Persons to be Married never see one another till they come to be joyn'd in the Lawful Bond of Matrimony. It is ordinary here for Mothers to find out Concubines for their young Sons, to keep them out of Contagious Pits: and a Man that has a mind may have choice of handfom Girls, whom their Mothers expose to Sale as commonly, as Sheep with us in Smithfield. One may Purchase a handfom Maiden-girl for 150 Crowns in hand, and as much a Year for Entertainment, and for 200 one may have the choice of the Market.

St. Theodore was formerly Patron of Venice, but St. Mark has had that Office ever since the Ninth Century; about the beginning of which, as the Story goes, the Merchants of Venice brought the Body of St. Mark thither, from the City of Alexandria. Greeks, Armenians, and Jews are allow'd the free Exercise of their Religion in Venice; but no Jesuits are allow'd to live there, except those that are Natives of the State, and their Superior must be one Born in the City.

The City of Venice is divided into 6 Parts, which they call Sestieri, viz. Sestier di Castello, Sestier di San Marco, Sestier di Conarejo, Sestier di San Paulo, Sestier di Santa Croce, and Sestier di Dorsoduro. It was from the year 774 an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Grado: and then the Bishop was call'd Episcopus Olivulensis, and afterwards Castellanus. But in the year 1455 Pope Nicolas the 5th, Translated the Patriarchat from Grado to Venice; which is Situated 260 Miles from Rome to the North, 280 from Vienna, 100 from Ravenna to the North, 150 from Milan to the East, 70 from Palma, and 80 from Grado. Latit. 45. 30. Long. 30. 20.

Chiozza, or Cbioggia, Cledia Fossa, a Town of Venetia, according to Pliny, call'd by later Authors, Clugia, stands in a little Island of the Gulf of Venice, on the Coast of the Dogado, near the Lagune di Veneta, about 15 Miles from Venice to the South, towards Loredo, near the Island Brondeio; and has a very good Harbour. It sprung from the Ruins of the ancient Motomaucum: and is the Seat of a Bishop, Subject to the Patriarch of Venice. It was heretofore famous for the Victory which the Genoese obtain'd at it, when they made themselves Masters of it, in the year 1380. but is now subject to the State of Venice.

Torcello, Torcellam, is a small Town, about 5 Miles from Venice to the North, near the Altino, from whence the Episcopal Seat was Translated hither, in the year 635. It is very ill Inhabited, by reason of the unwholsomness of the Air.

Grado, Gradus, or Aquileia Nova, stands in an Island of the Gulf of Venice, of the same Name, near the Borders of the Province of Friuli, but in the Dogado of Venice, (to which State it is subject) near the Continent, about 12 Miles from Aquileia to the South, and 50 from Venice to the East. It was Built by the Aquileians, after Astila had destroyed their City. It was for some time the Seat of the Patriarch; but he returning to Aquileia, the People of Grado, set up a Patriarch of their own, in the time of Charles the Great, as Eginhardus and Reginus relate, and so the Patriarchat was divided into that of Aquileia, and that of Grado; but in the year 1455 Pope Nicolas the 5th Translated it to Venice, where it still continues.

Caborle, Caprule, is a little Ill-inhabited Town, because of the Unwholsomness of the Air, in an Island of the same Name, near the Confines of Friuli, about 4 Miles from the River Lemene, about 40 from Venice to the North-East, 30 from Aquileia, and 11 from Concordia to the South. It is the Name of a small Bishoprick, under the Patriarch of Venice, to which State it belongs.

The Country call'd by the ITALIANS Polesinedi Rovigno, Rodigina Peninsula, lies East and West between the Po and the Adige, South and North between the Paduano, and the Duchy of Ferrara. It was formerly a part of Romandiola. Subject to the Duke of Ferrara; but hath been under the Jurisdiction of Venice, ever since the year 1500. The Towns of any Note in it are, Rovigo.

Adria.
Labadia.

Rovigo, Rhodigium, is a little City, Encompass'd with a Ruinous Wall, upon the Confines of the Paduano, 20 Miles from Adria to the West, 25 from Ferrara to the North, and as many from Padua. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Ferrara, but is now subject to the State of Venice: and is the Residence of the Bishop of Adria. That Ancient and Famous City, which gave its Name to the Gulf, being now but a pitiful half drown'd Village.

Adria. Adria, Anciently a Town in Gallia Transpadana, in the Country of Veneria, according to Strabo, which Mela calls Atria and Hadria, stands upon the little River Tarturo, almost five Miles from the Confines of the Ecclesiastical State, and Dutchy of Ferrara, 50 from Ravenna to the North, 30 from Ferrara to the North-East, and 25 from Venice to the South. It was formerly a Bishops Seat, Suffragan to the See of Ravenna; but now a very inconsiderable Town, being almost destroy'd by the violence of the Waves of the Sea, so that the Bishop resides at Rovigo. Pliny calls it Atria; and the Sea had its Name from it; being first call'd Arviaticum Mare, afterwards Adriaticum: and by Horace Adri-anum.

The PADUANO, Patavinus Ager, Anciently Inhabited by a part of the Veneti, is Bounded on the North with the Marca di Trevigiana, on the East with the Dogado di Veneta, on the South with the Country of Rovigno, and on the West with the Veronese. It owes its name to the Chief City of it: and has been under the Jurisdiction of Venice, since the year 1403. The most considerable Towns in it are,

Padua . Ch.	}	Orago .
Este .		Cittadella .
Campo S. Pietro .		Montagnana .
Pieve di Sacro .		Castelbanco .
Mirano .		Monfcaee .

Padua, or Padoua. Patavium, Anciently a City in the Country of Venetia, in Gallia Transpadana, according to Pliny, Ptolomy and Mela, stands about 24 Miles from Venice to the West, 18 from Vicenza, and 48 from Ferrara to the North. It was anciently, according to Mela, one of the Richest and most Flourishing Cities in Italy; but is now (according to Misson) a Poor and Ill-peopled City. The Circuit of it is very considerable (some reckoning it 8 Miles) but there's a great deal of Waste Ground, where there are no Houses, and many Houses wherein there are no Inhabitants. The Ancient Padua hath still retain'd its first Walls: but the City falling into the Hands of the Venetians, in the year 1403, in 1519. they pull'd down the Suburbs, in which were 10 Monastries, 6 Churches, 7 Hospitals, and about 3000 Houses. There are Porches or Piazza's almost throughout the whole City, which are convenient to shelter People from the Rain, but make the Streets both Narrow and Dark, and give opportunity to those frequent Robberies and Murders, which they call in Padua, Qui va li. It is a sort of a Sport which the Students there have; who hiding themselves between the Pillars, watch the coming of some unhappy Passenger, whom they immediately kill or lame, without the least hope of Redress. But the University has of late been in so Poor a condition, and the number of the Students so small, that People are not much afraid of the Qui va li. Some are of opinion, that Padua was Anciently a Sea-Port-Town; because the Ancients speak of it as a very Rich Place; and because when they dig Wells and Foundations of Houses, they find in several Places Anchors and Malts. But whether it has so, or Ships brought up there by a large Canal, we will not determine. Antenor is commonly been believed to have been the Founder of this City: but tho' we are told that he came into this Country, and Built a City call'd Patavium, we are not very sure that this is the Place.

The most remarkable things in Padua, are, the Church of St. Anthony of Lisbon, whom they call St. Anthony of Padua, because (altho' he was a Franciscan of Lisbon) he Died and was Buried there. It is very large and full of fine pieces of Sculpture and Painting. Also many Magnificent Tombs, particularly that of Alexander Contarini, Admiral of the Republick, and Procurator of St. Mark: and that of Count Horatio Sicco, who was Kill'd at Vienna in the last Siege. In this Church are also the Chappels of St. Anthony and St. Felix, both very well worth an Ingenious Man's Observation. The Church of St. Justina, is also a very fine one; and the Monastery is very Large and Noble. The Hall of the Town-House is very large, but Dark, being 256 Foot Long, and 86 Broad; and is of the Figure of a Rhomboides; but Supported by no Pillars. Peter Aponus, who was the Architect, and a Famous Necromancer, says Cardan, Adorn'd the Roof with Constellations, and Astronomical Figures, which are still to be seen. There is a Monument Erected in the Palace of Justice in Honour of Tit. Livius the famous Roman Historian, who was Born in this Place; for in the year 1413. there was found in the Gardens of St. Justina, a Coffin of Lead, which they presently concluded to be that of T. Livius; and putting what was within it in a Coffin of Wood, the most considerable Persons of the City carried it to St. Justina's Church, where it lay till the year 1447. when it was remov'd to the aforesaid Palace, and the Monument Erected; to which they added an Inscription, which was found near the Place where the Temple of Concord stood; and Placed over the Inscription a Head of Marble, which had been in the Possession of a Gentleman of Padua, thought to be that of Lentulus Marcellinus. 'Tis true, both Head and Inscription are old, but by a late Dissertation it appears, that this Inscription did not belong to the Famous Historian; but to one T. Livius, a Freed-Man of one of the Historians Daughters. There are in this City a great many knowing Antiquaries, and several Cabinets of Curiosities. The University is in a very mean condition; for of Ten Colleges there are Nine employ'd to other uses; but that which remains is a fine Building. This University was Founded, or (as some say) Repair'd and Re-establish'd by the Emperor Frederick, Ann. 1222. The City was taken by the Emperor Maximilian 1509, but recovered not long after.

Este, Atteste, Anciently a Town in Gallia Transpadana, according to Pliny and Tacitus, upon the River Bachiglione, near the Hills call'd Monti di Padua; about 12 Miles to the South of Padua, 5 to Monfcaee, and 30 from Venice to the South-west. It was formerly a Bishops Seat under the Patriarch of Aquileia: and from hence the Princes of Este had their Name, in whose Possession the Dutchy of Ferrara was for a long time, as now Modena is.

The Country call'd VERONESE. Veronensis Ager, is Bounded with the County of Tirol in Germany on the North, the Vicentino and Paduano on the East, the Dutchy of Mantua on the South, and the Bresciano, and the Lago di Garda on the West: and was Anciently Inhabited by a Part of the Cenomani It lies South-East and North-West, for the Space of 56 Miles; and the Towns of any note in it are,

Verona .	}	Garda .
Paschiera .		Chiufa .
St. Bonifacio .		Legnago .

Verona. Verona, anciently a City of the Cenomani, in Gallia Transpadana, according to Strabo, Livy and Ptolemy; in Rhætia, according to Pliny, was built by the Euganci and Rheti, and afterwards possess'd by the Cenomani. It has always been a famous City in many respects. The Situation of it is admirable, the Air good, and the City large: And affords a ravishing Prospect from any neighbouring Eminency. It is divided into two Parts by the Adige, over which there are Four stately Stone Bridges, which make the Communication between these Parts. The Castles of St. Felix and St. Peter, command the Town, but the other Fortifications of this Place are much neglected, and very irregular. The Amphitheatre in Verona is a most surprising piece of Antiquity: The outward Wall is almost destroy'd, but Care has been taken to repair and preserve the Benches, whereof there are 44. The longest Diameter of the Arena is 233 French Feet, and the shortest or breadth 136. Every Step is one Foot 3 Inches of the same Measure, and about 2½ Foot broad. It is commonly believ'd that Augustus built it, tho' some attribute it to the Emperor Maximin. The Cathedral is a little dark Church; in which is to be seen the Monument of Pope Lucius III. who, as well as his Predecessor Alexander the III. had great Eroils with Frederick Barbarossa. The Church of St. Zeno is said to be built by Pepin, Son of Charlemain, and King of Italy; who, as some believe, lies Buried here. Near the Church of St. Maria Antica, there are several Magnificent Tombs of the Scaligers, who were Princes of Verona, before that City belong'd to the Republick of Venice. The Cabinet of Count Mascardo is a rare and wonderful Collection of Pictures, Books, Rings, Animals, Plants, Monstrous Productions of Nature, and curious Works of all Fashions; but especially, a vast Number of old Instruments and Utensils, which were used in the Pagan Sacrifices; above Five Thousand of all Sorts of Medals, great variety of Coins, some whereof are of Leather, and also a great Collection of Shells, Tossils, Lamps, Urns, and a Thousand other Things too many to be inserted here.

This City has been Subject to the Republick of Venice since the Year, 1403. and in an old Inscription is call'd Colonia Augusta. It was the Birth-place of the Poet Catullus: And was taken by the Emperor Maximilian in the Year, 1509. but restor'd in the Year, 1516. to the Venetians. It is an Episcopal See, under the Patriarch of Aquileia: And is distant 35 Miles from Trento or Trente to the South, 22 from Mantua, 40 from Brescia to the East, and 15 from Paschiera to the North-West.

Chiusa, Veruca, which Cassiodorus makes mention of as a Fortrefs of Rhætia, stands upon the River Adige, at the Foot of a high Rock, with a Passage leading to it, cut out of the same Rock, on the other side whereof is a Precipice, the bottom whereof is wash'd by the River Adige. Cluverius thinks that Veruca is rather the Name of a Fort, call'd il Castello della Pietra, in the County of Tirol, belonging to the House of Austria, about 4 Miles from Roveroid or Revere to the North, and 9 from Trentz. Legnago, Leonicum, stands upon the Adige, about 27 Miles from Verona, and as many from Ferrara: And is improperly taken by some for Linicum.

The Country call'd il VICENTINO, Vicentinus Ager, is bounded with the County of Tirol on the North, the Marca di Trevigiana on the East, the Veronese on the West, and the Paduano on the South and partly on the East. The Towns of Note are Vicenza and Lovigo.

Vicenza, Vicentia, anciently a City in Gallia Cisalpina according to Tacitus, by Ptolemy call'd Vicenta, and Vicetia by Pliny, stands at the Confluence of the Rivers Baciglione and Roverne, 18 Miles from Padua to the West, 30 from Verona, and as many from Feltri to the South. It is about half as big as Verona, and encompasses only by old Walls; and the two or three little Rivers which meet here tho' they are very useful, yet are not Navigable till they all meet. There are some pretty good Churches in it; but these, as well as other Things that are to be seen here, do not at all deserve the lofty Names the Inhabitants give them. The Church call'd the Coronate is well Pav'd and Wainco'ed: That of the Nuns of St. Catherine hath three fine Altars. The Town-House is very indifferent, but they boast of it as a rare Piece. There are some Ruins of an ancient Amphitheatre at Vicenza; and the Theatre in the Academy of the Olympicks is the Work of the famous Palladio. The Triumphal-Arch without the Gates, at the Entrance of the Plain, which is call'd the Field of Mars, is in Imitation of the ancient way of Building, by the same Palladio. This City was taken by the Emperor Maximilian in the Year, 1509. but restor'd by a Treaty of Peace in 1516. and hath continued ever since under the Republick of Venice. It is an Episcopal See under the Patriarch of Aquileia.

The Country of BRESCIANO, Brixianus Ager, which was formerly a part of the Dutchy of Milan, but subject to the Republick of Venice about 200 Years, is bounded on the North with the Valtelline and the County of Tirol, by the Cremense on the South, the Veronese on the East, and the Bergomasco on the West: And was anciently Inhabited by a part of the Cenomani and Euganci. The Towns of any Note in it are,

Brescia.	} Rica d' Anso.
Asala.
Montebivao.
Salo.
Iseo.

Brescia, Brixia, anciently a City and Colony of Gallia Transpadana, and Metropolis of the Cenomani, according to Strabo and Pliny, and at present a well Inhabited Town, and of considerable Traffick, stands on the River Mela, 15 Miles from the Lake of Garda to the West, almost as much from that of Iseo to the East, 30 from Mantua to the West, near as much from Bergamo, and about 50 from Milan. It is a fortified Place with a Citadel upon an adjacent Rock. It is said to have been built by the Insabres or by the Senones, together with Cemo and Bergamo. It is a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Milan. The Palace of Justice in this City is a great and fair Building of a certain hard Stone resembling Marble. Opposite to this Palace there is a Portico 500 Paces long, almost quite fill'd with Armourer's Shops. The Fire-Arms that are made here being famous over all Italy. In the Cathedral they preserve with great Veneration that which they call Constantine's Oriflame; which they say is a Blew Cross of an unknown Matter; but it, is never fully shown, and so we cannot describe it; only this much is certain, that this cannot be the Cross which appear'd to Constantine when he Fought against against Maxentius, since that was only a Figure in the Air, and not a palpable Substance.

Salo, Salodium, stands on the West side of the Lake Garda, between Brescia and Trente, 20 from the former, and 30 from the latter, and 30 also from Verona to the West.

Orci Nuovi, O ci Novi, is a place of considerable Strength, being upon the Confines of the Duchy of Milan, near the River Oglio.

The Country call'd BERGAMOSCO, Bergomense Territorium, anciently a part of Gallia Transpadana, inhabited by the Orobii, formerly belong'd to the Duchy of Milan, but in the Year, 1428. it revolted to the Venetians, who still retain the Possession of it. It is bounded on the North with the Valtelline, on the East by the Bresciano, on the South and West by the Duchy of Milan, and contains these Towns, Bergomo. } Romano.

Clusano. }

Bergomo, Bergomum, anciently a City in Gallia Transpadana, inhabited by the Orobii Cenomani, is at present a Strong Town, and a Place of considerable Traffick, seated on a little Hill at the foot of the Alpes. Besides its Fortifications, which are well lin'd, and in good Repair, it has a Cittadel with some Forts and advanc'd Works, which defend the rising Grounds that Command it. It has also five Suburbs, every one of which is worth a little Town. In the Cathedral Church is to be seen the Tomb of the brave Barth. Coglieno, Commander of the Venetian Forces against Milan, and who was the first General who brought Cannons into the Field. Ambrosius Calepinus, who was Born at Calepio, a Village near this Place, lies inter'd at the Augustin's. The Bergomese Jargon is reckon'd so ridiculous, that the Italian Buffoons affect to imitate it; but that which makes them more disagreeable is the Wens or Lumps on their Throats, which disfigure their Countenances. These are natural to 'em, and they think it an Ornament rather than a Blemish. This City was formerly Subj'ct to the Duke of Milan, but after the Death of Duke Philip, the Inhabitants came under the Venetian Jurisdiction. Lewis XII. King of France, having beat the Venetian Army in the Battle of Agnadel, took Bergomo, but restor'd it to that Republick six Years after, by a Treaty of Peace, An. 1516. It is an Episcopal See under the Arch-bishop of Milan, and stands between the River Serio to the East, and that of Brembo to the West; 30 Miles from Brescia to the West, as many from Milan, and 30 also from Como.

Calepio, Calepium, is a little Town on the River Oglio, near the Confines of the Bresciano, about 12 Miles from Bergomo to the East, and 3 from the Lake of Iseo. It gives name to the adjacent Valley, and was the Birth-place of that learn'd Man Ambrosius Calepinus.

The Country call'd CREMASCO, Cremensis Ager, owes its Name to the Chief Town of it, and is surrounded by the Territories of the Duke of Milan. It is but of small Extent; but very Fertile, and well Watered. It formerly belonged to the Duke of Milan, but is now subject to the Venetians. The only Place of any Note in it is,

Crema, Crema, a Fortified Town on the River Serio, 9 Miles from Lodi Vecchio to the North-West, 24 from Brescia, 20 from Piacenza, and 24 from Bergomo to the South. It was formerly call'd Diu-guntorum, according to Cluverius, and was erected into a Bishoprick, under the Archbishop of Bulgna, in the Year, 1579.

The Venetian Dominions on the Coast of Dalmatia.

Dalmatia, so call'd either from Delmius or Delmi-nium, a City in Illyricum, was anciently the Eastern Part of Illyricum proprium. The Dalmatiani having asserted their Liberty in the Reign of Genius King of Illyricum, and having twenty Cities under their Jurisdiction, gave the Country the Name of Dalmatia: And having afterwards added sixty Towns more to their former Dominions, and extended their Conquests as far as to the Sea Shoar, began to make Incursions into the Territories of the Tragurini and Epetini; which was the Ground of the first Dalmatian War; at which Time the Romans reduced that Country into a Province. But afterwards, the Dalmatians having acquir'd the Western Part of the Country from the Lilurni; as they did Illyricum proprium from the Romans, extended their Dominions all along between the Rivers Titius (now il Kerik) and Drilo (now la Drino) Liburnia being then included in Dalmatia. After the declining State of the Roman Empire its Limits were further extended: And a long time after it came to be confin'd within much narrower Bounds, so that it bordered with Pannonia Savia on the North, the Upper Mesia on the East, Istria on the West, and the Adriatick or Illyrian Sea and Macedonia on the South. It was otherwise divided into Dalmatia on the Coast, and Inland Dalmatia: And of all the Provinces of the Western Illyricum, Dalmatia alone retain'd its ancient Name; till it fell into the Hands of the Slavi, and then it was divided into Croatia, Servia, and Dalmatia. The Slavi (People who came from the Palus Meotis) were subdued by the Hungarians; from whom the Turks at last took the Inland Country of Dalmatia, and the Venetians possess'd themselves of a great part of the Sea-Coast, and are now Masters of these Places following.

Zara, Fadera, anciently a Colony and City in Illyricum, according to Pliny, and Metropolis of Liburnia, stands on the Adriatick Sea, or rather is almost quite surrounded with it, and join'd to the Continent by a Bridge. It formerly belong'd to the Kingdom of Hungary, till the Year, 1409. that King Ladislaus Sold it, together with Novigrad and some other Places, to the Venetians, for 100000 Ducats, as Joh. Lucius relates. It is now the Metropolis of Dalmatia, and the Seat of an Archbishop; and defended by a strong Castle. It stands in the Latitude of 44. 30. and is distant 180 Miles from Venice to the East, 100 from Pola in Istria, 40 from Sebenico to the North-West, and 116 from Ancona to the North-East; and gives a Name to the adjacent Country, vulgarly call'd il Contado di Zara. Near this Place lies Zara Vecchio, where the Ruins of the ancient Fadera are still to be seen.

Nona, Anona, or Enona, according to Pliny, stands on the Adriatick Sea, almost encompass'd with the Water, and well Fortified. It is no very large Town, but an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Zara. It stands over against the Island of Pago, from which it is divided by a Streight four Miles broad, about 10 Miles from Zara, and 35 from Segna or Zeng.

Spalato, Spalatum, and Aspalathum by Constantinus Porphyrogenitus, is a pretty large and strong Town, with a very safe and large Harbour; and was anciently Honoured with the Palace of the Roman Emperor Dioclesian, to which it is said to owe its Name. It owes its Rise to the Ruins of Salone, an ancient Town four Miles to the North of it; in whose place it was made the Seat of an Archbishop. It has belong'd to the Venetians since the Year, 1420. notwithstanding several fruitless Attempts made by the Turks to make themselves Masters of it. It is distant 10 Miles from Traw to the East, 35 from Sebenico, and 15 from Almiffa.

Sebenico, Sebenicum, or Sibenicum (which some inconsiderately take for the ancient Sicum, the Ruins of which are to be seen on the Coast between Traw and those of Salona) is a fortified Town upon the Adriatick Sea, about 40 Miles from Zara to the East, 23 from Traw to the North-West, and 300 from Venice to the East. It has been under the Venetians Jurisdiction since the Year, 1412. and Pope Boniface the VIII. erected it into a Bishoprick.

Traw, Tragurium, which Strabo and Pliny make mention of as a Town in Dalmatia, is now a little but pretty strong Town, built upon a small Island, and join'd to the Continent by a Bridge, over against the Island of Bua, to which a Bridge likewise joins it, about 70 Miles from Zara, 12 from Salona, and as many from Spalato. It is a Bishop's Seat, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Spalato, and has belong'd to the Venetians since the Year, 1420.

Cliffa, Cliffa, anciently call'd Anderium, as Joh. Lucius of Traw relates, is a strong Castle in Dalmatia, built on a Rock, about 6 Miles from the Shoar, as many from Spalato to the North, and 4 from the Ruins of Salona. It formerly belong'd to the Turks, but was taken by the Venetians in the Year, 1648. and confirm'd to them, together with a little part of the adjacent Country by the Treaty of Peace at Candia.

Cattaro, Cattara, stands on a Gulf of the same Name, and is defended by a strong Castle built on a Neighbouring Hill. It, together with 17 little Villages, has been subject to the Republick of Venice since the Year, 1420. and is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Bari, but formerly to Ragusa. Dominicus Niger takes this Place for the ancient Ascrivium or Ascrovium, mentioned by Pliny and Ptolemy, others think that Name belongs rather to Castile-Novo, on the same Gulf; and some to Melata Grande, a Fortrefs upon the Coast of the Adriatick.

The Island of CHERSO, which Pliny calls Crexia, Ptolemy Crespa, is one of the Absyrtides, in the Golfo di Carnevo, lies between Istria and Morlachia, and is join'd by a Bridge to the Island Osero, whereof formerly it was a part. Upon this Island stands a Town of the same Name, about 12 Miles from Fiume to the South, and as many from Fianano to the East.

The Island of OSERA, which Mela calls Absorus, Ptolemy Apsorus, and Pliny Absyrtium, is also one of the Absyrtides, according to Strabo, and separated by a small Streight from Cherso, to which it is join'd by a Bridge; having upon it a Town of the same Name, dignified with the Residence and Title of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Zara. It lies 20 Miles from Senga in Morlachia to the South-West.

The Island of Vegia or Veglia, Civita, lies in the Golfo di Carnevo, a few Miles off the Coast of Liburnia or Morlachia, which lies to the East of it, as that of Absorus does to the West, and Arbe to the South: And is about 55 Miles in Circumference. The Town of the same Name (Caritum) stands upon the West Side of the Island, and has the advantage of a good Harbour, and a Castle to defend it. It is about 16 Miles from Osero to the East, and as many from Senga: It is an Episcopal See, and has been under the Venetian Jurisdiction since the Year, 1430.

The Island of Arbe, Arba, lies in the Golfo di Carnevo, and is said to be 15 Miles East and West, and about 4 from the Coast of Liburnia. The Town of the same Name stands on the South side of it, and is dignified with the Title of an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Zara. It stands over against Senga, from which it is 13 Miles distant.

The Island of Pago or Gissa, lies on the West of Arbe, along the Coast of Morlachia also, from which it is divided by a Streight 3 Miles broad. It is reckon'd 16 Miles long, and 46 in compass: And lies between the Island Arbe to the North-West and the Town of Nona, which is distant 4 Miles from it.

The Island of la Brazza, Brattia or Brachia, mentioned by Pliny and Antoninus, lies off the Coast of Dalmatia, between Spalato to the West and Narenta to the East, not far from Traw and the Isle of Lefina, which lies on the South of it.

The Venetian Dominion in the Ionian and Aegean Seas

Cefalonia, Cephalenia, an Island in the Ionian Sea, between that of Leucada or St. Maura on the North, and Zante on the South, 12 Miles from the former, and 20 from the other, and not above 24 Miles from the West Coast of the Morea. It has been by some call'd Samos, Melena, Telebos and Tapfus, and is 90 Miles in Compass. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Corfu, and hath been Subject to the State of Venice these several Ages; and the Inhabitants observe the Rites of the Greek Church. There were formerly Four considerable Towns in it; but now only a few Villages, with a Fort, call'd Cefalonia, built on a Hill, about 6 Miles from which lies the Port of Argostoli, on the South side of the Island. It is said to have its Name from Cephalus an Athenian: And Homer reckons the Cefalonians among those who followed Ulysses in his Trojan Expedition. Antonius, Cicero's Colleague in the Consulate was banish'd to this Island: And began to Build a City, but never finish'd it.

The Island of Corfu, Coreyra, mentioned by Pliny and Strabo, and call'd Pheacia by the Poets, lies off the Coast of Epirus, the North part not being above 4 Miles from the Continent, extended 50 Miles in length, from North to South, and is 120 in Compass, between Monte della Chimera, (Montes Acrocraunii) to the North, and the Island of Leucada to the South, from which it is 150 Miles distant, and 85 from Capo di Santa Maria di Luce (Fapgiium Promontorium) to the South-East. It has been under the Venetian Jurisdiction, since the Year, 1386. that the Coreyreans willingly offered themselves Subjects to that Republick; and in the Year, 1401. their Title was fully confirm'd, by Ladislaus King of Naples, for 30000 Ducats. The Corinthians are said to have transplanted a Colony hither in the Reign of Numa. It was anciently Famous for its Naval Force, and in it was Cassiope (now Sant Maria di Cassiope) where stood the Temple of Jupiter.

The Town of Corfu, Coreyra Urbs, stands on that side of the Island that lies opposite to Epirus, from which it is distant above 12 Miles to the West.

The Island of Zant, Zacynthus Insula, lies in the Ionian Sea, about 18 Miles from the Capo Tornese in the Morea, to the West, and 12 from Cephalonia to the South: And the Streight betwixt these Two is call'd the Canal of Zant. It is divided into three Parts, viz. la Montagna, il Piedemonte, and la Pianura; and contains near 100 Miles in compass, and produces great Store of delicious Wines, both Muscadine and other Sorts. But since Italy is sufficiently stock'd with these Commodities, the Inhabitants dry most of their Grapes, and send 'em to England and Holland.

The City of Zant stands on the East part of the Island, which with the Harbour, are commanded by a very fine Castle, where the Proveditore, who is always Chosen out of the Principal Nobility of Venice, resides. The Inhabitants are Rich, and there are several Gentlemen among 'em. Those of the Greek Church abound most in this Place; but the Venetians have built several Churches for the use of those of the Romish Faith; and do what they can to establish that Religion, in opposition to that of the Greeks. Here, as at Venice, those that come from the Levant are not suffered to go ashore till they have perform'd their Quarantain.

Millo is fully describ'd in the Account of Turkey in Europe, and therefore we shall say nothing of it here.

The Island of Cerigo, Cybera, anciently (according to Pliny) call'd Porphyris, and Porphyrysa by Aristotle, by others Scothera, is the farthest West Island in the Aegean Sea, or Archipelago; and lies about eight Miles from the Capo Malio in the Morea, to the South. It has been subject to the Venetians, since the Lords of the Morea gave it them: And is reckon'd to be about 60 Miles in compass. It is a Mountainous Country, but has a good Harbour towards the South Part of it: And is distant 15 Miles from the Island (or rather Rock) call'd Cecerigo, and 35 from the nearest part of the Island of Candia, to the North-West. There is a Bishop of the Greek Church in it.

The Island of Tine, Tenos, one of the Cyclades (according to Polomey) and by Aristotle call'd Hydrussa, for its great Plenty of Water (as Pliny relates). It is said to be about 35 Miles in compass: And is distant 7 Miles from Andros, 18 from Siro, 12 to the North of Mycene, and as many from Delos. It has been subject to the Republick of Venice about 300 Years: And there is at present a Bishop of the Latin Church in it.

Kimolo, or Argentara, Cimolus, is described in our Account of Turkey in Europe; whither we must refer the Reader for a full Account of the Morea, with all the remarkable Places and Things in and about it.

CHAP. X.

The Republick of Lucca: Lucensis Ditis.

THIS little State lies on the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, between the Genouese on the West, Modena on the North, and the Dominions of the Great Duke of Tuscany on the East; is reckon'd to be about 30 Miles long, and 24 broad. It is a Fief of the Empire, and under its Protection. Its Government is purely Aristocratical, the Sovereignty being lodg'd in the Hands of 240 Nobles, who are divided into two Bodies; which succeed one another every six Months, with the Gonfalonnier, or Standard-bearer, at their Head. This Gonfalonnier, is their Chief Magistrate, and is assisted by nine Counsellors, call'd Anziani; but he enjoys the Supream Dignity but two Months, during which time he has the Title of a Prince, and so sty'd his Excellency; but all the Advantage he gets by it, is to have his Table maintain'd at the Publick Charge: And after an Interval of six Years he is capable of being chosen again. The Publick Revenues are said to be about 100000 Crowns. How far this may go towards maintaining an Army, or supporting the Dignity of a free State; I will not determine: Some say they can raise, upon occasion, 15000 Foot, and 3000 Horse, and others screw it up to 30000 in all; but that is to be understood, I suppose, in Cases of great Danger and Necessity, when they put all in Arms that are able to carry them.

The City of Lucca, Luca, (which is said to have been built by the Tuscans, and owes its Name to Lucumo one of their Kings) stands in the midst of a fertile Plain about 15 or 20 Miles long, and is surrounded with very rich and well-inhabited Hills, near the River Serebio, about 13 Miles from the Shoar of the Tuscan Sea to the East, 10 from Pisa to the North, 45 from Florence to the West, 60 from Siena, and 30 from Luna. It gives Name to the adjacent Country call'd il Lucchese, and is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Pisa; from whose Jurisdiction it is now exempted. This City is not very large, since one may walk round the Rampars in an Hour. The Fortifications are pretty regular and well lin'd, but their Foundations are almost level with the Plain. The Things most remarkable in this Place, are, the Palace of the Republick, where the Gonfalonnier Lodges with his nine Counsellors: The Arsenal, where there is a considerable quantity of Arms for so small a State, and kept in very good Order. The Cathedral, Dedicated to Saint Martin, in which is the Chapel of the Volto Santo, where the famous Crucifix is kept, that the Angels finish'd after Nicodemus had for a long time in vain endeavoured to do it. The Church of St. Fredian, in which there is a Tomb-stone, with this Inscription, Hic jacet Corpus Sancti Riccardi Regis Anglie. Here lies the Body of St. Richard King of England; but it is hard to tell who this Royal Saint should be, since it is very well known that all the Kings of England of that Name died and were Buried elsewhere. This is still a populous City; but several Noble Families, as, the Calendrinis, Burlamachi, Turretini, Micheli, Minfoli and Diodati, and several others remov'd from this Place to Geneva, about the Time of the Reformation.

C H A P. XIV.

The Dominions of the Great Duke of Tuscany.

IT is certain, that the Bounds of the Ancient Æturgia, were much larger than those of the Modern Tuscany, this being but a part of that Æturgia or Etruria, was Bounded on the North and East, with the Apennine Mountains, and the River Tyber on the West, and South with the Tyrrhenian (now Tuscan) Sea, from the River Magra, to the Mouth of the Tyber; but the Modern Tuscany, which the Italians call Toscana, comprehending the greater part of the Ancient Æturgia, is Bounded (according to Baudrand) with the Apennines on the North, on the West and South with the River Magra, and the Tuscan Sea, on the East with the Rivers Tyber and Arno: and comprehends the Territories of Florence, call'd il Fiorentino, those of Siena, call'd il Senese, of Pisa, call'd il Pisano, and il Luca, call'd il Lucchese, (now a free and separate State) with several other Countries and Places belonging to the Duke of Modena, the State of Genoua, and the King of Spain.

The Dominions of the great Duke of Tuscany, are Bounded on the North and East with the Ecclesiastical State, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, on the West with the Territories of Lucca, and Modena. It is a Pleasant and Fruitful Country, producing abundance of Olives, Citrons, Oranges, Saffron, Flax, and Wool, and in several Places there are Mineral Waters, which effectually cure many dangerous Distempers. The Manufactures also of Serges, Woollen-Cloth, Silks, Tapestries, Gilded-Leather, Earthen Vessels and Perfumes, contribute much to its Riches.

That the Reader may the more distinctly conceive the Constitution and Government of this Dukedom, it will not be amiss to refresh his Memory with some hints of its Rise and encrease; beginning from the very original of the City of Florence, and tracing it down to the present time. The City of Florence, (as Machiavel relates) was begun by the Merchants of Fiesole, (Fesula) and augmented by Colonies sent thither from Rome; for those Merchants finding it convenient for People to come to them, either to Buy from them, or Sell to them, by reason their Town stood on the Top of a Hill, appointed a place for them in the Plain, betwixt the Foot of the Mountains, and the River Arno, so that what was at first but Store-houses for keeping Commodities, became afterwards a Town, and a place of Habitation. After the Civil Wars in Rome, first betwixt Marius and Silla, then betwixt Cæsar and Pompey; afterwards betwixt the Murderers of Cæsar, and the Revengers of his Death; by Silla first, and then by Cæsar Augustus, M. Antonius, and M. Lepidus, who Revenged the Assassination, and divided the Empire, Colonies were sent to Fiesole; all or most of whom settled in the aforesaid Plain, where the Town was already begun; which did so mightily enlarge its Bounds, and encrease the number of its Inhabitants, that it justly might claim a place among the Cities of Italy. It was at first called Armina, afterwards Florentia; but whatever might be the Original of that Name, whether from one Florinus the Chief Man of the Colony, or the Flourishing State of this Infant City, this is certain, that it was Founded under the Emperors of Rome, being mentioned in the History of the first Em-perors: That when the Barbarians made Inroads into, and Ravag'd the Empire, Totila, King of the Ostrogoths, Demolish'd Florence. That 250 years after it was Rebuilt by Charles the Great, from whose time till the year 1215, it followed the Fortune of the rest of Italy, and was subject to those that commanded; first to the Successors of Charles, afterwards to the Berengarii, and last of all to the Emperors of Germany. In those days it was not in the Florentines power to extend the Bounds of their Dominions, by reason they were subject to a Foreign Power, unless in the time of an Inter-regnum, between the Death of one Emperor, and the Creation of another, when all the Cities were free; as in the year 1010, when they took Fiesole, when the Inhabitants were employed about celebrating their Festival of St. Romulus. But afterwards the Popes assuming more Power, and the Emperors losing what they formerly had, the Cities began to disregard their Princes, and Italy seem'd divided betwixt the Emperors and the Popes. The Florentines in the mean time submitting themselves to the Conquerors, kept themselves quiet and intire, till the year 1215. After which, they fell into Divisions, and Civil Commotions were never long satisfied with any form of Government, but always contriving new Models; which bred infinite Confusion in the State, (a thing unavoidable in a Society, where Restless and Turbulent Spirits are suffer'd to Live) and Animosities among the People. Sometimes the Nobles fell out among themselves, sometimes these with the Citizens, and sometimes the Richest with the Inferior sort. In all which unreasonable Jars, no sooner was any Faction uppermost, than it split and divided again; and the true and natural effect of all this was, Murder, Banishment, and Dispersion of Families, where oftentimes the Wisest and best deserving had the hardest Fate, whilst those of no worth enjoyed what was only due to true Merit; which often happens where Passion prevails over Reason, or the unthinking Multitude meddles in the Affairs of State. Notwithstanding all those Divisions, and the innumerable Changes in their Form of Government, the State of Florence preserv'd it self, but was certainly depriv'd of vast Advantages it might have reap'd, had it been Managed by Wise and constant Politicks. Had the Florentines been so happy, after they shook off the Emperors Yoke, to assume such a form of Government, as would have preserv'd themselves in Unity; it is highly probable, that in process of time they might have veiy'd in Riches and Power, with almost any State, ancient or Modern: as we may see in this one Instance. For after they had expell'd the Ghibelins, who were so numerous as to fill all Tuscany and Lombardy, the Guests and such as staid behind, in the expedition against Arezzo, were able to draw out of their own Citizens 12000 Foot, and 1200 Horse. And in the War against Philippo Visconti, Duke of Milan, being to try their Fortune rather with their Purles than their Swords, in the space of 5 years that the War lasted, the Florentines expended 5 Millions, and 5 hundred thousand Florins; and after all that, when the War was at an end, they March'd out with an Army, and Besieg'd Lucca. Thus the Florentines continu'd in a free State, till about the year 1410. that John de Medicis, (whose Posterity are now Dukes of Florence) became so Rich, and acquir'd such Repute among them, by defending the People against the Nobles, that almost the Sovereignty of the City was put into his Hands. His Son Cosmo Reform'd the State, and enlarg'd its Dominions, by the addition of Casentino, and several other Places. He Died in the year 1464. and left the Management of Publick Affairs to his Son Peter; who transmitted it to his Sons Lorenzo and Julian; but the People growing jealous of their Liberty, and fearing lest the Sovereignty should become Hereditary to this Family, put the Administration of the Government into the hands of that of the Soderani, whom they Entrusted with it, knowing how sickle the Multitude was, devolved all upon the 2 young Gentlemen: against whom the Pazzi conspiring, kill'd Julian, but Lorenzo Escap'd; and afterwards went to Naples, where he enter'd into a perpetual League with King Frederick. After his Death his Son Peter fell in Disgrace with the Florentines, and was Banish'd with his whole Family, but was Restor'd by his Kinsman Pope Leo the 10th. After whose Death they were again Banish'd; but Pope Clement 7. Son to the aforesaid Julian, prevail'd with Charles the 5th to Besiege the City, which yielded after two years Resistance. The Emperor then gave it to Alexander de Medicis, Peter's Grandchild, by his Son Lorenzo, Ann. 1531. but he was Murder'd by his Cousin Lorenzo de Medicis, who fled to Venice. After which the Family of Medicis sent to the Country for Cosmo, (who was then but 18 years old) to be their Prince, being next Heir to the Family, according to the entail made by the Emperor Charles. He was Crown'd with the Title of Great Duke of Tuscany, in the Court of Rome, by Pope Pius the 5th, Ann. 1570. By this the Reader may see how this State began, and advanc'd, and what the nature of its Government was, and how much different from what it is at present. The Duke of Tuscany is a Rich and Powerful Prince: his ordinary Revenue (as is generally reported) is about 1500000 Crowns, and some raise it to 2000000. and he is said to have in his Treasury 20000000 pieces of Gold, besides Jewels and other things of great Value. Which if it is so, 'tis no hard matter for him to Raise 40000 Foot, and 3000 Horse, and to put to Sea 12 Gallies upon occasion, 2 Galleasses, and 20 Ships of War.

We have already told what the Bounds of the ancient Hetruria was, and how different that was from the Modern Tuscany, whose Bounds are of a much narrower compass, and also what share of Tuscany, in a larger Sense, belongs to the great Duke; whose Dominions are commonly divided into 3 parts, as you may see in the following Table.

FLORENCE, which the Italians call Florenza, Florentia, (of whose original and encrease we have spoke already, in our account of that State, whereof it is the Metropolis) stands upon the River Arno, in a delightful Plain, Surrounded with very fertile Hills, on all sides, except that which looks to Pistoia; which rise insensibly, and unite themselves to the Mountains. The vast number of Houses which cover both the Hills and the Interjacent Plain make a most Ravishing Prospect, from any Eminence or Tower within the City. It is said by some Travellers, to be 7 Miles in compass, by others but 6. According to one of our latest Travellers, it is said to contain within its Walls 8800 Houses, 60000 Souls, (tho' others screw up their number to 70000) 22 Hospitals, 89 Convents, 84 Fraternities, 152 Churches, 18 Halls or Galleries, belonging to Merchants, 72 Courts of Justice, 6 Columns, 2 Pyramids, 4 Bridges, 7 Fountains, 17 Palaces or Courts, and 160 publick Statues. The Streets are all Pav'd with large pieces of gray Stones, call'd by the Inhabitants Pietra forte, brought from the Neighbouring Quarries; and the Palaces of Florence are reckon'd the handsomest Structures in Italy. The most remarkable things in this City are, the Celebrated Palace Pitti, where the great Duke Lodges, at the great Gate of which is a large Load-stone, said to weigh about 5000 Pound. In this Palace there are several Galleries, and other Rooms full of all manner of Rarities, both Ancient and Modern; the most precious and valuable of which are kept in the Octogonal Room, call'd the Tribune, Built by Buontalenti, which is 24 Foot in Diameter, and is cover'd with an Arch'd Dome. The Floor is Pav'd with several sorts of Marble, Artificially laid together, the Walls are Hung with common Velvet, Beautified with an infinite number of rare Ornaments, the Windows are of Crystal, and the inside of the Dome is overlaid with Mother of Pearl. Nothing is admitted into this Place, but what is of great Value, and exquisite Beauty, the Chief of which is that lovely and famous Diamond, which Weighs 139 Carrats and a half. There is also an Antique Head of Julius Caesar of one intire Torquoise, as big as an Egg, a Cupboard full of Vessels of Agat, Lapis Lazuli, &c. A large Table and Cabinet, wholly made up of Oriental Jasper, Chalcedony, Rubies, Topazes, and other precious Stones, admirably well Wrought: A Collection of rare Medals, and a prodigious number of Antique Pieces of Carv'd and Engrav'd Work Select Pictures and Statues. The Cathedral is a very large and stately Building, tho' several parts of it are of Gothick Architecture. It is all Cover'd over on the outside, and Pav'd within with Polish'd Marble, of several Colours. It is 490 Feet long, and 380 high, to the Top of the Cross on the Globe, and contains many pieces of fine Painting and Statues. S. Lawrence's Church is very Large and Rich, and the famous Chappel, if Finish'd, is the finest Edifice of that nature in the World. The Library of S. Lawrence is particularly Famous for its Manuscripts; among which there is one of Virgil's Works, of the Age of Theodosius, and a large Greek one, containing the Chirurgery of Hipocrates, Galcn Asclepiades, and other Ancients. The Arsenal and Citadel of S. John Baptist, is a Strong Place, and in very good order; but the 2 Forts of Belvedere and S. Miniato, are in a manner wholly neglected. This City as we we said before was begun by the Merchants of Fiesole, (then Fesule) enlarged by the Colonies sent thither by Augustus, M. Antonius, and Lapidus, Sackt by Torila, Rebuilt by Charles the Great, and again almost quite reduced to Athes, (whether by Accident or done on purpose by a certain Nobleman is uncertain) in the Month of July 1304. made an Archbishoprick by Pope Martin the 5th 1420. and honour'd with a general Council, upon Pope Eugenius the 4th, Ann. 1439. in which Johannes Paleologus, Emperor of Constantinople was present. It stands about 50 Miles from Bononia to the South, 60 from Modena to the South East, 90 from Parma, 104 from Mantua to the South East, 126 from Venice to the South, and 100 from Rome to the North-West.

Pistoia, which Pliny calls Pistorium, Antoninus, ad Pistoros, stands in a Plain, on the Banks of the Rivulet Stella, in the midt between Lucca and Florence, about 30 Miles from each, 12 from the Borders of the Ecclesiastical State, and the Bolognese. It is at present (as Mr. Misson Relates) a very Poor and Desolate City, quite destitute of Trade, and subsisting merely by the Fruitfulness of the Neighbouring Country. It is bigger then Lucca, and its Streets are large and streight, and the Remainers of its Ancient Beauty, are sufficient to convince one that it was formerly a fine City. Buno tells us that Desiderius King of the Lombards Built a Wall round it; and that the Florentines threw it down. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Florence: and the People are great Adorers of S. James, to whom they say they are mightily beholden, and therefore preserve a great number of his Relicks.

Prato, Pratum, is a little Town in the midt between Florence to the East, and Pistoia to the West, and is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Florence. Buno calls it one of the four strongest Fortresses in Italy, and Built by Frederick the 2d. and says that here the Girdle of the Blessed Virgin is carefully preserved.

Cortona. Cortona, the name of a Colony, and one of the most Ancient Cities in Hetruria, according to Livy and Ptolemy, and call'd Cortynium, according to Polybius. Buno tells us, that it is a very Ancient Town, having been Built long before the Trojan War: and that the Pelasgi took it from the Umbri, under the Conduct of their Leader Tarco, and made use of it as a Bridle upon the Umbri; and that Herodotus says, that in his days the Crotonians spoke the Pelasgian Language. It stands near the Confines of the Ecclesiastical State and Ombria, 4 Miles from the Lake of Perugia to the N. 45 S. E. from Florence, and 8 from the Lake of Chiana, and 35 from Sienato to the East: and was made a Bishoprick by Pope John XXII under the Archbishop of Florence, in the year 1325. but it depends now immediately on the Sec of Rome.

Burgo-San-Sepulchro. Burgum S. Sepulchri, is a little Town in the Ombria, on the Confines of Tuscany, near the River Tyber, about 50 Miles from Florence to the East, and 8 from Citta di Castello to the North. It is the Seat of a Bishop, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Florence: and formerly belong'd to the Ecclesiastical State, before Pope Eugenius IV. Pawn'd it to the Duke of Florence. It was made a Bishoprick by Leo X. Ann. 1515.

Empoli. Emporium, is a neat little Town, upon the River Arno, 20 Miles from Florence to the West, and 30 from Pisa.

Arezzo. Areium, according to Pliny, and by Ptolemy call'd Arretium, stands in a Valley, about 3 Miles from the Fenns of Chiana; which empty themselves into the Arno a little below, 28 from Siena to the East, 30 from Perugia to the North-West, 40 from Florence, and 16 from Citta di Castello to the West. It is said to have been Built by Arca, the Son of Janus, and was one of the first 12 Tuscan Colonies. It is an Episcopal See under the Archbishop of Florence, but exempted from his Jurisdiction: and S. Donatus was Bishop, and Suffer'd Martyrdom here. The Vessels that were made in this Place, were in great esteem with the Ancients, as Martial in his 14 Book of Epigrams makes mention: and Guido the famous Musician, who invented the Musical Notes, ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la, was Born here.

Fiesole, which Pliny calls Fesula, Ptolemy Fesule, and Silius Fesula, was Anciently a Town of Note, being a Place of Commerce and Trade, to which Florence ow'd its beginning as we have said before in the description of that City. It was destroy'd by the Goths, afterwards taken by Stratagem by the Florentines, Ann. 1010. who sent all the Inhabitants to Florence; and now lies in its Rubbish, nothing remaining except the Cathedral Church, a Monastery and some few dwelling Houses. It has however the Title of a Bishoprick under the Archbishop of Florence; from which City it is about 2 Miles distant to the North-West.

PISA. Pisa or Pise, (Anciently Holmia Julia Pisana) said to have been Built by the Pisani, a People of Peloponnesus, according to Strabo, stands in an even and level Plain, on the River Arno, 6 Miles from the Mouth of it into the Tuscan Sea, 54 from Florence to the West, 10 from Lucca, 14 from Leghorn, and 55 from Siena to the North-West. It is a great City, being the second of Tuscany, and the Streets are large, Straight and Pav'd with great Stones, and the Houses generally well Built; but at present it is very Poor and III-inhabited; which seems partly to be owing to the Miseries it suffer'd during the last War with the Florentines, partly to its its Situation in the Neighbourhood of Leghorn, to which many Inhabitants have remov'd. It was once a Free State, and while it was so, gave several Proofs of its Power; for it took Sardinia from the Saracens, made it self Master of the Balears, subdued Carthage, and prov'd very useful to the Eastern Christians. But it was taken by the Florentines; and tho' Charles VIII. King of France, Restor'd it to its former Freedom; yet it fell again into the hands of the Florentines, where it still remains. It was made an Archbishoprick, by Pope Urban II. Ann. 1092. Adorn'd with an University, Ann. 1349. There was a Council held in it in the year 1400. where Alexander V. was created Pope. Pope Gregory VIII. Died here, in the year 1187. and the Knights of the Pope and Martyr S. Stephen, (whom the great Duke Cosmo I. Instituted, on August 6. 1561. after he had won the Battle of Marciano) have their Residence here. The most remarkable Things in Pisa, are, the Cathedral Church, which was Finish'd Ann. 1153. The Baptistry, which is 180 Foot round, and in which there was formerly a Pillar, on which were discover'd all the private Machinations against the State, as in a Mirrou. The leaning Tower in shape of a Cylinder, Built by one Bonannus, 188 Foot high. The Burial-place call'd Campo Santo, because the Earth of the Pisans brought from the Holy Land, (when they assist Frederick I. call'd Barbarossa, who took Jerusalem) in the year 1228. is a kind of Cloyster, 190 Paces Long, and 66 Broad, comprehending the breadth of the Porrico's: under one of which there is an Inscription, which is a Decree of the City of Pisa. occasion'd by the Death of Cesar, ordaining the People to wear mourning a whole year, and in the mean time to abstain from all Publick Diversions.

Leghorn, which Polybius calls Liburnus, Antoninus, Liburni Portus, Cicero Labro and others Ligurinus, is a famous Sea-Port Town, standing in a Plain, about 14 Miles from Pisa to the South, 10 from the Mouth of the Arno, 17 from Vada, and about 60 Miles from Florence to the West. It formerly belong'd to Piza, while that City flourish'd, but being almost destroy'd by the Genouese, while they were in Possession of it, it was afterwards by a Treaty of Peace, Ann. 1297. restor'd to Piza. Afterwards Charles VIII. King of France, took it from the Pizans, and gave it to the Great Duke, in whose Possession it remains: and is his only Sea-Port Town. It is surrounded with handsome Fortifications, lin'd with Brick. The Streets are large, straight, and Parallel; the Houses equally high, and for the most part Painted on the outside. The Harbour (tho' it is both large and safe) is not so well stor'd with Ships (as Mr. Misson relates) as several others; but the Trade of the Bank is very considerable: and it is the Station of the Great Duke's Gallies. The ancient Liburni were so dextrous at making light, and swift-sailing Gallies, that the Romans call'd all such Vessels, wherever they were made, Liburnicæ Navæ.

Volaterra, Volaterra, the name of a very ancient City in Italy and one of the 12 first Colonies of Etruria, stands on a Hill near the right Bank of the River Cecina, 34 Miles from Florence to the South, and 37 from Leghorn to the East. There were a Company of People who had been proscrib'd by Sylla that fled hither, and having form'd a Body of 4 Cohorts of Arm'd Men, held out the Place for the space of two years, before they yielded it, and submitted to the Roman Government. Near to the ancient Vada Volaterrana, now Vada, and the Aque Volaterranæ, which are very remarkable hot Springs, that send forth such strong sulphurous Steams, (that as Buno particularly relates) the Birds whose hard Fate it is to Fly over these Waters, immediately drop down Dead: and so violent a motion there is in them, that they rise about 9 Foot high, and fall down with a great noise, and the Heat so great, that if one throws in the Carcass of any Creature, in a trice you shall see it thrown up, Boyl'd to that degree, that the Bones are as bare of Flesh as a Cane is. Volaterra, is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Florence.

Siena, which Florus calls Sena, Ptolomy Sena, Pliny Colonia Senensis, others Sena Julia, and Sene, stands near the Confines of the Florentino, 32 Miles from Florence to the South, 107 from Rome, 26 from Mont Pulciano to the West, and 55 from Perugia. It was a Free City, and Head of a Republick for several Ages, but was taken by the Spaniards, in the year 1555. and restor'd to the Duke of Tuscany, 1557. together with the adjacent Country, excepting some few Towns, which still belong to Spain. It is an Archbishoprick, and the third City in Tuscany, and one of the most pleasant Places in it. Its Situation being high and low (as Mr. Misson observes) makes it somewhat incommodious, but it enjoys a good Air, and its Streets are neat, and almost all Pav'd with Bricks laid side-ways; besides, the Houses are handfom, and the Waters excellent: and here the Tuscan Language is Taught, and Spoke to perfection; which obliges those who would Learn the Italian to reside for sometime here. The most remarkable Things in this City, are, the Cathedral, which tho' it be of Gothick Work, yet is compleat in all its parts, the Walls being covered over with Marble, without and within; and the Pavement of Mosaick Work is very well worth Observation. The Place where the Library was formerly kept, where are now those fine Pictures, which represent the whole Story of Pope Pius II. design'd by Raphael, but the Painting was perform'd by Pietro Perugin, his Master, and some others. The Cittadel of Siena is a very good one, and there are also 15 or 20 square Towers like those at Viterbo. This City bears for its Arms, the famous She-wolf giving Suck to the Royal Twins; which was often set up (as appears by several Medals) in the Towns that were made Roman Colonies. The great Place of Siena is hollow, like a Boar or Scalop Shell, and may be fill'd with Water when any Fire happens in the City.

Pienza, Pientia, anciently Corsinianum, stands upon a Hill, about 30 Miles from Siena, and 55 from Florence to the South-East, and 10 from the Confines of the State of the Church. It was call'd Pienza by Pope Pius II. who before was call'd Aneas Sylvius, because he was Born there while his Father was in his Banishment: and afterwards Erected into a Bishoprick by him, under the Archbishop of Siena, in the year 1462.

Piombino, Plumbinum, is said to owe its Rise to the Ruins of the ancient Populonium, which are to be seen not far from it. It stands on the Coast of the Tuscan Sea, in the midt between Orbitello to the South-East, and Leghorn to the North-West, 50 Miles from either, as many from Siena, and about 10 from the Island Elba; which belongs to this little Principality, which is Govern'd by its own Princes, under the Protection of the King of Spain, who keeps a Garrison in this Place.

Monte Pulciano, Mons Politianus, is a little Town standing upon a Hill, near the Confines of the Pope's Dominions, about 28 Miles from Perugia to the West, as many from Siena to the South-East, and 12 from Chiusi. It is famous for the generous Wine that grows about it: and was Erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Pius IV. Ann. 1561.

Chiusi, Chisum, which was the name of an ancient City in Henuria, according to Strabo, and Polybius; and one of the first Tuscan Colonies, and ordinary Residence of old King Porfenna, stands on the Confines of the Pope's Dominions, in a little Country call'd Valle di Chiana, from a Lake of that name near to which this Town stands: about 40 Miles from Siena to the South East, 20 from Perugia to the West, and 10 from the Lake of that name. It is a small Town, and but indifferently Inhabited, by reason of the unwholesomness of the Air; but is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Siena.

Massa, Massa, or Massa Veternensis, is a small Inhabited Town on the Coast of Tuscany, standing upon an height, 35 Miles from Siena to the South, and 18 from Porto Barato, where the Ruins of Populonium are. It has the name of a Bishoprick, Suffragan to the Archbishop of Siena; under the Jurisdiction of which are the Islands of Elba and Capraria. Onuphrius says, the Emperor Constantinus Gallus was Born here. This is the name of several other Places, particularly of a Dutchy, belonging to the Family of Cibo, lying between the Territories of Genue, on the West, those of the Great Duke of Tuscany on the North, those of Lucca on the East, and the Tuscan Sea on the South.

Grossetto, Rosetum, or Grossetum, stands 6 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar, about 3 from the River Ombro to the West, 6 from the Lago di Castiglione, 30 from Piombino, and 40 from Siena. It owes its Rise to the Ruins of ancient Russelle, near to which it stands, and is an Episcopal See, under the Archbishop of Siena.

natro, 35 Miles from Civita Vecchia to the West, and 50 from the Island Elba to the East; and depends on the Abbot of le tre Fontane, in Spirituals, as it did formerly in Temporals. It owes its beginning to the Ruins of Cosco, now lying in its Rubbish nor far from this Place. This Town belonged to the State of Siena, from the Year, 1451. till the Time that Siena fell into the Hands of the Great Duke: And then Orbitello came under the Jurisdiction of the Spaniards, together with Telamone, Porto Mercule, Porto Stephano and Mount Argentaro, which they Fortified, and put Garrisons in: o, insomuch that the adjacent Country lying along the Coast, is call'd commonly Lo Stato delli Presidii; The Country of Garrisons.

C H A P. XII.

The Pope's Dominions, Dominium Pontificis Romani.

THE Pope of Rome being no inconsiderable Temporal Prince, we shall take the same Method in describing his Dominions, as we have done in those of other Kingdoms and States. We have already, in our General Description of Italy, put the Reader in Mind who the ancient Inhabitants of those Parts were, and what were the most remarkable Changes and Revolutions that happen'd in them: As also hinted a little at the Beginning, Progress, and Decay of the famous Roman Empire: And therefore we shall now only consider briefly the Ways and Methods by which this Ecclesiastical Monarchy, has raised it self, from so small a beginning to its present Grandeur: And what the Nature, Constitution and chief Pillars of it are.

The Increase of this Papal Monarchy is owing, First, to that Barbarity and profound Ignorance, which after the Decay of the Roman Empire did overspread the Western Parts of it: For bad Wares are best vented in the Dark, or at least by a dim Light. Those barbarous Nations no sooner invaded this part of the Empire than they destroyed the Schools, and sent the Teachers to shift where they best could: And wherever they set up, either out of Zeal for their Religion, or hatred of the Heathen Philosophers, who were no Friends to it, they were sure to endeavour all they could to extirpate and forbid the Reading of Heathen-Authors; as appears by an Act of the Council of Carthage 400 Years after the Birth of Christ: And the small Remnants of Learning that were left, were lodged among the Clergy, who were the only Instructors of Youth, and in whose Power it was to form their tender Minds as they thought fit. But afterwards the Popes, perceiving that some among the most considerable Nations in Europe could be no longer kept in this gross Ignorance, introduc'd into the Schools (over which they had assum'd an absolute and supreme Direction) the most miserable sort of Pedantry, that ever plagued the Reason of Mankind; and which some are mighty fond of to this Day. And being ambitious to raise their own Authority and Power, did endeavour to lessen that of the Civil Magistrate, and breed a hatred of Monarchy in the Minds of those People over whom they had got an Ascendant; which the Emperors, by their Lives and tyrannical Proceedings soon confirmed.

Rome's being the Residence of this Ecclesiastical Monarch, did not a little contribute to the advancement of the Papal Power and Authority; for this was the glorious Seat of the celebrated Roman Empire, and here the Christian Religion did first rise and mightily encrease in those Parts: And therefore the Bishops of Rome thought this a plausible Topick for their having the first Place, as those of Constantinople claim'd the Second, as Bishops of New Rome: And after the Western Empire had come to decay, and the City lost its primitive Lustre, disputed the Precedency with the Roman Bishop. The Emperor Phocas, out of Spite to the Patriarch of Constantinople, granted the Precedency to Boniface the III. the then Bishop of Rome; but this extended no farther than a bare Precedency, and imply'd nothing of Jurisdiction over the rest: Or if it did, it was owing merely to the Emperor's Bounty, whose Laws were of no force without the Limits of his Empire. And admitting that other States have allowed the Popes a certain Power over the Churches in their Dominions: This being an Act of the State, and probably done for Reasons of State, may be annull'd when the same State in other Circumstances sees good Reason for doing so.

The Emperors removing their Court from Rome gave the Popes a fair Opportunity: And the Barbarous Nations, who had establish'd several new Kingdoms within the Western Empire, being converted to Christianity by the Church of Rome, which on that account commanded a great deal of Respect and Veneration from them, did mightily contribute to the Growth of this rising Sovereignty. And 'tis to be remark'd, that after the 5th Century, the Bishops that lived on this side of the Alpes, used to go to Rome, to pay their Devoirs to the Sepulchers of St. Peter and St. Paul; which Voluntary Devotion was by degrees made necessary, and the Bishops at last obliged to come to Rome for his Holiness's Confirmation. It was usual also for some other Bishops and Churches, who were but Novices in respect of Rome, to come there for Advice in Matters of Moment, or when Debates happen'd (as 'tis natural for the younger to have recourse to those of greater Experience) which the Bishops of Rome so wisely improv'd, that they soon began to issue out their Decrees, before their Advice was desir'd, to decide Controversies, depose Bishops, and bring Causes before their Tribunals. In the 8th Century, an English Frier, whose Name was Winifred, before he changed it for that of Boniface, having a Zeal to reform the lewd Lives of some Clergy-men, and establish the Christian Religion in Germany, the better to procure the Pope's Favour, became a vigorous Defender of his Authority; in recompence of which good Service, he receiv'd the Episcopal Pall, with the Title of Archbishop of Mynce: And was constituted Pope Gregory the III's Vicar, with full Power to call Councils, and constitute Bishops in those Parts where he had planted the Faith. By which means, and the Assistance of the French King, his Authority became so great, that he brought over all all the Clergy in Germany and France to the Papal Interest; and was the First who put it upon the German Bishops to receive the Pall from the Pope; who sent it to those of France without their Request, to unite them the more to the Chair. And this growing Customary, at length became necessary: And the Popes assum'd a Power of translating Bishops, and annulling Acts of Provincial Synods: And Pope Gregory the VII. forced the Bishops to Swear Fealty to the Pope, and forbid all Condemnation where Appeals were made to him.

As this Ecclesiastical Sovereignty grew up and came to Perfection, the Wealth and Riches of the Church did increase in Proportion. The Foundation was laid by the Liberality and Charity of Princes and others, and the Superstructure advanc'd by those who believ'd it meritorious, as certainly it is, when confin'd within moderate Bounds. As Wealth encreases, so Avarice rises in proportion with it, and that finds out Ways and Means to encrease the Stock, without considering whether these be just and reasonable or not. Then came in Masses for the Dead and Living, Purgatory, Indulgences, Dispensations, Pilgrimages, Jubiles and the like, without Measure: and in the 11th and 12th Centuries Croisades too turn'd to very good Account. For in those Expeditions, after People had received the Sign of the Cross to assist in the Recovery of the Holy Land, the Popes pretended to the supreme Command and Direction; and took the Persons and Estates of such People under their Protection: And the Pope's Legats had the absolute Disposal of all the Alms, Collections and Legacies that were given for that Purpose: And under the same Pretext received Tithes from the Clergy, and even put their Commands upon Princes themselves to receive the Cross.

In the 7th Century, Friars and Nuns (who first appear'd in the time of Persecution, and used to live by their Handy-work) were very much in Vogue, and multiplied exceedingly, by the Bounty of Princes and great Persons, who fill'd every Place with Monasteries and Nunneries; but at last, in the 13th Century, Charity began to cool, and even seem'd almost exhaufted: And then the Mendicant Friars were erected; who, as they were a Plague to the Laity, and a Curb on the Clergy, so they were of singular use to the Pope; who employ'd them as so many Spies upon the Bishops, who could no sooner think of attempting any thing against the Papal Chair than they inform'd their General at Rome of it: And he told the Pope, who was sure to take effectual ways for preventing any Designs the Bishops might have against him.

Thus the Wealth and Power of this Ecclesiastical Sovereignty began and advanced, and Ecclesiasticks multiply'd exceedingly, but without an Independence from any Temporal Power this Monarchy could never have been absolute: And therefore, First, it was necessary that he should reside at a Place free from all Subjection to any Civil Power, and be Master of an Estate sufficient to support his Grandeur: And which no pretext whatsoever could deprive him of. But this was hard to bring about, so long as there was an Emperor of the West, or the Empire of the Goths lasted in Italy. But this being destroy'd by the Emperor Justinian, and Rome made a Province of the Roman Empire; and the Emperor's Authority growing weak in Italy, partly by their own Fault, and partly by the Mismanagement of their Governours at Ravenna, the Popes had a fair Opportunity to bring about what they so earnestly long'd for. Besides, some of the Emperors being against the Adoration of Images, and Leo Isaurus, particularly, having thrown them out of the Churches, his Holiness was so nettled at it, that he stirr'd up the Romans and Italians to refuse to pay the Emperor his usual Tribute, and they kill'd his Governour at Ravenna, while he was endeavouring to maintain his Master's Rights. Whereby the Grecian Emperors lost all their Jurisdiction in those Parts, and the Cities and Countries began to set up for free and independant States. By these Means the Pope rid himself of the Eastern Emperor's Jurisdiction; but was very hard put to't by the Kings of the Longobards, till Charles the Great, having conquer'd these, gave to the Papal Chair all that Tract of Land, which had been formerly under the Eastern Emperor's Jurisdiction; which were held of the Emperors as Sovereigns, till the Reign of the Emperor Henry the IV. And tho' Henry the V. endeavour'd to recover what his Father had lost, and made Pope Paschal a Prisoner, yet the Clergy created him so much trouble, that he was oblig'd to resign all in to the Pope's Hands, about the Year, 1122. And the two Factions of the Guelfs and Gibelins (the former whereof was for the Pope, the other for the Emperor) arising, and growing so Powerful in Italy, created such Confusion, and gave the Emperors so much Work, that they were never able afterwards to reduce that Country to intire Obedience. And the long vacancy happening after the Death of the Emperor Frederick the II. the Empire was put into such a confused State, and the succeeding Emperors found so much Work in Germany, that they had no leisure to mind Italy, and by this Means the Pope had a fair Opportunity to establish an Independent Sovereignty over the Dominions of the Church.

The Popes having by degrees rais'd themselves to this pitch of Power and Grandeur, they began to assume a Superiority over Princes, to decide Controversies betwixt them, to relieve those that pretended to be oppress'd, to maintain Subjects in their Liberties and Properties, and free them from their Allegiance to their lawful Sovereigns, whom they sometimes Excommunicated; To forbid to Marry within the seventh Degree of Consanguinity, and the Fourth of Affinity, without a Dispensation from the Pope; which turn'd to very good Account both as to the encrease of their Riches, and creating Dependence on them: And they also took special care to have the ablest and wisest Men they could find about their Court, who were to be promoted according as they were able and diligent in advancing the Papal Greatness and Power.

But after the Popes seem'd to have fix'd and establish'd a lasting Spiritual Sovereignty over Christendom, and a Temporal Jurisdiction over their Dominions in Italy, there happen'd several Things which had almost reduc'd this Monarchy to a tottering Condition. The Schisms that arose about the electing of the Popes, and their Anti-popes; who mutually revild and excommunicated one another, were like to prove very pernicious; and laid open to publick View Things which they had no mind to discover. Clement the V's. transferring the papal Seat from Rome to Avignon weaken'd their Power in Italy, and prov'd very prejudicial to their Revenues there: And Rome it self grew Disobedient; but at last submitted, and suffer'd Boniface the IX. to put on the Bridle, by Building the Castle of St. Angelo. Afterwards when the Papacy seem'd to have have recover'd its former Grandeur, Luther stood up, and in all appearance would have given it a fatal Blow, had not the Divisions among the Protestants, and the licentious Lives of some of 'em prevented it. And now the Chair seems to be pretty well fix'd, that Church having in a great measure either quite abolish'd such Things as Luther most upbraided it with, and would have done it most Mischief; or Matters are transacted in a more decent Manner, and with greater Art and Cunning. Princes are treated more Civilly, the Clergy are more Learn'd, and lead better Lives. They are active and diligent in the Conversion of Heathens, and bringing Protestants over to their Church; tho' by different Methods; Violence and Persecution being us'd where they safely may, and softer ways where they may not: And the Riches of that Church enable them to provide a suitable Maintenance for those who want Bread, or would have more plentifully.

As to the Nature and Constitution of this Papal Sovereignty (which is certainly the most artificial Fabrick of this kind in the World) it is Monarchical: And a Monarchy it must be, since no other Form would have been consistent with its Constitution. It is also an Elective Monarchy, and no other it could be; for if it had been Hereditary, Minors might sometimes have mounted the Chair, and then it would have been very unseemly to see the Head of the Church, and Christ's Vicar on Earth, under Tutors, and perhaps riding a Hobby-Horse. Nor must this Spiritual Monarch be Married, for then there must have been a vast Train of Ladies and Women about the Court; which would have been very unsuitable to the Gravity and Sanctity (tho' it had been but seeming) of such a Court: And besides, the Dominions of the Church must have entail'd on a Family, and divided into several Appenages of the younger Sons.

The College of Cardinals is as it were the standing Council of the Ecclesiastical State, as the Chapters of Cathedrals are to Bishops. In the time of Pope Paschal the 1st, about the Year, 817, the Parish Priests in Rome, by reason they were near and ready at every Election, to adorn their Power with a more illustrious Title, began to be call'd Cardinals, assuming to themselves (after they had banish'd the popular Election) the sole Power of creating Popes: And that out of their own Number. With these Cardinals the Pope advises concerning Matters of the greatest Moment, only sometimes, he with his Nephews do Business without them. Their Chief Prerogative is that they have the Power of Choosing a Pope, and that out of their own Body, as being best acquainted with the Affairs of that Court. Their ordinary Number is 70; but that Number is seldom compleat. Their Title formerly was that of Illustrious; but that growing too Common in Italy, they have now that of Eminence. The Election of them depends absolutely on the Pope; who in that Matter is often influenc'd by France, Spain, or some other State. They pretend to have the Precedency before the Electors of the Empire: And some of the Court Parasites maintain that their Cap is not inferiour in Dignity to the Crown of some Sovereign Princes. Since the time of Pope Urban the VIII. a Custom has been introduc'd to make one of the Pope's Nephews Chief Minister of the Ecclesiastical State, whom they call Cardinal Patron, or Patron.

By what has been said, we may consider the Pope in two Respects, viz. as he's Spiritual Monarch of Christendom; and Secondly, as a Prince in Italy. In the First, his Subjects may be divid'd into Two several Sorts; the First of which comprehends the whole Clergy, the Second all the rest of Christendom, as far as the same professes the Roman Catholic Religion. The First may not unfitly be compar'd to the standing Army of a Prince, who thereby maintains his Conquests; the rest are to be deem'd as Subjects that are Tributaries to the Prince, and are obliged to maintain those Forces at their Charge. One may guess how vast the Number of the Clergy is, from what is related of Pope Paul the IV. who us'd to brag that he had 228000 Parishes, and 4400 Monasteries under his Jurisdiction, if he did not mistake in his Account, especially as to the Monasteries. In the Second Place we may consider the Pope as a Potent Prince in Italy, (whose Sovereignty is principally supported by a Jealousie and even Ballance betwixt the Crown of France and Spain) tho' in no ways to be compar'd with the other Princes in Europe. The Popes Revenues (which we will not particularly determine) are very considerable, and out of them a good Number of Souldiers could be maintain'd; but his Military Force is scarce worth taking notice of, since he uses means to maintain his State quite different from those of other Princes. He maintains about 20 Gallies; which have their Station at Civita Vecchia. The Countries under his Jurisdiction are, the City of Rome, with her Territories, situated on both sides of the Tyber, the Dukedom of Benevento in the Kingdom of Naples, the Dukedoms of Spoleto, Urbino, and Ferrara, the Marquisate of Ancona, several places in Tuscany, Romaniola and Flaminia, where are situated Bologna and Ravenna. In France the Country of Avignon belongs to him. Parma is a Fief of the Church, which Paul the III. granted to his Son Lewis Farnese.

The Pope's Dominions, call'd by the Italians lo Stato della Chiesa, lies about the middle of Italy, and is bounded (not including the Territories of Benevento in Naples, and Avignon in France) on the North with the Venetian Dominions, and the Gulf of Venice, on the East with the Kingdom of Naples, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the West with the Dukedoms of Tuscany and Modena: And is in length (according to Baudrand) from North to South about 240 Miles, in breadth from East to West, at the broadest, that is, between Ancona to Civita Vecchia 120, but in other Places much less, as in Romaniola: And comprehends the above-said Countries, as you may see more plainly in the following Table, according to the forecited Author.

The Campaign of Rome, comprehending the Campagna di Roma, properly so call'd, and la Marina.

St. Peter's Patrimony, comprehending the Duchy of Castro, the Territory of Ostia, and the County of Ronciiglione.

The Campaign of ROME, Campania Romana, which comprehends the greatest part of the ancient Latium, where the Latini, Eguri, Hernici, Rutulii, and most part of the Volsci dwelt, is bounded on the West with the Province of the Patrimony and the Tyber, on the North with Sabina, and the River Anio, now Tiberone, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the East with l' Abruzzo Oltra, and the Tarva di Lavaro, Provinces of Naples: And is divided, as we said, into la Campagna, properly so call'd, which lies most northerly, between the River Anio, and the Mountains call'd, Mons Lepinus, or la Montagne di Segni, and is a very Mountainous Country; and la Marina, which lies between the foresaid Mountains and the Tuscan Sea extended from East to West; which tho' it be a plain Country is but indifferently Inhabited, because of the unwholsomeness of the Air, and the neighbouring Lakes. The most noted Cities and Towns in the Campagna di Roma (as the Italians call it) are,

ROME, Roma, (once the Mistress of the World, and for several Ages last past the Seat of the Spiritual Monarch of Christendom) is said to have been founded by Romulus and Remus. It was anciently call'd Septicollis, because it stood on seven Hills or rising Grounds of an ease and almost insensible Ascent. Before the Reign of Servius Tullius, the number of these Hills was no more; but since that time it has been much enlarg'd, and at present contains 12, viz. Monte Capitolino, Palatino, Aventino, Celio, Esquilino, Viminale, Quirinale or Monte Cavallo, Janiculo, Pincio, Varicano, Citorio and Giordano. Whatever Vopiscus (who liv'd under the Reign of Dioctlesian, and who positively asserts that the Walls which Aurelian built round this City were 50 Miles in compass) and others may say, it is certain (as several later Authors have demonstrated) that these Walls, which are almost the same with those which Aurelian built, do not exceed 13 Miles. 'Tis true the Suburbs extended very far on all sides, and made the City in a manner infinite; but we are not to imagine that all these were within the Walls. At present there is not above one third of that which is comprehended within the Walls inhabited; the other Two being fill'd with Gardens and Ruins. 'Tis as hard a matter almost to determine the exact number of the present Inhabitants of this City (which as some say are about 200000 Souls) as to reconcile the accounts of ancient Authors concerning it; for some tell us that under the Reign of Augustus there were 3001037, others 4000000, others 5000000; and Suetonius computes that in the Reign of Tiberius, who was the immediate Successor of Augustus, there were only 1600000.

It is not to be expected that in a Work of this Nature we should give the Reader a full and particular account of the ancient and present State of this famous City, especially considering that many learn'd and judicious Writers, as Onuphrius Panvinius, Boissard, Justus Lipsius, Phil. Cluverius, and some late Travellers have done that to so good purpose already; that it would only be repeating, and perhaps confounding, what they have said so well on the Subject, and swelling this Work beyond its design'd Bounds, if not altering the Nature of it.

We shall therefore confine our selves to that which is more properly our Business, and only take notice of such things as are most remarkable in and about this City, and refer those that have a Mind to be further inform'd to the fore-cited Authors, and the latest and best Travellers, particularly M. Misson, who seems to be a diligent and curious Enquirer into such Things.

The City of Rome stands on the River Tyber (which hath received more Honour from the City than the City from it) about 12 Miles from the Sea, 120 from the City of Naples, 60 from Terracina to the North West, 140 from Florence, 300 from Genova, 135 from Ancona, and 120 from Loreto to the South. About 365 Years after the Building of the City, and 3d of the 97th Olympiad, it was taken by the Galli Senones. In the Year of Christ, 410. by the Goths under their King Alaricus. In the Year, 455. by the Vandals, under their King Geisericus; 18 Years after by the Heruli; 14 Years after that by the Ostrogoths; 12 Years after that by the Goths under their King Totila; and at last on the 6th Day of May, 1527. it was taken, and miserably plundered by the Emperor Charles the V's Army, when his Holiness was besieged in the Castle of St. Angelo, and forc'd by Famine to surrender, and comply with the Emperor's Conditions. There are above 300 little Towers upon the Walls of the City, but many of 'em are gone to Ruin. It is divided into 14 Parts or Regions call'd li Rioni, and has 20 Gates, and 5 Bridges over the Tyber, one of which is ruinous. The Houses are, for the most part, built of Brick, plaistered and whited over on the outside: And the Roofs of 'em are ridg'd; but the Angle at the Top is very obtuse. That part of the City which stands on the Right Bank of the River is not above a fifth or sixth part of the other: And is called Trastevere. 'Tis impossible (says Mr. Misson) to walk fifty Paces in or about this City without observing some Remains of its ancient Grandeur. The Statues of Rome have been call'd a Great Nation, and the Colosses might not unfitly been call'd the Giants: And besides these, the City was wonderfully adorn'd with Temples, Palaces, Theatres, Representations of Sea-Fights, Triumphal-Arches, Circues, Columns, Fountains, Aqueducts, Obelisks, Mousolæums, and other magnificent Structures; which tho' at present they lie almost buried in their own Ruins, seem still to discover a great deal of their ancient Splendour. If we consider the Magnificent Monuments of Antiquity, and the modern Structures and Ornaments of this City, we shall find it much easier to admire than form a right Imagination of it: And to frame an Idea of it than represent it distinctly to others. The Pantheon, tho' it hath lost much of its ancient Magnificence, is still one of the most entire and beautiful antique Edifices in Italy. Whether it was anciently so call'd because its figure resembled that of the Heavens, or because Agrippa consecrated it to Jupiter and all the Gods, is uncertain; but at present the Common People call it Rotunda from the Roundness of its Figure. Pope Boniface the IV. dedicated it to the Virgin, and all the Martyrs, and call'd it Santa Maria ad Martyres; but some of the succeeding Popes would have all the Saints come in for a share in the Dedication with the Martyrs. There are said to be 300 Churches in Rome, the greatest and most magnificent of which is that of St. Peter, the most noble and majestic Structure of that kind in the World. The Harmony and proportion of the Architecture are so judiciously ously observ'd, the fineness and great variety of Guilt-work, rare Pictures, Emboss'd-work, Statues of Brasses and Marble, &c. all so happily contriv'd and regularly dispos'd, that one can no sooner see this glorious Structure than he must indispensibly be struck with an agreeable Admiration and Astonishment. It was first built by Constantine the Great, and begun to be repair'd by Pope Julius the II. the Reparation was carried on by some of the succeeding Popes, and Paul the V. finish'd it; so that it was the Work of a whole Age, as appears by this Inscription in the Church. * We will not determine what the Charge of Building and Adorning this Church was; but this is certain that it must have amounted to a vast Sum, since as Charles Fontana in his Tempio Vaticano, proves by an abstract of Registers that the adorning of St. Peter's Chair cost 107551 Roman Crowns, each Crown being worth 5 s. 6 d.

Statue of Cæsar with his Cuirsas, another of Augustus, and a great many more. The famous Rupes Tarpeia, (so call'd from Tarpeia, a Roman Damſel, slain in this Place by the Sabines) is at present (says Mr. Misson) an inconsiderable Rock about 20 Feet high. The prodigious Amphitheatre, call'd Coliseum, is round on the outside, but the Arena or place of Combat is oval. It contain'd 85000 Spectators, without reckoning the Excubiæ, who stood in the passages to the number of 20000. The Church of St. John of Lateran is very Large and Magnificent, and pretends to be Head and Mother of all Churches. It was Repair'd in a great measure by Pope Innocent X. and owes its name to a certain Roman Nobleman, whose Gardens lay near that Place, call'd Plancius Lateranus, who had been nominated Consul, and was Kill'd by Nero's Order. There are a great many Cabinets of Rarities and Libraries at Rome, but since they frequently pass from the Possession of one to that of another, 'tis almost to no purpose to name the present owners of them. There are still many of those ancient Vaults, known by the name of Catcombs, in and about Rome; but the Earth has taken in and Stopped up the Entries of many of them. Some of 'em are like so many Lanes, which turn, wind, and cross one another like Streets of a City, and spread themselves under all the Suburbs. The Romanists pretend these Vaults to have been the Sepulture of the Primitive Christians, which Furnishes them with an opportunity of making great Market of the Relicks drawn thence, but with much more reason they are believ'd to be only the Burying-place of the Roman Slaves. The Statues of Pasquin and Marforio must not be omitted; since many more hear of these two names than know the meaning of them. The former is an old maim'd Statue, leaning against the corner of a House, where several Streets meet, and owes its name to a Witty, Jovial and Satyrical Taylor, call'd Pasquin, who liv'd near this Place. His Lampoons were usually call'd Pasquinades; and to pertrude the World that he was the Author of all the witty and cutting jests that came out in his time, they took care to affix them to this Statue, which was at his Gate; and which by degrees came to be known by the name of Pasquin. Marforio is another maim'd Figure, standing in one of the Courts of the Capitol, representing the Rhine, as some say, or the Nera, or as others say, Jupiter Panarius; and owes its name to the Place call'd Forum Martis, where it stood. 'Tis probable (says Mr. Misson) that it was formerly the Mode to affix the Pasquinades on the Statue of Pasquin, but that Custom is laid aside; and he only answers the Questions that Marforio propoſes to him. These are only very short and imperfect accounts of a few of the most considerable Places and Things about Rome; for if we had attempted to describe all that's worth a curious observers while, this Description of the City would have swell'd up to a large Volume; and that's not our present business.

Tivoli, Tibur, which Ovid calls Tylur, Procepium Tiburis, and Tibur-Herculeum in some ancient Inscriptions, is a little Town, Seated on a Hillock, 18 Miles from Rome to the East, 12 from Frescati to the North, and as many from Palestrina. It is a Bishop's Seat, and the Duke of Molena has a Pleasure-house in it, which is commonly call'd the Cardinal d' Este's Palace, because it is set apart for the use of the Cardinals of that Family when there is any. The Palace is large and makes a handsome Show; but neither Apartments nor Furniture are fine. The Gardens are not large, but are thought to excell all the Works

The Measure of this Church, according to the latest Travellers is thus: The Length within side 594 Foot, the length of the Cross from North to South 438 Foot; the breadth of the Body of the Church 86 Foot, the height of the Body of the Church 144 Foot, the height of the Cupola, with the Lantern, to the very Top of the Cross is 432 Foot, whereof the Ball and Cross may be reckon'd to take up the odd Feet; for the Diameter of the Ball alone is 8 Foot, and then the Cross which stands upon it, must needs be at least 3 times as high, the Circumference of the Cupola, without side is 620 Foot, its Diameter within 143 Foot; The Portico or Entrance is a large Plain, Surrounded with a Piazza of Circular Form, having in the midst an eminent Obelisk, and two large Fountains. The Palace of the Vatican is adjacent to St. Peter's Church; and is said to contain 12500 Chambers, Halls, and Closets. It is not a regular Building, but rather a heap of Beautiful pieces of Architecture ill tack'd together, and spoils in some Measure, the Prospect of St. Peter's. The Vatican Library has receiv'd considerable additions, (particularly by that of Hydelberg, and of the Duke of Orbino) but the opinions about the number of Books in it are so different, that we must leave it undecided. The Arsenal is said to be furnish'd with a sufficient number of Arms, for 20000 Horse, and 40000 Foot; but this is what many doubt. As his Holiness may conveniently descend from the Vatican Palace to St. Peter's Church, so on the other side, he may go without being seen to the Castle of St. Angelo, through a Gallery which Alexander VI. Built for this purpose. Urban VIII. Fortified the Castle with four Bastions, and thought fit to give them the names of the four Evangelists. In a little Arsenal within this Castle the Popes Triple Crown is kept, as also an Armory of Prohibited Arms, taken from such as used them after they had been forbid. The Capitol is a Modern Structure rais'd upon the Ruins, and even upon the Foundation of the ancient Edifice: and is full of remarkable and rare pieces of Antiquity, as the She-Wolf of Brasses suckling Romulus and Remus: the famous Courier pulling a Thorn out of his Foot, a of that nature in Italy. The Cascade of the River Anio or Teverone, is the most remarkable thing in this little Town. This River (says Mr. Misson) forms a very large and pleatant Sheet, but the Fall is not very high. The Hill of Tivoli has furnish'd time out of mind, the greatest part of the Stones that are used at Rome. The Coliseum or Amphitheatre was cover'd over with it, and the front of St. Peter's Church is Built of the same.

Frescati, Tusculum, which Livius, Strabo, Pliny and others, make mention of as a very ancient Town in Latium, and which Kivcher says was Built 300 years before the Trojan War, is now a very small Town, Seated on the Brow of a Hill, 12 Miles from Rome; in which there are several Houses of Pleature, belonging to some Roman Princes, as, the Monte Dracone, belonging to the Prince Borghese, Belvedere, to the Prince Pamphilio, and the Villa Ludovisia, to the Dutchess Guadagnola, the Conitable Colona's Sister. There are some who think that not the Town of Tusculum, but Tusculanum, Cicero's Country-House, where he wrote his Questions, stood formerly where Frescati is now; but both the Situation of Frescati and Strabo's Description of Tusculum contradict this opinion; for the Tusculanum Cicero's, where there are a great many Ruins to be seen still, and where now the Grotta Ferrata stands, is 16 Miles from Rome, whereas Frescati (as we have said) is but 12, and the great plenty of Water, and standing near a high and steep Rock, agrees with the latter, but not at all with the former. The ancient Tusculum was quite demolish'd in the time of Pope Celestin III. and Frescati was erected into a Bishoprick by Pope Paul III. in the Year 1537. The Bishop of which is call'd Episcopus Tusculanus, and is one of the 6 eldest Cardinals.

Ostia, Ostia, anciently a Town and Colony of Latium, 12 Miles from Rome, near the Mouth of the Tyber, and therefore call'd Ostia Tiberina by Strabo, Pliny and others, and said to have been Built by Ancus Marcius. It was destroyed by the Saracens, and now lies almost Buried in its Ruins, and Inhabited by few or none because of the unwholesomeness of the Air. It still retains the Title of a Bishoprick, which is joyn'd to that of Veletri, and its Bishop is always Dean of the College of Cardinals. Here Monica St. Augustine's Mother Died.

Palestrina, Præneste, anciently a Town in Latium, on the Confines of the Country of the Æqui, according to Peolomy and Strabo, and call'd sometime Stephane, according to Pliny; and from a Colony made a Free Town by Tiberius Augustus, as Gellius relates, stood anciently, partly on the Top of the Hill, and partly on the Valley, where there are still to be seen the Ruins of some old Walls, and Subterraneous Passages, through which C. Marius when he was Besieged by Lucretius Asella, one of Sylla's Faction, in vain endeavouring to make his Escape, with Pontius Telesinus, who was in the same Circumstances. They both drew their Swords, and the former Kill'd the other: and afterwards procur'd the favour of his Servant to dispatch him. Here stood the famous Temple of Fortuna Primigenia, where the Sortes Prænestine were kept. The old Town of Præneste was Demolish'd by Pope Boniface VIII. and the new one Built in the Valley, near the River Osa, about 22 Miles from Rome to the North-East, 12 from Tivoli to the South-East, 16 from Agnani, and 12 from Segni. It is the Title of a Bishoprick, which is commonly bestow'd on one of the eldest Cardinals: and is dignified with the Title of a Principality, belonging to the Family of the Barbarini. Whoever has a mind to be further inform'd concerning this Place may consult the description of it written by Joseph Maria Saresse a Frenchman.

Terracina, Anxur, Terracina or Tarracina, anciently a Town belonging to the Volschi, and sometime call'd Thracine. The old Castle stood on the Top of an Hill, where the Ruins are still to be seen, of a square Figure, but the greatest part of the Town was Built in the Plain where Terracina now stands. On the Top of this Hill stood the Temple of Jupiter Anxur, and the Vestiges of the Harbour of Terracina are still to be seen in the Sea. We find mention made of the Aque Terracinenes, which were very wholsom Waters, and the Fons Neptunius, of which (as Vitruvius says) whosoever had the ill luck to Drink, shortly after lost their lives. Solinus and Martianus Capella are mightily mistaken who think that Terracina was sometime an Island; but it is certain, that all that Plain, about Veletri, Cori, Norma ruinata, Sermoneta, Sezze and Piperno, as far as Terracina, was call'd Campus or Ager Pomprinus, from the Lake Pomprinus, which Julius Caesar design'd to have drain'd, and Augustus accomplish'd. This Town stands near the Mouth of the River Ufens, now call'd il Portatore, 2 Miles only from the Confines of the Kingdom of Naples to the West, 15 from Gaeta, and about 50 from Rome; but is very ill-inhabited because of the unwholesomeness of the Air, which is occasion'd by the Neighbouring Lake now call'd Paludi Pontine.

Veletri, Velitræ, the name of a Colony, and very ancient Town belonging to the Volschi, according to Livy, Halicarnassens, and Suetonius, said to have been taken by King Ancus Martius, and almost quite dispeopled by the Plague afterwards (as Livy relates) in the Consulship of Furius Camillus and C. Menius Nepos, its Walls were demolish'd, because of its frequent Rebellions, and the Inhabitants sent to dwell on the other side of the Tyber. It is an Episcopal See, joyn'd to that of Ostia, and is a pretty handfom Town, and well Inhabited, distant about 20 from Rome to the East.

Segni, Signia, a Town anciently belonging to the Volschi, according to Strabo, Livy and Pliny, which owes its name to the Signa or Ensigns, which the Roman Soldiers let up there; for the Soldiers keeping the Winter Quarters there, did so fortifie themselves and dispose every thing for their convenience and accommodation, that the Camp differ'd very little from a Town, inso much that King Tarquin led a Colony thither, as Dion Halicarn. relates. It is now an Episcopal See, and Honour'd with the Title of a Dukedom, which one of the Family of Sforza enjoys: and is distant about 32 Miles from Rome to the East, Palestrina to the South.

Anagni, Anagnina, Anciently the Chief Town of the Hernici, and now an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none. It stands on a Hill, and is of no great Compass, but neat and well Inhabited, at the distance of 36 Miles from Rome to the East, 16 from Palestrina, 32 from Terracina. It was here that Marcus Antonius, after he had Divorc'd Octavia, Augustus's Sister, Married Cleopatra: and here were Born Pope Innocent III. Gregory IX. Alexander IV. and Boniface VIII.

Albano, Albanum, Anciently call'd Villa Pompeii, (according to Baudrand) which afterwards became so considerable as to bear the Title of a Bishoprick, whose Bishop is subject only to the See of Rome, and one of the first six Cardinals. Mr. Misson in his Travels, says he visited this little Town of Albano, where the famous City of Alba formerly stood: and that he saw there a kind of Ruin'd Mausoleum, commonly call'd the Tomb of Ascanius. This little Town is distant 14 Miles from Rome to the East, and about 2 from the Ruins of Alba Longa, which Tullus Hostilius Raz'd, and from the Ruins of which Albano sprung; it is mention'd by Horace, and was Famous for the Excellent Wine that grew thereabouts.

The PATRIMONY, or Province of the PATRIMONY of St. PETER, which the Italians call la Provincia del Patrimonio, makes a great part of the Dominions of the Pope, and was anciently the South part of Hetruria. It was given to the Church of that Famous Woman Mathildis, and comprehends (according to Baudand and others) the Country call'd l'Orvietano, the Duchy of Castro, and the Country call'd Lo Stato di Ronciglione. It is Bounded on the North with Ombria, on the East with Sabina, and the Campagna di Roma, on the West with the Senese, in the South of Tuscany, and on the South with the Tuscan Sea: and the most considerable Towns in it are,

Civita Castellana.			Castro.

Viterbo, Viterbium, (sometimes call'd Tetrapolis, and the Inhabitants Quaterni Populi, because it was one of the four Cities which Desides last King of the Insulbrans united under the name of Viterbo) is at present a City indifferently big, almost wholly Built of Stone, and enclos'd with a Wall, distant about 40 Miles from Rome to the North-West, and among other Things remarkable in this City, there are 8 or 10 square Towers, which are seen at a distance and make an odd kind of Prospect; and were a sort of Forts or Retiring Places, Built hard by the Houses of the Richest Inhabitants, during the fury of the Guelf, and Gibelin Factions.

Civita Vecchia, Centumcellæ, a Town in Hetruria, (according to Pliny, Antoninus and Paerculus) on the Coast of the Tyrrhenian or Tuscan Sea, formerly a Bishops Seat. It was destroy'd by the Saracens, and afterwards Rebuilt by Pope Leo III. on a Hill about 5 Miles distant, and call'd Cincelle; which now lies hid in its Rubbish, the Inhabitants having all return'd to their old City, which some of the late Popes, particularly Urban VIII. have been at the Charge to Fortifie, and make a good and large Harbour, which is the Station of the Pope's Gallies, and defended by a strong Castle. It is but Ill-inhabited by reason of the Air: and is distant about 40 Miles from Rome to the West.

Corneto, Cornetum or Cornetum, stands on a Hill near the River Marta, on the Confines of the Duchy of Castro, near the Ruins of Gravisco and Tarquinia, 4 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar, 22 from Viterbo to the South, and 46 from Rome. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none; but is very Ill-inhabited because of the South-winds, which are great Enemies to health in those parts.

Toscanello, Tuscania, is now but a small Town, on the River Marta, on the Confines of the Duchy of Castro, and 15 Miles from Viterbo to the South-West. It was anciently call'd Salumbrona, afterwards Tyrrhenia, Tuscia, and Tuscania; and was then a very large and flourishing City; which probably gave the name of Tuscia to the Country; but it has been sixteen times Taken and Ruin'd, and now lies in its own Rubbish.

Orti, Horatium, or Orta, (according to Paulus Diaconus) is a little Town in the Province of the Patrimony, standing on the Tyber, where the River Nara falls into it, on the Confines of Ombria, near Oricoli, about 34 Miles from Rome to the North, and 14 from Viterbo to the East. It has the Title of a Bishopruck, which in the year 1437, was perpetually united to that of Civita Castellana, by Pope Eugenius IV.

Nepi, Nepes, which Livy calls Nepete, Proterney Nepeta, Strabo Nepita, and Procopius Nepetes, stands on the Rivulet Pozzolo, between Rome and Viterbo, and has the Title of a Bishopruck, which has been united to that of Sutri since the time of Pope Eugenius IV. An. 1436. and is Suffragan to no other Sea but that of Rome.

The Duchy of CASSTRO, Castrensis Ducatus, was formerly subject to the Duke of Parma, but has been in possession of the Pope since the Year 1649. and is bounded on the North with the Orvietano, on the East with the Province of the Patrimony, on the South with the Tuscan Sea, and on the West with the Senese. The chief Town of it was Castro; which now lies hid in its own Rubbish, that one can hardly know that ever there was a Town there. It was a strong Town, and the Seat of a Bishop till the year 1649. that Pope Innocent X. caused it to be Raz'd, to avenge the Death of Christopher Giarda, last Bishop of it, who was Slain April 18. 1649. near Monterosi; and the Bishopruck was Translated to Aquapendente. It stood about 13 Miles from the Tuscan Shoar to the North, and as many from Toscanello to the West; and sprung from the Ruins of a Neighbouring Town call'd Volscia.

The Territory of Orvieto, or il Orvietano, Urbevetanus Ager, is Bounded with Ombria on the East and North, the Senese on the West, and the Patrimony, properly and strictly so call'd on the South. It was anciently a part of Hetruria: and the most considerable Places in it now are, Orvieto, Aquapendente and Bagnarea.

Orvieto, Oropitum, or Urbs Vetus by Paulus Diaconus, Herbanum by Pliny, Urbevetanum by Procopius, and Urbiventum or Orbivietum by others, is a Town Built on a rising ground, and naturally strong, being surrounded with high Rocks and Precipices; about 20 Miles distant from Viterbo to the North, 60 from Rome to the North-west, and about 15 from the Confines of the Duke of Tuscany's Dominions, and the Senese to the East.

Aquapendente, Acula or Aquila, stands on a rising ground, about 40 Miles from Siena to the East, and 20 from Orvieto to the South-west. It was Erected into a Bishopruck by Pope Innocent X. in the year 1650. in the room of Castro, which he caus'd to be Raz'd, to punish the Inhabitants for Murdering their Bishop.

Bagnarea, Balneogregium, stands upon a Hill, between Orvieto to the North, and Montefiascone to the South, about 6 Miles from either, and 10 from Viterbo to the North. It is an Episcopal See, but a small and Ill-inhabited Town: and by some thought to be Novepagni mention'd by Pliny.

Ronciglione, Roncilio, stands about 30 Miles from Rome, and 10 from Viterbo. It belong'd formerly to the Duke of Parma, and gives name to the adjacent Country, which the Italians call lo Stato di Ronciglione.

The Province of SABINA, Sabina, is Bounded on the North with Ombria, on the East with the farther Apruzzo, on the South with Compagna di Roma, and on the West with the Province of the Patrimony, is of much narrower Bounds than the Country of Sabina formerly was, and has only one Town of any note, call'd Magliano, the Residence of the Bishop of Sabina, near the Tyber, and 30 Miles North from Rome.

Ombria, or the Duchy of SPOLETO, Ombria sive Ducatus Spoletanus, seems to have had the latter of these names from those Dukes whom Longinus the Exarch appointed. The Longobards having made themselves Masters of it, under King Alboinus, about the year 571, it retain'd the name of a Duchy, and was govern'd by 8 Dukes successively of its own, and 13 likewise descended from Charles the Great, till the year 1198. Afterwards it retain'd the same Name and Dignity under the Popes of Rome, till the year 1440. when it recover'd the ancient name of Ombria, or Ombria; but the ancient Ombria was of much larger extent than this Country is now. It lies on the North of the Patrimony and Sabina.

These are the Chief Towns.	}	Spoleto.	}	Todi.
		Narni.		Nocera.
		Otricoli.		Torni.
		Reati.		Assisi.
		Foligno.		Amelia.

Spoleto, Spoletum, mention'd by Livy, Cicero and Protolmy, as a City in Ombria, and the Chief one of the Duchy of Spoleto, now of the Province of Ombria, is distant 40 Miles from Rome to the North, and as many from Perugia to the South-East. Baudrand says it is a large Town, Built partly on a Hill, partly in the Valley, and Mr. Misson says, it is a poor City, thinly Peopl'd, ill Built, and in a very uneven Situation. The most remarkable Things in it are, the Cathedral, the Castle, which (as the latter of these two says) is only strong by its Situation, and has nothing in it to recompence the trouble of going up to it. About half a Mile from the City there is a Temple anciently Consecrated to Concord; which is now call'd the Chappel of the Holy Crucifix. There are also to be seen here, a Triumphant Arch half Ruined, some remainders of an Amphitheatre, and an Aqueduct, which joyns the Mountain of St. Francis, to that of Spoleto; which is intire, and has been in use ever since it was first Built. 'Tis 350 Paces long, and about 700 English Foot high. Mapheo Cardinal Barbairini, afterwards Pope Urban VIII. was Bishop of this Place.

Narni, Narna, or Narnia, stands at the Foot of a Hill, on the River Nera, (from which it has its Name) near the Confines of Sabina, between Terni and Otricoli, 6 Miles from the former, and 8 from the other, and 40 from Rome. It was one of the 12 Towns which refus'd to assist the Romans against Hanibal: and was anciently (according to Pliny) call'd Nequinum from Nequitia, (frowardness) because when it was Besieg'd, the Inhabitants chose rather to kill themselves and their Children than Surrender. It is at present (as Mr. Misson relates) a desolate, dirty and beggarly Place; but that there are observable in it, 2 pretty handsom Fountains of Brass: and near it the Ruins of a stately Bridge, (Built as they say) by Augustus; which joyn'd the Mountain of Spoleto, to a Neighbouring Mountain; it is of an extraordinary height, but of its four Arches there remains but one intire. The Top of the greatest is broken; but he says he was credibly inform'd that the breadth of this Arch is 170 Foot.

Otricoli, Oericulum, or Otriculum, stands in a Plain, about 2 Miles from the Tyber, about 3 from the conflux of that River with the Nera, between Narni and Civita Castellana, and about 30 Miles from Rome. The ancient Oericulum is often confounded with the Ocrea or Interocrea of Antoninus; but most Authors believe that Otricoli stands now where the ancient Oericulum stood, and that the Ruins that appear a little lower on the right hand towards the Tyber, are the remainders of Ocrea; but the conjecture would not be unreasonable if one should say that Oericulum is only a diminutive of Ocrea, implying the Suburbs of it.

Reati, Reate, mentioned by Strabo and Protolmy, as a Town in the Sabines, stands upon the River Vesino, near a Lake of that name, upon the Confines of the Kingdom of Naples, and the farther Apruzzo, in the midlt between Aquila to the East, and Narni to the West, and 25 from Spoleto to the East. It is a pretty well Inhabited Town considering the Air; which is unwholsom by reason of the Neighbouring Marshes: and is an Episcopal See, subject immediately to that of Rome.

Foligno, Fulginius, stands at the Foot of the Appennines, in a Plain, 25 Miles from Perugia to the South East, 10 from Assisi, and 13 from Spoleto, and has the Title of a Bishoprick. It is Seated in a Terrestrial Paradise, (as Mr. Misson says) but has nothing else to recommend it, except that it is said to have a better Trade than most other Cities in the Ecclesiastical State. The Trade of it consists in Cloth, Gold and Silver Lace, some Silks, and Spicery. It was several times Plunder'd by the Goths, and there are no old Monuments remaining.

Todi, Tuder, or Turde, according to Protolmy, stands on a Hill near the Tyber, almost in the midlt between Perugia to the North, and Narni to the South, about 20 Miles from either, and has the name of an Episcopal See.

Nocera, Nuceria, call'd Constantia Colonia, in the Itinerary of Antoninus, stands at the Foot of the Appennines on the Confines of the Marca d'Anchona, 16 Miles from Spoleto to the North, 15 from Camerino to the West, and as many from Foligno to the North-East: and is an Episcopal See, immediately subject to that of Rome.

Terni, Interamna, or Interammia, stands in a Plain, on the River Nera, near the Confines of Sabina, about 12 Miles from Spoleto to the South, and 6 from Narni. It is a very ancient City, having been Built about 670 years before Christ, in the days of Numa Pompilius. It owes its ancient name to its Situation, between the 2 Arms of the River which waters it, and the Bridge, (as the Inscription which was put on it in the time of Pope Urban VIII. says) was Built by Pompey the Great. The whole Trade of this City consists in Oyl, of which (as they say) they make during Six Months of the year, 100 Charges every day, each Charge Weighing 600 Pounds, and is worth 12 English Crowns.

Assisi, Assisium, or Aessium, stands on a Hill, 4 Miles from the River Chiascio, 11 from Perugia to the East, and near 60 from Rome to the North-west. It is an Episcopal See, Suffragan to none: and the Birth-place of St. Francis, and St. Clara.

The Country of PERUGIA, Perusinus Ager, call'd by the Italians il Perugino, is Bounded with the Tyber, and ancient Ombria on the East, the Marshes of Chiana. and the Territories of Florence on the West, and the Territories of Orvieto on the South; and owes its name to the Chief Town in it.
